Re: Petition for Exemption from Notification and Remedy Requirements
Inconsequential Noncompliance with FMVSS 209 - Certain Replacement Seatbelt Assemblies

Dear Dr. Cliff:

Pursuant to 49 U.S.C. 30118(d) and 30120(h), and the provisions of 49 CFR Part 556, on behalf of Toyota Motor Corporation ["TMC"], a Japanese corporation located at 1, Toyota-cho, Toyota-city, Aichi-ken, 471-8571, Japan and the Toyota manufacturing entities identified in the attached Noncompliance Information Report dated April 20, 2021, submitted in accordance with the requirements of 49 CFR Part 573 [collectively referred to as "Toyota"], I hereby submit the attached petition to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration seeking an exemption from the notification and remedy requirements of 49 U.S.C. Chapter 301 on the basis that a noncompliance with certain replacement seatbelt equipment as identified in Toyota's Noncompliance Information Report is inconsequential as it relates to motor vehicle safety.

Toyota understands that, due to the ongoing COVID-19 situation, NHTSA staff will not be present in the office to receive the attached materials that are normally submitted through mail. Thus, Toyota is electronically submitting this petition through email in accordance with NHTSA's past instructions for submitting inconsequentiality petitions during this time. Included in the email submission is (1) a copy of this cover letter; (2) a copy of the petition; and (3) a copy of the Noncompliance Information Report relating to the petition. Based on the past instructions, it is understood that submission through this method will be considered in conformance with 49 CFR Part 556.4(b)(2) and (6) and will not prejudice the agency's evaluation of the substance of the petition. Toyota is willing to send a duplicate copy of this submission via mail according to the normal process in the future upon NHTSA's request.

Please contact me should you have any questions about this petition.

Sincerely,

Cory Hoffman
General Manager
Toyota Motor North America, Inc.

Petition for Inconsequential Noncompliance
Attachment 1 (Noncompliance Information Report)

Petition for Exemption from Notification and Remedy Requirements
Pursuant to 49 CFR Part 556

Inconsequential Noncompliance with FMVSS No. 209
In Certain Replacement Seatbelt Assemblies

Executive Summary

Toyota submitted the attached Equipment Noncompliance Information Report concerning certain replacement seatbelt assemblies that may not meet the requirements of FMVSS No. 209, paragraph S4.1(k), because certain replacement seatbelt assemblies have been packaged with an instruction sheet which has a missing or incorrect statement for the seating position(s) for which the part is intended (see Attachment 1). Toyota has now corrected the issue for the subject seatbelt service parts.

As further described below, Toyota believes that the noncompliance in this case is inconsequential as it relates to motor vehicle safety for a number of reasons.

First, it is unlikely these replacement assemblies would be selected for an incorrect seating position as a result of this issue. The seatbelt assemblies were only sold by authorized Toyota dealerships, and the service parts ordering process would not likely provide a different assembly from that which was ordered. In addition, the purchaser can identify that the seatbelt assembly is the correct replacement by the part number/description on the packaging, and the new part can be compared to the old part.

Second, it is unlikely that these replacement assemblies would be installed incorrectly, because other sources of the correct installation instructions are readily available from various sources, and the installation procedure is generally the reverse of the part removal procedure.

Third, it is unlikely that these replacement assemblies would be installed incorrectly, because the bolt torque specifications for structurally mounting the assemblies are the same for all of the affected seatbelt assemblies.

Fourth, Toyota has determined that, with the exception of the instruction sheets, the subject seatbelt assemblies comply with FMVSS No. 209 .

Finally, in similar situations, NHTSA has granted inconsequentiality petitions in the past.

Below, Toyota provides the data, its views, and its arguments in support of this petition. For the reasons set forth below, Toyota believes this noncompliance is inconsequential as it relates to motor vehicle safety.

Summary of Noncompliance

This noncompliance involves the approximately 33,000 seatbelt assemblies sold as replacement equipment referenced in the attached Noncompliance Information Report. In FMVSS No. 209, paragraph S4.1(k) requires that each seatbelt assembly, other than a seatbelt assembly installed in a motor vehicle by an automobile manufacturer, shall be accompanied by an installation instruction sheet that includes the following statement:

“This seat belt assembly is for use only in [insert specific seating position(s), e.g., “front right”] in [insert specific vehicle make(s) and model(s)].”

