When the Cost Is More Than a Fine on an Overdue Book

On July 30, 2001, the San Diego City Council unanimously voted to write a check for $1 million of the taxpayers' money to a nonprofit group called the San Diego Public Library Foundation, which had been incorporated only three months before.

Ironic East Side

I enjoyed Byron Shewman's article "Otay Dreams" in last week's Reader (June 17). I have lived in the South Bay area for almost 20 years and have witnessed the development firsthand. My husband and I live in a home near Palomar Street and the 805 freeway overpass, behind Castle Park High School, from which both our daughters graduated. Our end of Chula Vista is close to the Otay border.

Ironically, at one time, this used to be considered the east side. Anything west of Third Avenue was considered the west side. With the development of East-Lake, living east of Third Avenue, or even east of Hilltop Drive, has lost some of its status. I still love the neighborhood and wouldn't dream of moving to one of the new developments east of the freeway, complete with their Starbucks and SUVs.

We are a multi-ethnic family, and regardless of the changes, that sense that we're all on the same level regardless of race still exists in the area. I've always loved the neighborhood, but I appreciate it even more after learning about some of its history in Byron Shewman's article.

Wants More Byron

"Otay Dreams," by Byron Shewman (June 17), was a sweet story. I would like to read more about Byron's life as he grew up and what he's doing now.

Prozac-Popping Kooks

Holy crap, the Anne Albright legions have bound together (Letters, June 17). It's hard to believe anybody would want to withhold their name when these Prozac-popping kooks all stick up for her. Don't you ever read the paper? It's every single week that some medi-mom goes from just crying or flipping out or yelling at her husband to pushing her kids into the lake in the car and that's the end of it.

Name Withheld

Erratum

In the restaurant review of El Dorado (June 17), an editing error moved the mini-grocery of Andean foodstuffs "next door" to the restaurant. The grocery shelves are actually inside the restaurant, next to the front door.

Outrageous Slander

I was shocked to read Don Bauder's misrepresentation of the relationship between SOHO, Wayne Donaldson, and Bruce Coons ("Wallet Preservationists," "City Lights," June 10). I served the SOHO board for five years and have been an active member, donating time and money to their causes. To my knowledge, there is no Donaldson-Coons conspiracy, and I would not be surprised if either does not sue the Reader for publishing such outrageous slander.

Wayne Donaldson is one of California's premier architects with the highest ideals for historic preservation. When I worked for the U.S. Navy restoring buildings in the Fort Rosecrans Historic District, he strived hard to convince the Navy brass to preserve the Officers' Quarters, Post Exchange, and 1898 Battery Wilkeson. He recently freely gave his time and expertise to the American Legion to help preserve Post 201 on Fairmount Avenue. In none of those activities did Bruce Coons play any role.

Coons is a successful chief executive officer of SOHO because he has an enormous body of experts on whom he can call, consult, and work with to advocate historic preservation. Donaldson is but one of the people Coons works with in his mission. He is able to recruit volunteers, he works long hours weekends and nights, and harnesses enormous community potential to carry off historic preservation. Donaldson is only one of hun-

Up the sandbox One of the most prominent cultural institutions of that well-heeled bastion known as La Jolla is offering free tickets to attract left-of-center patrons to a pair of plays about liberal politics. "Enjoy the benefits of being an activist!" begins an e-mail message from the La Jolla Playhouse recently sent out to the e-mail list of Activist San Diego, a group whose members sponsor demonstrations against the war in Iraq. Some might even be described as more than a little to the left of prospective Democratic nominee John Kerry. "As a politically active San Diegan, we feel you would be especially interested in these two important plays. We are pleased to provide you with a complimentary ticket to attend either of them." The free tickets — worth between $30 and $50, depending on night and seat location — can be booked by calling the box office and providing a special code. "Each of the plays in David Edgar's epic two-play cycle is a complete theatrical event unto itself. Together they present a fascinating look at contemporary politics," the e-mail says. "In Daughters of the Revolution, a community college dean with a radical past comes to terms with the legacy of the political ideals." The plays have drawn mixed reviews. (Opined the L.A. Times, Continental Divide has "the chilly academic air of a political science thesis.") A spokeswoman for the theater denies that the house is being papered. But a member of the playhouse's marketing department said that she wasn't eager to have news of the freebies get into the paper, lest wealthy, full-paying season-ticket holders become upset. Those who take the freebies will also be able to participate in a series of after-show polemical discussions led by stars of San Diego State-run public broadcaster KPBS-FM, such as Tom Fudge and Dirk Sutro.

Photo finish Last week's earthquake caught the San Diego City Council in the midst of an afternoon meeting about redevelopment. One citizen who later watched the historic incident on video described it. "The Council goes into RAPID action at that moment, with most heading for the exits. Donna Frye takes the early lead, but Jim Madaffer (bent over at the waist) zooms by her in a move reminiscent of LaDainian Tomlinson burrowing for a first down. He never touches her, but his speed is impressive. Charles Lewis wins the cool-under-fire award for just leaning back and watching. "... Ex-Democratic state senator Steve Peace, who authored the legislation that took Lindbergh Field away from the port commission and set up a new airport authority, is said to be closely connected with a $60,000, six-month consulting deal the authority recently granted to Cornerstone Strategies, run by his ex-chief of staff, lobbyist Arturo Castanares. An airport-authority spokeswoman confirmed that Peace has been involved in the work, which the contract says provides "assistance in the development of message points," "assistance with identifying issues that could affect public relations strategy," and gives "input based on research, conversations, experience."

Jim Madaffer, Donna Frye

Democratic congresswoman Susan Davis's recently filed 2003 personal financial disclosure shows she owned between $15,000 and $50,000 worth of stock in Wal-Mart, controversial among some for its nonunion employment policies and foreign outsourcing. Davis also reported getting free travel, meals, and lodging from six groups, including the American Israel Foundation (with a "family member" for an August trip to Tel Aviv); the California Council for International Trade; the Faith and Politics Institute (an appearance in Selma, Alabama); the Business Roundtable; the New Democrat Network; and the Annenberg Foundation Trust at Sunnyslands. Republican Randy "Duke" Cunningham traveled to Sioux Falls, South Dakota, thanks to the American Gas Association. South Bay Democrat Bob Filner flew out to Berkeley, paid for by the University of California's Center for Latin American Studies. The National Education Association picked up a trip for him to New Orleans. The richest member of the local delegation, Republican Darrell Issa, also got his share of free travel. The ex-car alarm magnate spent a couple of days in Las Vegas in January courtesy of the Consumer Electronics Association. In August, the congressman of Lebanese descent jetted off to the real Luxor on a ticket paid for by Egypt's International Economic Forum. The Swiss Foundation for World Affairs picked up the tab for a November jaunt to Geneva, and the Public Governance Institute covered the cost of Issa's two-day December stay in Rancho Mirage. East County congressman Duncan Hunter didn't report any free travel but reported collecting an insurance settlement worth between $500,000 and $1 million for the Alpine house he lost during last fall's backcountry fires.

America Broke My Heart, Tijuana Blew My Mind

By Ernie Grimm

Author Luis Urrea embodies contradiction. Though Mexican, he is blond-haired and blue-eyed. Though born in Tijuana and raised in San Diego, he lives in the cold and humidity of Chicago. Though he's written four books about the plight of Mexicans in the border region, he respects, even admires, the Border Patrol.

He learned that respect and admiration while researching his latest book, The Devil's Highway, in which he tells the story of 26 illegal immigrants who were led into the Arizona desert in May of 2001 as triple-digit heat descended on the area. The group's 19-year-old guide lost his way in the bone-dry valleys and mountain ranges southeast of Yuma. After walking about 65 miles and running out of water, 14 of them died of thirst and heat exposure — a death process Urrea describes as being mummified while still alive. The rest were saved by the Border Patrol, with help from Marine helicopter pilots, in a frantic rescue effort. In another hour, all of them would have died in the sand.

Urrea started life in 1955 in Tijuana, where his family had relocated from Mexico City. "My dad had been on the presidential staff in Mexico City," he explained in a recent phone interview. "In fact, he had met my mom in San Francisco on a state trip of some sort. So when he left the presidential staff, he came to Tijuana. His mom and his dad and his sisters — everybody was in Tijuana."

Asked why a man on the presidential staff of Mexico would uproot his family, move to Tijuana, and "work menial jobs in San Diego," Urrea responded, "One of the stories he always used to tell us was that he had been asked to perform a task he could not get himself to perform, and he had been paid $2000 in a check from the president of Mexico that he had never cashed. And after he had died, when I went through his papers, I found the check. He did in fact have a $2000 U.S. check written in, I think, 1954."

Urrea's father never told him what he'd been asked to do, "but you can assume what it was; they must have wanted him to kill someone, and he wouldn't do it, so he fled."

When he was five, Urrea's family moved to Logan Heights, a neighborhood he said was "Spooky; it's always been kind of spooky. It was tough; people got beat up a lot. When we moved there, it was in transition into being sort of African-American from a Mexican barrio."

As a blond, blue-eyed Mexican kid — a guërro in the Mexican dialect — Urrea found he had no clan to belong to in Logan Heights. "The black kids would beat me up for being white," he chuckled. "The Mexican kids would beat me up for being white, the white kids knew I was Mexican, so they would want to beat me up, so I thought, 'Screw this, I am going to stay home, man. I am going to stay home and read Mark Twain.'"

Despite the fights, Urrea said that while he lived in Logan Heights, during which time he often visited family in Tijuana, "To me Tijuana and San Diego were just inseparable; they were two sides of the same thing. I didn't ever think about it until we left Logan Heights and got to Clairemont, when I was suddenly living among nothing but white folks, who talked about taco benders and greasers and all of that stuff, I thought, 'Holy crap, there is something wrong with being a Mexican? Are you serious?' I suddenly was immersed in a whole different universe that I didn't imagine existed."

It was during this period of his life that Urrea started writing — poetry at first. On a teacher's suggestion, Urrea says, "I got the collected poems of Stephen Crane from the library, and it totally blew my mind. I thought, 'I have found some magical thing that nobody else in the world knows about.' And that was free verse and blank verse — these weird little poems. One of the great things about Stephen Crane is that all the poems are really tiny, and I thought, as we used to say in those days, 'This is bitchin'!' I rushed home, and I started writing Stephen Crane stuff immediately, but at the same time, I was listening to Leonard Cohen, so I was trying to write Leonard Cohen stuff all the time. A lot of those musicians just really touched me. And in about 1970 or 1971, I bought Jim Morrison's book The Lords and the New Creatures, and that was it. I was hooked on poetry."

Starting at Clairemont High School and carrying over to his college days at UCSD, Urrea found the clan that he had missed as a grade schooler in Logan Heights. "I was very involved in being a writer," he said, "poetry and so forth. And at the beginning of my UCSD time, I was a drama major, so I was seriously involved in my own little universe; I had a little theater group of my own. I was writing plays, and we were producing stuff, and I was writing lyrics for some local rock bands.

"It was amazing; we had this little army of creative guys, all of my best friends. And most of my friends were musicians." Urrea grew animated as the memories flooded back. "We had this long-standing sort of all-night brotherhood. No matter what we were doing or where we were, we would gather in places. It was for a long time a donut shop on Clairemont Drive, and we would stay there all night and write songs or argue about politics or occultism or religion or whatever. We had this bizarre klatch of creative people, and it was a lot of people. It was just a wonderful atmosphere to be in, to be creative all of that time. I was really fortunate. I think we were kind of monsters in a way, though, because we were pretty sure we were elite."

trusting souls each year. It can't be said yet that Zures was running a scam or even that his problems related to his businesses, but it can be said that investors should not believe all members of their religious or ethnic group can be trusted.

Affinity-group con artists prey upon specific groups of people — religious, ethnic, professional, the elderly. "The fraudsters who promote affinity scams frequently are — or pretend to be — members of the group," warns the Securities and Exchange Commission. "These scams exploit the trust and friendship that exist in groups of people who have something in common," and often, an unwitting minister or do-gooder will vouch for the investment scheme and become a victim along with other members of the group.

The affinity group is the target. Another kind of scam is the vehicle for entrapping the target. Victims are promised outrageously high returns through one of a number of fraud vehicles: Ponzi schemes, promissory-note scams, viaticals scams,

CUT WASTE, NOT JOBS

by Judie Italiano

Hardworking, capable City employees are part of the formula that makes San Diego "America's Finest City."

Who are we? Police and fire dispatchers who ensure some of the best emergency response times in America. Librarians helping kids explore new frontiers. Managers and technicians keeping our water refreshing and pure. Planners, inspectors, and clerks who enforce environmental laws. And many more unsung heroes committed to keeping San Diego great.

Like you, we are taxpayers, too. Our income returns to the local economy as we raise our family in the house next door to yours.

We are accountable every day to family, friends, and neighbors for the quality of our work. And, like you, we take pride in what we do.

It is disturbing to hear calls to balance the City's budget on the back of those least responsible for the problems and most vital to the operation of our town.

Cutting jobs, pensions, pay, or benefits for City employees starts a downward economic spiral for our entire community. Something none of us can afford.

Cutting City Costs

Nevertheless, bad economic times and weak state and federal governmental leadership have conspired to deplete San Diego City revenue. There is no escaping the need to tighten our belts. The question is how to do this best.

As our City Council faces this unhappy dilemma, we'd like to offer some ideas from City employees on ways taxpayer money can be saved without sacrificing quality services for our residents. Here are a few:

- Hold Vendors Accountable: Companies that sell or lease office equipment to City departments should face stiff penalties if their equipment fails to perform as promised.
- Match the Job to the Skills: In the police department, use non-uniformed police personnel to perform jobs like computer training; this puts more cops on the street where we need them and reduces taxpayer costs.
- Resource Sharing: Create a citywide database of surplus equipment, supplies, and property and require sharing between departments rather than purchase new items.
- Regional Purchasing: Create a joint venture with other cities and the County to increase the City's purchasing power and lower costs for insurance, equipment, and supplies.
- Motor Pools: Share access to vehicles between departments so a truck, auto, or construction vehicle does not sit idle in one department when another department is buying a new one.
- Retrain Injured Employees: Job injuries sometimes force costly early retirement of dedicated workers. City funds would be more wisely invested by retraining employees to perform other jobs where their injury would not be a factor.
- Reduce Uniform Costs: Stop buying and laundering uniforms for jobs that do not really need a uniform; and stop paying uniform companies for rental and cleaning of unused clothing.
- Stop Subsidizing Excess: Cut the City's payments to ridiculously high executive salaries and perks for the Economic Development Corporation.
- Stop Corporate Welfare: No more ticket guarantees or taxpayer subsidies for private companies - not for sports teams, not for land developers.

Certainly the City can't balance the budget with these improvements alone. But it's a good place to start. Ultimately, our City must also take a hard look at revenue sources to make sure everyone is paying their fair share.

Judie Italiano is president of San Diego Municipal Employees Association, representing 6,000 dedicated people who keep our city working.

Fraudsters

pyramid schemes, phony-stock swindles, hard-money lending capers, or prime-banknote scams, among many. (These scams will be described below.)

San Diego has been a haven for such ripoffs through the years. The next alleged elder abuse scam to hit the headlines may well be the case of Kevin Cole and Frank Robles, both in jail, who were bound over to trial this month. They had 16 known victims, and 14 were between the ages of 74 and 92, says deputy district attorney Lisa Crawford. From their Mira Mesa base, the pair promised the elderly 10 to 14 percent a year through a promissory-note scam, a promise to pay high interest rates. As the Securities and Exchange Commission warns, usually the promise is worth nothing. Cole and Robles "came to the victims' homes. The people were so old, so confused," says Crawford. Cole and Robles are charged with making false representations, among other things.

Another affinity-group scam that may get more public attention is the case of Edmundo and Luisa Rubi and Genaro Aquino, who have already been charged criminally with defrauding South Bay Filipinos of $25 million through a prime-banknote scam that promised returns of 3 to 6 percent a month (yes, a month). The Rubis are in jail; Aquino is out on bail. They face charges of mail and wire fraud and conspiracy to launder money. In such a scam, victims are promised huge returns via rapid-fire trading of financial instruments through offshore institutions. But there is no trading.

The new wrinkle is that in a civil suit, San Diego attorney Eric J. Benink charges that Wells Fargo Bank aided and abetted the fraud, even though it knew that the investment program was highly suspect. Wells Fargo issued certificates of deposit in the name of the Rubis' enterprise, even though it knew they were wiring money offshore, selling unregistered investment contracts, and had lied in obtaining a letter of credit from the bank, according to the suit. Wells

Fargo denies the charges.

