America is blessed with abundant oil and natural gas resources.

OVERVIEW

America's Oil and Natural Gas Economy

This report presents the findings of a 2014 survey of U.S. businesses that constitute America's domestic oil and natural gas supply chain.¹ The survey was undertaken by the American Petroleum Institute (API), the only national trade association that represents all segments of America's oil and natural gas industry. Its more than 600 members produce, process, and distribute most of the nation's energy. Included in the survey are companies that provide goods and services for onshore oil and natural gas development, whether as operators, contractors, service companies, suppliers, or other vendors.

Over the past decade, America has undergone a major energy revolution, rapidly shifting from an era of energy scarcity to an era of energy abundance. Advances in the proven process of hydraulic fracturing—or “fracking”—in conjunction with horizontal drilling have allowed the United States to emerge as the number one producer of natural gas in the world. By 2015, America is also projected to become the world's number one producer of oil.

These new resources have driven the economy forward, resulting in new jobs, higher revenues, and lower energy costs. Abundant oil and natural gas resources have also dramatically strengthened America's energy security, once considered one of the country's most alarming economic vulnerabilities. Domestic energy abundance has provided U.S. consumers with critical insulation against price spikes and supply disruptions due to turmoil overseas.

The key to this success, according to a study sponsored by the Manhattan Institute for Policy Research, has not been the efforts of “a handful of ‘Big Oil’ companies.” Instead, it is “a broad array of small and midsize oil and gas companies that are propelling record economic and job gains.”²

1 American Petroleum Institute, “API Onshore Oil and Gas Vendor Identification Survey” (Washington, D.C., 2014). The survey was distributed to API members in January 2014 to collect information for the period October 2012 to September 2013.

2 Mark P. Mills, “Where the Jobs Are: Small Businesses Unleash America's Energy Employment Boom,” Manhattan Institute's Power and Growth Initiative, 4 (February 2014). See Key Findings, i.

Overall, as of 2011, the oil and natural gas industry supported 9.8 million full-time and part-time U.S. jobs and 8 percent of the U.S. economy.³ Of that total, energy development utilizing hydraulic fracturing and horizontal drilling supported more than 2.1 million jobs in the U.S. economy. By the year 2025, that number is projected to rise to 3.9 million jobs.⁴

The top 15 states, in terms of the total number of jobs directly or indirectly attributable to the oil and natural gas industry in 2011, were, in order of number of industry-related jobs, Texas, California, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Florida, New York, Illinois, Ohio, Colorado, Michigan, Kansas, North Carolina, New Jersey, and Georgia.⁵ The total number of jobs directly or indirectly supported by oil and natural gas industry operations ranged in that year from 13,700 in the District of Columbia to 1.9 million in Texas.

This report provides a list of nearly 30,000 American businesses, located in every state and the District of Columbia, that are contributing to and benefiting from the U.S. energy revolution. Oil and natural gas development relies upon a diverse array of businesses across the economic spectrum, including small equipment suppliers, warehouse, large container makers, real estate companies, wild land restoration companies, modular laboratory and housing manufacturers, uniform suppliers, port-o-john rental companies, administrative support firms, and many more. In fact, the nearly 30,000 companies included in this report provide a mere sampling of the diversity, scope, and economic impact of today's oil and natural gas industry businesses. The actual number of such businesses within the industry supply chain is in reality much higher. For example, whereas this report includes the names of more than 600 businesses operating throughout every Congressional district in Ohio, the Ohio Department of Job and Family Services has reported that the state actually has more than 13,000 shale-related (oil and gas drilling-related) business establishments in the state.

State Profiles

Beyond the thousands of Americans directly employed by large oil and natural gas companies, the energy revolution has yielded major gains throughout the economy, stimulating the growth of countless businesses, small and medium-sized, private and public, in every state in the nation.

As part of the 2014 survey, this report's state chapters provide a tally of industry vendors operating in each state and the District of Columbia, listed by congressional district. Also included is a map of each state and the District of Columbia showing the location of industry vendors within congressional districts. Many of the state chapters also include vendor profiles.

Of the 50 states and the District of Columbia, 14 are considered top energy producers. That means that statewide production of oil or natural gas (or both) is among the 10 highest in the country.⁶ These states, in alphabetical order, are Alaska, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Kansas, Louisiana, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Texas, Utah, West Virginia, and Wyoming. The top energy-producing state in the country is Texas, first both in oil and natural gas development. Colorado, Louisiana, New Mexico, Oklahoma, and Wyoming also rank within the top 10 in terms of both oil and natural gas production.

However, as this report shows, states at the lower end of the production spectrum are not excluded from the economic benefits of the energy revolution. Residents in these states continue to enjoy strong employment and revenue gains tied to the oil and natural gas industry.

For example, in Indiana, which ranks 24th in oil production and 25th in natural gas production, the average annual oil and gas industry salary (excluding gas stations) is $80,512 – significantly higher than the state average of $41,792. Overall the oil and natural gas industry contributes $16.6 billion to the Indiana economy, 6.3 percent of the state's total economic activity.

In Delaware, which does not produce any oil or natural gas, the average annual salary across all industries and sectors is $52,026. However, the average annual salary for jobs related to the oil and gas industry (excluding gas stations) is $77,876. Overall the oil and natural gas industry supports $2 billion of the Delaware economy, or 4 percent of the state's total economic activity.

6 Information cited in this paragraph and the next three comes from the Bureau of Labor Statistics, Quarterly Census of Employment and Wages (preliminary data for 2013 accessed July 2014); U.S. Energy Information Administration; and PriceWaterhouseCoopers, Economic Impacts, 7/12/13 (based on 2012 IMPLAN database).

Given the widespread economic benefits, it's not surprising that Americans strongly support energy production. A 2014 telephone poll of 1,003 registered voters across the country, conducted on behalf of the American Petroleum Institute, found that 77 percent of Americans, regardless of party affiliation, answered that they support increased production of oil and natural gas resources located here in the United States.⁷

Conventional and Unconventional Oil and Natural Gas Development

Historically, most oil and natural gas development in the United States can be considered “conventional,” utilizing methods pioneered more than 150 years ago. Conventional resources can be extracted by drilling, through the pressure of the wells and pumping, or compression operations. However, conventional energy resources have become harder to extract, resulting in less production, and that lower production has driven the development of “unconventional” sources of energy.

Conventional and unconventional oil and gas come from the same original geologic formations, where sediments accumulated in multiple layers of the earth over millions of years.⁸ Over time these sediments formed sedimentary rocks. Ground pressure and extremely high temperatures transformed the organic matter contained in these rock layers into oil and gas. As long as the oil and gas can flow easily through porous rock, the reservoir and its associated oil and gas, as well as the methods for extracting it, are considered conventional. When the oil and gas are locked in “tight” formations of impermeable rock, the resources and the methods necessary to extract them have been referred to as “unconventional.”

While the process is more difficult and more costly, most of the recent growth in energy production has been the result of extracting resources from these unconventional formations. Technological breakthroughs in fracturing — pumping water, sand, and chemicals into the ground at high pressure to hydraulically fracture or “frack” shale rocks and extract trapped oil and gas — and steerable horizontal drilling (in contrast to the vertical drilling of conventional energy development), as well as sensing and control information technology, have made it commercially viable to “follow the richest seams to release tightly bound oil and gas.”⁹ It is these technological breakthroughs that are responsible for revolutionizing America's energy future, making the development of these resources commonplace, and as a result, much more “conventional.” And the industry has made great strides in advancing the environmental safety of fracking and horizontal drilling.

The 20 largest shale formations or “plays” are located in some 16 states. These plays include the Bakken and Marcellus Shale, as well as other emerging oil or natural gas plays. The states that are home to these formations are Arkansas, California, Colorado, Kansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Montana, New Mexico, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Texas, Utah, West Virginia, and Wyoming.

Three of the best known shale formations are the Eagle Ford Shale in Texas, the Marcellus Shale in the Northeastern United States, and the Bakken Shale, centered in North Dakota.

Mark Mills talks about the impressive economic results associated with the Eagle Ford Shale: “In the 23 counties atop the Eagle Ford Shale, average wages for all citizens have grown by 14.6 percent annually since 2005, compared with the 6.8 and 6.3 percent average for Texas and the U.S. respectively over the same period. The top five counties in the Eagle Ford Shale have experienced an average 63 percent annual rate of wage growth.”¹⁰

The Marcellus Shale is named for a distinctive outcrop near the village of Marcellus, New York. In this region, five states are considered to have the greatest potential for economic benefits, due largely to untapped natural gas reserves close to high-demand markets on the East Coast. These states are Maryland, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, and West Virginia.

Similarly, the Bakken Shale formation ranks as one of the largest domestic oil developments in the past 40 years. In 2012, North Dakota became the country's second largest oil producing state, behind only Texas. As a result, the state enjoys widespread economic growth and the lowest unemployment rate in the country—2.6%.¹¹

However, the economic benefits of unconventional energy development can also be seen in states such as Indiana and Delaware, where little or no energy production takes place. In Indiana, for example, the total number of jobs supported by unconventional activities was 15,973 in 2012. That job total is expected to climb to 27,303 in 2020 and to 33,366 in 2035. In Delaware, the total number of jobs supported by unconventional energy activities reached 2,195 in 2012. That job total is projected to rise to 3,841 in 2020 and to 4,907 in 2035.¹²

Job Opportunities for Minorities and Women in the Oil and Natural Gas Industry

Employment opportunities in the oil and natural gas industry are projected to expand dramatically in the coming years for African Americans, Hispanics, and women, according to a new study undertaken for the American Petroleum Institute.¹³ This study projects that the oil, natural gas, and petrochemical (chemical products derived from petroleum) industries will generate 955,000 new direct job opportunities through 2020 and nearly 1.3 million through 2030. African American, Hispanic, and women workers are expected to represent a vital portion of this projected growth in the labor force. Notably, 23 percent of new opportunities through 2030 are projected to be in scientific and managerial positions, requiring training in fields such as engineering, geoscience, management, business, finance, and technical skills.

Within the industry, the share of African American and Hispanic employment is expected to rise from one quarter in 2010 to one third through 2030. This shift will translate into nearly 408,000 minority jobs—32 percent of the new job opportunities projected through 2030. Among jobs in management, business, and finance, African American and Hispanic workers are expected to fill nearly 20 percent of new positions.

In 2010, women working in the oil, gas, and petrochemical industries totaled 226,000, representing 19 percent of the workforce. Based on current and projected trends in workforce participation rates and educational attainment, women are expected to fill 185,000 of the projected job opportunities through 2030. And these will be good jobs—many as petroleum engineers, managers, and other professionals.

In addition to white collar jobs, blue collar positions are expected to constitute 63 percent of new job opportunities in the industry through 2030. This rapid growth represents an enormous opportunity for workers with high school diplomas and some post-secondary training (for example, certificates or community college education) in skills related to the industry.

Vendor Highlights

Vendor profiles received in response to the 2014 survey provide a glimpse into the rich variety of businesses that are part of the oil and natural gas supply chain. Most are small and midsize businesses, the backbone of the energy revolution.

For example, one vendor in Georgia manufactures environmentally friendly “combustion solutions” that reduce emissions and increase efficiency. A vendor in Florida specializes in the design and construction of mobile/modular laboratories and primary containment equipment. These mobile laboratories enable companies to perform complex analyses, helping customers to be more efficient in field operations. In Massachusetts, another vendor helps clients develop geomechanical models to minimize operational risk when drilling and developing new reservoirs.

In North Carolina, a vendor that manufactures industrial work gloves focuses on impact-resistant hand covering, contributing to a safer work environment for drillers. And in Louisiana, a vendor helps clients achieve an injury-free work environment by providing on-site safety technicians, industrial safety training services, and Health, Safety, and the Environment (HSE) consultants.

A number of companies in the survey offer services and products to support hydraulic fracturing and horizontal drilling. One vendor in Michigan offers coating and manufacturing expertise that greatly increases the life of fracturing pump components. In Kentucky, another vendor restores used fluids to customer-specified performance levels, making possible high-yield waste recovery and lower unit costs. And in Pennsylvania, a vendor has treated and recycled more than one million barrels of flowback water.

