VOL. 35, NO. 4 THE BUGLE, THURSDAY, JULY 18, 1991

From the Left Hand by Bud Besser

Last week's lead story ported normer miles village manger, Jack Hadge, was "sacked by the Teaneck (N.J.) Town Council, because he unreasonably alienated township employees" and "caused a breach in the previous rela-tionship with the Clerk's Of-fice". This took place about two-and-a-half years after he was hired to fill the post of town manager.

During Jack's five year tenure in Niles his personnel policies caused havoc down at the Scheel Adminstration Building. He operated a "no nonsence" business office segregating employees so they would have little chance to socialize during working hours. Potted plants replaced desks in the outer office and employees were shuffled off to other locations where their eight hour efforts would be confined strictly to the business at hand. Subsequently, longtime village employees were no long-er working for Niles. We've been told since Abe Selman took over, some of the former employees have drifted back to the Niles work force.

It wasn't too long ago the Niles Library Board had prob-lems with a former administrator in their district. Women employees complained he was verbally abusive to the female employees who worked at the library. B'nai B'rith elects VP B'nai B'rith International Convention in Washington, D.C. in August, 1992.

CONGREGATION BNAI EMUNAH welcomes RABBI DANIEL EPSTEIN, who will take up his duties on August 1, 1991 as Bnai Emunah's new spiritual leader. Rabbi Epstein brings to the congregation a varied and unusual Jewish background, combining traditional Yeshiva training with modern secular and religious education, experience in Israel and on American college campuses, and in Havurah groups as well as in the pulpit.

Rabbi Epstein's childhood home in the Upper West Side of Manhattan (New York City) was Orthodox in observance, combining Talmud with philosophy, Hebrew and fervent Zionism. His father, an ordained rabbi descended from generations of Lithuanian rabbis, devoted his life to study, teaching and writing Hebrew literature. Rabbi Epstein's grandfather served as Chief Rabbi of St. Louis, Mo., where a Jewish day school still bears his name.

After his graduation from Manhattan Day School and Yeshiva University High School, young Daniel Epstein studied at the Yeshiva in Israel, interrupting his studies to complete a Bachelor of Arts degree in Jewish Thought at Hebrew University in Jerusalem. He was drawn to political life on campus, and became active in some of the early Havurot in Jerusa-

The Yom Kippur War erupted just after his return to the United States, and Daniel Epstein immediately returned to Israel as a volunteer, working and teaching on a kibbutz. His sister's husband was a casualty of that war, leaving a widow and two children.

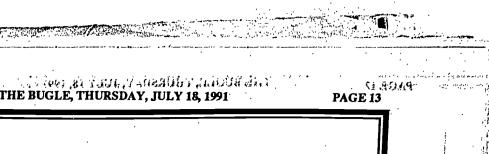

When the war ended, Daniel Epstein came home to study psychology and work for the Hillel Foundation. He was still enrolled in Columbia University when he entered Rabbinical School at the Jewish Theological Seminary of America. By the time he was ordained, four years later, he was Director of the local Hillel Foundation, and active in the Havurah movement. He became Chairperson of the West Side Minyan, a committed group of dynamic young adults who worshipped and studied together, striving to create an alternative Jewish community.

After ordination, Rabbi Epstein served as Hillel rabbi as Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland. He has held pulpits in Virginia, Massachusetts, and (most recently) Long Beach, California. He comes to Bnai Emunah with his wife, Joanne, daughter Shira (age four) and son David (one year old). Rabbi Epstein's variety of experience and training has provided him with many advantages in taking over a well-established congregation like Bnai Emunah. His enthusiasm in dealing with children and young families is contagious; but Rabbi Epstein has also taught at nursing homes, and organized adult courses in Jewish mysticism, the changing role of Jewish women, and the Israel-Palestinian conflict.

Rabbi Epstein plans to make Torah study and discussion part of each Shabbat morning service at Bnai Emunah. He intends to teach and lead study groups of interested Jews, both Shabbat and weekdays, daytime and evening.

Congregation Bnai Emunah has been privileged to have Rabbi Harold Stern, noted scholar and teacher, as its pulpit rabbi for more than thirty years. Now that he has elected emeritus status, the congregation is delighted to welcome a gifted young successor, who will carry on Bnai Emunah's traditions, challenge congregation and community, and lead Bnai Emunah into a dynamic future.

ComEd employees achieve record service

Commonwealth Edison's service reliability record averages 99.8 percent, a record employees are proud of achieving. Despite continous hard work to provide customers with the most reliable service, we cannot guarantee power interruptions will never occur. When they do, every effort is made to restore service promptly, especially to customers requiring essential serives. These customers include hospitals, nursing homes, municipal facilities and individual residences where a person may depend on an electrical life support system such as a respirator or a kidney dialysis machine.