In January, Carmen John Palmieri, who had a Mission Valley office, was sentenced to 30 years in prison for fleecing 191 people, almost all elderly, in a $13 million viaticals scam. In viaticals, a terminally ill person sells his or her life-insurance policy to a broker in return for a portion of the death benefit. The broker then sells shares of the policy to investors. But abuses abound. Palmieri, creating phony documents, sold nonexistent viaticals contracts.

Old Town money advisor Yves S. Bordeleau, who drove fancy cars and had two airplanes, would take his elderly clients on lavish one-day trips each year. Then he would take the old folks' money and divert it to an account in the Cayman Islands, a smelly Caribbean tax haven. In mid-2000, Bordeleau was sentenced to 16 years in the state slammer for grand theft and forgery.

In 1999, Randall S. Kuhlman was sentenced to five years in prison; he had promised elderly investors 18.5 percent annual returns. He told them they were buying pay phones, but Kuhlman's company didn't own those phones. It was a $60 million Ponzi scheme — that is, early investors were paid off with money that came in from later investors.

Then there was Nicholas Charles Herbert, who was sentenced to five years in prison in 1999. He would cruise an area and figure out that someone was not living in a home. It was almost always an elderly person who was caring for someone at another location. By forging escrow instructions, notes, trust deeds, and appraisals, Herbert would steal the equity out of the home. It was only partly an affinity scam because the victims didn't know Herbert and had no idea he was stealing their homes.

Robert G. Dukes worked a doubleheader, wooing the elderly with quotes from the Bible and a do-good pitch: investors could make 15 to 20 percent a year by putting money in rundown properties that would be restored. His Mason Gordon Co. set up more than 90 limited partnerships. But there were

Dear Heroes,

In the course of our busy lives, we lose sight of the many people who work courageously on a daily basis to keep us safe and keep our families and our lifestyle intact.

For a limited time, as a Thank You to these often-unsung heroes, and to help them perform their dangerous jobs more effectively, I will be offering LASIK (laser vision correction) at one half of my usual fee (which is below cost) to active members of the following groups:

- The Military
- Law Enforcement Agencies or Departments
- Fire Departments
- The Department of Homeland Security

I want to thank you for your skills by offering my surgical skills at below cost.

Vision without glasses or contacts should allow you to perform your job more safely and effectively so that we can all feel more secure.

This is just one small way that I can give back to a community that has been so good to me.

Sincerely,

Glenn Kawesch, M.D.

drug and gang problems at the properties. Dukes juggled the books, pocketing investors' money. In 1996, he got two years for grand theft.

Religion has been a recurring hook in San Diego. Fundamentalist Christians were wooed into a $12 million scam to exploit alleged inventions of Stephen H. Smith. Management opened investor meetings with a prayer, then described the offshore-money flow. Federal prosecutors indicted eight people; two confessed, and more are expected to do so this month.

Ethnic scams abound in San Diego. In the late 1990s, Hispanics were targeted in a pyramid scheme called Network Associates. In pyramids, people pay money to get in; then, as they recruit more people, they move up and finally collect a pot of money — unless the chain breaks, which it inevitably does. In 1996, Frank Campos got five years' probation for selling houses he did not own to unsuspecting Latinos who did not speak English.

Jewish people were the major victims of the $200 million Pioneer Mortgage hard-money lending scam of the early 1990s. In such scams, people who can't get credit pledge their second-rate real estate to get a loan at an interest rate of, say, 20 percent. Then investors get 13 to 15 percent and the middleman keeps the rest. But when real estate collapses, so do such schemes. In this case, the middleman was Gary Naiman, who was active in his synagogue and in Israel. He went to prison.

In the mid-1990s, Mission Valley-based BAOA, Inc., sold a board game, Black Americans of Achievement. Rev. Jesse Jackson joined its advisory board in 1997, apparently not aware that the original East County investors had received their stock through an offshore (Cayman Islands) institution, thus attempting to dodge capital gains taxes. They later got into trouble for another offshore scam, and the company's top executive went to prison for a different caper. San Diego and scamsters have a special affinity. It's not surprising that affinity-group scams thrive here. ■

UCSD, Urrea almost never visited Tijuana. "I was a San Diego boy all the way, man," he said. "I mean, I would go with my dad once in a while to visit. But, you know, the days of Tijuana and San Diego being exactly the same for me were definitely over."

Urrea graduated from UCSD in 1977 and began, as he put it, "doing the classic bum-poet-actor thing of not knowing where to work or what to do and ended up working in a 7-Eleven on Clairemont Drive across the street from Clairemont Bowl. I remember thinking, 'This is what I am doing with my college degree? Selling coffee and peanuts to prostitutes at 4:00 a.m.?'"

It was during this time that Urrea rediscovered Tijuana. "My house had become sort of a clearinghouse for mad musicians and arty guys," he recalled, "and one of the guys that lived with us, a keyboardist, was a born-again Christian, which I looked at rather askance. But he was pals with Pastor Vaughn of Clairemont Emmanuel Baptist Church, who was famous for his work in Tijuana. He invited me to go with him to see Tijuana, and I thought, 'Well, what are these gringo Baptists going to show me about Tijuana?' But I went, and it blew my mind. He took me to an orphanage, and there was this little blond, blue-eyed girl in the orphanage that looked just like me. Her name was America. And America just broke my heart. I visited her a couple of times, and Vaughn was watching me and asked me to translate for him a couple of times, and by that time, I was stuck. I became his translator, and we were together full-time from '78 to '82. And from '82 to '85, when I was teaching at Harvard, I would work with Vaughn for a month at Christmas and then all summer."

The work with the poor of Tijuana Urrea described as both intoxicating and maddening. While he loved the hero's welcome he received in the poor colonias, the sense that he could never feed all the poor and the constant sight of human suffering started to get to him. "I was so stressed out of my mind that I was hallucinating at night. I would come back from Mexico and see really bizarre things."

As he continued to work in Mexico, his group of rock-and-roll intellectuals became less and less of a comfort to Urrea. "Sometimes I'd get home from Tijuana at 1:00 in the morning, and I couldn't sleep, so I would go to the donut shop and sit with my buddies who had all played a gig at the Spirit on Morena

Boulevard and were freaking out because they had oral sex in the parking lot or something, and I am thinking, 'Well, I am just going to eat my apple fritter,' because there was no way to communicate what I was living to my pals."

His fellow missionaries weren't a consolation to him either. "I was always reading sinful books or listening to the devil's music," he recalled. "I remember one time, there was this big biker dude that worked in this group with us, and he and I always spent the days in the last couple of years driving together, and we were listening to Bruce Springsteen, and one of the missionary girls in the van finally burst out crying and begged us to let her get out of the car because she couldn't stand listening to Satan anymore."

Indirectly, Urrea's work with the poor in Tijuana led to his job at Harvard. "I had a friend, a former writing professor from UCSD, who was at Harvard, and I wrote him a letter and basically told him that I couldn't take the violence and horror anymore. And I asked him, 'Could I get a gig out there, just as a janitor for a while, maybe six months?' He said, 'Send me a résumé,' and he got me hired, not as a janitor but as a writing teacher."

Urrea found Harvard to be "a total other world. I took an electric typewriter and had a duffel bag with about ten favorite books and some Elvis Costello records. And I arrived there, and I thought, 'Holy crap, I am going to die, man.' My host took me to Harvard, and my classroom was in this building called Memorial Hall, which looks sort of like the Cathedral of Notre Dame. It even has gargoyles on it. It was truly mind-boggling. It was the kind of thing somebody like me couldn't have dreamed of...meeting John Irving, I met Eudora Welty, and I saw Norman Mailer read. I dug it. I totally loved it. It was the kind of atmosphere that part of me had been longing for anyway; it was like a more extreme version of what UCSD had been like. And suddenly I was just assumed to be brilliant because I taught at Harvard. I thought, 'Well, this is great; I like being brilliant.'"

As much as he loved the world of ideas he was now living in, he was shocked by some aspects of Ivy League intellectualism. "I remember one of the first lunches I ate at that I had with some of the faculty members. Somebody asked me, 'Who are your heroes?' and I said, 'I consider Mother Teresa a hero,' and they said, 'What? She is no hero to anyone,' because she was anti-abortion, and she was conservative and Catholic. And I thought, 'Damn.' That was very hard for me because she exemplified what I was doing with my own life. To be told that that was a bad thing, that to help the poor like that was some kind of imperialist activity... I was totally stunned. My one great defense was that I was, in fact, Latino, and they were a little afraid of that, like, 'He was actually born there.'

"The problem was that it was nothing but ideas; I suddenly was among the people who were supposed to be ruling the world, and I realized that they sat around and thought a lot, but I wasn't sure that they had ever done anything."

In 1990, Urrea returned to San Diego and for four years wrote articles for the Reader, some from the journals he had kept during his missionary days. "Then I combined some of those Reader pieces with the old stuff and published my first book, Across the Wire. It was about the Tijuana dump. I had started to write it in 1982, but it took me until 1993 to have anybody accept it for publication. Nobody would touch it. Books about the border are now a minor industry, but they weren't back then. I was told by one of the publishers that nobody cares about starving Mexicans." ■

Luis Urrea will read at The Book Works in Del Mar on Thursday, July 22, at 7:00 p.m.

STRAIGHT FROM THE HIP

BY MATTHEW ALICE

Illustration by Rick Geary

Hello:
If Yao Ming's last name is Ming, why does it say Yao on the back of his jersey?

— J, the net

Culture check. Mrs. Ming's baby boy Yao is actually Mrs. Yao's baby boy Ming. Confused at birth? No. Confused when East met West. Chinese names traditionally begin with the family name, followed by the individual's name (our "first" name). Ming came to us with traditions intact and Yao Ming name tapes already sewn into his big, long Houston Rockets shorts. As long as his endorsement checks don't bounce, I imagine we can call Ming whatever we want. To a Westerner, Yao sounds pretty appropriate anyway. And we did get that cool "Yo! Yao!" commercial. The Seattle Mariners' Ichiro Suzuki isn't Chinese, of course, even though his uni says "Ichiro." He's had that since he was on a Japanese team with two other guys named Suzuki, and they let two of the three of them use their first names instead. He had to beg and plead with the National League to let him put his first name on his Mariners suit.

Hey, Matt:

Right when we had the jolt from the last earthquake, I actually got a lump in my throat. I know that can happen when one is stressed or scared, but what causes that "lump," and why did it take hours to go away?

— Twisting and Shouting in La Jolla

According to our old pal and Alice Institute staff quack, Dr. Doctor, some people are lumpy for days, weeks, months. A few hours isn't so strange. After that, he was a little short on facts, as usual. Medicine's still trying to figure out what to call it. "Globus syndrome" is one popular choice, but there's also "globus sensation" and the more traditional, pie-in-the-face diagnosis, "globus hystericus." The significant point is that there is no actual lump; it's just the feeling that you've swallowed a rock. Most people experience it when they suppress the urge to cry, but people with chronic anxiety disorders can have the sensation continually.

The best physiological explanation we could wheedle out of Doc Doc has to do with the autonomic nervous system's stress response, which involves opening the glottis muscle (a throat muscle above the larynx) to help increase air volume into the lungs. (Stress generally raises our heart rates and makes greater demands for oxygen, a holdover from the days when we had to be ready to flee from the club-wielding guy in the cave next door rather than spammers and telemarketers.) At the same time, the glottis has to close when we swallow so we don't get smoothies and cupcakes in our airway. So in a stressful situation, our throats are very confused. The result is the tension-filled "lump." It usually goes away once we calm down, so I guess you were more freaked by the shaker than you thought. And of course, I'm not a doctor, and Dr. Doctor is barely a doctor, but our lawyers are definitely lawyers. Real, prolonged throat lumps could be serious, so go see a real physician.

Mom's Milk Musings

This just in, from "Lactating Masseuse in North Park," to last week's "Curious Near Miramar," re: breast milk:

I just want to make sure you know that breast size has nothing to do with milk production. The variation in size from one woman to another has mostly to do with the amount of fatty tissue in the breast, and fatty tissue does not make milk.... The more the baby nurses, the more milk Mom will produce. A flat-chested woman can easily feed twins (even triplets) with no problem. I don't think the boobacious masseuse will have "extra" milk as long as her baby nurses regularly.

More Than We Ever Wanted to Know, from Dr. Bob

Also in this week's mail, a note from Web-surfer Bob, a real M.D., apparently, commenting on our long-ago question from the guy who ate peanuts, shells and all, and whose wife said he was, well, nuts. We said he was just quirky. Dr. Bob agrees. More health tips from your friends at the Matthew Alice Institution for Cheap Research:

I am a physician and have eaten whole roasted peanuts (unsalted) for years. Three to four handfuls per day as part of a high-fiber diet. No problems, no undue flatulence, two to three soft BMs a day (which I consider normal, compared to individuals eating a highly refined diet). Unlike sunflower shells, which do not significantly soften and have sharp ends, peanut shells soften considerably and do not have sharp projections. While remnants may be found in the stool, they are very pliable. Thorough chewing is recommended, and no trauma to the inner mouth or gastrointestinal tract ensues. I have searched the Internet for several years for references to "eating peanut shells," and your reply is the first reference I have run across.

That's what we're here for, Dr. Bob.

Dames, I've Seen A Few

'DiMaggio, Ted Williams, Michael Jordan, Eddie Mathews, Tiger Woods," says Jim Chris.

I move the telephone closer, "Maybe we should take it by sport. How about boxers?"

Chris says, "Ali. Ken Norton. George Foreman..."

Mr. Chris is telling me about his photographs; specifically, photographs of Mr. Chris standing beside celebrities. I have come to this conversation by way of his book, The Lives of Jim Chris. Mr. Chris sent portions of his autobiography to the office in hopes of having it published. His package was passed on to me as possible column fodder. The gist and tone of his book can be taken from his cover letter.

"Hang on tight for the ride of several lifetimes. I have: Made love to more than 1000 women (I prefer to rise in passion than fall in love)."

Had more than 100 jobs, including being a gigolo, Miami Beach hotel tennis pro, semi-pro baseball and professional basketball player, teacher, actor, and artist.

Advised the likes of Henry Kissinger and Margaret Thatcher.

Rubbed elbows with the movie stars: the beautiful Loni Anderson, the multitasking Clint Eastwood, the jerk Jerry Lewis, the elegant Robert Wagner, and many, many more.

Crashed 1000 posh affairs (There is a "free lunch"!).

Spent time with the greatest athletes of our time...

And so on. You can see we have a large field of play to deal with. I ask if he collects autographs for a living.

"There are four or five autograph pros in town," Chris says. "They work off eBay. My friend, Jerry 'Moose' Kern, lives in La Costa. I've known him for 30 years, and he's an eccentric type of guy," Chris laughs. "But I would consider him the premier autograph hound in the country."

"Can you make a living at it?"

"Yeah, Moose has a half-million dollars' worth of memorabilia in his house. He's got 500 baseballs signed by 500 celebrities. He's got 50 bats. He's got football helmets, footballs, cards, and golf balls signed by every golf pro. I don't go much for autographs. I get them, but I'm a picture man; I always have a camera with me. I've got 300 pictures in my book. I could have used 1000. If you came in my apartment, you'd be stunned. I've got 500 pictures, framed, on my wall."

Just for the hell of it I ask, "Would you walk toward the nearest wall and name names?"

"Okay, Chris says. "Me and Charlton Heston. Tom Selleck. Clint Eastwood. Jack La Lanne. Bruce Jenner. Rod Laver. Archie Moore. Robert Stack. Steve Lawrence. Peter Falk. Maureen O'Connor. Dave Winfield. Frankie Lane. Victor Mature." Silence. "I'd have to walk out into the living room to give you..."

"Please do."

"...Roger Clemens. Lee Majors. Rick Berry. Rollie Fingers. Bob Feller. Ken Norton. Duke Snyder. Yogi Berra. Jimmy Conner. Bobby Riggs. Joe Namath. Stan Humphries. Steve Garvey. Hillary Clinton."

"Hillary Clinton!" That, I'd like to see.

"You said there were four people in San Diego who make a living off autographs."

"Moose is a friend of mine, and the other guys are friends of his," says Chris. "They're usually at every major event, waiting for the celebrity to come by so they can hand him a baseball or helmet or cap to sign."

"Ted Williams was in Costa Mesa. I mean, hell's fire, Moose and I walked in there early, before anybody got to the venue. We sat in the john. Now, Moose is in his warm-up outfit and I'm in a suit and tie. So, we're sitting in the stalls until they open the place to paying customers."