In addition, the number of companies in the oil and natural gas supply chain that focus on environmental concerns is striking. A Nevada vendor tests water, soil, and air to ensure environmental compliance, health, and safety, and provides field test equipment and supplies, such as sampling pumps, air gas monitors, water quality meters, and safety supplies. And in Alaska, a vendor associated with the Iñupiat tribe describes the company role as follows: “As stewards of this land, we are able to provide clients with personnel who are extensively trained to prevent or mitigate damage to the environment. Our sense of stewardship and our training make us uniquely qualified to assist with responsible development.”

Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate Alabama Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of Alabama, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 101 businesses, spread across the state's seven congressional districts, are part of the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

The survey's snapshot of state-by-state activity reinforces the impressive level of industry success throughout the country that is documented in a recent PriceWaterhouseCoopers study conducted for the American Petroleum Institute.² That study found that the oil and natural gas industry in Alabama supports some 103,300 jobs, which is 4.2 percent of the state's total employment. The amount of Alabama labor income supported by the oil and natural gas industry comes to $4.9 billion annually. That's 4.2 percent of the state's total labor income.

Although Alabama is not a top U.S. energy producer, these job and labor income figures demonstrate that the people of Alabama enjoy significant benefits from energy development.³ The benefits show up in the state's salary statistics as well. Thus, while the average annual salary in Alabama across all industries and sectors is $41,399, the average oil and gas industry salary (excluding gas stations) is significantly higher—$63,832 annually.⁴ Overall the industry supports $11.3 billion of the Alabama economy. That's 6.4 percent of the state's total economic activity.

Alabama also benefits from the production of oil and natural gas from shales and so-called "tight formations," energy development that uses the proven engineering technologies of hydraulic fracturing, or "fracking," and horizontal

Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate Alaska Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of Alaska, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 505 businesses, spread across Alaska's at-large congressional district, are part of the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

Another way in which the oil and gas industry benefits the people of Alaska, in addition to total employment and labor income, is in terms of salary.³ While the average annual salary in Alaska across all industries and sectors is $50,624, the average salary in the oil and gas industry (excluding gas stations) is very significantly higher—$125,794 annually.⁴ Overall the industry supports $19.3 billion of the Alaska economy. That's 34.7 percent of the state's total economic activity.

Alaska ranks 4th in oil and 11th in natural gas production.⁵ That makes it one of the nation's top energy-producing states.

ASRC Energy Services, Inc

ASRC Energy Services is Alaska's leading provider of comprehensive oil and gas services. It offers a wide spectrum of services for all phases of the oil field life cycle, from exploration, permitting, and field development, to production optimization and decommissioning. In addition, the company provides offshore oil response equipment and resources, as well as marine services. More recently, ASRC entered the shale gas market in North Dakota, providing transportation and operations, as well as maintenance services, to operators in the Bakken formation.

The parent company of ASRC Energy Services, Arctic Slope Regional Corporation, is owned by and represents the business interests of its 11,000 Iñupiat Eskimo shareholders in eight villages across the North Slope of Alaska. As an Arctic Slope subsidiary doing business in the oil and gas industry, ASRC Energy Services has contributed greatly to the financial success of the Arctic Slope Regional Corporation. More important, this success has made it possible to give back to the company's tribal shareholders, the Iñupiat, through village and community economic development and job opportunities, as well as shareholder dividends that help offset the extremely high cost of living that comes with residing in a remote region of Alaska.

The Iñupiat people own title to nearly five million acres of land on the North Slope of Alaska that contains a high potential for oil, gas, coal, and base metal sulfides development. Although oil and gas development has financially benefited the region, a traditional subsistence lifestyle is heavily dependent on a healthy marine and terrestrial ecosystem unaffected by the activities of the oil and gas industry. As the company sees it, "As stewards of this land, we are able to provide clients with personnel who are extensively trained to prevent or mitigate damage to the environment. Our sense of stewardship and our training make us uniquely qualified to assist with responsible development."

Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate Arizona Economic and Job Growth

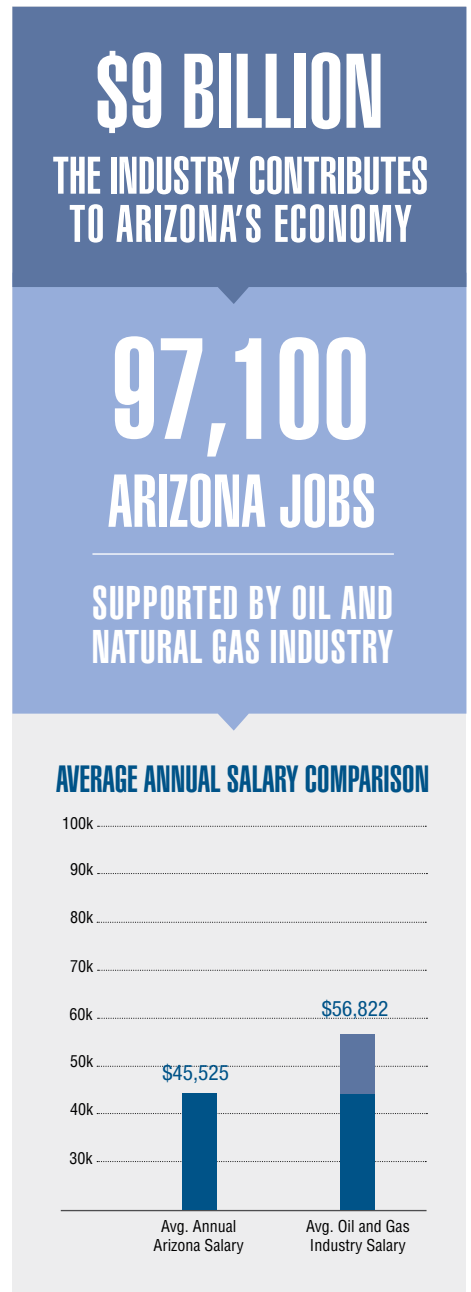

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of Arizona, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 124 businesses, located across all nine of Arizona's congressional districts, are part of the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

Although Arizona is not a top energy producer, these job and labor income figures demonstrate that the people of Arizona enjoy significant benefits from energy development.³ The benefits show up in the state's salary statistics as well. Thus, while the average annual salary in Arizona across all industries and sectors is $45,525, the average oil and gas industry salary (excluding gas stations) is substantially higher—$56,822 annually. Overall the industry supports $9 billion of the Arizona economy. That's 3.4 percent of the state's total economic activity.

Arizona also benefits from the production of oil and natural gas from shales and so-called "tight formations," energy development that uses the proven engineering technologies of hydraulic fracturing, or "fracking," and horizontal drilling. Total jobs supported by these activities in Arizona reached 11,698 in

User Centered Design Services

User Centered Design Services focuses on enhancing situational awareness of control room operators during abnormal situations. Operators must control the process and maintain normal safe operations. The company also addresses the contribution of human factors and human error to such situations. All of these issues are addressed in the implementation of best practices in the control room.

When the company designs a control room or an operator graphics for a refinery control room or a pipeline control center, a culture change takes place. Operators like their jobs more and feel more appreciated.

Forty years of research have equipped the company to identify what causes incidents and which incidents can be prevented. That research has been put to good use in educating the industry on the best practices to use to prevent incidents.

2012. That job total is projected to climb to 20,924 in 2020 and to 26,340 in 2035.⁴

Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate Arkansas Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of Arkansas, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 225 businesses, spread across all four of the congressional districts in Arkansas, are part of the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

The survey's snapshot of state-by-state activity reinforces the impressive level of industry success throughout the country that is documented in a recent PriceWaterhouseCoopers study conducted for the American Petroleum Institute.² That study found that the oil and natural gas industry in Arkansas supports some 92,500 jobs, which is 5.9 percent of the state's total employment. The amount of Arkansas labor income supported by the oil and natural gas industry comes to $4.22 billion annually. That's 6.3 percent of the state's total labor income.

Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate California Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of California, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 1,980 businesses, spread across all 52 of California's Congressional districts, are part of the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

The survey's snapshot of state-by-state activity reinforces the impressive level of industry success throughout the country that is documented in a recent PriceWaterhouseCoopers study conducted for the American Petroleum Institute.² That study found that the oil and natural gas industry in California supports some 793,200 jobs, which is 4.1 percent of the state's total employment. The amount of California labor income supported by the oil and natural gas industry comes to $58.9 billion annually. That's 4.9 percent of the state's total labor income.

Another way in which the oil and gas industry benefits the people of California, in addition to total employment and labor income, is in terms of salary. Thus, while the average annual salary in California across all industries and sectors is $56,590, the average oil and gas industry salary (excluding gas stations) is very substantially higher—$120,802 annually. Overall the industry supports $131.4 billion of the California economy. That's 6.7 percent of the state's total economic activity.³

California ranks 3rd in oil and 13th in natural gas production.⁴ That makes it one of the nation's top energy-producing states.

California particularly benefits from the production of oil and natural gas from shales and so-called "tight formations," energy development that uses the proven engineering technologies of hydraulic fracturing, or "fracking," and horizontal drilling. Total jobs supported by these

Vendor Profile⁶

Valley Power Systems

Valley Power Systems has branches in San Diego, City of Industry, Ontario, Mira Loma, Bakersfield, Fresno, Sacramento, and San Leandro, California. The company distributes emission-compliant diesel and natural gas reciprocating engines to the oil and gas market. Valley Power has also sold oil-field-ready power units in this particular market because it understands the environment in which the equipment must operate. Another facet of the company's work is providing on-highway truck service and repair, as well as field service for the company's own and others' equipment.

Valley Power Systems has new Tier 4 Final Engines that can be inserted into heavy capital oil and gas equipment, replacing the fleet of old, polluting diesel engines currently in the field. Ultimately, required replacement will take place on a timetable to be determined by the Environmental Protection Agency.

Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate Colorado Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of Colorado, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 1,198 businesses, spread across Colorado's seven congressional districts, are part of the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

The survey's snapshot of state-by-state activity reinforces the impressive level of industry success throughout the country that is documented in a recent PriceWaterhouseCoopers study conducted for the American Petroleum Institute.² The study found that the oil and natural gas industry in Colorado supports some 213,100 jobs, which is 6.7 percent of the state's total employment. The amount of Colorado labor income supported by the oil and natural gas industry comes to $14.1 billion annually. That's 8.1 percent of the state's total labor income.

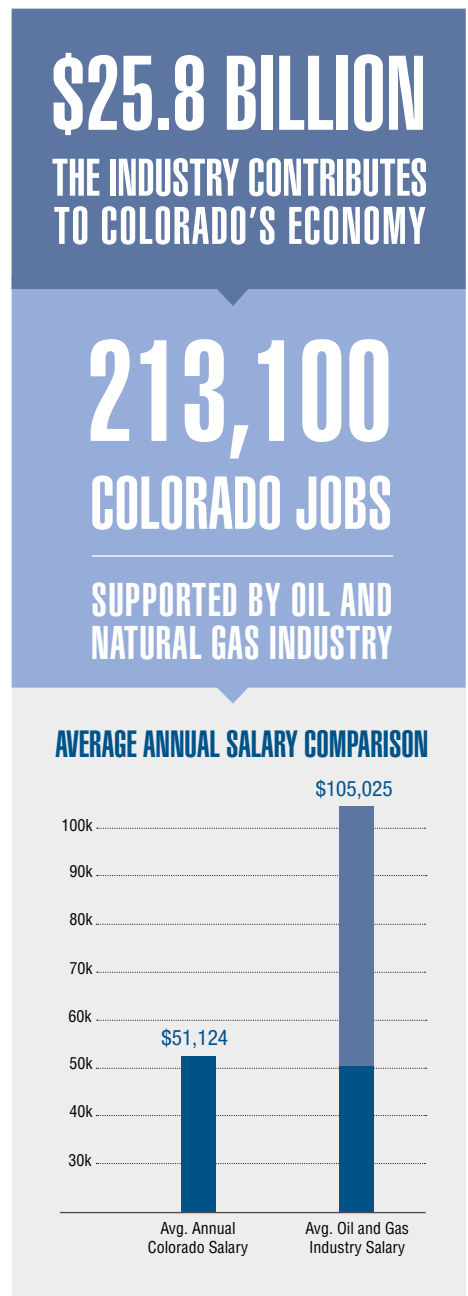

Another way in which the oil and gas industry benefits the people of Colorado, in addition to total employment and labor income, is in terms of salary.³ While the average annual salary in Colorado across all industries and sectors is $51,124, the average salary in the oil and gas industry (excluding gas stations) is very significantly higher—$105,025 annually.⁴ Overall the industry supports $25.8 billion of the Colorado economy. That's 9 percent of the state's total economic activity.