While these examples represent top priority cases, it is the customer's responsibility to provide suitable alternatives for electricity in the event of a service inturruption. Hospitals have emergency generators on site to provide temporary power. Indi vidual life support systems usually have backup mechanisms for manual or battery operation.

Edison maintains a list of names, addresses, and telephone numbers of these priority cases. To add a patient who requires life support systems to the residential priority list, physicians should write a letter to their patient's local Edison district superintendent. The superintendent will then review the situation with the physician to determine the patient's eligibility.

Working with Edison can assure customers of the utmost serice reliability.

What to do in an audit

These are typical of questions asked by taxpayers and are pre-sented as a public service of this publication and the IRS.

Q. I received a letter in the mail telling me my federal tax return was selected to be examined. What should I do?

A. The first thing you should do is read the letter carefully. The letter will tell you the time, date and place scheduled for the examination, as well as as what parts of the return will be examined, or audited, and the type of records you will need.

Q. How can I prepare for this

A. Assemble any recoreds suggested in the letter, plus any other evidence to support the income, deductions, adjustments and credits that will be examined. Check to see if there are any missing records that you will need to find before your audit.

Q. Can I bring someone with me to the audit?

A. You may bring with you an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent, the individual who signed your return as preparer or anyone who is knowledgeable about your taxrelated books and records. However, generally only an attorney, CPA or enrolled agent may represent you. Your representative will need written authorization to represent you in your absence.

Q. What happens if the auditor feels my records do not support the items I have claimed on my return and I do not agree?

A. You and the auditor should discuss the reasons behind his or her decisions. If it is a matter of insufficient records, ask what other kind of information would be necessary to support the items in dispute. Regardless of the reason, you should discuss the findings with the auditor to make sure you understand what the problem is and what solution, if any, you can come to. One of your most effective tools in an audit is com munication.

Q. What options do I have if we cannot come to an agreement on the results of the audit?

A. Your first step is to request an interview with the auditor's supervisor. Many audit conflicts are resolved at this level. If you still cannot reach an agreement the auditor or supervisor will explain your appeal rights. For ad-ditional information, call 1-800-829-3676 to request free IRS Publication 556, Examination of Returns, Appeal Rights, and Claims for Refund.

'Summer Sampler' benefits seminarians

Did you know that the seminarians studying for the priest-hood at Niles College Seminary pay the same tuition as any othr student at Loyola University?

It's true. Niles College Semi-nary, located at 7135 N. Harlem, is part of Loyola University. Loyola University recently announced a 9.9 percent increase in tuition for the 1991-92 academic year. That means Niles College's seminarians -- who must pay the same tuition as other Loyola students -- must prepare for a tuition bill estimated to be $9,210 next year, not to mention room and board and other costs which add another $3,000 to the annual cost of a seminarian's education.

That's why some volunteer are helping Niles College Seminary organize a special fundraiser called the "Summer Sampler" to be held on the Niles Collge Seminary campus on Saturday, July 20. The summer Sampler has one primary objective: raise money to help Niles College's seminarians continue their studies for the priesthood. The "Summer Sampler" wil be held on Saturday, July 20, from 3 p.m. to 11 p.m. on the Niles College Seminary campus at 7135 N. Harlem (the corner of Touhy and Harlem). General admission tickets are $15 in advance or $20 at the door, with special admission prices for children 12 and under and seniors 55 and over. trator a free pass which would not hinder him in seeking his next job. In both the village manager and the library administrator actions the personnel problems the two men had were never mentioned. In both cases the two districts did not want to hinder the men's future advancement in their professional fields. But we often wondered how prudent the districts were in not reporting these shortcomings?

In this day of lawsuits it is likely both districts preferred to whitewash these men's resumes rather than be confronted by a possible legal action. Matter of fact, when we told one of the Buglers we intended writing about this matter, we were warned about the potential for a libel suit.

Because both men exhibited behavior which proved detrimental in Niles, it could be assumed they would carry these problems to their next jobs. And if they did, would Niles be doing their next employers a favor by not reporting their shortcomings?

Years ago we received a very good recommendation for a man we hired who was an excellent saleman. And the recommendation was true. He was one of the best. But he had a many-year problem with stealing money which the man who recommended the salesman must have known about. But he thought he was being kind and helpful by not mentioning the man's problem. We suffered from this bad recommendation and learned the hard way such a kindness proved to be a disservice.

In the case of the former Niles village manager, we were told he was a whiz at dealing with financial matters. But his personnel relationships were harmful which eventually proved his downfall in his Teaneck job.

Would Niles officials have been kinder to him by letting him know his shortcomings and asking him to change? Or were they better letting things slide, losing several longtime employees and eventually causing similar problems a his next job?