Due to specific suppliers improperly creating certain seatbelt instruction sheets or a miscommunication with the suppliers, certain replacement seatbelt assemblies were packaged either with an instruction sheet which does not include the aforementioned statement or have an instruction sheet with the wrong seating position specified.

Reasons this Noncompliance is Inconsequential as it relates to Motor Vehicle Safety

- I. The subject seatbelt assemblies were sold only by Toyota dealerships. Due to the dealerships’ replacement parts ordering system and the parts packaging, improper replacement seatbelt assembly selection would not likely occur.

It is unlikely that the subject replacement seatbelt assemblies would be selected for an incorrect model and seating position as a result of this issue. The subject assemblies were only sold by Toyota dealerships. The parts ordering system clearly indicates the part and enables identification of the appropriate model vehicle and seating position for which the assembly is intended to be installed. When selecting a replacement part, the dealerships can search by VIN, part number, and vehicle model. They can also see a diagram of the part location via the Electronic Parts Catalog. In addition, the part can be identified by the label on the packaging and the old part can be compared to the new part. The label on the packaging in which the replacement seatbelt is packaged specifies the part number and part description (see Figure 1).

Because of the Toyota dealerships' robust part ordering system and the additional label on the packaging, it is unlikely that an incorrect seatbelt would be provided or used as a replacement part. The missing seat position or incorrect seat position on the instruction sheet has no effect on a dealership's ability to provide the correct replacement part ordered or on the installer's ability to correctly identify the appropriate replacement part.

II. Improper installation of the seatbelt assembly is unlikely. Dealership technicians and third-party installers can access Toyota's electronic repair manual and other aftermarket manuals and the subject assemblies themselves have characteristics that discourage incorrect installation.

It is unlikely that an improper installation of a replacement seatbelt would occur as a result of a missing or incorrect seating position statement. First, after identifying that the part does not specify the specific seating position or specifies the wrong seating position for which the part was purchased, the installer could return the part to the dealer, request the installation instruction from the dealer, or consult other sources of installation instructions that are readily available. Technicians at Toyota dealerships have access to Toyota's electronic repair manual. Third-party installers have access to various aftermarket repair manuals and can obtain access to Toyota's electronic repair manual. The installer can also request a copy of the installation instructions from Toyota, and the instructions would be provided free of charge.

Second, the subject assemblies themselves have characteristics that discourage incorrect installation. These characteristics include visually different in appearance, inability to connect the wire harness, warning indicator illuminated, or seatbelt cannot buckle. Because the subject seatbelts are not universal type seatbelts, they are intended to be used to replace specific seatbelts in specific seating positions. Thus, the installation procedure is the reverse of part removal.

Third, the torque value for structurally mounting the seatbelt assemblies is a standard value and is correct regardless of which instruction sheet is used (42Nm). Because these torque values are common, even if the technician uses the torque values from the incorrect installation instruction sheet, the torque value will still be correct.

For these reasons it is unlikely that the subject seatbelt assemblies would be improperly installed.

Toyota notes that the investigation leading to the submission of the Part 573 reports subject of this petition was prompted by a report from a dealer technician who found a seatbelt assembly with an incorrect instruction sheet. While records covering the entire scope of the seatbelt assemblies involved are not available, Toyota believes this to be the only report of an instruction sheet concern. This further tends to confirm that improper installation of a seatbelt assembly is unlikely as a result of the missing instructions, and dealer technicians or third-party installers are able to easily obtain the installation information, if needed, from the other sources noted above.

III. The seatbelts comply with all other requirements of FMVSS No. 209.

The lack of the information on the instruction sheets has no bearing on the materials or performance of the replacement seatbelt assembly itself. Thus, the assemblies continue to meet the other performance requirements specified in FMVSS No. 209. There is no impact to performance, functionality, or occupant safety.

IV. In similar situations, NHTSA has granted petitions for inconsequential noncompliance relating to the subject requirement of FMVSS No. 209.