Colorado ranks 9th in oil and 6th in natural gas production.⁵ That makes Colorado one of the nation's top energy-producing states.

Colorado particularly benefits from the production of oil and natural gas from shales and so-called "tight formations,"

The survey was distributed to API members in January 2014 to collect information for the period October 2012 to September 2013. Included are companies that provide goods and services for onshore oil and natural gas development, whether as operators, contractors, service companies, suppliers, or vendors.

Vendor Profile⁸

Smith LaRock Architecture PC

Smith LaRock is an architectural consultancy specializing in the design of facilities for refineries, petrochemical plants, and other oil and gas processing clients, as well as for process-control clientele in other markets. The company specializes in the integration of architecture and pertinent human factors (technology, process, and people) for 24/7 Command and Control centers. Smith LaRock Architecture also designs blast and non-blast structures for those same clients.

The client facilities served include production buildings, office buildings, warehouse and maintenance shops, EMS/Fire buildings, and laboratories, as well as Collaboration/Visualization Centers for today's global integration and collaboration needs. Smith LaRock works entirely in 3D BIM CAD.

The goal of the company is to help clients develop safer mission-critical facilities within typically high-risk areas. Smith LaRock Architecture's products enhance vigilance and increase situational awareness. Making plant control operators more vigilant in their control rooms and putting them in a building that is designed to protect them from potential blast risks near the refinery units enhances safety for the entire facility.

energy development that uses the proven engineering technologies of hydraulic fracturing, or "fracking," and horizontal drilling. Total jobs supported by these activities in Colorado reached 77,622 in 2012. The job total is projected to climb to 121,398 in 2020 and to 175,363 in 2035.⁶

Colorado, get it. A telephone poll of 1,012 registered voters across the country, conducted on behalf of the American Petroleum Institute, found that 77 percent of Americans, regardless of party affiliation, support increased production of oil and natural gas resources located in the United States.⁷

Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate Connecticut Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of Connecticut, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 73 businesses, spread across all five of Connecticut's congressional districts, are part of the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

Although Connecticut is not a top U.S. energy producer, these job and labor income figures demonstrate that the people of Connecticut enjoy significant benefits from energy development. The benefits show up in the state's salary statistics as well.³ Thus, while the average annual salary in Connecticut across all industries and sectors is $63,169, the average oil and gas industry salary (excluding gas stations) is higher—$72,071 annually. Overall the industry supports $7.68 billion of the Connecticut economy. That's 3.3 percent of the state's total economic activity.

Connecticut also benefits from the production of oil and natural gas from shales and so-called "tight formations," energy development that uses the proven engineering technologies of hydraulic fracturing, or "fracking," and horizontal

Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate Florida Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of Florida, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 183 businesses, located across nearly all of Florida's 27 congressional districts, are part of the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

The survey's snapshot of state-by-state activity reinforces the impressive level of industry success throughout the country that is documented in a recent PriceWaterhouseCoopers study conducted for the American Petroleum Institute.² That study found that the oil and natural gas industry in Florida supports some 286,800 jobs, which is 2.9 percent of the state's total employment. The amount of Florida labor income supported by the oil and natural gas industry comes to $12.9 billion annually. That's 2.8 percent of the state's total labor income.

Vendor Profile⁶

Germfree Laboratories (GERMFREE)

Germfree Laboratories, located in Ormond Beach, Florida, specializes in the design and construction of mobile/modular laboratories and primary containment equipment. The company provides products to a variety of industries, including oil/gas, public health, environmental, mining, and government. Germfree has been in business for more than five decades and has installed laboratories globally.

The company recently expanded its role in the oil and natural gas sectors. It offers its laboratory technology in response to industry needs, both domestically and internationally. Additionally, a wide range of prospective oil and natural gas industry customers have expressed interest in the company's mobile and modular labs. The laboratories make possible complex analyses, enabling customers to be more efficient in their operations out in the field.

Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate Georgia

Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of Georgia, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 349 businesses, spread across all 14 of Georgia's congressional districts, are part of the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

The survey's snapshot of state-by-state activity reinforces the impressive level of industry success throughout the country that is documented in a recent PriceWaterhouseCoopers study conducted for the American Petroleum Institute.² That study found that the oil and natural gas industry in Georgia supports some 141,600 jobs, which is 2.7 percent of the state's total employment. The amount of Georgia labor income supported by the oil and natural gas industry comes to $6.76 billion annually. That's 2.5 percent of the state's total labor income.

Although Georgia is not a top U.S. energy producer, these job and labor income figures demonstrate that the people of Georgia enjoy significant benefits from energy development.³ The benefits show up in the state's salary statistics as well. Thus, while the average annual salary in Georgia across all industries and sectors is $47,515, the average oil and gas industry salary (excluding gas stations) is substantially higher—$61,239 annually. Overall the industry supports $12.9 billion of the Georgia economy. That's 3 percent of the state's total economic activity.

Georgia also benefits from the production of oil and natural gas from shales and so-called "tight formations," energy development that uses the proven engineering technologies of hydraulic fracturing, or "fracking," and horizontal drilling. Total jobs supported by these

ABUTECH, an acronym for Advanced Burner Technologies, manufactures environmentally friendly combustion solutions. Headquartered in Kennesaw, Georgia, ABUTECH specializes in offering high-efficiency, low-emission burners and flares to various industries, including oil and gas (upstream and midstream), biogas, landfill gas, waste-water treatment, mine gas, and many more. The burners, enclosed combustors/flares, vapor combustors, incinerators, and thermal oxidizers that ABUTECH manufactures are all aimed at reducing emissions and increasing efficiency.

The company continually adapts its products to the changes in both production and regulations facing the oil and gas industry. This enables ABUTECH to remain highly qualified as emissions control specialists for the industry.

activities in Georgia reached 18,505 in 2012. That job total is projected to climb to 32,458 in 2020 and to 38,771 in 2035.⁴

And Americans, including the people of Georgia, get it. A telephone poll of 1,012 registered voters across the country, conducted on behalf of the American Petroleum Institute, found that 77 percent of Americans, regardless of party affiliation, support increased production of oil and natural gas resources located in the United States.⁵

Perma-Rail International Inc.

Perma-Rail International Inc. benefited early on from the opportunity to develop products for the major players in the oil and natural gas industry, products that these players needed to make their businesses safer, more cost-effective, and more predictable. The solutions reached at the expense of these private companies were applied to problems in the state and federal highway systems.

The federal government and all of its entities (including the Federal Aviation Administration, the Bureau of Land Management, the National Forest Service, the National Park Service, and the Interstate Highway System), as well as State Departments of Transportation, have all utilized and specified as required the systems learned from these private industries.

In addition, Perma-Rail International notes, "All of the engineering, surveying, development, manufacturing, marketing, analysis, and documenting performed to keep the snow off the well pad and the railroad track have benefited the public tremendously."

Conservation Seeding and Restoration, Inc.

Conservation Seeding and Restoration, Inc., is a full-service wild land restoration company that specializes in restoring native habitats in the Western United States. The company provides seeding, weed abatement, infield monitoring, Storm Water Pollution Prevention Plans (SWPPPs), and Bureau of Land Management/state compliance reporting. The oil and gas industry has facilitated the growth of CSR, Inc., and has comprised roughly 80 percent of its gross revenue annually for more than a decade.

CSR, Inc. developed the land restoration curve for its oil and gas clients. In this process, surface stabilization timelines dropped from 10 to 5 years or less.

Kodiak America

Kodiak America is a manufacturing company that builds primarily snow removal equipment for airports, state departments, oil and gas companies, mines, ski resorts, and others. The company also performs side-steel fabricated jobs in niche industries.

The company is currently making steel filters capable of removing 100 percent of the oil and hydrocarbons out of the flow-back water that results from fracking. This will lead to a significant reduction in the need for fresh water in fracking. The new technology can filter out oil at high flow rates, it uses completely gravity-fed filters, the filter elements never need recharging, and the energy costs are low.

This is a new product and the company has exclusive rights to fabricate it for the part of the oil industry that engages in fracking operations. It is expected that the product will lead to the creation of hundreds of jobs.

In addition, oil and gas companies purchasing snow blowers and snow blower parts comprise about 20

Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate Illinois

Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of Illinois, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 932 businesses, spread across all 18 of Illinois' congressional districts, are part of the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

The survey's snapshot of state-by-state activity reinforces the impressive level of industry success throughout the country that is documented in a recent PriceWaterhouseCoopers study conducted for the American Petroleum Institute.² That study found that the oil and natural gas industry in Illinois supports some 263,700 jobs, which is 3.6 percent of the state's total employment. The amount of Illinois labor income supported by the oil and natural gas industry comes to $15.7 billion annually. That's 3.8 percent of the state's total labor income.

Although Illinois is not a top U.S. energy producer these job and labor income figures demonstrate that the people of Illinois enjoy significant benefits from energy development.³ The benefits show up in the state's salary statistics as well. Thus, while the average annual salary in Illinois across all industries and sectors is $52,625, the average oil and gas industry salary (excluding gas stations) is substantially higher—$81,633 annually. Overall the industry supports $33.3 billion of the Illinois economy. That's 5.1 percent of the state's total economic activity.

Illinois also benefits from the production of oil and natural gas from shales and so-called "tight formations," energy development that uses the proven engineering technologies of hydraulic fracturing, or "fracking," and horizontal drilling. Total jobs supported by these activities in Illinois reached 38,652 in

The survey was distributed to API members in January 2014 to collect information for the period October 2012 to September 2013. Included are companies that provide goods and services for onshore oil and natural gas development, whether as operators, contractors, service companies, suppliers, or vendors.
 2. PriceWaterhouseCoopers, "Economic Impacts of the Oil and Natural Gas Industry on the U.S. Economy in 2011," Washington, D.C., July 2013. Prepared for API using the IMPLAN input-output modeling system, based on 2011 U.S. Bureau of Economic Analysis data.

Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate Indiana

Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of Indiana, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 133 businesses, located across all nine of Indiana's congressional districts, are part of the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

The survey's snapshot of state-by-state activity reinforces the impressive level of industry success throughout the country that is documented in a recent PriceWaterhouseCoopers study conducted for the American Petroleum Institute.² That study found that the oil and natural gas industry in Indiana supports a total of 136,400 jobs, which is 3.8 percent of the state's total employment. The amount of Indiana labor income supported by the oil and natural gas industry comes to $6.7 billion annually. That's 4.1 percent of the state's total labor income.

Although Indiana is not a top energy producer, these job and labor income figures demonstrate that the people of Indiana enjoy significant benefits from energy development.³ The benefits show up in the state's salary statistics as well. Thus, while the average annual salary in Indiana across all industries and sectors is $41,792, the average oil and gas industry salary (excluding gas stations) is substantially higher—$80,512 annually.⁴ Overall the industry supports $16.6 billion of the Indiana economy. That's 6.3 percent of the state's total economic activity.

Indiana also benefits from the production of oil and natural gas from shales and so-called "tight formations," energy development that uses the proven engineering technologies of hydraulic fracturing, or "fracking," and horizontal drilling. Total jobs supported by these activities in Indiana reached 15,973 in

Kaufman Global

Leveraging a process called "Lean Continuous Improvement," as well as proprietary change management techniques, Kaufman Global delivers structured implementation and transformation projects that result in sustainable operational and financial results. The company has driven enterprise-wide change initiatives and cultural transformations within organizations for 20 years. Work in oil and gas for the past nearly 10 years has taken the company around the world with projects on five continents.