"We walked out of the john while everybody is being let in. There was a line a half mile long for Ted Williams," Chris laughs, "he's signing for $75 a pop, and most people have two or three items to be signed. So, I get a large Coke and walk up to Ted, put it on the table, and say, 'Let's take a break, Ted.'"

"That's funny."

Chris continues, "Ted says, 'Well, gee, thanks.' He thought I was running the show because I looked like I was running the show. So, we stepped into the alley, bullshitted for a few minutes, and I say, 'Oh, by the way, Ted, sign this ball for me.' He signs the ball. That was Moose's ball, by the way. I put it in my pocket, we walk back in, and I say, 'Oh, just a minute, Ted. This guy wants to get a shot of us together.' 'Why, sure,' Ted says. So, he puts his arm around me and Moose steps up and takes the picture. Then, the two of us walk outside and I flip Moose his ball."

"Williams made a fortune. He must have made 75 grand for the weekend. I mean, Jesus, how would you like to sit at a table for three days, signing shit for $75 a pop, and have your ass kissed to boot?"

Reverend Michael Brown's church doesn't have an espresso machine, video screen, overhead projector, or praise band. Reverend Brown uses neither hand puppets, nor balloons, nor PowerPoint in his sermons. Reverend Brown isn't interested in teaching the people who come to his church how to improve their marriages, succeed at work, or enhance their self-esteem.

He said last week when I called him, "Self-help sermons, well, that's precisely what we don't want to give people. You can get that on Oprah. Self-help sermons are just a way of taking the world's message about being good and baptizing it with Christianity. In our church, when we talk about the Christian life, we mean learning about God and theology. We mean learning about who God is."

Thirty-three-year-old Reverend Brown describes his church as "distinctly Reformed." He was raised in a nondenominational evangelical church, Calvary Chapel. Like many young people who've migrated to Calvinism from churches like Calvary Chapel, his move was decisive.

"I'm convinced that Reformed theology is the purest, most robust expression of Christianity on the planet.

"The emphasis in nondenominational evangelical churches is on you and your personal piety. The emphasis is on individualism, and Sunday worship is just one other part of an individual's life. You go to Starbucks for your latte, you go to the gym for exercise, and on Sunday you go to church to meet your friends and get a little Bible study. There's a sense that there's nothing particularly holy about Sunday. There's an attitude of, 'Well, I can just as well worship God on the golf course or at the Wild Animal Park.'

"For us, Sunday isn't just another day. It's the center of our week. On the Lord's Day, we come to the means of Grace. We come together on Sunday in what we call a 'covenantal assembly,' where we receive the means of Grace in the preached Word and in the Sacraments. It's not about you. It's about being part of a community of believers and being part of a history that reaches back almost 2000 years."

an Orthodox Presbyterian church in Santee. Its only decoration is a plain wooden cross hanging on the wall behind the podium. ("And there are some Reformed folks," Reverend Brown told me, "who would say that the cross is too much.") Most of the men wear a suit and tie. The women, dresses. The children are quiet. Everyone is quiet. Last Sunday when I walked into the church, no one greeted me, although a few of the 60 folks present turned my way and smiled.

Christ United's hymns, which are mostly Psalms sung to melodies like "Ode to Joy," punctuate a definite order of service, or liturgy. (Reverend Brown prefers to call it a liturgy because, "The very word 'liturgy' really bothers nondenominational evangelicals.") But compared to what you'd find at an Eastern Orthodox or Coptic church, Christ United's pattern of worship is simple, proceeding from Call to Worship to Benediction in 18 steps. The liturgy includes two interesting features, the Prayer of Confession and the Declaration of Pardon, which, Reverend Brown told me, are said even on those three Sundays a month when Christ United doesn't celebrate what they call the Lord's Supper.

The point to all this clear-cut order is the sermon, and while listening to Reverend Brown's, I had a hard time recalling other Christian places of worship that afforded the sermon, or homily, a similar sense of moment.

"You have dual citizenship in the Kingdom of God and in the Kingdom of Man," Reverend Brown told his congregation. "If you are a Christian, then Jesus Christ exerts His authority over every aspect of your life. Christianity is not a Lone Ranger religion. But the vows we take as Christians make the Church more than just a community. The Church offers community but is not just a social club. We are owned by God. And worship is the means He has ordained to feed us. When we stay away from worship, we are sinning. As St. Augustine said, we cannot have God as our father if we reject the Church as our mother. It is ridiculous for any Christian to separate himself from the Church. Our entire life should be dedicated to proclaiming the excellence of God."

Afterward, while everyone lined up for cake and coffee, I snagged Reverend Brown and asked him to describe for me what non-Calvinists made of his church.

"They say it's very reverential. Even if they don't agree with us theologically, they say we have great respect for God and for our faith. I'd describe it as more vertical than horizontal. We're not so interested in what goes on between the people in the pews. I'm here to teach the Gospel and the Gospel is what's important. If you'll notice, we don't make time in the liturgy for people to greet one another. We figure that they can visit with each other before or after the service. What they're really here for is to worship God."

Dear Aunt Trudy,

Recently my husband and I were invited to a birthday party for one member of a couple we like a lot but are just getting to know. We brought them a bottle of fantastic tequila we'd picked up in Mexico and were saving for a special occasion. Before they'd unwrapped any of the presents, I learned while chatting with one of the other guests that the wife of this couple who were our hosts is newly pregnant (and therefore off alcohol for the foreseeable future) and that the husband is a member of Alcoholics Anonymous, and therefore also not an imbibor of tequila, whether of fabulous or low quality. I was so embarrassed. I wanted to sneak the gift out of the gift pile and toss it back into the trunk of our car. My husband said they could probably use the tequila when they had guests, that we had no way of knowing that they didn't drink. But I really felt like I should have taken the present back and brought them another one later on, one that perhaps they could actually enjoy. What would you have done?

BEARER OF INAPPROPRIATE GIFT IN VISTA

Dear Bearer,

What a shame! I'm infamous for getting a little creative about etiquette, so if you had sneaked your gift out of the heap, and come back the next day with a nice coconut cream pie or potted plant or popcorn popper, I'd probably applaud. It might have given you a chance to get to know this nice couple you're becoming friends with a little bit better. I also think that your husband is right: there's no shame in your having brought liquor to this household. It was an honest mistake due to not knowing them well, and it's a boo-boo that won't be repeated. The folks I know who don't drink realize that new acquaintances sometimes will bring over wine or some other booze until they're made aware that the household is dry, and it's usually not a big deal. In gift giving the intention is supposed to be what's important, and your intentions were innocent and friendly. If you're worried you can always call and thank this couple for the party and let them know you learned of their alcohol-free policy a few hours too late, and you're sorry you proffered the tequila and will bring a more useful and amusing gift next time.

Dear Aunt Trudy,

Ever since I was about ten, this cousin of mine has been kind of stalking me. We're a couple of years apart in age. He's older. Now we're both in our 30s. When I was a teenager he would come over and sit in front of my house waiting for me to come out. He'd sit there for four or five hours sometimes. It got so I'd sneak out the back door to avoid him. He's my third cousin, but I think he's kind of a creepy guy and don't want to go out with him or really socialize with him at all. My sisters all think he's a weirdo, too, and avoid him, but that's easier for them as he doesn't seem fixated on them. I've been telling him politely for years to leave me alone, but he just gets a glazed look in his eye and tells me I'm pretty or that he likes my voice. I'm from a Midwestern family that doesn't talk about this kind of stuff, ever. When I'd tell my mom I thought my cousin was crazy when we were kids and that I wished he'd leave me alone (as I did constantly growing up), she'd always laugh and say, "Oh, Barry's just a little eccentric." I think he's nuts. Anyway, what a relief when I moved to San Diego and he stayed behind in Iowa. The problem is that recently my oblivious mom gave Barry my e-mail address, though I had asked her not to. Now I come home from work every day to pleading e-mails from Barry saying we're "kissing cousins" and why don't I write him back? Am I obligated to write this guy back because we're related even though I wish I never had to see or hear from him again?

DOGGED IN EL CAJON

Dear Dogged,

I don't think you're obligated to respond to or encourage this bothersome relation in any way. You've asked him repeatedly and politely over the years to cease and desist, and he never gets the message. I'm glad you're several states away from this guy. Ignore him. Dump his e-mails. And fie on Mom for giving him your e-mail address. Even if she thinks he's a good egg, she should respect your wishes on the matter and your privacy. She's your mom; she should be on your side.

—EVE KELLY

Sometimes I miss our old wall oven. A copper-brown 30-inch gas monster from Whirlpool, it looked like a '60s-era tank and worked like a dream. But then it betrayed us. My parents were in town for Thanksgiving. Patrick, who is forever trying to impress/please my dad, baked a pecan tart for dessert. But he didn't really bake it; he half-baked it. The oven wouldn't budge over 200 degrees. My father wasn't impressed.

The man at the appliance shop couldn't find a replacement part. The 2002 Jenn-Air we bought as a replacement wasn't nearly as efficient, but it was all modernity had to offer in the way of 30-inch gas wall ovens. I used to wonder if we could have saved our Whirlpool from the junkyard.

Too late, I discovered RMR (619-231-2808) in Golden Hill, a company dedicated to restoring vintage stoves. It turned out it was probably just as well — business manager Michael Kravcar explained that “we work mostly on pre-1960 stoves. The technology really started changing in 1960, and we wanted to concentrate on one area. We didn't want to be a jack-of-all-trades and master of none. We do a little bit of work with electric, but we mainly work with gas stoves because that's what most people in San Diego have.”

Kravcar is not impressed with modern stoves, be they ever so shiny or ever so boxy. “Old stoves were very artistic stoves. They were made to be a piece of furniture within the home.” Nor is he enamored of modern simplicity. “As late as the '50s, you were dealing with people who were used to cooking with coal or wood. Companies had to design a stove that was superior in order to convince the homemaker of the times to switch.” Technical specialist Rena Holford showed me a late-'40s Gaffers and Sattler. “This has Automatic Cook Time, meaning you set it and it automatically turns on, brings the oven up to temperature, cooks the food, then turns off.” Others feature temperature probes that measure a roast's internal temp and shut off accordingly, or timed burners that turn off after a given interval, or lights to indicate a preheated oven or an overfull grease tray under the griddle. The Chambers stove offers a built-in crock pot, so well insulated that it can be used to make ice cream while its oven works like a Dutch oven, cooking food using only the heat generated during preheating. “You can cook without gas,” marvels Holford.

“Vintage stoves are made with smaller oven boxes,” notes Kravcar. “You can heat efficiently, but you can still cook something as large as a 25-pound turkey.” Added engineer Robert Fanella, “A larger oven creates difficulties in heating that a smaller oven doesn't. My mother's modern oven has hot spots. If you put things in different areas, they burn. Especially with less-expensive ovens.” Concludes Krav-car, “Operation is the main portion of why we feel vintage stoves are superior to modern stoves.” And as for durability, “a lot of wartime technology went into these stoves.” The stoves from the Buck company “were built like Sherman tanks.”

Kravcar showed me a Buck that had received the custom RMR restoration treatment. “We show the customer the unrestored stoves, and they pick what they want: customized features such as color, automatic cooking functions, light kits.” (If the stove is old enough to lack one, they always add a gas safety valve.) Otherwise, “we try to keep it as original as possible,” says Fanella. “One of the main deviations from that is, if the stove has a griddle, we offer to have it coated with Teflon because chrome griddles are terrible to cook on.” The customer who chose the Buck liked the way its slim 20-inch width would tuck into her cobalt-blue tiled galley kitchen. “She wanted a cobalt blue stove with black accents.” She got it; RMR works with a porcelain-application company to provide any color stove a customer can think of.

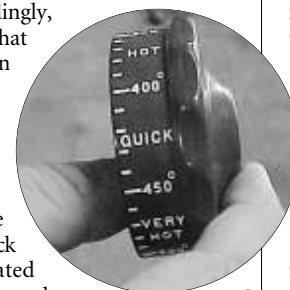

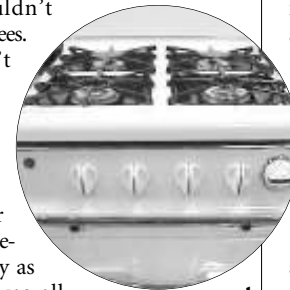

Before a stove gets shipped off to be coated, however, it gets pulled apart and worked over. “Whether or not a stove works when we get it,” explains Kravcar, “we make it work. We completely disassemble it. If it's a stove we're less than 100 percent familiar with, we take hundreds of pictures” to aid in the reassembly. “Then, each part is degreased — we use an industrial-strength Simple

Green, heated in an autoclave. We do a lot of hand grinding of individual parts like valves, to remove corrosion.” (If pieces are damaged beyond repair, they keep a large stock of harvested parts on hand.) “Stoves are extremely simple machines,” says Fanella. “Basically a gas pipe comes in. A valve stops the gas or lets some through to the burner. Only a few things can go wrong, like a clogged pipe or burner or a frozen valve.” Fanella also checks the pilot system and will retrofit one if necessary.

Once the guts are in working order, continues Kravcar, “we clean the panels and assess them for damage. If anything needs re-porcelaining or re-chroming, we get that done. We replace all fasteners, except for extremely unusual specialty pieces. And we do some painting with high-gloss, high-temperature paints. Some plastic or Bakelite handles or knobs require a multistep deep-clean bleach-out. Then we re-polish them, and they look brand-new.”

“We're kind of crazy about detail here,” he concludes. Carefully reproduced dial painting, original owner's manuals and framed vintage advertisements (where possible) support his claim. “We do it because we love it, not because we have to. We're not here making a million dollars. This is something we find important and enjoyable.” Average time for a restoration is eight weeks. Average prices range from $2600–$6000, depending on models and features (though some rarer stoves can run much higher). Prices include delivery and setup.

Twenty-Five Years Ago

In the view of many of his former associates, Meinhart Lagies finally got what was coming to him. Two Fridays ago, June 15, he was fired from his job as a reporter with the San Diego Evening Tribune. It was a particularly ignominious end for Lagies, who considers himself the best journalist in town. But given the skirmishes he's been engaged in with his paper and its publisher, the reason for his firing wasn't especially strange; it was fittingly petty. And that didn't sit well with his colleagues. One reporter summed up the ambivalent news room sentiment when he said, "Nobody's unhappy that he's gone; everybody hates Meinhart. But he shouldn't have been fired this way."

Forty-one-year-old Meinhart J. Lagies (pronounced la-gee) was at one time the most visible and respected newspaper reporter in San Diego.... (His probing of breaches of confidentiality regarding police department personnel files ended with the resignation of former Police Chief Ray Hoobler. He documented elaborate shenanigans perpetrated by San Diego auto repair shops and used-car dealerships. And he investigated alleged ticket-fixing, a practice that involved many prominent San Diegans, including employees of the Union-Tribune.)

Leon Parma reached into his wallet and extracted one hundred dollars. He handed the money and a stack of 44 large envelopes to the concierge at Washington, D.C.'s L'Enfant Plaza Hotel and quietly said, "I want these in their rooms within one hour." "These" contained the lavish 24-page brochure put together by the San Diego Super Bowl Task Force; less than an hour later the personally addressed envelopes were in the rooms of the 28 National Football League team owners and various NFL executives. It was Wednesday, May 23, 1984, the eve of the day when San Diego landed the 1988 Super Bowl, an event Parma, a prominent Republican and partner in the local Budweiser distributorship, would later describe as "one of the most important things to ever happen to San Diego."

"Vietnam books," [Jim] Morris was quoted as saying, "couldn't be published in the fragmented market of the 1970s. Pro-war readers didn't want mea culpa's; the antis wouldn't read what they dismissed as macho stuff. The passage of time reintegrated the audience; a new generation of readers is curious about the war but has no specific point of view. For them, Vietnam books fulfill a teaching function as yet not performed by either the schools or the media."

The cops with drinking problems, badges that are head cases — where do they go? That's easy. They're exiled to Newton Station downtown, LAPD's Siberia, where they're forced to deal with the crème de la scum, the junkies, the schizos, the gangbangers, the pukers, the prosties, and all of the degenerate elements we coddled citizens would rather not even think about, much less handle on a day-to-day basis.

I am looking at a job application for Jack In The Box and trying to talk myself out of turning the thing in. I have enough Prozac to see me through this — it is a means to an end pure and simple, suck it up, just do it — and I need the job to pay for the Prozac that I'm going to need to do the job and so on.

How did this happen? I am 47 years old with no marketable skills other than guitar playing and prose writing. But Christmas was, as they say, just around the corner and, shit, so is Jack In The Box.