NHTSA has previously granted at least seven similar petitions for inconsequential noncompliance for missing or incorrect instruction sheets for certain replacement seatbelt assemblies. These include: FCA US LLC (84 Fed. Reg. 20948, May 3, 2019); Mitsubishi Motors North America, Inc., (77 Fed. Reg. 24762, April 25, 2012); Bentley Motors Inc. (76 Fed. Reg. 58343, September 20, 2011); Hyundai Motor Company (74 Fed. Reg. 9125, March 2, 2009); Ford Motor Company, (73 Fed. Reg. 11462, March 3, 2008); Mazda North American Operations (73 Fed. Reg. 11464, March 3, 2008); and Subaru of America, Inc., (65 Fed. Reg. 67471, November 9, 2000).

In these cases, NHTSA determined that the noncompliance was inconsequential to motor vehicle safety for reasons that included the following: (1) the dealer ordering system would make it unlikely that an inappropriate seatbelt assembly would be sold for a specific seating position; (2) installers would be able to locate installation instructions from other sources; and (3) the seatbelts are intended to be replacement parts for original equipment designed for specific seating positions. These reasons also apply to the subject Toyota replacement seatbelt assemblies.

Conclusion

For the reasons set forth above, Toyota believes this noncompliance is inconsequential as it relates to motor vehicle safety and seeks an exemption from the notice and remedy requirements of 49 U.S.C. Chapter 301 for the subject vehicles.

Country of Origin: Japan

2. Identification of Affected Equipment:

The items of equipment involved are replacement seatbelt assemblies intended for use as replacement parts on certain Toyota, Lexus, and Scion vehicles.

“Component Name”, “Part Number”, and “Date of Manufacture” of affected equipment are listed in Attachment 1.

Note: (1) This issue only involves certain replacement seatbelt assemblies that were identified during audits, produced at above manufactures, and sold in the U.S.

(2) The attached production ranges are estimates based on the available information from Toyota’s database. Not all equipment produced in this range were sold in the U.S.

3. Total Number of Equipment Potentially Involved:

Approximately 33,000

4. Percentage of Equipment Estimated to Actually Experience Noncompliance:

100%

5. Description of Noncompliance:

In FMVSS No. 209, paragraph S4.1(k) requires that each seatbelt assembly, other than a seatbelt assembly installed in a motor vehicle by an automobile manufacturer, shall be accompanied by an installation instruction sheet that includes the following statement:

“This seat belt assembly is for use only in [insert specific seating position(s), e.g., “front right”] in [insert specific vehicle make(s) and model(s)].”

Due to specific suppliers improperly creating certain seatbelt instruction sheets or a miscommunication with the supplier, certain replacement seatbelt assemblies were packaged either with an instruction sheet which does not include the aforementioned statement or have an instruction sheet with the wrong seating position specified. As a result, the subject equipment do not meet the requirements of FMVSS No. 209, paragraph S4.1(k).

6. Test Results and Other Information:

On Feb. 2021, Toyota received information from a dealership that found a replacement seatbelt assembly which was packaged with an instruction sheet which specified the wrong seating position. Toyota then conducted investigations with the suppliers. Toyota compared the information that the suppliers had used to create the instruction sheets with Toyota’s part list and found discrepancies that caused the incorrect information to be provided.

On April 14, 2021, based on the results of these investigations, Toyota determined that certain replacement seatbelt assemblies may have been packaged either with an instruction sheet which does not include the aforementioned statement or have an instruction sheet with the wrong seating position specified and do not meet the requirements of FMVSS No. 209, paragraph S4.1(k).

7. Description of Corrective Repair Action:

Pursuant to 49 U.S.C. 30118(d) and 30120(h), and the provisions of 49 CFR Part 556, Toyota intends to petition NHTSA for an exemption from the notification and remedy requirements of 49 U.S.C. Chapter 301 on the basis that this noncompliance is inconsequential to motor vehicle safety.

Chronology :

On Feb. 2021, Toyota received information from a dealership that found a replacement seatbelt assembly which was packaged with an instruction sheet which specified the wrong seating position. Toyota then conducted investigations with the suppliers. Toyota compared the information that the suppliers had used to create the instruction sheets with Toyota's part list and found discrepancies that caused the incorrect information to be provided.