Recognized for its ability to develop sustainable, results-driven continuous improvement systems for large organizations, Kaufman Global focuses on issues critical to the oil and natural gas industry. There are a number of main issues. The first is Asset Utilization and Asset Velocity: Efficiently managing assets in the form of equipment, consumables, and people is essential to returning these to a revenue-generating position. Second is Service Quality Improvement: Effectively delivering value and reducing nonproductive time are all-important. Third is Organizational Engagement and Change Management: Not only describing and improving process, but getting everyone to participate in the process improvement—that is key. And last is Procedural Adherence: Improving efficiency and reducing the likelihood of catastrophic events grows out of adhering to procedures.

The company is very focused on the interface between people and process. The oil and gas industry tends to seek technological solutions first. When Kaufman Global gets involved, it delivers sustainable solutions by connecting people to the processes they control.

Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate Iowa

Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of Iowa, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 38 businesses, spread across all four of Iowa's congressional districts, are part of the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

Although Iowa is not a top U.S. energy producer, these job and labor income figures demonstrate that the people of Iowa enjoy significant benefits from energy development.³ The benefits show up in the state's salary statistics as well. Thus, while the average annual salary in Iowa across all industries and sectors is $40,489, the average oil and gas industry salary (excluding gas stations) is substantially higher—$59,273 annually. Overall the industry supports $4.4 billion of the Iowa economy. That's 3.1 percent of the state's total economic activity.

Iowa also benefits from the production of oil and natural gas from shales and so-called "tight formations," energy development that uses the proven engineering technologies of hydraulic fracturing, or "fracking," and horizontal drilling. Total jobs supported by these activities in Iowa reached 8,751 in 2012.

Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate Kansas

Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of Kansas, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 245 businesses, spread across all six of the state's congressional districts, are part of the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

The survey's snapshot of state-by-state activity reinforces the impressive level of industry success throughout the country that is documented in a recent PriceWaterhouseCoopers study conducted for the American Petroleum Institute.² The study found that the oil and natural gas industry in Kansas supports some 148,300 jobs, which is 8.1 percent of the state's total employment. The amount of Kansas labor income supported by the oil and natural gas industry comes to $7.2 billion annually. That's 8.6 percent of the state's total labor income.

Another way in which the oil and gas industry benefits the people of Kansas, in addition to total employment and labor income, is in terms of salary.³ While the average annual salary in Kansas across all industries and sectors is $42,294, the average salary in the oil and gas industry (excluding gas stations) is significantly higher—$66,918 annually. Overall the industry supports $12.9 billion of the Kansas economy. That's 9.5 percent of the state's total economic activity.

Kansas ranks 10th in oil and 12th in natural gas production.⁴ That makes it one of the nation's top energy-producing states.

River City Engineering, Inc.

River City Engineering, Inc. (RCE) provides process engineering services to the oil and natural gas industry. The company's services include providing an unbiased perspective on plant design and operation, as well as designing and troubleshooting primarily natural gas processing facilities worldwide. River City provides similar services to the upstream industry (oil and gas production), both onshore and offshore.

"Most companies have licensed technology they are pushing or they are trying to reduce bid costs at the expense of functionality and operability. We do not have any licensed processes. Instead we possess an expert understanding of most of the licensed processes used in the industry. We are able to provide objective cost comparisons as well."

Jacam

Jacam is a chemical sales and service company that provides problem-solving technology and superior service to the oil and gas industry. Jacam works with its customers to analyze well and pipeline data, precisely diagnose problems, and develop tailored solutions to increase efficiency, productivity, and profits. Jacam's state-of-the-art manufacturing facility in Sterling, Kansas, has an annual production capacity of more than 70 million gallons of its patented products.

Jacam was founded in 1982 in the Sterling garage of founder and CEO Dr. Gene Zaid. The company now employs more than 400 people nationwide. Jacam Carriers, the company's freight shipping and trucking company, transports company products from the Kansas manufacturing facility to more than 20 warehouses across the United States.

The company has a number of innovative products that contribute to enhanced safety and environmental protection in the oil and gas industry. The development of the SuperCorr® binary corrosion inhibitor has made it possible to help customers maintain a higher degree of pipeline integrity. Solid Chemistry products eliminate the environmental risks associated with spills during application.

In short: "Jacam's products are designed to increase the productivity and efficiency of oil and gas wells, making oil and gas a more cost-effective and sustainable energy choice."

Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate Kentucky

Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of Kentucky, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 74 businesses, spread across all six of Kentucky's congressional districts, are part of the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

Although Kentucky is not a top U.S. energy producer, these job and labor income figures demonstrate that the people of Kentucky enjoy significant benefits from energy development.³ The benefits show up in the state's salary statistics as well. Thus, while the average annual salary in Kentucky across all industries and sectors is $40,589, the average oil and gas industry salary (excluding gas stations) is substantially higher—$65,495 annually. Overall the industry supports $7.9 billion of the Kentucky economy. That's 4.6 percent of the state's total economic activity.

Kentucky also benefits from the production of oil and natural gas from shales and so-called "tight formations," energy development that uses the proven engineering technologies of hydraulic fracturing, or "fracking," and horizontal drilling. Genscape

Genscape is the leading global provider of real-time data and intelligence for commodity and energy markets. With thousands of patented monitors strategically deployed worldwide, Genscape is unique in its ability to collect and report proprietary market fundamentals in real-time or near real-time. The company delivers innovative solutions across a number of asset classes, including oil, power, natural gas and liquefied natural gas, agriculture, petrochemical and natural gas liquids, maritime, and renewables.

Market participants in the financial and commodity markets, particularly in the oil and gas industry, have benefited from Genscape products and services. These markets were much more opaque before Genscape began delivering real-time, proprietary data and intelligence on the oil and gas industry. Previously, traders, analysts and other market participants relied on delayed or inaccurate data from the government or other public sources. Now they have the ability to make more informed trading decisions, improve risk management, and increase operational efficiency with a much higher degree of visibility.

In sum: "Genscape's activities to help the market become more efficient and transparent ultimately benefit the entire global oil and natural gas supply chain, from exploration and production companies to refineries, storage owners, and end users, including companies and individuals alike."

CRS Reprocessing Services

CRS is a global provider in fluid reprocessing management, offering people, technology, and services to efficiently handle industrial fluids for manufacturing facilities. Headquartered in Louisville, Kentucky, the company has more than 30 years of expertise and operations in the United States, Europe, and Asia. CRS provides custom-built, on-site reprocessing and mobile facilities that economically restore used fluids to customer-specified performance levels, making possible high-yield waste recovery and lower unit costs.

CRS thus provides environmentally friendly and highly efficient "green" recycling for drilling operations, maximizing the recovery of valuable materials while dramatically reducing waste and disposal costs.

Although CRS is a U.S. company, prior to the shale gas boom the employee base was predominantly in Europe and Asia. Since 2012, however, with the growth of the Oil & Gas Services Division, the company's U.S. employment has increased by 51 percent.

Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate Louisiana

Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of Louisiana, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 1,711 businesses, spread across all six of Louisiana's congressional districts, are part of the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

Another way in which the oil and gas industry benefits the people of Louisiana, in addition to total employment and labor income, is in terms of salary.³ While the average annual salary in Louisiana across all industries and sectors is $44,332, the average salary in the oil and gas industry (excluding gas stations) is very significantly higher—$87,929 annually. Overall the industry supports $73.9 billion of the Louisiana economy. That's 35.5 percent of the state's total economic activity.

Louisiana ranks 8th in oil and 2nd in natural gas production.⁴ That makes it one of the nation's top energy-producing states.

Louisiana particularly benefits from the production of oil and natural gas from shales and so-called "tight formations," energy development that uses the proven

Safety Management Systems, a division of Acadian Companies

Safety Management Systems, LLC (SMS) helps clients and partners in the oil and natural gas industry achieve an injury-free work environment by providing a variety of specialty-skilled personnel solutions. These include remote paramedics, on-site safety technicians, industrial safety training services, and Health, Safety, and the Environment (HSE) consultants to the upstream, midstream, refinery, and petrochemical markets. Currently, the primary responsibilities of Acadian's remote paramedics are on-site health care and pre-hospital emergency medical care.

In 2013 alone, the Safety Management Systems Training Academy trained more than 34,000 workers and SMS employees performed more than 13,000 hours of additional training. SMS can help reduce injury rates, improve training compliance, and assure successful pass rates of all contractor and compliance audits. "We aim to make the industry as a whole a safer place."

Safety Management Systems' parent company, Acadian, has more than 40 years of medical response experience. Acadian Ambulance, Acadian Monitoring Services, and Acadian Air Med are sister divisions.

Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate Maine

Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of Maine, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 11 businesses, located across Maine's two congressional districts, are part of the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

The survey's snapshot of state-by-state activity reinforces the impressive level of industry success throughout the country that is documented in a recent PriceWaterhouseCoopers study conducted for the American Petroleum Institute.² That study found that the oil and natural gas industry in Maine supports some 28,800 jobs, which is 3.6 percent of the state's total employment. The amount of Maine labor income supported by the oil and natural gas industry comes to $1.15 billion annually. That's 3.2 percent of the state's total labor income.

Although Maine is not a top energy producer, these job and labor income figures demonstrate that the people of Maine enjoy significant benefits from energy development.³ The benefits show up in the state's salary statistics as well. Thus, while the average annual salary in Maine across all industries and sectors is $38,782, the average oil and gas industry salary (excluding gas stations) is higher—$45,861 annually. Overall the industry supports $2.4 billion of the Maine economy. That's 4.2 percent of the state's total economic activity.

Maine also benefits from the production of oil and natural gas from shales and so-called "tight formations," energy development that uses the proven engineering technologies of hydraulic fracturing, or "fracking," and horizontal drilling. Total jobs supported by these activities in Maine reached 2,769 in 2012.

1. American Petroleum Institute, "API Onshore Oil and Gas Vendor Identification Survey," Washington, D.C., 2014. The survey was distributed to API members in January 2014 to collect information for the period October 2012 to September 2013. Included are companies that provide goods and services for onshore oil and natural gas development, whether as operators, contractors, service companies, suppliers, or vendors.

2. PriceWaterhouseCoopers, "Economic Impacts of the Oil and Natural Gas Industry on the U.S. Economy in 2011," Washington, D.C., July 2013. Prepared for API using the IMPLAN input-output modeling system, based on 2011 U.S. Bureau of Economic Analysis data.

3. Information cited in this paragraph comes from the Bureau of Labor Statistics, Quarterly Census of Employment and Wages (preliminary data for 2013 accessed July 2014); and PriceWaterhouseCoopers, "The Economic Impacts of the Oil and Natural Gas Industry on the U.S. Economy: Employment, Labor Income and Value Added," 7/12/13 (based on 2012 IMPLAN database).

Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate Maryland

Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of Maryland, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 93 businesses, spread across all eight of Maryland's congressional districts, are a part of the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

Although Maryland is not a top U.S. energy producer, these job and labor income figures demonstrate that the people of Maryland enjoy significant benefits from energy development.³ The benefits show up in the state's salary statistics as well. Thus, while the average annual salary in Maryland across all industries and sectors is $51,928, the average oil and gas industry salary (excluding gas stations) is substantially higher—$60,903 annually. Overall the industry supports $7.08 billion of the Maryland economy. That's 2.2 percent of Maryland's total economic activity.

Maryland also benefits from the production of oil and natural gas from shales and so-called "tight formations," energy development that uses the proven engineering technologies of hydraulic fracturing, or "fracking," and horizontal drilling. Total jobs supported by these activities in Maryland reached 11,749 in 2012. The job total is projected to climb to

Williams Scotsman

Since 1955, Williams Scotsman has offered mobile and modular space solutions for the construction, energy, industrial, commercial/retail, healthcare, and government markets, with operations in the United States and Canada. As part of the Algeco Scotsman network, Williams Scotsman provides turnkey office, accommodations, and storage solutions (modular units that come fully equipped with technology solutions, kitchen equipment, office furniture, etc.) to the energy market.

Williams Scotsman's services range from equipment rental to the design, build, and management of workforce housing solutions to support the development of remote energy resources. The company services projects in North America and around the globe.

Domestically, William Scotsman delivers turnkey modular solutions across numerous North American energy fields, ranging from the Permian Basin and Eagle Ford Shale in Texas, to the Marcellus Shale in Pennsylvania, to the Bakken Shale in North Dakota, to the Alberta oil sands, and even the North Slope of Alaska.