OPERATION ICE LUGE

by Josh Board

I got a call telling me about a party some military guys were throwing. It was their ninth annual Party of Epic Proportions. When Chris DeLong invited me, he said, "There are two invitations. One for the wives and girlfriends. The other one is for the guys." I was a little confused until my invitation arrived via the computer. The one for the guys showed the start time as 1:00 p.m. The entertainment was to include strippers (and, if memory serves, a porn star). The invitation for the wives showed that the party started at 2:30, with the entertainment being "three great bands."

When the female "entertainment" arrived, I was in the back yard talking to a few people. At some point they tried to get me into the living room, saying there was a front-row seat. I did go inside a half an hour later, and I was surprised to see there were a few girlfriends and wives around, rolling their eyes anytime they heard hollering from the living room. You couldn't even see inside the living room — there were too many guys standing there. At one point, a woman was being passed around above everyone's head, with guys putting dollar bills in her bikini. One guy looked at me and said sternly, "You're the reporter, right? You better not ruin this for us, chief." I don't know what he thought. This wasn't a Tailhook thing. But I asked Chris later if writing about it would defeat the purpose of the two invitations. He said, "Nah, it's cool. This is probably the last one I'll have at this house anyway."

They had 20 kegs in the back yard, so I grabbed a beer. I told one of the former roommates, who told me his name was Coma, how odd I thought it was that they had four Porta Pottis. He said, "Yeah, we've been throwing these parties for a while. And we have everything delivered." Chris added, "I spent all day organizing yesterday, but we have the stage for the bands delivered and set up, and the kegs. We even have a 300-pound ice luge coming later."

"Be nice to him. Hook him up with some Cubans."

I heard so many people talk about the famous ice luge and had one guy finally explain it to me. He said, "It's great. You open your mouth at one end, and they pour a drink from the top of it. It goes down the ice and into your mouth." I found out a few days later that they used 100 bottles to pour down the luge.

What seemed more interesting than the luge was the kids' pool that they set up in the living room. They had women wrestling in baby oil. I asked Chris if it would ruin the carpet, and he said, "Not with the tarp we have laid down all over the floor." Another guy said, "They are prepared." When the tarp was being taken outside, I asked if the "entertainment" was over. Someone replied, "No. The girls are in the other room showering all the oil off them. They have one more show."

Other than an Andy Kaufman special, I had never seen women wrestle. When I poked my head inside, the living room had to be 150 degrees. One guy walked away from the crowd, dripping in sweat. He said, "It is one stinky inferno in there. It's like a pack of ravenous dogs." Two guys went into the kitchen and were wiping themselves off. I didn't know if it was baby oil or sweat they were covered in.

One short guy was trying to poke his head around the crowd to see what was happening. He gave up after a few minutes, saying, "This is why I hate being short. I can never see anything." Maybe he should've done what a fourth of the crowd was doing: Holding their cell phones up and taking photos. And there was a guy in a wheelchair. I'm not sure if he was able to make it into the coveted living room.

The crowd would yell and get into it, but they weren't out of control. And for a bunch of military guys, many of whom were muscular — the few times I bumped into people, they said, "Excuse me, sir" — they were a surprisingly well-behaved bunch. But as one guy told me, "It's not worth getting in trouble and possibly losing our jobs over a party. This is a slightly older crowd that has all that out of their system." The crowd looked to be in their late 20s. And right after this guy told me it wasn't worth losing a job over, I saw a cooler that was marked Property of MCAS Miramar. I laughed.

Chris told me, "We like to have this party as a homecoming for some, and for the people that are heading out. I leave for Japan at the end of June and will possibly be routed to Iraq. Ken Lee is a Marine here who just got back from six months in Afghanistan. And Marty is leaving right after the party for Iraq. Pretty much everyone here served in Operation Iraqi Freedom. And a lot more of these guys will probably be redeployed to Iraq this fall. I can't give a lot of details as to when or who."

I know, or you'd have to kill me.

There were a lot of Navy guys here, and I was surprised to see there was such camaraderie. It's not like the movies where one branch of the military doesn't respect the other. I talked to a few guys who were F/A-18 Hornet pilots.

Another guy said he was a Cobra pilot. I meant to ask him what a Cobra was. I knew it was a sports car. I didn't know it was something that flew. There were also a few helo pilots.

When I was taking notes, somebody asked if I was a superior officer. There were a few Marine lawyers present, and maybe they thought I was checking things out for some reason. One of the lawyers told me the party was also about celebrating the people who recently got promoted (I think one of them called it a "wetting down") as well as the homecomings.

Since this house was in Pacific Beach, right near the ocean, parking was tough; most parked in the Bank of America lot that charged $5. I asked Chris if neighbors would complain when the bands started. He said, "No, I tell all of them. They know. I even call the police and tell them what we're doing. We aren't allowed to get a noise permit. You can't get one if you're 2 1/2 miles from the coast."

Since a house across the street was having construction done, with lots of drilling and hammering, I doubt anybody was bothered by this noise. And two off-duty police officers were hired to do security. Coma told me, "In PB, we'd have a lot of people just walking by that crash this party. It's gotten bad in the past. And we don't want underage drinkers or people that weren't invited." And when the cops did finally show up, they just talked to the security guards for a few minutes and left. One guy in the back yard who wanted to leave tried jumping the back fence. The board snapped, and he fell and hit his face. He walked away with a bit of blood trickling down, and Coma grabbed a nail and hammer and fixed the fence.

The first band to play

was called Thik. I was looking forward to seeing them because I had such a great conversation with drummer Bill Nychay. He told me stories about some of the pilots here. He pointed to Chris and said, "It's amazing to think of him flying these planes. He trains people, too. One time I was golfing and I called him and asked him to do a fly-by. He told me what time he would, and sure enough, that jet came right over the golf course. It was so cool." He also told me about pilots flying real low over parts of Arizona and seeing the illegal aliens scattering like ants.

Bill also told me about working with some famous musicians. Somehow, he gets race cars sponsored by musicians. He told me they got a car for Alice Cooper, Meatloaf, and Vince Neil of Mötley Crüe. And because Neil is so into the sport, he's always involved in different projects with Bill.

Before Bill's band took the stage, Mark Evans grabbed a guitar. He said, "I'm going to play the national anthem." I asked him if it would sound like Hendrix at Woodstock, and he said, "No, that was a bit too sloppy. I'm going to clean it up. What Jimi did worked back then, but it's 2004." He got up onstage, and I was surprised at the handful of nonmilitary people who didn't take their hats off even after Chris made an announcement to do so. Some people were told to remove their hats by people standing next to them. Others just had them knocked off by people standing nearby.

I've heard a lot of national anthems. And as part of a morning radio show years ago, I sang the national anthem at a Padre game. But this was the most moving. To be standing here, side by side with the people who actually do the fighting to keep this country safe, was heart-warming. I found out later that they were going to have a jet fly over during the anthem. It turned out to be a no-fly zone.

Thik finally took the stage and sounded great. They did a lot of old rock songs, like three straight from Van Halen. I would see neighbors poke their heads out, smile, and go back inside. One guy came out with a cell phone to his ear. He shook his head and then started laughing. The singer of Thik thanked the military and talked about respect. And a few songs later he called Coma up, who tried his best to sing a Ramones song before stumbling on some lyrics. A person in the crowd told me Coma has an annual bicycle club crawl. Somebody overheard that and responded, "No, he hasn't done that in a few years."

I found out most of these guys are stationed at Miramar. A few were from Camp Pendleton. Chris said, "Most of us were at El Toro, and that's where these parties used to be. A few people are here from Yuma, too."

I saw a donation box right by the door. Somebody asked Chris, "I threw in $60, is that cool?" Chris said, "Yeah, that's fine. Whatever anybody wants to contribute is fine." I asked him how much the party cost and he said, "About $7000." I didn't think to ask him a question that probably nobody but construction workers know the answer to: How much did the four Porta Pottis cost?

I was surprised that one of the bands playing here was the very popular '80s band All-Starz. Chris said, "I met Daniel, the lead singer, in Arizona a few years ago and he's been playing for us ever since. He lives in La Jolla. They play a lot cheaper for us. And after their set, they're going to be doing a gig down the street at the Longboard."

I left as the crowd was getting ready to watch the band 30 Second Presidents. There were six rows of bleachers, but even with those filled the back yard was packed. One guy was sitting on the roof, and Chris yelled into the microphone, "You can't stay on the roof. You have to get down. We got in trouble from the landlord last year. And by the way, if you see him — he's a short Oriental guy — be nice to him. Hook him up with some Cubans."

I wondered if there was anyone there with Cuban cigars. I also wondered if anyone there had on sunscreen. My arms got sizzled. ■

Lovers Lane

ERWIN CASTILLO & BRIANNE STEWART

Met: September 16, 2003
Engaged: February 21, 2004
Wedding Date: July 31, 2004

Erwin Castillo gets what he wants. You can hear it in his voice on the telephone. "We're having an engagement party at Graziano's in Rancho Bernardo. Meet us there beforehand, and we'll talk."

Graziano's, in a small upscale shopping center near RB High, is quiet on a cloudy Saturday morning. The smells of garlic and yeast and tomato sauce hang in the air. Mr. Castillo, 28, and Brianne Stewart, 22, walk in to find some friends decorating with crepe-paper streamers. Ms. Stewart's four-year-old daughter Jacqueline holds her mother's hand. The smiling threesome slips into one side of an upholstered booth.

Mr. Castillo has a friendly, efficient, somewhat bustling air about him. You get the impression not much gets past him as a business-development officer for San Diego County Credit Union. He certainly didn't let Ms. Stewart get past him.

"I met her at a traffic light," Mr. Castillo says and chuckles, "at the corner of Mira Mesa Boulevard and Camino Ruiz. I was in the left turn lane talking to a friend when a silver VW Jetta pulled up beside me. I thought, 'Wow!' Brianne was going to the bank and wanted to get into the left lane. I rolled down my window and told her, 'I'll let you in if you give me your phone number.' When you see something so beautiful, you've got to go for it. This might be your only chance. Brianne shouted her phone number to me, so I let her in."

Sitting close beside Mr. Castillo, Ms. Stewart is fairly princess pretty, all blonde hair and peachy cheeks and sleepy blue eyes. Jacqueline looks like a miniature version of her mom. "Erwin called 15 minutes later. I called him back that night." After a few e-mail exchanges, the couple agreed to meet for a late lunch that Friday.

"We met at 2:30 at Sandwich Island in Mira Mesa," Mr. Castillo remembers. "We hugged right away. It was an hour and a half lunch. We made plans to go to Sea World the next day. The day after that, we went to La Jolla Cove. Until yesterday, we haven't been apart for more than a day."

With what appears to be his usual sense of efficiency, Mr. Castillo knew after the second date that he wanted to marry Ms. Stewart. "I realized this was my best friend, and I fell in love," he says. "I kept thinking that she was the one."

Ms. Stewart knew about the same time that Mr. Castillo was the one for her. "He was so easy to talk to," she says.

Almost five months to the day after their traffic encounter, Mr. Castillo proposed to Ms. Stewart in an elaborately planned treasure hunt involving a limo, family members, and dry cleaning. "I had her favorite dress dry-cleaned," Mr. Castillo says. "Her roommate got it for me. Then I had Brianne's dad pick up Jacqueline. I had four letters prepared." Mr. Castillo pulls from beside the booth a large picture frame holding four letters on thick white stationery. "The first letter told Brianne to get ready and wear her favorite dress. I had a limousine driver waiting. The driver gave her the second letter, which told her to go to the intersection where we met."

At the corner of Mira Mesa Boulevard and Camino Ruiz, Ms. Stewart retrieved a third letter that instructed her to go to Sandwich Island, the site of the couple's first date. When she got to Sandwich Island, she found 11 long-stemmed red roses and an envelope directing her to La Jolla Cove where the couple had enjoyed their first kiss and where Mr. Castillo had first asked Ms. Stewart to be his girlfriend.

"I was waiting on the bridge at Children's Pool," Mr. Castillo says, "with the 12th rose. I told her how I wanted to grow old together and how much I loved her. I talked for a long time. Then I said, 'Brianne Nicole Stewart, will you marry me?'"

Ms. Stewart said, "Yes." Mr. Castillo gave her a 1.16-carat classic solitaire. The couple had dinner at the Sky Room at La Valencia Hotel. Then they picked up Jacqueline in the limo and gave her a locket with a photo inside of Mr. Castillo and Ms. Stewart. She will be the flower girl at the couple's wedding July 31 at Tideland Park in Coronado.

In the booth at Graziano's, it's almost time for guests to arrive. Ms. Stewart gazes at Mr. Castillo. "Erwin is so loving and considerate all the time," she says. "He has no bad qualities. Most everyone has things about them that get on your nerves. Not Erwin."

Mr. Castillo gazes back. "Brianne is very loving and caring. She's a good listener. She's a good, loving mother. And she's very spiritual. That's what I love most."

There's No Talking

Its president was James R. Dawe, a 58-year-old attorney and longtime lobbyist who is a familiar face in the corridors of city hall. According to lobbyist disclosure records, Dawe's clients include Pardee Homes and McMillin Communities of National City. Both are powerful developers who have long had their way with the San Diego City Council. McMillin built the controversial Liberty Station development on the grounds of the old Naval Training Center, which was conveyed by the city redevelopment agency in what critics argued was a sweetheart deal.

The council has also approved millions of dollars in taxpayer payments for improved sewer and water lines for the development, over the objections of some Point Loma residents.

The library group's board of directors included Mike Madigan (another lobbyist and onetime chief of the city's ballpark-development program) and Mary Walshock, the head of the extension program at the University of California at San Diego.

Last year Madigan, a former Pardee executive, agreed to pay a $1000 fine to settle charges that he did not properly report his financial interests on city disclosure statements required under the state's conflict-of-interest law.

"[Madigan] failed to report his spouse's interest in MNA Consulting on Schedule A-2 of his annual statement of economic interests for the 2001 calendar year, as well as his leaving-office statement," the stipulation says.

"[Madigan] is a sophisticated businessman with extensive experience in municipal affairs," it continues. "[He] could have been more diligent" in determining the scope of his disclosure obligations, especially in light of the fact that he knew his spouse's company was representing the San Diego Padres Baseball Club and Centre City Development Corporation with respect to the ballpark and redevelopment project.

Listed as "executive director" of the library foundation was James Lewis Bowers, 75, a fundraising professional who was executive vice president of Scripps Memorial Hospitals and president of the Scripps Memorial Hospital Foundation from 1977 until his retirement in 1993.

A La Jolla resident, member of the board of the San Diego Symphony, and certifiable member of La Jolla's social set, Bowers is a partner in Laurel. The restaurant, located on the corner of Laurel Street and Fifth Avenue near Balboa Park, caters to some of the city's wealthiest diners.

In the foundation's hands, according to Mayor Dick Murphy, was nothing less than the future of public libraries in San Diego. Book budgets were being cut, and patrons were having to make do with a decrepit downtown library and shorter hours there and at other branches. Still, the million-dollar payment to Dawe's foundation was crucial, according to Murphy.

Using the payment, the foundation was supposed to launch a campaign to raise at least $50 million from private corporations and wealthy philanthropists for construction of a new main library downtown and branches throughout the city.

"For the first time since the main library was built in 1954, we're making solid progress, not only for a new main library but a branch system that is a package that will really give San Diego one of the finest library systems anywhere," Murphy proclaimed prior to the July 2001 council meeting. "My belief is that the ballpark site is the best remaining option. Furthermore, we need to move forward."

Murphy was joined by Seventh District city councilman Jim Madaffer, who along with the mayor argued that the million-dollar contribution was essential to the city's library building efforts. "This is going to send a message to the philanthropic community that we're serious," Madaffer told the Union-Tribune the day before the vote. "We'd like to raise $40 million or $50 million."

According to the plan presented to the public at the July meeting and later documented in a so-called memorandum of understanding (MOU) between the city and the foundation, the city's contribution would represent seed money. Only a limited amount could be used for expenses. The rest would ultimately go back to the city's public library system.

"The Mayor and Council of the City recognize that a world-class Library System requires not only public monies, but also private support," says the preamble of the agreement between the city and the foundation that was to govern how the million dollars of public money would be spent.

"As evidence of the city's good-faith desire to secure a world-class Library System and to enable the Library Foundation to begin operations, the City agrees to provide $1 million to the Library Foundation."

The city's million-dollar payment came with a few restrictions and accounting requirements to protect the funds from misappropriation. "The Library Foundation shall secure an annual independent audit of its books and records for compliance with the requirements of this [memorandum of understanding]," it said. "The Library Foundation shall ensure that an annual independent audit report shall be prepared and submitted to the city."