On April 14, 2021, based on the results of these investigations, Toyota determined that certain replacement seatbelt assemblies may have been packaged either with an instruction sheet which does not include the aforementioned statement or have an instruction sheet with the wrong seating position specified and do not meet the requirements of FMVSS No. 209, paragraph S4.1 (k).

Re: Petition for Exemption from Notification and Remedy Requirements
Inconsequential Noncompliance with FMVSS 209 - Certain Replacement Seatbelt Assemblies

Dear Dr. Cliff:

Pursuant to 49 U.S.C. 30118(d) and 30120(h), and the provisions of 49 CFR Part 556, on behalf of Toyota Motor Corporation ["TMC"], a Japanese corporation located at 1, Toyota-cho, Toyota-city, Aichi-ken, 471-8571, Japan and the Toyota manufacturing entities identified in the attached Noncompliance Information Reports dated April 20, 2021 and May 4, 2021, submitted in accordance with the requirements of 49 CFR Part 573 [collectively referred to as "Toyota"], I hereby submit the attached petition to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration seeking an exemption from the notification and remedy requirements of 49 U.S.C. Chapter 301 on the basis that a noncompliance with certain replacement seatbelt equipment as identified in Toyota's Noncompliance Information Reports is inconsequential as it relates to motor vehicle safety.

Toyota understands that, due to the ongoing COVID-19 situation, NHTSA staff will not be present in the office to receive the attached materials that are normally submitted through mail. Thus, Toyota is electronically submitting this petition through email in accordance with NHTSA's past instructions for submitting inconsequentiality petitions during this time. Included in the email submission is (1) a copy of this cover letter; (2) a copy of the petition; and (3) a copy of each Noncompliance Information Report relating to the petition. Based on the past instructions, it is understood that submission through this method will be considered in conformance with 49 CFR Part 556.4(b)(2) and (6) and will not prejudice the agency's evaluation of the substance of the petition. Toyota is willing to send a duplicate copy of this submission via mail according to the normal process in the future upon NHTSA's request.

Please contact me should you have any questions about this petition.

Sincerely,

Cory Hoffman
General Manager

Toyota Motor North America, Inc.

Petition for Exemption from Notification and Remedy Requirements
Pursuant to 49 CFR Part 556

Inconsequential Noncompliance with FMVSS No. 209
In Certain Replacement Seatbelt Assemblies

Executive Summary

Toyota submitted the attached Equipment Noncompliance Information Reports concerning certain replacement seatbelt assemblies that may not meet the requirements of FMVSS No. 209, paragraph S4.1(k) and/or (l) because certain replacement seatbelt assemblies were not packaged with an instruction sheet or were packaged with an instruction sheet that is missing the required statement indicating the specific seating position(s) for the replacement part (see Attachment 1 and 2). Toyota has now corrected the issue for the subject seatbelt service parts.

As further described below, Toyota believes that the noncompliance in this case is inconsequential as it relates to motor vehicle safety for a number of reasons.

First, it is unlikely these replacement assemblies would be selected for an incorrect seating position as a result of this issue. The seatbelt assemblies were only sold by authorized Toyota dealerships, and the service parts ordering process would not likely provide a different assembly from that which was ordered. In addition, the purchaser can identify that the seatbelt assembly is the correct replacement by the part number/description on the packaging, and the new part can be compared to the old part.

Second, it is unlikely that these replacement assemblies would be installed incorrectly, because other sources of the correct installation instructions are readily available from various sources, and the installation procedure is generally the reverse of the part removal procedure.

Third, it is unlikely that vehicle owners would improperly use or maintain these seatbelt assemblies as a result of this issue, because these assemblies are replacements for the original equipment, and the proper usage and maintenance instructions are in the vehicle owner's manual.

Fourth, Toyota has determined that, with the exception of the instruction sheets, the subject seatbelt assemblies comply with FMVSS No. 209 .

Finally, in similar situations, NHTSA has granted inconsequentiality petitions in the past.

Below, Toyota provides the data, its views, and its arguments in support of this petition. For the reasons set forth below, Toyota believes this noncompliance is inconsequential as it relates to motor vehicle safety.