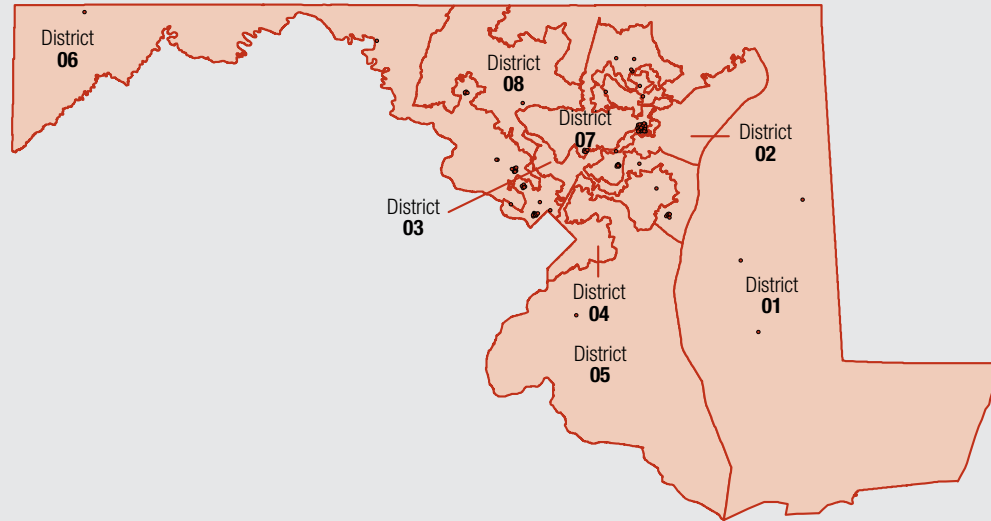

In the company's modular spaces, contractors meet and review work documents, discuss project progress, and have a break area away from the job site. Turnkey housing and catering solutions enable workers in remote areas to rest, refuel, and recuperate after long, demanding workdays in extreme climates. In addition, the inherent nature of temporary modular solutions is safer for the environment, as it reduces the need for permanent construction and allows equipment to be reused as development activity inevitably migrates to new areas.

The ever-growing oil and gas business is also driving the company's overall growth in non-residential construction. With many of the shale projects located in isolated areas, there is a ground-up need for infrastructure development. As workers move into these areas to develop the energy side of the industry, families follow and need schools, hospitals, housing, and recreational facilities.

Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate Massachusetts

Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of Massachusetts, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 209 businesses, spread across the state's nine congressional districts, are part of the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

The survey's snapshot of state-by-state activity reinforces the impressive level of industry success throughout the country that is documented in a recent PriceWaterhouseCoopers study conducted for the American Petroleum Institute.² That study found that the oil and natural gas industry in Massachusetts supports some 106,300 jobs, which is 2.5 percent of the state's total employment. The amount of Massachusetts labor income supported by the oil and natural gas industry comes to $7.12 billion annually. That's 2.6 percent of the state's total labor income.

Although Massachusetts is not a top U.S. energy producer, these job and labor income figures demonstrate that the people of Massachusetts enjoy significant benefits from energy development.³ The benefits show up in the state's salary statistics as well. Thus, while the average annual salary in Massachusetts across all industries and sectors is $62,317, the average oil and gas industry salary (excluding gas stations) is significantly higher—$75,687 annually. Overall the industry supports $12.6 billion of the Massachusetts economy. That's approximately 3 percent of the state's total economic activity.

Massachusetts also benefits from the production of oil and natural gas from shales and so-called "tight formations," energy development that uses the proven engineering technologies of hydraulic fracturing, or "fracking," and horizontal drilling. Total jobs supported by these

Plumb Geomechanics, LLC

Plumb Geomechanics was founded in 2010, after the company's principal retired from Schlumberger: "[My goal was] to transfer my knowledge to the next generation of geoscientists working in the petroleum industry." A small business located in Cambridge, Massachusetts, Plumb Geomechanics provides consulting services to the upstream oil and gas industry. The company aims to help clients develop geomechanical models for regions where exploration wells will be drilled. The models are used to help plan the wells and to manage drilling risk while the wells are being drilled.

Plumb Geomechanics also provides basic training in borehole geomechanics. The company teaches 3-day and 5-day courses on the foundations of applied borehole geomechanics. The course covers basic concepts used in geomechanics, the workflows for building geomechanical models using conventional oilfield data, and application of the models for the life of a field.

The founder of Plumb Geomechanics helped create the geomechanics services business in Schlumberger. "Over a period of 30 years, I helped develop the science, measurements, workflows software, and business models that underpin the geomechanics services business. I offer my clients a deep understanding of what is known and what is not known about the state of stress and rock mechanical properties at great depth in sedimentary basins. I help them develop new geomechanics information in their exploration wells and apply it to minimize operational risk when drilling and developing new reservoirs."

Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate Michigan Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of Michigan, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 295 businesses, located across all 14 of Michigan's congressional districts, are part of the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

The survey's snapshot of state-by-state activity reinforces the impressive level of industry success throughout the country that is documented in a recent PriceWaterhouseCoopers study conducted for the American Petroleum Institute.² That study found that the oil and natural gas industry in Michigan supports some 182,000 jobs, which is 3.6 percent of the state's total employment. The amount of Michigan labor income supported by the oil and natural gas industry comes to $8.81 billion annually. That's 3.5 percent of the state's total labor income.

Although Michigan is not a top energy producer these job and labor income figures demonstrate that the people of Michigan enjoy significant benefits from energy development.³ The benefits show up in the state's salary statistics as well. Plasma-Tec, Inc.

Plasma-Tec is a precision machining, turning, grinding, and thermal-spray coating shop. The company's niche is round, turned, ground, and coated wear components, usually for severe environments, such as high-wear or corrosion applications. Plasma-Tec's sweet spot is 1"– 8" in diameter and up to 60" in overall length of tightly toleranced, engineered wear or perishable components that are bought in small to medium-sized batches. Pump components are a specialty.

Plasma-Tec's coating and manufacturing expertise has doubled the wear life of fracturing pump components.

Hemco Gage

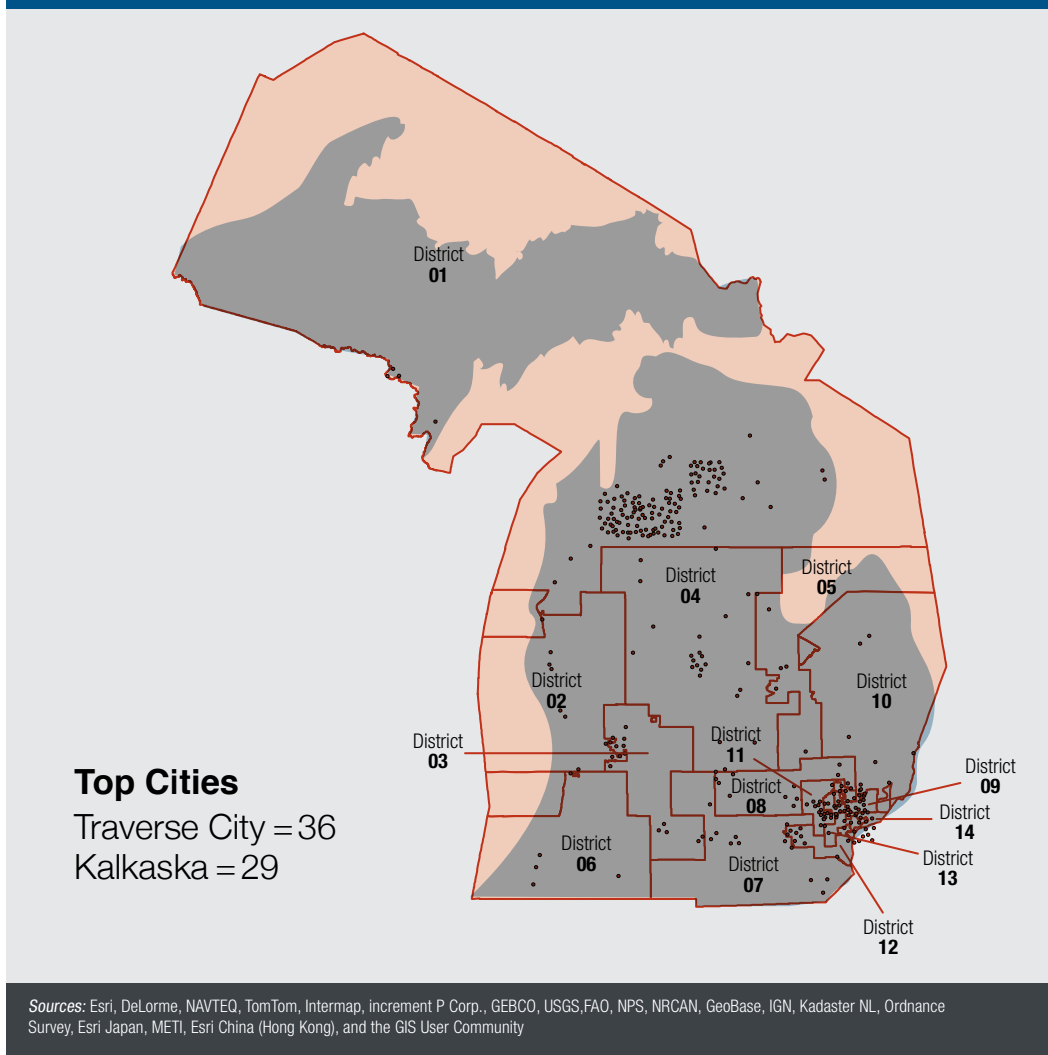

Hemco Gage designs and manufactures thread, cylindrical, and pin gaging, with a specialty in American Petroleum Institute threading. The company is API-licensed to manufacture masters, one of only two so licensed companies in the United States.

In sum: "We provide needed gage engineering talent, knowledge, and application know-how, allowing the oil and natural gas industry to move forward with new thread forms. These allow for faster piping, casing, and tool changeovers."

Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate Minnesota Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of Minnesota, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 189 businesses, located across all eight of Minnesota's congressional districts, are part of the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

Although Minnesota is not a top energy producer, these job and labor income figures demonstrate that the people of Minnesota enjoy significant benefits from energy development.³ The benefits show up in the state's salary statistics as well. Thus, while the average annual salary in Minnesota across all industries and sectors is $50,475, the average oil and gas industry salary (excluding gas stations) is substantially higher—$76,853 annually. Overall the industry supports $14.3 billion of the Minnesota economy. That's 5 percent of the state's total economic activity.

Minnesota also benefits from the production of oil and natural gas from shales and so-called "tight formations," energy development that uses the proven engineering technologies of hydraulic fracturing, or "fracking," and horizontal drilling. Total jobs supported by these

Xcel Energy

Xcel Energy is a regulated major U.S. electricity and natural gas company, headquartered in Minneapolis, with regulated operations in eight Western and Midwestern states. Xcel Energy provides a comprehensive portfolio of energy-related products and services to 3.4 million electricity customers and 1.9 million natural gas the business, the company is involved in generation, transmission, and local distribution. For natural gas, the company is primarily a local distribution company with some intrastate pipeline.

Xcel Energy is a significant purchaser of natural gas for use in its electric and natural gas businesses and, to lesser degree, for steam and chilled water production. Considerable volumes of production of natural gas are utilized, both at the company's natural gas generation power plants and as part of the company's local distribution to end-use residential and business customers.

Fastenal

Headquartered in Winona, Minnesota, Fastenal is a full-line industrial and construction supply distributor with more than 2,600 store locations in all 50 states and across multiple countries. Fastenal also has an oilfield sales team that focuses directly on supplying products to drilling sites. In addition, the company supplies custom-manufactured bolts and other intricate parts to original equipment manufacturers in the oil and natural gas industry through its world-class manufacturing services.

With a broad range of store locations, there is a store very close to all of the shale plays across the United States. And the company's automated supply (industrial vending) solutions make it possible to provide state-of-the-art inventory control solutions.