The agreement also required that "from time to time during the Term [of the agreement], the Library Foundation shall submit to the City a written proposal for use of the City's Contribution for the Library Foundation's expenses. This proposal shall describe in detail the anticipated use of the City's Contribution."

Finally, it placed a cap on how much of the city's $1 million contribution could be used to cover the foundation's overhead. "The Library Foundation's expenses shall be payable first from Campaign funds, if available," the agreement says, referring to the proceeds of the foundation's anticipated fundraising appeal to the private philanthropists.

If that money was insufficient to cover the expenses, the agreement said, they could be paid from “City’s Contribution in an amount not to exceed $150,000. The City shall have no other obligation to pay the Library Foundation’s expenses.”

Thus did Mayor Murphy and the city council vote 9-0 to approve the agreement. “It’s time to move forward. The bottom line is a world-class city deserves a world-class library.” Added Madaffer, “This is finally, actually going to happen after years of false starts.”

But with little or no progress to report, the main-library matter was back before the council again on July 30, 2002, almost a year to the day after the original vote setting up the foundation. This time the council approved yet another version of the Murphy city-library plan, including the downtown main library. According to the mayor, the vote was “an opportunity for this council and the people of San Diego to provide a lasting legacy for future generations of San Diego.”

But financing details, which were supposed to include sales of municipal bonds as well as private contributions, were being left for later that year, Murphy said. Observed ex-councilwoman Judy McCarty after the meeting, “Tonight is the feel-good vote.” No mention was made of the library foundation or what it had done with the $1 million the council had given it the year before.

Then, last October Murphy scored a major coup when a state committee voted to give the city a $20 million grant, earmarked for the new main library. Before the vote, the Union-Tribune editorialized in favor of the grant and outlined how Murphy was then proposing to pay for the library proposal.

"Mayor Murphy's financing plan relies heavily on three separate bond sales, totaling $177.7 million, to pay for new construction," the editorial said. "City redevelopment funds would be tapped for another $42.9 million. An additional $21.7 million would come from developer fees, and federal community development block grant funds would make up another $8.8 million. Private donations and grants would account for $53.3 million.

"That is where the state

James Dawe

Library Construction and Renovation Board comes in. On Tuesday the six-member panel will award $110 million in Proposition 14 grants for libraries statewide. San Diego has applied for a maximum award of $20 million for its new central library.

"By approving the city's application, the library board would make an invaluable contribution to this region's quality of life because the funds quite simply would become the catalyst for San Diego libraries' entry into the information age."

In the months since it received the $20 million grant, however, the city has been hit with a blizzard of bad financial news. A federal criminal investigation of city financial practices has reportedly stalled issuance of any new municipal-bond debt. The state financial crisis has only added to the uncertainty.

Under the most recent plan, tentative details of which surfaced in May, a mix of redevelopment-agency money from the city-owned Centre City Development Corp. (CCDC), hotel taxes, and funds from a liability settlement with tobacco companies would be used, along with the $20 million state grant and $53 million in private donations to be raised by the library foundation. The $177 million of municipal-bond sales are reportedly now off the table. "CCDC is funding everything we need [for the library] for the next 12 months," Murphy was quoted by the Union-Tribune as saying.

But library backers fear that the latest plan is only an election-year ploy to get Murphy past the November election, in which he faces a challenge by county supervisor Ron Roberts, who wants to stall the downtown-library proposal. The skeptics argue that Murphy's previous failures to produce on his downtown-library pledge are strong evidence that he is not dedicated to its construction and would, if reelected, ultimately back away from the latest financing scheme. Murphy chief of staff John Kern did not return phone calls.

All of which makes the fate of that $1 million city contribution to the library foundation of special interest.

City officials and foundation boardmembers have failed to respond to repeated telephone requests for information about how the $1 million has been spent. The San Diego Foundation, to which the funds were turned over for management and "safekeeping" in the fall of 2001, has refused to provide any information on the status of the money, referring all questions to Library Foundation attorney and executive director Bowers and Dawe.

Contacted by phone at the multimillion-dollar home on El Paseo Grande in La Jolla where he lives, Bowers, who apparently has collected sizable fees from the foundation, also declined comment, saying that only Dawe would speak for the organization. Katie Sullivan, a library activist from Rancho Bernardo who said she joined the foundation board "earlier this year," also refused to talk about its financial position or anything else about the foundation's activities, referring a caller to Dawe and Bowers. Madigan, too, has remained mum.

Reached at his downtown law office over a month

ago, Dawe initially said he would produce a full accounting of the fund's operation. "I need to speak to Bowers first," said Dawe. "I'm trying to find him now." But Dawe did not phone back as promised and subsequently failed to return numerous phone calls seeking the information he had pledged to provide.

Compounding the difficulty in attempting to piece together the activities of the foundation and the fate of the million-dollar city contribution, city officials have been slow to release documents and accounting records requested under provisions of the California Public Records Act.

In the eight weeks since the documents were first requested, the city has produced only a small number of the records sought. In one case, e-mails written by city librarian Anna Tartar that were clearly relevant were withheld. Later, a reference to them was found in another document, and they were expressly requested.

The few records that have been turned over suggest that city officials were extremely lax, if not criminally negligent, in failing to hold the library foundation to its obligations under the contract.

The records show that on May 9, 2002, Dawe sent a hand-delivered letter to deputy city manager Bruce Herring requesting the city's million-dollar contribution. A city check in that amount, dated June 10, 2002, was made out to the library foundation and deposited in a fund run by the San Diego Foundation.

In a letter dated November 7, 2002, to Herring, Dawe discussed a September 27 meeting the pair had with "Jim Bowers, consultant for the San Diego Library Foundation." The purpose of the meeting, according to the letter, was "to review the Foundation's proposed maximum use of funds for the Library Foundation expenses—including the City Contribution—for the next 12 months. Please note that the Foundation Board members are committed to controlling costs during the campaign as to come in below the proposed maximum use funds described in the attachment."

The attachment, titled "Preliminary Plan," has never been made available to the public. In apparent violation of the $150,000 expense cap imposed by the city's memorandum of understanding, the document itemized a total of $629,000 in foundation expenses projected to occur over a "one-year plan."

Of that, $195,000 was allocated to "Salaries and Benefits (Executive Director/Administrative Asst.)," $70,000 for "consulting services," $160,000 for "Publications and Public Relations," including $45,000 for "Agency services," $50,000 for "Banners," and $25,000 for "video," $25,000 for "organizational meetings," $15,000 for "office equipment and furnishings," and $15,000 for "board related activities."

Whether or not Herring or others on the city manager's staff signed off on the spending plan is not documented in the material turned over by the city. Herring did not return phone calls. But according to a series of documents on foundation letterhead, each labeled "Financial Report," the foundation quickly began spending down the city's contribution.

During the period from January 1, 2002, through December 31, 2002, according to the documents, the foundation spent $8515 for "Foundation Support" and $66,242.18 on "Charitable Expenses." Another expense, labeled "Beginning Distributable Balance on January 1, 2002," was listed as $11,950. The fund closed out the year with $920,123.89, which included $6832.66 in "Earnings on Investment Activity."

The next quarter, from January 1, 2003, through March 31, 2003, the foundation report says it spent $3632.82 for "foundation support" and $72,269.10 for "charitable expenses." It earned just $2061.07 on "Investment activity," ending the quarter with $846,283. A similar pattern prevailed through the next three quarters. Nowhere in the documents provided by the city is any clue to who received the money or details as to how it was spent.

By the fourth quarter, ending on December 31,

2003, the remaining balance of the taxpayers' million-dollar contribution to the library foundation was down to $564,187.99. During 2003, a total of $12,907 worth of "foundation support" and $348,665.65 of "charitable expenses" had been paid out. Just $5636.77 of "investment activity" earnings on the balance were paid in during the entire year, according to the document.

According to an undated document provided by the city, the library foundation provided an "income report" listing two contributions it was apparently claiming credit for: $3.5 million from the "Hervey Family" for construction of the Skyline Hills Library, and $100,000 from the "Reuben H. Fleet Fnd. Fund" for the Point Loma Library. The document also listed the city's million-dollar contribution, as well as the $5636.77 it earned on that money. The statement concluded that "Total Income" of the foundation was $4,605,647.56.

Another undated onepage foundation document turned over by the city, entitled "San Diego Public Library Foundation Contributions and Goals," lists a "Goal of $53 million from 'other than City' funds." The document goes on to itemize "2002-03 commitments" of $43 million, including $5.35 million for "Logan Heights," $5.7 million for "Point Loma," $5.2 million for "La Jolla," $3.5 million for "Skyline-Hervey Family," $2.5 million "Skyline-Foundation pledge," and $20 million for "New Main."

The document also lists an "additional" $10 million for "New Main" in "March 04," another "additional" $5 million for "New Main" in "June 04," and an "additional" $5 million for "New Main and Branches" in "December 04." The document provided no other details.

With city officials remaining mum and documents scarce, it is difficult to know whether they were satisfied with the foundation's representation of its fundraising performance. Former city libraries development director William Sannwald, who was recently forced into retirement during a downsizing move, says that in his estimation the library foundation played only a minimal role, if any, in obtaining the Hervey money for Point Loma and Skyline.

In fact, the record shows that the $5 million Hervey contribution to the Point Loma Library, listed on foundation documents among "2002-03 commitments," was officially announced in February 2001, about two months before the foundation was incorporated and 16 months before it received the city's million dollars. Another contribution claimed in part by the foundation — $1 million from Harle G. Montgomery for the La Jolla Library — was first reported in June, 2001 by Union-Tribune society writer Burl Stiff. The Jacobs family contribution of $3.5 million for the La Jolla branch had also been announced well before the June 2001 groundbreaking, about a year before the city issued its check to the foundation.

The biggest contribution claimed by the foundation in pursuit of its $53 million goal, the $20 million for the "New Main" library, is not even from a private source. Instead it is a grant from the State of California.

One sign that city auditors began to raise questions about the library foundation's excessive expenditures and accounting practices is contained in an e-mail dated last December 11 from assistant city auditor Phil Phillips to city librarian Anna Tatar. The subject was "Library Foundation Funds." The e-mail says, "Would you please provide me with the status of obtaining the required financial status reports regarding the $1 million we provided as seed money for the Library system's donation campaign. As we had discussed previously, it is important that this be obtained as soon as possible."

Apparently Tatar did not reply, because Phillips e-mailed again, this time on February 2 of this year, renewing his request for the information. "Have you received the required reports yet? If not, I will seriously need to discuss scheduling of an audit of use of the funds and to determine the remaining balance. I will also be discussing these funds with Lisa in relationship to the budget bowl.”

The same day, according to the records released by the city, Tatar replied to Phillips via e-mail, saying, “I will hand deliver the report to you tomorrow afternoon. I am meeting with Jim Bowers, the staff member who put the report together. Thanks for your patience.”

Three days later, on February 5, Phillips e-mailed Tatar. The subject was “Library Foundation Financial Reports.”

“I will be submitting the provided reports to our internal audit division to review for inconsistencies, potential noncompliance and violation of the terms of the MOU,” wrote Phillips.

“A few immediate questions:

“1. Did they provide you with the required independent audit for '03?”

“2. Did they provide statements for activity prior to 1/1/03?”

“3. Did they get pre-approval of the budget as required? Are you familiar with the $150,000 cap on expending the City’s contribution?”

“4. What is the line item on the fund activity statement ‘Charitable Expenses.’ There is no reference to this in the MOU.”

“5. Did they provide you with statements and an audit report for the campaign funds, if any [were] actually received [?]”

Bowers apparently responded to the request by forwarding to Tatar a letter dated February 26 of this year from Duane Drake, chief financial officer of the San Diego Foundation, which was managing the library foundation’s money. The library account had never been separately audited by the San Diego Foundation, Drake acknowledged.

Then he added, “In response to the questions regarding budget approvals and the $150,000 cap on expending the City’s contribution outlined in the MOU, we were not aware that there was a MOU between the City and the San Diego Public Library Foundation, a separate legal entity from the San Diego Foundation.

"Therefore we were unaware of the conditions mentioned above. We did require the fund's advisor to submit a budget to the San Diego Foundation for its board approval, and we pay invoices from the fund only with the written approval of the fund advisor or you as the person responsible for the Library foundation's day-to-day operations."

A month later, on April 29, library-foundation chairman Dawe wrote a letter to Bruce Herring, the deputy city manager, which memorialized the results of a March 1 meeting between Dawe, Herring, library-foundation board member Mary Walshok, and executive director Bowers. In the letter, Dawe provided his version as to why the foundation had so greatly exceeded the $150,000 cap on expenses.

"In response to the Auditor's question regarding the $150,000 amount in paragraph 1.12.1.2 of the Memorandum of Understanding, this letter is to confirm that we have kept you informed in connection with our preparation of budgets and have expended additional monies based upon our expanded support of the San Diego Public Library System—for example, our support of the successful efforts to obtain Proposition 14 funds for the Logan Heights Branch and the Main Library."

In response to questions about the low return being provided by the San Diego Foundation on the remainder of the million dollars it had on deposit, Dawe wrote, "We will request that the San Diego Foundation Transfer some of the City Contribution into Fund B." An attachment provided by the San Diego Foundation showed that "Pool A," where the money had been previously kept, was a straight money-market fund, earning returns of less than one percent as of December 2003. "Pool B," said to have a small equity exposure, was said to be producing returns of about 4 percent at the end of 2003. No mention was made of the "charitable expense" overhead that the San Diego Foundation was charging.

"If you have any questions regarding this approach or this letter, please contact me."

As of press time, Dawe's letter was the most recently dated document provided by the city; no city response to Dawe's assertion that the $150,000 spending cap could be changed at will by the library foundation has been made available. Nor have any accounting documents describing the foundation's operations over the previous two months of this year been furnished.

lier this week, Tatar said that she would provide no further information or documents concerning the foundation's finances or operations beyond those furnished by the city attorney's office. She defended the foundation, echoing its claim that Bowers had assisted the city in getting the $20 million state grant. She added, "It takes time to lay the groundwork" for obtaining private philanthropic contributions.

The city attorney's office was also less than forthcoming regarding a request for detailed financial documents made under the state's public records act. In an e-mail last Friday to William Sauer, an attorney for the Reader, deputy city attorney Catherine Bradley wrote, "Your request on June 9, 2004, for any emails, correspondence, or written documents in the possession of the city or Ms. Tatar that deal with the disposition, expenditure, audit or other use of those library funds' is overbroad and does not identify a specific record. As you know, we are not required to search every document in the City for a possible responsive document."

Less than two weeks ago, the foundation issued a news release announcing that two new members had joined its board of directors: Barbara Bry, a former Los Angeles Times reporter who was once married to La Jolla developer Patrick Kruer, and Judith Harris, another La Jolla socialite. No mention was made of former director Michael Madigan, the ethics-commission-sanctioned developer who apparently has been dropped from the board.

Harris is frequently mentioned in Burl Stiff's Union-Tribune society column, most recently on April 13, when she was pictured beside U-T publisher David Copley at a party in his suite at the downtown baseball stadium.

The press release goes on to maintain that "the Foundation's charge is to raise $53 million in non-city funds to support the program." That is at variance with the group's memorandum of understanding, which calls for it to raise "private support" for the library plan.

Without mentioning the taxpayers' $1 million contribution or its fate, the release said, "The foundation, formed in 2002, already partnered with the City Library administration to win a $20 million grant of state Proposition 14 funds for the new main library last November."

The release also takes credit, in part, for raising funds that others—including former city library development chief William Sannwald—say the founation had little or nothing to do with.

"Additionally, thanks to the cooperative efforts of branch friends and supporters, the Library administration, and the Foundation, a total of $17 million in private contributions already has been received, including $8.5 million from the family of the late James Edgar and Jean Jessop Hervey, $3.5 million from Irwin and Joan Jacobs, and $1 million from Harle Garth Montgomery."

City librarian Tatar is quoted as saying, "The Foundation's efforts are vital for our library system to grow and expand. Most major cities have benefited from separate library foundations and we are pleased that San Diego is doing so, as well."

The release concluded by quoting Dawe as saying, "We are well on the way to achieving our goal and hope to have additional, major announcements in the very near future. It was important that we first create a Board of Directors including many well-regarded and recognized community leaders. That done, we can move on to the next critical steps." ■

ROCKY ROAD SUPREMACY

MY MOTHER, WITH OPRAH AND WEIGHT WATCHERS BY HER SIDE, WENT ON A MASSACRE OF ALL FOODS FATTENING.