Summary of Noncompliance

This noncompliance involves the approximately 1,400,000 seatbelt assemblies sold as replacement equipment referenced in the attached Noncompliance Information Report (Attachment 1) and 6,160 in the attached Noncompliance Information Report (Attachment 2). FMVSS No. 209, paragraph S4.1(k) requires that each seatbelt assembly, other than a seatbelt assembly installed in a motor vehicle by an automobile manufacturer, shall be accompanied by an installation instruction sheet to install the assembly in a motor vehicle which include the following statement:

“This seat belt assembly is for use only in [insert specific seating position(s), e.g., “front right”] in [insert specific vehicle make(s) and model(s)].”

Paragraph S4.1(l) requires a seatbelt or retractor assembly to include proper usage and maintenance instructions.

Due to an improper process or a miscommunication within Toyota or with the seatbelt manufactures, certain replacement seatbelt assemblies were not packaged with an instruction sheet meeting these requirements. In addition, due to an improper process at Toyota, certain replacement seatbelt assemblies were packaged with an instruction sheet which did not include the aforementioned statement.

Reasons this Noncompliance is Inconsequential as it relates to Motor Vehicle Safety

- I. The subject seatbelt assemblies were sold only by Toyota dealerships. Due to the dealerships’ replacement parts ordering system and the parts packaging, improper replacement seatbelt assembly selection would not likely occur.

It is unlikely that the subject replacement seatbelt assemblies would be selected for an incorrect seating position as a result of this issue. The subject assemblies were only sold by Toyota dealerships. The parts ordering system clearly indicates the part and enables identification of the appropriate model vehicle and seating position for which the assembly is intended to be installed. When selecting a replacement part, the dealerships can search by VIN, part number, and vehicle model. They can also see a diagram of the part location via the Electronic Parts Catalog. In addition, the part can be identified by the label on the packaging and the old part can be compared to the new part. The label on the packaging in which the replacement seatbelt is packaged specifies the part number and part description (see Figure 1).

Because of the Toyota dealerships' robust part ordering system and the additional label on the packaging, it is unlikely that an incorrect seatbelt would be provided or used as a replacement part. The missing sheet or missing seating position has no effect on a dealership's ability to provide the correct replacement part ordered or on the installer's ability to correctly identify the appropriate replacement part.

II. Improper installation of the seatbelt assembly is unlikely. Dealership technicians and third-party installers can access Toyota's electronic repair manual and other aftermarket manuals.

It is unlikely that an improper installation of a replacement seatbelt would occur as a result of a missing instruction sheet or an instruction sheet that does not indicate the specific seating position information.

After identifying that the part does not have an installation instruction sheet or does not specify the specific seating position, the installer could return the part to the dealer, request the installation instruction from the dealer, or consult other sources of installation instructions that are readily available. Technicians at Toyota dealerships have access to Toyota's electronic repair manual. Third-party installers have access to various aftermarket repair manuals and can obtain access to Toyota's electronic repair manual. The installer can also request a copy of the installation instructions from Toyota, and the instructions would be provided free of charge.

For seatbelt assemblies packaged with a Toyota instruction sheet, the vehicle model is correctly indicated on the instruction sheets; only the seating position information is missing. The installer will be able to correctly identify that the instruction sheet is for the appropriate model vehicle and can easily match the replacement part with the part to be replaced to confirm the correct seating position. The subject seatbelts are not universal type seatbelts; they are intended to be used to replace specific seatbelts in specific seating positions. Thus, whether an instruction sheet was not provided, or it did not identify the seating position, the installation procedure is generally the reverse of part removal.

Toyota notes that the investigation leading to the submission of the Part 573 reports subject of this petition was prompted by a report from a dealer technician who found a seatbelt assembly with an incorrect instruction sheet. While records covering the entire scope of the seatbelt assemblies involved are not available, Toyota believes this to be the only report of an instruction sheet concern. This further tends to confirm that improper installation of a seatbelt assembly is unlikely as a result of the missing instructions, and dealer technicians or third-party installers are able to easily obtain the installation information, if needed, from the other sources noted above.

III. The replacement seatbelt assemblies are intended to replace the original equipment seatbelts. The owner's manual for each vehicle contains the seatbelt usage and maintenance instructions.