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of Montana, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 226 businesses, spread across Montana's at-large congressional district, are part of the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

Although Montana is not a top U.S. energy producer, these job and labor income figures demonstrate that the people of Montana enjoy significant benefits from energy development.³ The benefits show up in the state's salary statistics as well. Thus, while the average annual salary in Montana across all industries and sectors is $36,499, the average oil and gas industry salary (excluding gas stations) is very substantially higher—$81,226 annually. Overall the industry supports $4.5 billion of the Montana economy. That's 10.8 percent of the state's total economic activity.

Montana also benefits from the production of oil and natural gas from shales and so-called "tight formations," energy development that uses the proven technologies of hydraulic fracturing, or "fracking," and horizontal drilling. Total jobs supported by these activities in Montana

Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate Nebraska Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of Nebraska, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 37 businesses, spread across all three of Nebraska's congressional districts, support the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

The survey's snapshot of state-by-state activity reinforces the impressive level of industry success throughout the country that is documented in a recent PriceWaterhouseCooper study conducted for the American Petroleum Institute.² That study found that the oil and natural gas industry in Nebraska supports a total of 47,200 jobs, which is 3.8 percent of the state's total employment. The full Nebraska labor income supported by the oil and natural gas industry totals $2.69 billion annually. That's 4.7 percent of the state's total labor income.

Although Nebraska is not a top U.S. energy producer, these job and labor income figures demonstrate that the people of Nebraska enjoy significant benefits from energy development.³ The benefits show up in the state's salary statistics as well. Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate Nevada

Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of Nevada, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 40 businesses, spread across all four of Nevada's congressional districts, are part of the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

The survey's snapshot of state-by-state activity reinforces the impressive level of industry success throughout the country that is documented in a recent PriceWaterhouseCoopers study conducted for the American Petroleum Institute.² That study found that the oil and natural gas industry in Nevada supports some 48,600 jobs, which is 3.2 percent of the state's total employment. The amount of Nevada labor income supported by the oil and natural gas industry comes to $2.43 billion annually. That's 3.2 percent of the state's total labor income.

Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate New Jersey Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of New Jersey, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 177 businesses, spread across all 12 of New Jersey's congressional districts, are part of the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

Although New Jersey is not a top U.S. energy producer overall, these job and labor income figures demonstrate that the people of New Jersey enjoy significant benefits from energy development.³ The benefits show up in the state's salary statistics as well. OLI Systems, Inc.

OLI Systems is an electrolyte simulation software company. OLI develops thermodynamic models and software that predict the physical-chemical behavior of water and electrolyte solutions. OLI software is used, among other things, to optimize chemical processes, predict mineral scaling during production, and compute the potential for corrosion in refining operations.

The need of the production and refining industries to predict scaling and corrosion during operations has created an opportunity for OLI to develop its technology. OLI's many scientific advances in electrolyte theory were made in response to demand from the oil and gas sector.

OLI represents a team of electrolyte thermodynamicists, scientists, chemical engineers, and software developers. "Our technologists continue to improve upon and deliver scientific models that meet the challenges arising both from the increasingly extreme conditions of oil and natural gas production and from the relentless demand to optimize refining processes."

activities in New Jersey reached 19,753 in 2012. The job total is projected to climb to 34,455 in 2020 and to 40,537 in 2035.⁴

And Americans, including the people of New Jersey, get it. A statewide telephone poll of 602 registered New Jersey voters, conducted on behalf of the American Petroleum Institute, found that 70 percent of them, regardless of party affiliation, support increased production of oil and natural gas resources located in the United States.⁵

Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate New Mexico Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of New Mexico, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 902 businesses, spread across all three of New Mexico's congressional districts, support the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

Another way in which the oil and gas industry benefits the people of New Mexico, in addition to total employment and labor income, is in terms of salary.³ While the average annual salary in New Mexico across all industries and sectors is $39,660, the average salary in the oil and gas industry (excluding gas stations) is very significantly higher—$71,505⁴ annually. Overall the industry supports $11.3 billion of the New Mexico economy. That's 14.2 percent of the state's total economic activity.

New Mexico ranks 6th in oil and 7th in natural gas production.⁵ That makes it one of the nation's top energy-producing states.

New Mexico also benefits from the production of oil and natural gas from

The survey was distributed to API members in January 2014 to collect information for the period October 2012 to September 2013. Included are companies that provide goods and services for onshore oil and natural gas development, whether as operators, contractors, service companies, suppliers, or vendors.

2. PriceWaterhouseCoopers, "Economic Impacts of the Oil and Natural Gas Industry on the U.S. Economy in 2011," Washington, D.C., July 2013. Prepared for API using the IMPLAN input-output modeling system, based on 2011 U.S. Bureau of Economic Analysis data.

shales and so-called “tight formations,” energy development that uses the proven engineering technologies of hydraulic fracturing, or “fracking,” and horizontal drilling. Total jobs supported by these activities in New Mexico reached 23,625 in 2012. The job total is projected to climb to 29,849 in 2020 and to 58,466 in 2035.⁶

And Americans, including the people of New Mexico, get it. A telephone poll of 1,012 registered voters across the country, conducted on behalf of the American Petroleum Institute, found that 77 percent of Americans, regardless of party affiliation, support increased production of oil and natural gas resources located in the United States.⁷

Mesa Verde Resources

Mesa Verde Resources provides lignite—a type of coal made from naturally compressed peat that can be used for fuel—to drilling mud suppliers for the oil and gas industry. While advancing sustainable agriculture naturally is Mesa Verde’s overall focus, the oil and natural gas industry is a significant part of the company’s business.

Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate New York Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas development are driving the economy through a major energy boom nationwide and that boom is rippling through the economy of New York, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 392 businesses, spread across nearly all of New York State's 27 Congressional districts, support the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

Despite the fact that New York is not a top energy producer, these job and labor income figures show that New Yorkers enjoy significant benefits from energy development.³ The benefits show up in the state's salary statistics as well. Thus, while the average annual salary in New York across all industries and sectors is $64,197, the average oil and gas industry salary (excluding gas stations) is significantly higher—$80,843 annually. The industry contributes $35.2 billion to New York's economy. That's 3 percent of New York's total economic activity.

New York also benefits from the production of oil and natural gas from shales and so-called "tight formations," energy development that uses the proven engineering technologies of hydraulic fracturing, or "fracking," and horizontal drilling. Total jobs supported by these activities in New York reached 44,429 in

And New Yorkers get it. A random interactive telephone poll of 601 registered New York State voters, conducted on behalf of the American Petroleum Institute, found that 70 percent of them, regardless of party affiliation, support increased production of oil and natural gas resources located in the United States.⁵ And New York stands to enjoy potentially far greater benefits if it chooses to move forward with natural gas development at the Marcellus Shale site that stretches across the region.

Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate North Carolina

Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of North Carolina, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 137 businesses, located across nearly all of North Carolina's 13 congressional districts, are part of the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

The survey's snapshot of state-by-state activity reinforces the impressive level of industry success throughout the country that is documented in a recent PriceWaterhouseCoopers study conducted for the American Petroleum Institute.² That study found that the oil and natural gas industry in North Carolina supports some 146,100 jobs, which is 2.8 percent of the state's total employment. The amount of North Carolina labor income supported by the oil and natural gas industry comes to $6.76 billion annually. That's 2.6 percent of the state's total labor income.

Although North Carolina is not a top energy producer, these job and labor income figures demonstrate that the people of North Carolina enjoy significant benefits from energy development.³ The benefits show up in the state's salary statistics as well. Thus, while the average annual salary in North Carolina across all industries and sectors is $43,758, the average oil and gas industry salary (excluding gas stations) is very significantly higher—$51,651 annually. Overall the industry supports $12.5 billion of the North Carolina economy. That's nearly 3 percent of the state's total economic activity.

North Carolina also benefits from the production of oil and natural gas from shales and so-called "tight formations," energy development that uses the proven engineering technologies of hydraulic fracturing, or "fracking," and horizontal drilling. Total jobs supported by these

Vendor Profile

Southern Glove Manufacturing Company, Inc.

For more than 68 years, Southern Glove has been manufacturing industrial work gloves. The company provides innovative solutions for hand protection for the oil and natural gas drilling industry, with a focus on impact-resistant gloves. The gloves contribute to a safer work environment for drillers. In fact, the oil and natural gas drilling industry has proven to be a valuable partner in the development of new hand-protection technologies.

Southern Glove partners with many different companies in the oil and natural gas drilling industries in an effort to improve their safety records. One customer experienced a 70 percent decrease in the severity of hand injuries after using the company's glove.

Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of North Dakota, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 876 businesses, located across North Dakota's at-large congressional district, are part of the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

These job and labor income figures demonstrate that the people of North Dakota enjoy significant benefits from energy development.³ The benefits show up in the state's salary statistics as well. Thus, while the average annual salary in North Dakota across all industries and sectors is $48,740, the average oil and gas industry salary (excluding gas stations) is very substantially higher—$90,171 annually. Overall the industry supports $6.6 billion of the North Dakota economy. That's 12.3 percent of the state's total economic activity.

North Dakota ranks 2nd in oil production, though 15th in natural gas production.⁴ It is one of the nation's top energy-producing states.

North Dakota particularly benefits from the production of oil and natural gas from shales and so-called "tight formations," energy development that uses the proven engineering technologies of hydraulic fracturing, or "fracking," and horizontal drilling. Total jobs supported by these activities in North Dakota reached 71,824 in 2012, and that job total is expected to rise to 114,240 in 2020.⁴

Precisely because of industry development at the Bakken Shale formation, located in the western part of the state, North Dakota is second only to Texas in terms of oil production and boasts the lowest unemployment rate in the country—2.6%.⁵

And Americans, including the people of North Dakota, get it. A telephone poll of 1,012 registered voters across the country, conducted on behalf of the American Petroleum Institute, found that 77 percent of Americans, regardless of party affiliation, support increased production of oil and natural gas resources located in the United States.⁶

Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate Ohio

Economic and Job Growth

The survey's snapshot of state-by-state activity reinforces the impressive level of industry success throughout the country that is documented in a recent PriceWaterhouseCoopers study conducted for the American Petroleum Institute.³ That study found that the oil and natural gas industry in Ohio supports some 255,100 jobs, which is 3.9 percent of the state's total employment. The amount of Ohio labor income supported by the oil and natural gas industry comes to $12.7 billion annually. That's 4.1 percent of the state's total labor income.

Although Ohio is not a top U.S. energy producer these job and labor income figures demonstrate that the people of Ohio enjoy significant benefits from energy development.⁴ The benefits show up in the state's salary statistics as well. Thus, while the average annual salary in Ohio across all industries and sectors is $44,059, the average oil and gas industry salary (excluding gas stations) is substantially higher—$72,238 annually. Overall the industry supports $28.4 billion of the Ohio economy. That's 5.7 percent of the state's total economic activity.

Ohio particularly benefits from the production of oil and natural gas from shales and so-called "tight formations," energy development that uses the proven engineering technologies of hydraulic

Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate Oklahoma Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of Oklahoma, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 2,513 businesses, spread across all five of Oklahoma's congressional districts, are part of the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

The survey's snapshot of state-by-state activity reinforces the impressive level of industry success throughout the country that is documented in a recent PriceWaterhouseCoopers study conducted for the American Petroleum Institute.² The study found that the oil and natural gas industry in Oklahoma supports some 364,300 jobs, which is 16.8 percent of the state's total employment. The amount of Oklahoma labor income supported by the oil and natural gas industry comes to $23.3 billion annually. That's 22.9 percent of the state's total labor income.

Another way in which the oil and gas industry benefits the people of Oklahoma, in addition to total employment and labor income, is in terms of salary.³ While the average annual salary in Oklahoma across all industries and sectors is $42,733, the average salary in the oil and gas industry (excluding gas stations) is very significantly higher—$93,992 annually. Overall the industry supports $39 billion of the Oklahoma economy. That's 23.1 percent of the state's total economic activity.

Oklahoma ranks 5th in oil and 4th in natural gas production.⁴ That makes it one of the nation's top energy-producing states.

Oklahoma particularly benefits from the production of oil and natural gas from shales and so-called "tight formations," energy development that uses the proven

The survey was distributed to API members in January 2014 to collect information for the period October 2012 to September 2013. Included are companies that provide goods and services for onshore oil and natural gas development, whether as operators, contractors, service companies, suppliers, or vendors.