By the time I had reached five years old, I had settled on a menu. I spent mornings throwing Cheerios into the air like confetti. Noon was spent fingerpainting peanut butter and jelly on Wonder Bread canvas. I plunged fish sticks into puddles of catsup on my dinner plate, and yogurt-covered raisins were what I lived for. I was content opening my pink Princess Barbie lunchbox every day and seeing the same sandwich. It was familiar and comforting.

One day, however, my taste for predictable lunchtime fare changed; my friend Curtis had opened his lunchbox, and sitting next to his Thermos was a peanut butter and marshmallow cream sandwich. I never imagined anything could be better than the PB&J. From the moment I discovered marshmallow cream, I knew that I had to broaden my taste in food. There were so many flavors and spices and textures to experience.

My attempt at enlightenment continued with a family favorite: Mexican food. My parents toted a brown paper bag over to the table and plopped a plate of rolled tacos down in front of me. I didn't know where to begin. The tacos were hidden beneath mounds of crumbled cheese. When compared with a PB&J sandwich, which was so simple and easy to eat, the rolled tacos lacked convenience. Biting into the crisp, rolled tortillas was even worse; while PB&J sandwiches seemed to melt as I bit into them, biting into a rolled taco was like eating splinters. To top off the meal, the tacos were covered in a green substance that was chunky and mushy at the same time. How could anyone eat guacamole? Unlike peanut butter and jelly, which was the perfect marriage of textures, the ingredients in guacamole seemed incompatible. Mixing tomatoes and onions with gooey avocado reminded me of the pies that Curtis and I would make in our back yards by combining mud, leaves, and rocks in our moms' mixing bowls. Rolled tacos were too much for me to handle. My enlightenment began and ended with Mexican food.

Well, it didn't end, but it was postponed for nine years. I never appreciated Mexican food until I began attending high school at El Capitan. I've learned that after a busy day of classes, eating rolled tacos from any of the six to ten nearby Mexican restaurants is convenient and guacamole is actually a harmonious mix of ingredients. I'll take Mexican food over PB&J any day.

— Megan Burks,
El Capitan H.S.

When I was little, my parents would tell me that I could not leave the dinner table until my plate was clean. And, believe me, I was a picky little girl. I didn't want to eat a lot of foods — mainly vegetables. The food I least wanted to eat was peas, any preparation of peas — it didn't matter. I hated peas. So, instead of chewing and swallowing them, which would have taken hours, I would plug my nose and swallow them whole. It still took a while, because rolling peas down your throat isn't the easiest thing in the world; but it took a shorter amount of time than chewing and swallowing them.

The worst thing about them was the juice. If the pea juice touched any of the other foods on my plate, it made them taste funny...like peas. I didn't want that, so I tried to keep the peas as separated from the rest of the food as possible, which was kind of hard if you had a full plate.

Now that I am 16 years old, my parents do not have to tell me to eat everything on my plate as much as they used to. It isn't a problem anymore because we don't eat peas very often. Plus, now I am allowed to put my food on my plate instead of my parents doing it for me. So, basically, I feel the same way about peas as I did back then — I still don't like them at all.

Sunday, for many, means waking up early for church. For me, it means the chance to savor the Chinese's greatest creation: dim sum. Since I was little, I anticipated dim sum on Sundays. The thought of rice cakes and shrimp dumplings was enough to get my mouth watering.

One day, to my astonishment, a new dish was brought to my attention — chicken feet. I was six years old at the time. All I understood about chickens was that they pranced around in the dirt and made amusing noises. That was all I needed to know. My parents insisted that chicken feet are a delicacy, but the thought of eating things that once scurried across the yard made my empty stomach feel full. As I stared at the chicken feet in front of me, I realized I had three options: (1) eat the chicken feet and feel sick for the next few hours; (2) hide it in my napkin; or (3) help the poor chicken feet across the table onto my brother's plate.

I decided to give the chicken feet to my brother. I thought I'd waited until my parents were immersed in conversation, but they caught me as I tried to get the chicken feet onto his plate. My parents were disappointed, but they understood that the sight of chicken feet could be appalling to any six-year-old. For years, my parents persisted in emphasizing the succulence of chicken feet. I found ways to avoid them, whether it meant dropping it on the floor or hiding it under my dress.

Now, at 15, I can proudly declare that I have tried chicken feet. However, they will never compare to the supremacy of rocky road ice cream.

go on a diet, everyone goes on a diet. My mother, with Oprah, Weight Watchers, and about a million books by her side, went on a massacre of all foods fattening in our home. Ice cream, chips — anything that was not “nonfat” was nonexistent, including sugared cereal.

As it is for most ten-year-olds, to me cereal was everything. You want the good stuff advertised in between your favorite cartoons, the kinds with the candy-bar taste, marshmallows, sugar coating; anything unhealthy and tasty. My mother banned all purchasing and consumption of sugar cereal, except for one day of the week.

On Wednesdays, I would wake up with a smile on my face, run down the stairs, and slide into the kitchen. I'd fill the bowl as high as I could with Lucky Charms, Rice Krispies Treats Cereal, Froot Loops, Apple Jacks, whatever. It did not matter. As long as it had a commercial with some outrageous cartoon character, it was fine for my taste buds. Every other day of the week was a different story.

It's called Kashi. You can buy it at most health-food stores, and it comes in an assortment of equally torturous varieties. Gone were the bright colors and sweet tastes, replaced by shades of brown and grains. I would groan every day I had to eat it, as my mom yelled to me from the living room, “It's good!”

“Good?” Good to her was zero grams of fat, sugar, and calories. I associated good with taste; she associated good with how many points she had to tally according to her Weight Watchers book. I ate Kashi for breakfast six days a week, with one day to remember what I was missing and what the entire world was enjoying.

Of course, I had tricks — two, in fact: the trash can and garbage disposal. The trash can was the most efficient, as long as none of the parental units were within the vicinity; the garbage disposal was useful only when they were far enough away not to hear the sweet sound of destruction.

Today is a different story. I still eat the Kashi, but I enjoy it. I also sympathize with my mother, as my new choice to not eat meat has affected the entire family's menu. Without meat, I look to other areas for nutrition. As it turns out, Kashi is nutritious; and, with a banana and soy milk, it is tasty, too...for a more mature palate, that is.

I recall one incident that occurred when I was maybe eight in which I displayed my stubbornness. It was a fine night, and my mom was serving dinner. I forgot what dish it was, but I am certain that it contained carrots. After handing me my plate, I separated the carrots from the meat. My mother scolded me and ordered me to eat the carrots. I refused. I remember telling her that I did not like carrots and that I shouldn't be forced to eat something I did not see as appetizing. She said, "They're good for your eyes and skin. Now go eat them."

Seeing how pointless it was to argue with an adult, I came up with a scheme. I pretended to enjoy the carrots; I moved my mouth to pretend I was masticating the most enjoyable of vegetables. I excused myself every five minutes or so and was quiet throughout the meal. I managed to maintain my ideal-daughter image without compromise. Whenever there was a certain type of food that my parents would ask me to eat when I'd rather not, I'd put another trick into use...the most famous being the "wiping" of my mouth with a napkin.

I had no understanding as to why my parents were asking me to eat my vegetables every day, drink milk, go to sleep early, and avoid watching too much television. As a kid, I saw it as maltreatment. Now that I'm older, I realize that my parents — who were willing to bribe me with a bar of chocolate or ice cream so that I'd eat my carrots — were ensuring my good health.

When I was about six years old, I sat at the dinner table with my visiting grandparents. That's the first time I remember eating Lebanese food. My family is of Lebanese descent, so on holidays they spend hours in the kitchen. When my grandma would come to visit from New York, the event got even crazier. Nobody was allowed in the kitchen, and if you were caught taking a peek at the feast to be devoured that night, before it was ready...well, let's say you hoped you did not get caught.

Getting back to that dinner approximately 11 years ago...being only six, I didn't have a choice in the dinner selection, so I had to eat what was made. According to my family, I liked Lebanese food when I was between two and five, but then, suddenly, I did not. I remember stuffed grape leaves as the food my family was trying to "force-feed" me. (Stuffed grape leaves are filled with meat and rice and cooked in lemon juice.) Napkins were my main weapon against stuffed grape leaves. I would cut the food up and when everybody was looking somewhere else, I would stash about half of it in my napkin and say I was full. I do not know if my brother sympathized with me or not, but somehow I never got caught and he never told anybody.

Now, stuffed grape leaves are one of my favorite foods. I participate in the all-day cookfest with my mom, and I plan to attend culinary school. I can only thank my grandma and mother for forcing such a broad palette of foods before me. I look back on those days when I did not eat Lebanese food and wonder why I wouldn't. I wonder if my kids will one day rebel against the foods I prepare for them...but even if they do, hopefully they will look back on it someday and thank me.

THE MARATHONS OF '46: THE BATTLE OF SAN PASQUAL

Felicita first saw the lances the day she got her name. She lived in the San Pasqual Valley, "the land of this life." Her father, Panto, was chief of a Kumeyaay village. Tule and adobe huts, arranged around a small plaza, "stood thick on either side of the river." Natives raised cattle, grew corn, melons, and grains and built a dam. "There was food for all" and "many times of rejoicing."

When she was 12, a man in brown came from the mission with soldiers. Their eight-foot-long, steel-tipped lances frightened the women and children, who ran into the hills. "These men counted our lives of little worth, and we feared them."

The man in brown said he could save their spirits with water. "Our mothers were afraid to have the strange man touch us, but they feared more the soldiers' lances." The Kumeyaay were herded to the House of Willow Boughs, where the man stood near a bowl.

"I name thee Felicita," he said, as he touched me with water, and that is how I gained my name."

Years later, the lancers returned. "We ran into the hills as before to wait until they passed, but they did not pass."

Andres Pico's Californian army commandeered the village around the fourth of December, 1846. In a pounding rain, soldiers slaughtered the Indians' cattle. The rain was so severe, Pico let the Indians cram into unoccupied huts. Felicita: "There were few houses left for so many, and little food, but we said nothing."

Before dawn on December 6, villagers heard coyote-like howls from across the valley. Felicita ran outside. Through a low mist she made out ghostlike figures coming down the narrow mountain pass. "As they drew nearer, we saw that they too were soldiers, wearing coats of blue."

General Stephen Watts Kearny's "Army of the West" had straggled 2000 miles from Fort Leavenworth, Kansas. The day before in the Ballena Valley, 101 "wet to the skin" dragoons joined with Captain Archibald Gillespie and 39 mountain men from San Diego. Kearny didn't know the Californians' strength. Gillespie and Kit Carson, Kearny's chief scout, said no matter: their Spanish-speaking enemy would run from a fight.

Pico had warnings of an army headed west. The night before, Lt. Thomas Hammond bungled surveillance of Pico's camp, leaving a blue coat behind. Although it signaled American military nearby, Pico still didn't think a battle would result. Like Kearny, who had ordered 200 dragoons back to Santa Fe, Pico had cut his force in half, sending 75 to Rancho El Cajon to find Gillespie.

Most of Pico's recruits were rancheros, not trained soldiers. They had 30 firearms, at most, and no heavy artillery. But they were expert horsemen. In hand-to-hand combat — what Pico called a pura arma blanca — their skills with lance and reata (a bolo-like whip) could prevail.

Kearny's troops had been on the move, without breakfast, since two a.m. The officers rode "half-broken" Californian horses; the rest, "broken-down" mules. Lieutenant W.H. Emory called them "the most tattered and ill-fed detachment of men that ever the United States mustered under her colors." They traveled an old cart path nine miles to the pass, a steep, mudslick ravine. By then most of their breechloading Hall carbines and Waters single-shot pistols were too cold to fire.

They descended in darkness, the animals tentative on rocky terrain. Captain Abraham Johnston's 12-man advance guard led the way. Their task: capture Pico's horses. When Johnston's men reached the valley floor, from back up the hill Kearny shouted "trot." But Johnston heard "charge!" Though most of the 40-dragon main force was still inching down the slope, Johnston taunted the distant bonfires with his saber, bellowed something undecipherable, and spurred his horse's flank.

Hearing the shouts, a Californian fired a warning. "To arms!" Pico yelled. His men scrambled to the corral, saddled and mounted their horses. They took position at a gully just east of the village. Pico's command: "one shot, then the lance."

The Kumeyaay climbed up the hillside, hiding behind rocks and brush. At first, Felicita remembered, "Only a few American soldiers came down the mountain, and there were many Mexicans, so the battle went hard."

When the first Americans rode into range,

Stephen Watts Kearny

the Californians volleyed a "sheet of fire."

Far ahead of the main force, Johnston's men sprinted out of the mist toward puffs of smoke. As dull musket pops echoed through the hills, Leandro Osuna took careful aim with his flintlock and fired. Johnston's cap flipped backward. He slumped off his horse, a bloody, nickel-sized hole in the forehead.

A second dragoon toppled.

Kit Carson rode with the advance guard. A hundred yards from the enemy, the horse tumbled, "threw me, and my rifle was broken into two pieces." Almost trampled by the main force, arriving in small clusters, Carson crawled to safety. He took the dead dragoon's gun and cartridge box and "joined in the melee."

John C. Fremont said Carson had "quick and complete perception, taking in at a glance

QUOTATIONS:

1. John S. Griffin: "The first charge was a mistake on the part of Capt. Johnston, the second on the part of Capt. Moore."

2. Dwight L. Clarke: "an unnamed Irish dragoon said it would have been well if Kearny's wounds

'had killed him...it was a disgrace because if he had waited for daylight, no man would have suffered; they would have seen how to defend themselves.'"

3. John S. Griffin: "This was an action where decidedly more courage than conduct was showed."

the advantages as well as the chances for defeat.” Carson was as good a horseman as the best Californian. Was his fall an accident, or self-preservation?

Dr. John S. Griffin rode into gunfire on a “jaded” mule: “the balls whistled about most infernally for a while, but the light was not sufficient to distinguish a line of the Enemy...by this time we were very disordered.”

From the hillside, the battle resembled an upside-down T: the stem, a long stampede of bluecoats; the crossbar, Pico’s wide phalanx of light horsemen. When the number of soldiers coming toward them grew, the Californians bolted west.

A lone boy lingered. Such “a prisoner of fear,” writes Antonio Osio, Francisco Lara couldn’t move. As Americans rode past, “some shot and others stabbed him,” then “boasted about the heinous murder” while chasing after Pico.

Felicita watched the Californians dash west, then “wait behind a hill” (site of the San Pasqual Battlefield Historical Monument). “Soon we saw the Americans moving down the valley. When they came near the place where the Mexicans were hiding, there was more fighting. The mules the Americans rode were frightened and ran all through the willows by the river. After them rode the Mexicans on their swift horses...we trembled as we watched.”

Years later, Pico said he didn’t want to “risk a fight.” But Kearny’s army became so spread out, he couldn’t “resist the temptation.” He ordered his men to lower lances and ambush the enemy as they rode past the rocky hiding place.

Led by Captain Benjamin Moore, who thought Pico was retreating, American officers ran ahead on fresh horses. Dragoons on mules lagged behind. From the mountain pass to Pico’s new position, Kearny’s soldiers stretched over a mile and a half.

Moore ran ahead of the officers.

Pico trotted out to engage him. Both fired and missed, then slashed at each other with sabers. In that instant Leandro Osuna and Dionisio Alipas speared Moore. He fell. Thomas Sanchez — future Los Angeles County sheriff—fired point-blank at Moore’s heart. Others lanced the body 14 times.

Chief Panto said, “Nothing is more talked of still...than the bravery of this officer.” Californians remembered him as “el valiente Morin” (“the valiant Moore”)—a lone rider charging the lancer horde.

“For God’s sake, men, come up,” yelled Moore’s brother-in-law, Lt. Hammond, the second to arrive. A reata whip-wrap around the neck unhorsed him. From behind, a lancer jabbed him between the eighth and ninth ribs. Hammond died two hours later.

Pico’s men killed Hammond with an old strategy. Many had used reatas and lances to rid the region of grizzly bears. For the next fifteen minutes, the tactic — bolo-yank a rider down, spear him in the kidneys — made San Pasqual the bloodiest battle in California history.

Kearny’s men found their wet cartridges wouldn’t fire. Plus, several heavy Ames sabers had rusted in scabbards from disuse. So they swung rifles like clubs. Griffin: the enemy “rallied and came at us like devils with their lances...our advance was perfectly at their mercy.”

An American survivor recalled that, when he rounded the point, he saw “a million people making for us. They proved to be about 400” — actually 75, but to a surprised dragoon they must have seemed legion.

As Kearny jostled with one, a second Californian hacked at the 52-year-old General. A hemorrhage spurted from his upper arm. Before Lt. Emory could chase the assailant away, another lanza groin-pierced Kearny “in the nates.”