It is unlikely that an improper use or maintenance of a replacement seatbelt would occur as a result of a missing instruction sheet or a sheet which does not include the aforementioned statement. The affected seatbelt assemblies are designed to replace the originally equipped seatbelts in specific Toyota vehicles. All of the vehicle models for which these replacement seat assemblies were designed were originally equipped with an owner's manual that contains usage and maintenance instructions for these seatbelt assemblies. Thus, the vehicle owner has access to the usage and maintenance instructions and would not need to refer to the instruction sheet for this information. In addition, the seatbelts packaged with sheets that are only missing the specific seating position information have the correct usage and maintenance instructions.

IV. The seatbelts comply with all other requirements of FMVSS No. 209.

The lack of the information on the instruction sheets has no bearing on the materials or performance of the replacement seatbelt assembly itself. Thus, the assemblies continue to meet the other performance requirements specified in FMVSS No. 209. There is no impact to performance, functionality, or occupant safety.

V. In similar situations, NHTSA has granted petitions for inconsequential noncompliance relating to the subject requirement of FMVSS No. 209.

NHTSA has previously granted at least seven similar petitions for inconsequential noncompliance for missing or incorrect instruction sheets for certain replacement seatbelt assemblies. These include: FCA US LLC (84 Fed. Reg. 20948, May 3, 2019); Mitsubishi Motors North America, Inc., (77 Fed. Reg. 24762, April 25, 2012); Bentley Motors Inc. (76 Fed. Reg. 58343, September 20, 2011); Hyundai Motor Company (74 Fed. Reg. 9125, March 2, 2009); Ford Motor Company, (73 Fed. Reg. 11462, March 3, 2008); Mazda North American Operations (73 Fed. Reg. 11464, March 3, 2008); and Subaru of America, Inc., (65 Fed. Reg. 67471, November 9, 2000).

In these cases, NHTSA determined that the noncompliance was inconsequential to motor vehicle safety for reasons that included the following: (1) the dealer ordering system would make it unlikely that an inappropriate seatbelt assembly would be sold for a specific seating position; (2) installers would be able to locate installation instructions from other sources; (3) the usage and maintenance instructions are available in the vehicles owner's manual; and (4) the seatbelts are intended to be replacement parts for original equipment designed for specific seating positions. These reasons also apply to the subject Toyota replacement seatbelt assemblies.

Conclusion

For the reasons set forth above, Toyota believes this noncompliance is inconsequential as it relates to motor vehicle safety and seeks an exemption from the notice and remedy requirements of 49 U.S.C. Chapter 301 for the subject vehicles.

2. Identification of Affected Equipment:

The items of equipment involved are replacement seatbelt assemblies intended for use as replacement parts on certain Toyota, Lexus, and Scion vehicles.

“Component Name”, “Part Number”, and “Date of Manufacture” of affected equipment are listed in Attachment 1.

Note: (1) This issue only involves certain replacement seatbelt assemblies that were identified during audits, produced at above manufactures, and sold in the U.S.

(2) The attached production ranges are estimates based on the available information from Toyota’s database. Not all equipment produced in this range were sold in the U.S.

(3) The supplier information and/or date of manufacture for some involved equipment is “Unknown” because the information from Toyota’s database is not available.

3. Total Number of Equipment Potentially Involved:

Approximately 1,400,000

4. Percentage of Equipment Estimated to Actually Experience Noncompliance:

100%

5. Description of Noncompliance:

In FMVSS No. 209, paragraph S4.1(k) requires that each seatbelt assembly, other than a seatbelt assembly installed in a motor vehicle by an automobile manufacturer, shall be accompanied by an installation instruction sheet that includes the following statement:

“This seat belt assembly is for use only in [insert specific seating position(s), e.g., “front right”] in [insert specific vehicle make(s) and model(s)].”

Due to a miscommunication with the supplier, certain replacement seatbelt assemblies were packaged with an instruction sheet which does not include the aforementioned statement. As a result, the subject equipment does not meet the requirements of FMVSS No. 209, paragraph S4.1(k).