2. PriceWaterhouseCoopers, "Economic Impacts of the Oil and Natural Gas Industry on the U.S. Economy in 2011," Washington, D.C., July 2013. Prepared for API using the IMPLAN input-output modeling system, based on 2011 U.S. Bureau of Economic Analysis data.

Vendor Profile⁷

Mercer Valve Company, Inc.®

Mercer Valve Company has been engineering and manufacturing safety relief valves since 1985. The company's patented Auto Seat Technology® has placed Mercer at the forefront of today's relief valve industry. The technology will provide an extended seat life, which allows the valve to consistently open, close, seat, and seal time and time again.

"Whether it is our deliveries, valve shop, or mobile repair, Mercer always puts safety first. Both the manufacturer and the consumer can benefit from Mercer's product."

Check-6

Check-6 is an international solutions company comprised of former military pilots and special operatives who bring crews working in high-risk environments to a very high level of reliability. The company provides rapid results through coaching, training, and simulation, aimed at instilling best practices and lessons learned from the military backgrounds of the people who work for Check 6. The company goal is to keep crews safe and rigs operational, onshore and off, while reducing training time.

Check-6 was founded in 2007 in order to bring the oil and gas industry to the same consistent, reliable safety standards as military and commercial aviation. It now has more than 400 employees and contractors worldwide, helping oil and gas companies implement best practices for safer, more efficient energy production.

Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate Oregon Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of Oregon, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 58 businesses, located across all five of Oregon's congressional districts, are part of the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

The survey's snapshot of state-by-state activity reinforces the impressive level of industry success throughout the country that is documented in a recent PriceWaterhouseCoopers study conducted for the American Petroleum Institute.² That study found that the oil and natural gas industry in Oregon supports some 60,400 jobs, which is 2.8 percent of the state's total employment. The amount of Oregon labor income supported by the oil and natural gas industry comes to $2.81 billion annually. That's 2.8 percent of the state's total labor income.

Although Oregon is not a top U.S. energy producer, these job and labor income figures demonstrate that the people of Oregon enjoy significant benefits from energy development.³ The benefits show up in the state's salary statistics as well. Thus, while the average annual salary in Oregon across all industries and sectors is $44,383, the average oil and gas industry salary (excluding gas stations) is substantially higher—$55,472 annually. Overall the industry supports $5 billion of the Oregon economy. That's 3 percent of the state's total economic activity.

Oregon also benefits from the production of oil and natural gas from shales and so-called "tight formations," energy development that uses the proven engineering technologies of hydraulic

The survey was distributed to API members in January 2014 to collect information for the period October 2012 to September 2013. Included are companies that provide goods and services for onshore oil and natural gas development, whether as operators, contractors, service companies, suppliers, or vendors.

Vendor Profile⁶

FEI Company

FEI Company designs, manufactures, and supports a broad range of high-performance microscopy workflow solutions that provide electron microscope images and answers at the micro-, nano- and picometer scales. For the oil and gas industry, the company combines multi-scale imaging capability with mineralogy and 3D flow modeling software to provide next-generation digital rock technology solutions for reservoir characterization. Headquartered in Hillsboro, Oregon, FEI has more than 2,600 employees, as well as sales and service operations in more than 50 countries around the world.

Numerous industry participants have used FEI's DualBeam systems in their research laboratories to improve their knowledge of and yield from unconventional sources of oil and gas, including shale reservoirs. Key industry participants use the company's 3D modeling software and mobile reservoir characterization solutions. As the use of digital rock technology for reservoir characterization spreads, FEI believes it can significantly improve the recovery rates from both existing and new fields.

fracturing, or "fracking," and horizontal drilling. Total jobs supported by these activities in Oregon reached 8,912 in 2012. The job total is projected to climb to 15,620 in 2020 and to 18,472 in 2035.⁴

And Americans, including the people of Oregon, get it. A random interactive telephone poll of 1,012 registered voters across the country, conducted on behalf of the American Petroleum Institute, found that 77 percent of Americans, regardless of party affiliation, support increased production of domestic oil and natural gas resources.⁵

Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate Pennsylvania Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of Pennsylvania, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 1,347 businesses, spread across all 18 of Pennsylvania's congressional districts, are part of the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

The survey's snapshot of state-by-state activity reinforces the impressive level of industry success throughout the country that is documented in a recent PriceWaterhouseCoopers study conducted for the American Petroleum Institute.² That study found that the oil and natural gas industry in Pennsylvania supports some 339,000 jobs, which is 4.7 percent of the state's total employment. The amount of Pennsylvania labor income supported by the oil and natural gas industry comes to $19.5 billion annually. That's 5.1 percent of the state's total labor income.

These job and labor income figures demonstrate that the people of Pennsylvania enjoy significant benefits from energy development. The benefits show up in the state's salary statistics as well.³ Thus, while the average annual salary in Pennsylvania across all industries and sectors is $48,785, the average oil and gas industry salary (excluding gas stations) is substantially higher—$78,898 annually. Overall the industry supports $34.7 billion of the Pennsylvania economy. That's 5.8 percent of the state's total economic activity.

Although Pennsylvania ranks 19th in oil production, it is 3rd in natural gas production.⁴ That makes it one of the nation's top energy-producing states.

Pennsylvania particularly benefits from the production of oil and natural gas from shales and so-called "tight formations," energy development that uses the proven engineering technologies of hydraulic fracturing, or "fracking," and horizontal drilling. The survey was distributed to API members in January 2014 to collect information for the period October 2012 to September 2013. Included are companies that provide goods and services for onshore oil and natural gas development, whether as operators, contractors, service companies, suppliers, or vendors.

2. PriceWaterhouseCoopers, "Economic Impacts of the Oil and Natural Gas Industry on the U.S. Economy in 2011," Washington, D.C., July 2013. Prepared for API using the IMPLAN input-output modeling system, based on 2011 U.S. Bureau of Economic Analysis data.

3. Information cited in this paragraph comes from the Bureau of Labor Statistics, Quarterly Census of Employment and Wages (preliminary data for 2013 accessed July 2014); and PriceWaterhouseCoopers, "The Economic Impacts of the Oil and Natural Gas Industry on the U.S. Economy: Employment, Labor Income and Value Added," 7/12/13 (based on 2012 IMPLAN database).

4. EIA, "Rankings: Crude Oil Production, April 2014 (thousand barrels)," accessed 7/31/2014. <http://www.eia.gov/state/ranking/?sid=UA#/series/46>. EIA, "Rankings: Natural Gas Marketed Production, 2012 (million cubic feet)," accessed 7/31/2014. <http://www.eia.gov/state/rankings/?sid=US#/series/47>.

RETTEW Associates Inc.

Ranked No. 206 on Engineering News-Record's list of Top 500 design firms, RETTEW has a 45-year history of commitment to provide expert engineering and consulting solutions to local, regional, and national clients in the energy, transportation, government, and industrial markets.

For the oil and gas industry, RETTEW provides services in the areas of engineering, surveying, environmental consulting, and water treatment. RETTEW has designed and issued permits to thousands of pads, impoundments, and water sources. RETTEW has also designed and permitted thousands of miles of pipelines and treated and recycled well more than 1 million barrels of flowback water.

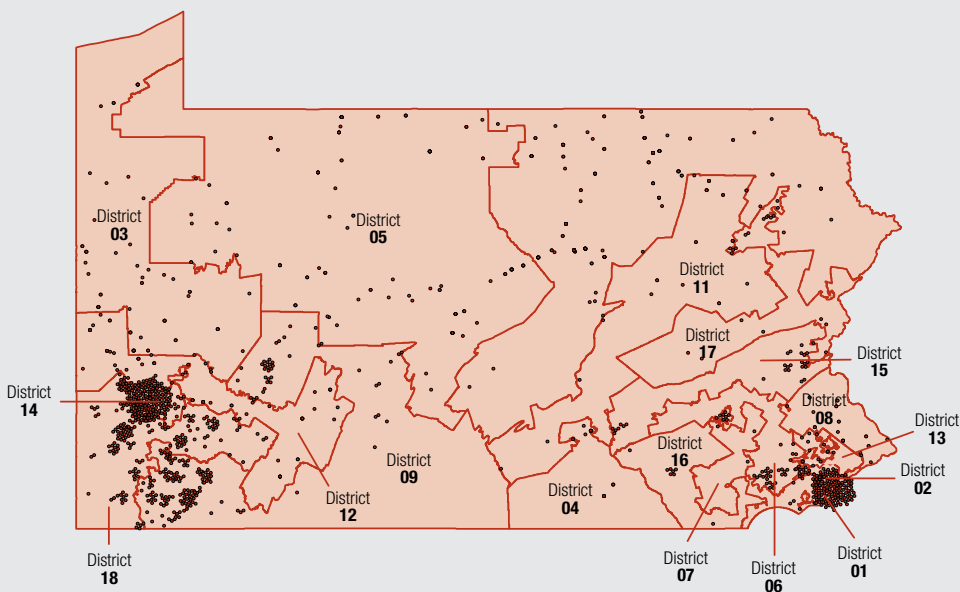

Since 1969, RETTEW has grown from a single four-person firm to more than 350 dedicated professionals in nine offices throughout the Northeast and Midwest. The company offers more than 100 different services, including engineering designs, regulatory expertise, site investigations, environmental investigations, community planning, safety consulting, and construction oversight.

Since RETTEW's strategic entry into the oil and gas market in 2008 as the Marcellus Shale Play began to boom, and during subsequent shale development across the country, the firm has doubled its staff and opened four new offices. Most of the company's staff are white-collar, technical experts. RETTEW aims to hire more staff from the local pools of talent, stabilizing and growing communities as it benefits from the oil and gas market growth in these communities.

RETTEW supports long-term strategies for both

Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate Rhode Island Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of Rhode Island, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 11 businesses, located across Rhode Island's two congressional districts, are part of the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

The survey's snapshot of state-by-state activity reinforces the impressive level of industry success throughout the country that is documented in a recent PriceWaterhouseCoopers study conducted for the American Petroleum Institute.² That study found that the oil and natural gas industry in Rhode Island supports some 15,100 jobs, which is 2.5 percent of the state's total employment. The amount of Rhode Island labor income supported by the oil and natural gas industry comes to $934 million annually. That's 2.8 percent of the state's total labor income.

Although Rhode Island is not a top energy producer, these job and labor income figures demonstrate that the people of Rhode Island enjoy significant benefits from energy development.³ The benefits show up in the state's salary statistics as well. Thus, while the average annual salary in Rhode Island across all industries and sectors is $45,770, the average oil and gas industry salary (excluding gas stations) is higher—$47,055 annually. Overall the industry supports $1.7 billion of the Rhode Island economy. That's 3.2 percent of the state's total economic activity.

Rhode Island also benefits from the production of oil and natural gas from shales and so-called "tight formations," energy development that uses the proven engineering technologies of hydraulic fracturing, or "fracking," and horizontal drilling. Total jobs supported by these activities in Rhode Island reached 2,257 in parsonsKellogg

parsonsKellogg is an industry leader in helping Fortune 1000 companies secure positive consumer impressions through the use of impactful promotional products. Services include e-commerce solutions, golf and other sporting event sponsorships and co-branded focused programs, sporting goods, day-to-day promotional products, gift cards, offshore sourcing, and custom packaging.

For the oil and natural gas industry, the company helps set up sponsorships of sporting events. For example, parsonsKellogg worked on the Valero Texas Open golf tournament on behalf of the Valero Energy Corp. In 2010, parsonsKellogg partnered with the Valero Benefit for Children (BFC), the Valero Energy Foundation's annual charitable fundraiser for children in need, which raises more money on the PGA Tour than any other charitable event. By providing a turnkey merchandise website at which participants could redeem gift cards as part of the Pro-Am packages, the company helped BFC/Valero save money while enhancing the participants' experience.

parsonsKellogg also helps its partners by providing materials for safety and wellness programs within their companies. These programs bring down costs and promote a safer and healthier workplace.

AMECO

AMECO, a unit of Fluor Corporation, is a full-service, global supplier of construction equipment, vehicles, tools, common services, and asset management solutions. In addition to the power, heavy industrial, mining, manufacturing, construction, and government sectors, AMECO's client base includes the oil and natural gas industry. Many of the industry's largest companies are clients.