Emory said Kearny “defended himself valiantly and was as calm as a clock.”

Fleeing to the rear, Kearny ordered a retreat. But Captain Henry Smith Turner shouted, “No. Never, men! Turn your backs” and “you will be all cut down.”

Juan Mariano earned a battlefield promotion for bravery: the 23-year-old from San Gabriel became Juan Lobo (“the wolf”). Writes Arthur Woodward: Mariano “led the Californians even better than Pico.”

Outnumbering their enemy, many of Pico’s men dismounted, plundered the spoils of the fallen, and mutilated the bodies.

Amid neighs and brays and clangs of steel, Pico urged Californians to spare wounded bluecoats’ lives. They were out of the fight, he said, that was enough. But butchery prevailed.

Californians recognized Archibald Gillespie, despised for his vicious treatment of Los Angelinos: “Four lances darted at me instantly.” He parried them, then two more. Another hooked his collar and flung him down. When Gillespie tried to rise, blond-haired Francisco Higuera punctured a lung. A second rider swiped at Gillespie’s face, “cutting my upper lip” and breaking a front tooth. The stallion leaped over the Americano.

Convinced he inflicted a mortal wound, Higuera grabbed Gillespie’s silver-studded bridle and saddle and rode off.

Gillespie played dead and watched “the best men of this command” riddled “in unequal combat.” Later he returned to the rear.

His spear-tip bloody to its red, green, and white pen-non, Captain Pablo Vejar left the field for a breather. Four dragoons chased him up an arroyo. His horse tripped on a badger hole. A spur caught a cinch, pulling the horse over him. Dragoon bullets struck so close they kicked sand in Vejar’s face.

Vejar’s horse tried to stand. Volunteers Philip Crosthwaite and Patitoux (a.k.a. “Beatitude”) saw him squirm underneath. Patitoux fired. “The ball passed so close to his lips it caused him pain but drew no blood” (Woodward). They took Vejar prisoner. Crosthwaite later married Vejar’s second cousin, Maria Lopez.

Alliances blurred in the dust, haze, and slow blink of sunrise. Gillespie’s volunteers didn’t wear uniforms. Often confused for the enemy, they dodged lances and American rifle butts whistling at their skulls.

A mule team dragged one of Kearny’s mountain howitzers to the battlefield. The animals froze. Three frantic men tugged at the stubborn lead mule. Gabriel Garcia and Francisco Higuera killed the driver, Henry Booker, and “desperately” wounded the others. Garcia shot the mule. They looped reatas around the howitzer and towed it away.

Californians whooped as the bronze trophy bounced across the plain. The sound of the American Sutter Gun—a forty-inch four-pounder spitting grapeshot over the fray—stopped the battle cold.

Not wanting to face cannon fire, Pico ordered a retreat. Californians withdrew to the southwest, 11 wounded and young Lara dead in the 30-minute fight. Casimiro Rubio died later at San Juan Capistrano.

Fewer than 50 Americans saw action. As day dawned, no one could tell the living from the slain. Among the few unscathed, Captain Turner had three slashes across his coat. The rest lay in crimson heaps. "Poor fellows," wrote Turner, "but a few hours before without a presentiment of what so soon was to be their fate."

Each suffered two to ten lancements (Dr. Griffin estimated an average of three "slots" per man). Eighteen died on the battlefield, four others in the days to come.

The village became a hospital. In his Quarterly Report,

Griffin wrote that all 17 wounded and most of the dead "were killed or wounded by the lances; several healed but generally suppurred, and in some instances formed extensive abscesses."

Because the Californians fled the field, Kearny claimed victory.

Pico claimed victory over "a force of 200 Americans."

Felicita: "As the hours passed, we crept nearer and nearer to the valley. There was little shooting, so we were not afraid of the bullets."

At first she welcomed the newcomers: "the Mexicans had not been good to the Indians, so we were not sorry to see the new soldiers come against them." But white people brought new "sorrows." In "after years," she realized "the land of this life" would be no more. ■

A PRACTICAL GUIDE

1) IF SOMETHING ABOUT YOUR WIFE BOTHERS YOU, SPEAK RIGHT UP!

There's really no good reason why your wife can't be better in every way, if only she would try harder. Scrutinize her aloud on a daily basis. Don't overlook anything. Consolidate the most desirable qualities of every woman you have ever met, seen, or imagined, and measure her against that ideal. Physical flaws are particularly potent. When she orders something fattening in a restaurant, make a face. Then follow it up with a witty sarcasm as soon as the waiter's out of earshot. If there's nothing about her body to criticize — if she's one of those women who spend more on her personal trainer than the gross national product of Uzbekistan — point out other women you find attractive whenever you're in public together. At home, use TV shows and fashion magazines. Pick women with completely different body types. If your wife's tall and slender, go for short ones on the chubby side. If she's blonde, mention in passing that you've always had a thing for redheads.

Character flaws are good, too, although nobody really cares that much about character anymore. Sure, happiness is still important to people, but everybody knows there's no getting it these days without money, fame, power, and beauty — or at least three out of the four. Still, if she's not overly generous or kind, mention it frequently. Maybe she had some sort of childhood religious training that still makes her feel guilty. Plug into it whenever the opportunity arises. What has she done lately to stamp out world hunger? Has she made a truly sincere effort to save the Amazon rainforest? Think of the issues dear to her heart, then nail her on them.

Another great technique is to praise people you know she doesn't like. Contradict her when she says something negative about them. If she's got a running argument, especially with a member of her family, take the other person's side. Present this in the context of being objective and reasonable and helping her to see the truth.

Money's always a good issue. And it's double-pronged. One prong is how much she makes (warning: do not use this prong if she makes more than you). Slighting comments about her career prospects, while effective, are rarely as good as slighting comments about her actual salary. "You don't make enough to pay for your gas" is a tried-and-true standard, but, if that's too obviously hyperbolic (or she commutes by train), for "gas" you can substitute "wardrobe" or "the day care," or, best of all, "lunch out." Can you hear the little snap in that sentence? "You don't make enough to pay for lunch out." Practice saying it in front of the mirror with a dismissive sneer that will remind her of her dad.

Let's not forget this is the 21st Century. We're smack-dab in a two-earner-income economy, and by this time your wife knows she should be Having It All, so if you do have kids, don't let it temper your carping. Contrast her cooking and housekeeping to your mother's when you go out to celebrate her promotions. Remember, every mother is terrified that she's a bad mother. The teeniest suggestion can send an otherwise well-adjusted woman into paroxysms of guilt, which can then be manipulated to get something you want.

The other money-prong, of course, is how much she spends. This should not be a problem, because no doubt she actually does spend too much. Certainly, hit the big-ticket items with all you've got, including her wardrobe for work.

It goes without saying that, whatever means you employ, you should stop talking to your wife about anything of emotional significance as soon as you are married. If you don't have a TV in the dining room, read a newspaper during your meals at home together. When through careless lack of foresight you find yourself face to face with her with no distraction or impediment to intimacy, discuss practical matters only. When she starts to tell you about something that happened at work or a problem a friend of hers is having, ask if she thinks now would be a good time to replace the gutters. A movie together will not be damagingly intimate as long as you disagree with everything she says about it afterward. Try to draw connections between her opinions about the movie and her poor ethical judgment and pervasive bad taste.

Perhaps you were an active couple before you were married —

But radical self-sacrifice like this is rarely necessary. Just insist on doing what you want to do and don't consult her beforehand about plans. When possible, leave her home alone. When she suggests doing something together, whatever it is, make that same face you made when she ordered

This is at the heart of the matter, of course. Absolutely key. I hardly know where to begin; there are so many great things to do. refuse it when it's offered. Never make a sexual overture until your wife actually does have a headache or is at least dead tired at the end of a day in which she has received some shattering news. A really nasty yeast infection can also be very good. Kidney stones: excellent. Almost any biopsy that's gynecological. A bad flu may serve nicely, although after it has peaked some women may surprise you, so be careful on day three or four. do it. Think of creative ones yourself. It depends upon how she makes her request. A sincere statement like "I'd like to make love to you tonight" can best be parried with a big guffaw. Doubling over and falling off your chair with mirth can be an enhancement if you're an expressive person ordinarily. However, never say or do anything you're personally uncomfortable with. In intimate matters, especially, it's a question of personal style.

The main thing is to blame your refusal to have sex on her. This is a subtle rhetorical trick that takes years to perfect, and you probably should not try it if you're still on your first marriage or your wife is a lawyer or debate coach. But blame is always a valuable tool, even when clumsily employed. "You never want me when I want you" is usually enough to snuff out any feminine fire.

Ideally, you'll rapidly bring your marriage to the point where your wife won't be asking for sex at all. Two tried-and-true techniques can get you there quicker. First, talk frequently and in glowing terms about previous wives and girlfriends. If possible, stay in touch with them and have them write and call. Subtly compare your wife's sexual response to theirs and allude to the remarkable ways they knew how to stimulate your sexual appetite.

Second, flirt shamelessly with your wife's friends and all her enemies. Pat their butts when saying hello and good-bye. Kiss them on the mouth if they'll let you, and I'm not talking a friendly peck here.

With all the incurable STDs these days, adultery, actual and implied, can do wonders. If you can't work an affair into your busy schedule, do what you can to plant the idea that you'd like to have one. Stare openly at other women when you and your wife are in public together. Initiate frequent talks about how it may not be possible for you to stay committed to the marriage.

4) HOLD GRUDGES AND GO FOR THE JUGULAR!

These two are like the mental and physical aspects of an advanced sure in itself. There's nothing more enjoyable than a good grudge nursed to perfection like a fine cigar. People do make mistakes, but that's no reason to forget them. Ever. Lock them into your mind. With concentration and attention, this will gradually become auto-because her delinquent student loan has appeared on my credit record!!!

5/7/04: Did not buy me an ice-cream treat when she went to the grocery store for tampons.
5/13/04: Chicken for dinner again!

Obviously, you deserve better than this. This woman is not nearly good enough for you.

Grudges can, of course, be held about every person you know or have ever known (including the dead), but, as my sample log implies, the daily interaction of marriage offers the richest and most constant opportunities for grudge-getting and -holding of any of your relationships, with the possible exceptions of those with your elderly parents who can barely go to the bathroom by themselves anymore and (for you writers out there) your publisher.

As part of the mental discipline, spend a few minutes before you go to sleep reviewing all the ways during the day that your wife was not sufficiently mindful of the narcissistic wounds you suffered in childhood. Using just one entry on my sample log for an example, you have told her a thousand times that as a child you were not allowed to have ice cream every time any other kid on your block had it. You know it's not adult to want her to buy an ice-cream treat for you 12 to 15 times a day, but you do expect her to help while you struggle with this unresolved issue. Her not doing so proves she is not thinking of you continuously. You don't believe you're the most important person in the cosmos, but isn't she supposed to? Bring these instances to mind before going to sleep, martial art. You may be naturally more adept at one than the other, but with a little practice you can learn to make them work together and become one with the universal force.

The daily interaction of marriage offers the richest and most constant opportunities for grudge-getting and -holding of any of your relationships.

Grudge-holding is the mental discipline. It's also a private plea-matic, but at first you may have to write them down, including details of when and where and how your wife wounded you. You might want to buy a small notebook for this purpose or open a file on your computer. If you're not the writing type, use a pocket-size tape recorder, and don't hide the fact from your wife that you're keeping tabs. You need only to record the essentials, such as:

5/1/04: Revealed to the Katzes I snore like a moose, over cappuccino at Starbucks: deep humiliation.
5/3/04: My application for Am Ex Platinum Card denied and you will find them being creatively incorporated into your dreams. In this way, your grudges will become part of your unconscious, a kind of body knowledge that will result in increased instinctual power and strength in your marital conflicts.

At this point, you're ready to fully engage in the physical aspect of the martial art. You're ready to go for the jugular! Because of your grudge log, you've got plenty of ammunition whenever you have an argument. Don't hesitate to use it, citing chapter and verse. But it will be much more devastating when tailored to your wife's specific vulnerabilities, which no doubt she has confided to you at moments of deep trust. There has probably never been a marriage in which both partners have not revealed directly or indirectly their most painful weaknesses. Turn these against her. Use her own words, but in a whiny tone of voice. The feelings of betrayal this will cause will be almost impossible to eradicate no matter how much you apologize afterward. Violation of trust can be accomplished in many different ways, including your basic adulterous act, but your wife will experience your going for her jugular as a true expression of your heart of hearts, which she is not likely to forget. If you choose only one of the suggestions among the many in this practical guide, choose this one. It's a total knockout!

5) WHEN IN DOUBT, BE SELFISH!

On those rare occasions when you're not sure how to apply this practical guide, this is your rule: me, me, and more me. As it says under the entry for Divorce in the most recent edition of the Encyclopedia Americana: "Marriage is in the process of being defined as a temporary relationship, to be maintained only as long as it helps both partners get what they want out of life." That about says it all. ■

Vincent van Gogh, self portrait

“I tell you again that I shall always consider you to be something more than a simple dealer in Corots, that through my mediation you have your part in the actual production of some canvases, which will retain their calm even in the catastrophe.” From Vincent van Gogh’s last letter to his brother Theo.

A Christmas card I got this year shows the last self-portrait Vincent van Gogh would paint. Prone to sudden violent outbreaks, Van Gogh at the time he painted this last green-tinged portrait — September 1889 — was sequestered in the Asylum St. Paul near St.-Remy-en-Provence. He was thirty-six. He had tried for the second time in several months to kill himself by squeezing out tubes of paint and forcing himself to swallow the poisonous oily globs of color. But his self-destructive urges were muffled and he was feeling more confident. He intended the painting as a gift for his mother’s 70th birthday. Wanting to reassure her about his health, he sought to show features erased of 20 years of suffering. But reality outstripped intention and the eyes that look out from the canvas are steeped with sadness and loss.

The year previous had been unusually difficult for Van Gogh (and this for a man for whom no year was easy). October 1888, Paul Gauguin joined Van Gogh in Arles. They planned to live together, share expenses, and paint. Quickly, however, the two began to quarrel. Absinthe made their disputes stormier. On December 23, 1888, after attacking Gauguin with a straight razor, Van Gogh sliced off his own left ear. Bleeding profusely (he had cut through an auricular artery) and with his head wrapped in rags, Van Gogh bundled the bloody goblet of skin and cartilage in newspaper and carried this packet down dark Arles streets to a brothel — the Maison de Tolerance, Number 1 — where he and Gauguin several nights earlier had visited. “Guard this object carefully,” Van Gogh said, and handed the ear over to Rachel, a prostitute. Van Gogh’s drinking buddy, the postman Joseph Roulin (whose portrait Van Gogh had painted), was at the brothel when Van Gogh arrived. Roulin dragged Van Gogh back to the house Van Gogh and Gauguin shared and laid the painter down in the single bed whose rich ocher, oddly skewed footboard seems almost to fatten its half of the canvas in Van Gogh’s Yellow Bed. Weakened by blood loss, Van Gogh was taken by carriage to the hospital. For the rest of his life, until he died a suicide on July 29, 1890, Van Gogh would be institutionalized or under a doctor’s care, first in Arles and then in St.-Remy, and last, in Auvers-sur-Oise.

On the afternoon Van Gogh shot himself (in the chest with a small revolver he had stolen or been loaned to scare away crows that harassed him while he worked) he had been drawing and painting for only 11 years, and his most famous works were painted in the last 4 of those years. Van Gogh remains one of the world’s most popular painters, his Yellow Chair (one of the series of “yellow” pictures that includes the several rapturously yellow sunflower canvases, The Yellow House, The Yellow Bed painted by Van Gogh to decorate the house for Gauguin’s arrival in Arles) among the most reproduced works of recent art. During Van Gogh’s lifetime his work was ignored by all but a few people, one of whom was his younger brother Theo, an art dealer who supported Vincent during his painting years, and only one of his paintings was sold outside his family.

Van Gogh regularly wrote long, passionate letters. Some 700 letters survive, most written to Theo. All the letters, from boyhood notes to his parents to the last letter to Theo, can be read in three volumes in The Complete Letters of Vincent van Gogh. W.H. Auden selected 652 letters for Van Gogh: A Self-Portrait, Letters Revealing His Life as a Painter.

David Sweetman's Van Gogh: His Life and His Art, the first biography of the artist in 25 years, uses the letters to "understand Vincent in the context of his own world as he would have seen it himself."

Van Gogh's father was a minister in the Dutch Reformed Church. Vincent, born in a Dutch village near the Belgian border, was the oldest of six children (two of his five siblings became psychotic as adults and another may have committed suicide). From an early age Van Gogh read prodigiously and shared his mother's interest in nature study and sketching. He did well academically but left school at 15 and never returned (Sweetman suggests Van Gogh's abrupt removal from school may have been precipitated by the first of the manic-depressive episodes that later regularly beset him).