6. Test Results and Other Information:

In February 2021, Toyota received information from a dealership that found a replacement seatbelt assembly packaged with an instruction sheet which specified the wrong seating position. Toyota then conducted investigations with its suppliers. Toyota compared the information that the suppliers had used to create the instruction sheets with Toyota’s part list and found discrepancies that caused the incorrect information to be provided.

On April 14, 2021, based on the results of these investigations, Toyota determined that certain replacement seatbelt assemblies may have been packaged with an instruction sheet which does not include the required aforementioned statement, and do not meet the requirements of FMVSS No. 209, paragraph S4.1(k).

7. Description of Corrective Repair Action:

Pursuant to 49 U.S.C. 30118(d) and 30120(h), and the provisions of 49 CFR Part 556, Toyota intends to petition NHTSA for an exemption from the notification and remedy requirements of 49 U.S.C. Chapter 301 on the basis that this noncompliance is inconsequential to motor vehicle safety.

Note: (1) This issue only involves certain replacement seatbelt assemblies that were identified during audits, produced at above manufacturers, and sold in the U.S.

(2) The above production ranges are estimates based on the available information from Toyota's database. Not all equipment produced in this range were sold in the U.S.

3. Total Number of Equipment Potentially Involved:

6,160

4. Percentage of Equipment Estimated to Actually Experience Noncompliance:

GR Supra and FR-S/86: 100%

For the Yaris iA; Toyota estimates 53% of the equipment may have actually been sold with incorrect or missing instruction sheets based on the inspection results from a non-representative survey conducted of the parts that were in Toyota's service parts distribution centers during a certain time.

5. Description of Noncompliance:

In FMVSS No. 209, paragraph S4.1(k) requires that each seatbelt assembly, other than a seatbelt assembly installed in a motor vehicle by an automobile manufacturer, shall be accompanied by an installation instruction sheet that includes the following statement:

"This seat belt assembly is for use only in [insert specific seating position(s), e.g., "front right"] in [insert specific vehicle make(s) and model(s)]."

Paragraph S4.1(l) requires a seatbelt or retractor assembly to include proper usage and maintenance instructions.

Due to an improper process or a miscommunication within Toyota, certain replacement seatbelt assemblies were not packaged with an instruction sheet meeting these requirements. In addition, due to an improper process at Toyota, certain replacement seatbelt assemblies were packaged with an instruction sheet which does not include the aforementioned statement. As a result, the subject equipment may not meet the requirements of FMVSS No. 209, paragraphs S4.1(k) and/or (l).

6. Test Results and Other Information:

In February 2021, Toyota received information from a dealership that found a replacement seatbelt assembly which was packaged with an instruction sheet which specified the wrong seating position. Toyota then conducted investigations with the suppliers. Two Part 573 reports were submitted to NHTSA on April 20, 2021 to address these issues. Toyota continued the investigation and found additional discrepancies in the seatbelt assemblies subject of this report. In addition, Toyota conducted part inspections at its parts distribution centers and found that certain replacement seatbelt assemblies were not packaged with a Toyota instruction sheet.

On April 28, 2021, based on the results of these investigations, Toyota determined that certain replacement seatbelt assemblies may not have been packaged with a Toyota instruction sheet or are missing the aforementioned statement, and may not meet the requirements of FMVSS No. 209, paragraph S4.1(k) and/or (l).

7. Description of Corrective Repair Action:

Pursuant to 49 U.S.C. 30118(d) and 30120(h), and the provisions of 49 CFR Part 556, Toyota intends to petition NHTSA for an exemption from the notification and remedy requirements of 49 U.S.C. Chapter 301 on the basis that this noncompliance is inconsequential to motor vehicle safety.

Chronology :

In February 2021, Toyota received information from a dealership that found a replacement seatbelt assembly packaged with an instruction sheet which specified the wrong seating position. Toyota then conducted investigations with its suppliers. Toyota compared the information that the suppliers had used to create the instruction sheets with Toyota's part list and found discrepancies that caused the incorrect information to be provided.

On April 14, 2021, based on the results of these investigations, Toyota determined that certain replacement seatbelt assemblies may have been packaged with an instruction sheet which does not include the required aforementioned statement, and do not meet the requirements of FMVSS No. 209, paragraph S4.1 (k).