AMECO has been a direct supplier and subcontractor of mobile equipment, small tools, consumables, and safety supplies to oil and natural gas industry site owners and their capital contractors since the mid-1970s. In addition to supplying these products, AMECO is also a direct distributor for Dynamic Air Shelters, Inc., selling and renting these proprietary-designed safe harbors for use in places where gas vapor explosion risks exist.

AMECO has the best safety record of any supplier supporting the oil and natural gas industry in the United States today.

Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate South Dakota

Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of South Dakota, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 36 businesses, spread across South Dakota's at-large congressional district, are part of the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

Although South Dakota is not a top U.S. energy producer, these job and labor income figures demonstrate that the people of South Dakota enjoy significant benefits from energy development.³ The benefits show up in the state's salary statistics as well. Thus, while the average annual salary in South Dakota across all industries and sectors is $37,086, the average oil and gas industry salary (excluding gas stations) is substantially higher—$55,257 annually. Overall the industry supports $1.5 billion of the South Dakota economy. That's 3.9 percent of the state's total economic activity.

SCADA Design Specialists, Inc.

SCADA Design Specialists, Inc. is a pipeline automation consultancy. The consultancy provides Allen-Bradley PLC and human machine interface (HMI) programming support for many of the major pipeline companies. The firm also has extensive experience with Allen-Bradley DF1, Ethernet/IP, and Modbus communications to peripheral devices. All of SCADA's work is done 100 percent in the oil industry. The consultancy provides automation services for crude oil, refined product, and carbon dioxide pipelines.

SCADA has not only provided programming support, but has also designed Allen-Bradley PLC and HMI standards for numerous major pipeline companies. PC programming knowledge and experience enable SCADA to create simple and well-documented PLC programs. The consultancy pushes the limits on HMI screens to provide systems that are colorful and easy to understand and use.

activities in Tennessee reached 13,516 in 2012. The job total is projected to climb to 23,310 in 2020 and to 27,702 in 2035.⁵

And Americans, including the people of Tennessee, get it. A telephone poll of 1,012 registered voters across the country, conducted on behalf of the American Petroleum Institute, found that 77 percent of Americans, regardless of party affiliation, support increased production of oil and natural gas resources located in the United States.⁶

Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate Texas

Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of Texas, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 11,033 businesses, spread across all 36 congressional districts in Texas, are part of the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

Another way in which the oil and gas industry benefits the people of Texas, in addition to employment and labor income, is in terms of salary.³ While the average annual salary in Texas across all industries and sectors is $52,146, the average salary in the oil and gas industry (excluding gas stations) is very significantly higher—$117,272 annually.³ Overall the industry supports $308.3 billion of the Texas economy. That's 23.2 percent of the state's total economic activity.

Texas ranks 1st in oil and 1st in natural gas production.⁴ That makes it the nation's top energy-producing state.

Texas particularly benefits from the production of oil and natural gas from shales and so-called "tight formations," energy development that uses the proven engineering technologies of hydraulic fracturing, or "fracking," and horizontal

The survey was distributed to API members in January 2014 to collect information for the period October 2012 to September 2013. Included are companies that provide goods and services for onshore oil and natural gas development, whether as operators, contractors, service companies, suppliers, or vendors.

Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate Utah

Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of Utah, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 498 businesses, spread across all four of Utah's congressional districts, are part of the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

Another way in which the oil and gas industry benefits the people of Utah, in addition to total employment and labor income, is in terms of salary.³ While the average annual salary in Utah across all industries and sectors is $41,702, the average salary in the oil and gas industry (excluding gas stations) is significantly higher—$78,730 annually. Overall the industry supports $8.4 billion of the Utah economy. That's nearly 7 percent of the state's total economic activity.

Utah ranks 11th in oil and 10th in natural gas production.⁴ That makes it one of the nation's top energy-producing states.

Utah particularly benefits from the production of oil and natural gas from shales and so-called "tight formations," energy development that uses the proven engineering technologies of hydraulic fracturing, or "fracking," and horizontal

The survey was distributed to API members in January 2014 to collect information for the period October 2012 to September 2013. Included in the survey are companies that provide goods and services for onshore oil and natural gas development, whether as operators, contractors, service companies, suppliers, or vendors.

This dovetails with VitalSmarts' mission of changing the world for good by helping people acquire vital skills that dramatically improve results and lives.

drilling. Total jobs supported by these activities in Utah reached 54,421 in 2012. That job total is expected to climb to 51,859 in 2020 and to 67,052 in 2035.⁵

And Americans, including the people of Utah, get it. A telephone poll of 1,012

registered voters across the country, conducted on behalf of the American Petroleum Institute, found that 77 percent of Americans, regardless of party affiliation, support increased production of oil and natural gas resources located in the United States.⁶

Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate Vermont

Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of Vermont, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least seven businesses, located across Vermont's single congressional district, are part of the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

The survey's snapshot of state-by-state activity reinforces the impressive level of industry success throughout the country that is documented in a recent PriceWaterhouseCoopers study conducted for the American Petroleum Institute.² That study found that the oil and natural gas industry in Vermont supports some 14,600 jobs, which is 3.6 percent of the state's total employment. The amount of Vermont labor income supported by the oil and natural gas industry comes to $567 million annually. That's 3.1 percent of the state's total labor income.

Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate Virginia's

Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of Virginia, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 120 businesses, located across all 11 of Virginia's congressional districts, are part of the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

Although Virginia is not a top energy producer, these job and labor income figures demonstrate that the people of Virginia enjoy significant benefits from energy development.³ The benefits show up in the state's salary statistics as well. Thus, while the average annual salary in Virginia across all industries and sectors is $51,665, the average oil and gas industry salary (excluding gas stations) is higher—$60,721 annually. Overall the industry supports $12.5 billion of the Virginia economy. That's nearly 3 percent of the state's total economic activity.

Virginia also benefits from the production of oil and natural gas from shales and so-called "tight formations," energy development that uses the proven engineering technologies of hydraulic fracturing, or "fracking," and horizontal drilling. Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate Washington Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of Washington State, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 185 businesses, spread across Washington State's 10 congressional districts, are part of the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

The survey's snapshot of state-by-state activity reinforces the impressive level of industry success throughout the country that is documented in a recent PriceWaterhouseCoopers study conducted for the American Petroleum Institute.² That study found that the oil and natural gas industry in Washington State supports some 104,300 jobs, which is 2.8 percent of the state's total employment. The amount of Washington State's labor income supported by the oil and natural gas industry comes to $5.9 billion annually. That's 2.7 percent of the state's total labor income.

Although Washington State is not a top U.S. energy producer, these job and labor income figures demonstrate that the people of Washington State enjoy significant benefits from energy development.³ The benefits show up in the state's salary statistics as well. Thus, while the average annual salary in Washington State across all industries and sectors is $52,869, the average oil and gas industry salary (excluding gas stations) is substantially higher—$87,333 annually. Overall the industry supports $14 billion of the Washington State economy. That's 4 percent of the state's total economic activity.

Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate West Virginia

Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of West Virginia, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 230 businesses, spread across all eight of West Virginia's congressional districts, are part of the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

These job and labor income figures demonstrate that the people of West Virginia enjoy significant benefits from energy development. The benefits show up in the state's salary statistics as well.³ Thus, while the average annual salary in West Virginia across all industries and sectors is $39,519, the average oil and gas industry salary (excluding gas stations) is substantially higher—$74,450 annually.⁴ Overall the industry supports $5.8 billion of the West Virginia economy. That's 8.7 percent of the state's total economic activity.

Although West Virginia ranks 20th in oil production, it is 9th in natural gas production.⁵ That makes it one of the nation's top energy-producing states.

West Virginia particularly benefits from the production of oil and natural gas from shales and so-called "tight formations," energy development that uses the proven engineering technologies of hydraulic fracturing, or

Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate Wisconsin Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of Wisconsin, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey shows that at least 108 businesses, located across all eight of Wisconsin's congressional districts, are part of the larger oil and natural gas supply chain.

Although Wisconsin is not a top energy producer, these job and labor income figures demonstrate that the people of Wisconsin enjoy significant benefits from energy development.³ The benefits show up in the state's salary statistics as well. Thus, while the average annual salary in Wisconsin across all industries and sectors is $42,572, the average oil and gas industry salary (excluding gas stations) is substantially higher—$69,083 annually.⁴ Overall the industry supports $7.9 billion of the Wisconsin economy. That's 3.1 percent of the state's total economic activity.

Wisconsin also benefits from the production of oil and natural gas from shales and so-called "tight formations," energy development that uses the proven engineering technologies of hydraulic fracturing, or "fracking," and horizontal drilling. Total jobs supported by these

Snap-on Industrial

Snap-on is a leading global innovator, manufacturer, and marketer of tools, equipment, diagnostics, repair information, and systems solutions for professional users performing critical tasks. Products and services include hand and power tools, tool storage, diagnostics software, information and management systems, shop equipment, and other solutions for vehicle dealerships and repair centers. Industrial customers include aviation and aerospace, agriculture, construction, government and military, mining, natural resources, power generation, and technical education. Products and services are sold through the company's franchisee, company-direct, distributor, and internet channels. Founded in 1920, Snap-on is a $3.1 billion, S&P 500 company headquartered in Kenosha, Wisconsin.

Snap-on has served the oil and gas industry for decades. The company provides daily use and special one-of-a-kind tools to refineries and equipment manufacturers. The company has also created and provided task-specific, custom-made tool sets for mobile service trucks and other needs, designed with varying degrees of tool control and asset management.

In addition, Snap-on has created industry-specific safety and training programs.

Oil and Natural Gas Stimulate Wyoming

Economic and Job Growth

Oil and natural gas are driving the U.S. economy through a major energy boom and that boom is rippling through the economy of Wyoming, supporting business activity across the state. This finding grows out of a new American Petroleum Institute survey of domestic oil and natural gas vendors,¹ which offers a glimpse into the job and business creation engine that is the current oil and natural gas industry. The survey's snapshot of state-by-state activity reinforces the impressive level of industry success throughout the country that is documented in a recent PriceWaterhouseCoopers study conducted for the American Petroleum Institute.² The study found that the oil and natural gas industry in Wyoming supports some 80,000 jobs, which is 20.4 percent of the state's total employment. The amount of Wyoming labor income supported by the oil and natural gas industry comes to $5.13 billion annually. That's 21.3 percent of the state's total labor income.

Another way in which the oil and gas industry benefits the people of Wyoming, in addition to total employment and labor income, is in terms of salary.³ While the average annual salary in Wyoming across all industries and sectors is $44,699, the average salary in the oil and gas industry (excluding gas stations) is very significantly higher—$84,994 annually.³ Overall the industry supports $13 billion of the Wyoming economy. That's nearly 33 percent of the state's total economic activity.

Wyoming ranks 7th in oil and 5th in natural gas production. That makes it one of the nation's top energy-producing states.

Wyoming particularly benefits from the production of oil and natural gas from shales and so-called "tight formations," energy development that uses the proven engineering technologies of hydraulic

Big Horn Environmental Consultants

Big Horn Environmental Consultants (BHEC) works with all the energy development stakeholders, including private landowners, companies, and land managers, in developing infrastructure plans that maintain compliance with existing federal and state wildlife regulations and encourage persistence of sensitive species, for example, the greater sage-grouse and raptors. Company planning helps to conserve important habitats, while achieving economically viable resource extraction, such as coal bed, natural gas, deep oil wells, and mining of minerals.

Information collected during wildlife surveys provides key information to help land managers determine the best siting for infrastructure used by projects. Mapping of sensitive species' nest locations and important seasonal habitats results in survey information that can also be useful for early-stage planning of potential lease holds. In addition, company data help identify additional costs and clarify the complexity of permitting for new projects.

Company clients have benefited from survey information to become informed about locations that have sensitive wildlife issues, thereby avoiding costly delays while developing siting and construction plans. Big Horn has found that "The oil and gas industry people involved in permitting and developing locations genuinely strive to have the least possible impact on wildlife and other resources."

In addition, Big Horn's support of the oil and gas industry provides income for seasonal employees every spring and summer, when the majority of the wildlife survey work occurs.