One of Van Gogh's paternal uncles was connected with the prestigious Goupil galleries in Paris, which had branches in Brussels, Berlin, London, the Hague, and New York. At 16 Van Gogh was taken into the firm as an assistant. While at Goupil's London gallery in 1873, he fell into love with — or, more likely a monomaniacal obsession for — his landlady's daughter. She rejected Van Gogh's suit. His descent into depression was instant.

On the outgoing tide of Van Gogh's failure at romance three future passions revealed themselves: religion, painting, relieving the anguish of the poor. He tramped London's streets. He saw, writes Sweetman (echoing letters to Theo): "women in rags whose filthy children held out scrawny hands for coins." And he "turned to the Bible for comfort, sitting up late reading and rereading it." And "[H]e began to draw. Only a little, but it helped to pass the time and the activity seemed to keep at bay the endless cycle of unanswerable questions that plagued him."

Van Gogh quickly lost interest in his work at Goupil. "Why," Sweetman writes, "waste one's life peddling art to the well-off, when there was so much to be done for the poor...?" By 1876, even Van Gogh's family connections to Goupil could not protect him from dismissal. After brief employment as a teacher in an English boarding school and then at a bookstore in Holland, Van Gogh (who all this time had been studying the Bible) felt called by God to become an ordained Dutch Reformed pastor, like his father. He wanted, he said, "to teach the Gospel to the poor and oppressed." To do this he would need to pass university examinations in Latin and Greek and then enter the Dutch Reformed seminary.

VAN GOGH entered the Training School for Evangelists in Brussels.

In 1877 Van Gogh moved to Amsterdam, lived with an uncle, and for over a year desperately tried to apply himself to classical language studies. Then, he abandoned his studies.

To Theo, he wrote: "[C]ertainly it is very doubtful I shall ever succeed, I mean, shall ever pass all the examinations."

A second plan rapidly replaced the first. He would not become an ordained minister; he would become a lowly missionary lay minister. A month after quitting his Greek and Latin, Van Gogh entered the Training School for Evangelists in Brussels.

At the three-month course's end, with only a probationary appointment as a lay preacher, Van Gogh headed as a missionary to the Belgian mining district of Borinage.

What Van Gogh found in Borinage horrified him more than London's slums. Sweetman: "There were sights to pierce the heart: stables 2000 feet underground where ponies broken with toil spent their wretched lives; worse still, children, girls as well as boys, some only eight years old, filthy and in rags, pulled sledges of coal through tunnels too small for the animals. And hanging over all this was the constant fear of accidents.”

Van Gogh responded by giving away his clothing, food, bed, and finally, he moved out of his comfortable room to live with the miners to whom he ministered. When Esther, Van Gogh's former landlady, asked him why he behaved as he did, literally handing out the shirts off his back to be torn into bandages, Van Gogh replied: “Esther, one should do like the good God; from time to time one should go and live His own.” His superiors disapproved Van Gogh's charities; they chastised him for overzealousness and after six months as a missionary, then-26-

What a terrible moment! The occasion of his firing feels heartbreaking to the reader. How must it have felt to Van Gogh, who had set such hopes on being permitted to bring the remedy of God's love to the miners? Sweetman guesses: “He was utterly cast down...he had done everything for God and God had surely rejected him.”

I came to Sweetman's report of Van Gogh's rejection at a time when I was sitting through several nights with a sick friend. I had curled up under a lamp at the end of the bed, listening to the rasping rise and fall of my friend's breathing. I felt alone, tired, and dispirited. I felt afraid for my friend. I had next to me Auden's collection of Van Gogh's letters and two small books I'd bought one year in Paris, books filled with reproductions of Van Gogh's paintings. (“Even reproduced thousands of times,” Sweetman writes, “Van Gogh's art retains a capacity to surprise and move us.”) Sweetman's Van Gogh biography lay open in my lap.

Someone once told me, “One must write as if one's readers were men and women who knew they had only six months to live.” Smiling, he went on to say he didn't mean to suggest one necessarily should write pieces that read quickly or were short, but that what one wrote should acknowledge the questions about life's meaning that when crushed by despair we all ask and should offer hope or consolation. The last half of Sweetman's biography and the evidence of Van Gogh's letters convinced me that Van Gogh painted with a mission like that in mind.

I had read, then, to page 112 of Sweetman's biography, a few pages past the point at which

Van Gogh is fired by the church. Sweetman notes Van Gogh's purchase, then, of his first sketchbook. ("Thus far," writes Sweetman, "he had made his drawings on whatever scraps of paper he could lay his hands on; such an expensive outlay marked another, albeit tiny, step in the new direction his life was taking.")

During the months before he was fired, Van Gogh had been sketching miners and their families. ("I should be

"IT WAS HIS identification with the miners' condition that pulled him most strongly towards art."

happy if some day I could draw then," he wrote, "so that these unknown types would be brought before the eyes of the people.") After his dismissal Van Gogh stayed on in the Borinage. He acquired a primer that taught drawing — "clear black-and-white studies of faces," writes Sweetman, "with anatomical outlines that the learner was encouraged to copy as faithfully as possible" — and gradually, laboriously, Van Gogh taught himself to draw and paint.

The Van Gogh legend has it that he went unappreciated in his lifetime because he was consciously avant-garde. Sweetman argues against this, asserting a Van Gogh who believed himself to be painting well within 19th-century proprieties. Sweetman notes that during the time Van Gogh worked at Goupil, the galleries handled little that was "new," that Van Gogh's way of painting developed in almost total exile from art movements current in Paris. Not until 1886 when he moved to Paris, living with Theo until 1888, did Van Gogh make contact with Impressionist and post-Impressionist paintings and artists of the French vanguard.

What Van Gogh did know and admire were the sentimental academic paintings that Impressionists reacted against. Pastor Van Gogh's study contained a four-by-eight-inch engraving of a funeral procession crossing a cornfield. Signed by a Dutch artist in vogue at the time among the middle classes, this engraving, Sweetman writes, may have been the first professional work of art Van Gogh knew (as an adult, Van Gogh would acquire a copy of the engraving for himself). When the 16-year-old Van Gogh went to Goupil he discovered the firm's black-and-white engravings of paintings by Jean-Francois Millet, whose The Gleaners had been the marvel of the 1857 Paris Salon. Even the rough copies of Goupil, notes Sweetman, moved Van Gogh, not so much for the surface beauty of the work but for what he could interpret from it. And what he interpreted, Sweetman continues, was that the engraving's three women bending to pick up scraps of corn were no ordinary peasants, but outcasts, poor scavengers allowed on fields to pick scraps left after harvesting. Looking at his engravings, writes Sweetman, Millet's gleaners "have all the force of a political cartoon, of an act of propaganda" and to Van Gogh seemed "to make a radical, political statement." (Van Gogh wrote in a letter to his sister Wil: "Oh Millet! Millet! how he painted humanity and that Something on High which is familiar and yet solemn.")

"I WANT TO paint men and women with that something of the eternal which the halo used to symbolize."

The Gleaners and other similar, almost sentimental pictures gradually added themselves to the engraving hung on Van Gogh's father's wall as the type of pictures Van Gogh hoped to make. Sweetman concludes, about Van Gogh: "It was his identification with the miners' condition that pulled him most strongly towards art."

And Auden argued that not only did Van Gogh believe, deeply, that the only proper subject for art in his day was the life of the poor but that of all painters and writers who painted or wrote about the poor, only Van Gogh preferred the life and company of the poor, "not in theory but in fact."

Van Gogh wrote to Theo, on 16 November, 1889, shortly after he had finished what would be his last self-portrait: "And instead of grandiose exhibitions, it would have been better to address oneself to the people and work so that each one could have in his home some pictures or reproductions which would be lessons, like the work of Millet."

alternately read pages of Sweetman and then pages from Auden's collection of the letters. "We must cast ourselves into the depths," Van Gogh wrote to Theo, "if we want to catch something." And "I want to paint men and women with that something of the eternal which the halo used to symbolize, and which we seek to convey by the actual radiance and vibration of our coloring." And, "It always strikes me, and it is very peculiar, that whenever we see the image of indescribable and unutterable desolation — of loneliness, poverty and misery, the end and extreme of all things, the thought of God comes into one's mind."

I turned often while I read to the small glowing reproductions of the Sunflowers and The Drawbridge at Arles, as familiar as sights near my house, to the Postman Roulin and L'Arlesienne, as familiar as relatives' faces. The tiny reproduction of Van Gogh's sturdy bed, the thickly impastoed rich ocher comforted me.

ON HIS LAST self-portrait, the principal background color is green; Van Gogh's coat is green, even the shadows that fall under his eyes and even the eyes are green.

Kept from ministering to the miners, Van Gogh turned to painting. But his mission did not change. Van Gogh speaks, I decided that night, to our inner poverty, that he gives us in his paintings, as he did the miners, the shirt off his back to be torn into bandages.

On his last self-portrait, the principal background color is green; Van Gogh's coat is green, even the shadows that fall under his eyes and even the eyes are green. The background is painted in the torturous heavily impastoed swirls by which Van Gogh is recognized. On this Christmas card I received the card's manufacturer (InnoVisions — "Greetings for the Truly Deranged") had printed atop Van

Gogh's head a red Santa hat tipped with a furry white ball. Above Van Gogh's head is "Merry Christmas." I opened the card and read the message InnoVisions printed — "All my love, Vincent" — and found stapled to the card stock a plastic bag of the type in which rock cocaine is sold. A pink plastic ear lay in the bag. ■

“THAT’S THE 12TH MOBILE HOME

we’ve passed since we left ‘Diego,” said Roy DeLoux as Liz Lang guided her ’57 Bel Air convertible down the steep grade toward the Cleveland National Forest on Interstate 8.

Puffing Camel after Camel, Liz nervously eyed the runaway truck ramps punctuating the interstate’s descent into the Imperial Valley.

Roy belted out “Red River Valley.” Pictured long rows of crops ripening beneath winter sun. Summoned to mind the men of vision who dared challenge the sand dunes; men who made the Imperial Valley, acre per acre, the most productive soil in America.

“You know, Roy, long, long ago the Imperial Valley was a vast lake — an inland sea. When all that water, for one reason or another, receded, what was left behind was a fertile lake bottom, waiting to be cultivated.”

It was hot. Bugs smacked the windshield. Distant bands of green growing things wavered on the horizon. Liz and Roy had bumped along nearly ten miles of cracked and chalky S-80, the Evan Hewes Memorial Highway, when Liz remarked, “I smell ...gypsum!”

No sooner had she said it than they saw, in the distance, a plume of white dust rising. With one voice they cried: “U.S. Gypsum.”

The mass of buildings rose suddenly from the flat shimmering plain. The highway cut directly through the complex. Cushman carts shuttled hard-hatted workers from railroad cars to warehouses. Steering the Bel Air into a tailspin, Liz bounded from the car and gazed at the smokestacks. “Gypsum, Roy. Hydrated sulfur of calcium. In the hills near here is the largest high-purity gypsum deposit in the United States!!”

“Mmmm,” noted Roy. “But we’d better hit the highway. We’ve got a lot to see today, and if I’m not mistaken, I hear a crop duster up ahead.” He pointed to a distant field.

Following the aircraft’s roar, they sped to the noise’s source. Skimming rows of cauliflower, a yellow one-seater spritzed a noxious spew.

“Do you think we’ll get cancer if we get too close?” asked Liz, ducking her head as the plane made another pass.

“Not a chance. Not with the stringent standards the FDA imposes!”

How “sweeeet it is!” she bellowed as Roy captured the moment on film.

Liz wrapped her silk scarf tightly around her mouth and nose. “An ounce of prevention,” came her muffled response.

The crop-duster screamed across the cauliflower, passed inches beneath high-voltage power lines lining the road.

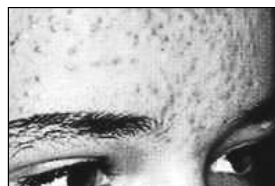

“I think we’d better go,” Liz hacked through her scarf. “I saw a sign indicating a Point of Historical Interest back the road a ways.”

In seconds they skidded to a stop beside a rock monument boasting a set of bronze plaques. Roy stumbled from the car and stared at the monolith.

Liz joined him. “Townsite of Silsbee. Named for Thomas H. Silsbee, a cattleman who shipped range cattle via the Southern Pacific Rail Station at Flowing Well to fatten on the grasses near Blue Lake. In 1901, the Blue Lake Town Company mapped the site into 97 blocks of business and residential lots. Blue Lake Boulevard inside the town was almost two miles in length and encircled Blue Lake. Silsbee was to be a winter resort with boating and fishing in the 12-ft.-deep lake. The Colorado River flooded in 1905, 6, and 7, drained the lake, and ended the dreams of the developers..."

Staring out over fields that once were to be a watery wonderland, a source of respite for bone-weary ranchers and their wives, Liz and Roy contemplated the terror of history.

After several moments of silence had been observed, Roy cried out: "I think I see it!"

"Do you mean," Liz squinted into the distance, "the Jewel in the Crown of this Imperial Valley?"

After a brief drive it lay before them:

El Centro.

"Twenty-eight thousand fifty-eight hard-working souls — merchants, farmers, bankers, doctors, short-order cooks, plumbers, housewives, mechanics, lawyers, brick layers, cowpokes. The list is endless," Liz rhapsodized.

At 939 Main Street stood a neoclassic edifice bordered by broad, frost-bleached lawns. The historic El Centro courthouse. Liz capered on the grass. "Get the Polaroid, Roy! Pronto!"

After stopping by the Chamber of Commerce for the rundown on El Centro high life, Liz and Roy breezed across bustling thoroughfares back to the city's western edge. Destination: 1717 West Adams.

Just as the brochure promised, the two found Imperial Valley's own Roll-A-Rama. Weeds sprouted from the parking lot. Plywood across the doors barred Liz and Roy's entry.

"I think it's maybe closed, or out of business, even," Liz wailed, wiping a sleeve across a dusty window.

After several hours of fruitless waiting, they hit the road again. A city of silvery smokestacks and silos — one with a line marked "Sea Level" 87 feet up — loomed alongside Highway 86 northbound. Liz reined her vehicle into a ditch opposite.

“Holly Sugar!” Roy gasped. A huge neon sign confirmed his discovery.

1,002,778 tons of sugar beets grown in this valley, is it any wonder?”

Liz opened the car door and trotted toward the massive sugar refinery. “How sweeet it is!” she bellowed as Roy captured the moment on film. A curious highway patrolman stopped to chat.

Tooling north once more, they skirted the incomparable West Side Main Canal and wound through the city of Brawley — home of the annual October “Fun in the Sun Craft Show” and November’s “Cattle Call” rodeo, the Brawley Airport, and the Del Rio Country Club. Hooking up to Highway 111 northbound, Liz and Roy whizzed through tiny Calipatria to even tinier Niland, which bustled in preparation for a Tomato Festival — “It’s quite an event,” Liz shouted above the car engine’s roar.

“I need a copilot, not a deathbed confession.”

“Niland locals really show their stuff in a yearly blow-out celebrating the cultivation and packing of tomatoes. Much fun is had by all when professional packers vie for honors awarded for fastest packing times!”

Several miles outside Niland, Roy detected a subdenser, as did the air. Finger-thick reeds towered above the car hood, herons exploded from the mire toward the gray sky. Ruts in the road deepened to the point of impasse. In front of Roy and Liz a sign beckoned, “Mud Pots.” An arrow pointed to a broad brown plain, beyond which lapped the Salton Sea.

Liz exited the car, Roy in tow, and began to walk through the salty muck. She approached one of the enclosed mud pots. A nearby sign warned, “Danger.”

“It’s...it’s bubbling, Roy! The mud is bubbling! It’s as though we’ve stumbled centuries backward in time...to when the earth was ruled by Tyrannosaurus rex, the Triceratops, the Mastodon!”

Suddenly, an anvil

tle change in the air. “What’s that smell?” he asked.

“Lemme see,” Liz said, sniffing. “It’s not gypsum...”

Turning off Highway 111 into the Wister Waterfowl Management Area, Liz remarked that the odor had become more pronounced. They took a tip from the visitor registration booth and followed the salt-encrusted dirt road to what guideposts referred to as “Mud Pots.”

crash of thunder rattled the sky. Liz yelled and tottered on one foot precariously near the edge of the mud pot. "Good grief, Roy! What in heaven's name was that?"

Roy eyed curling masses of smoke rising above the mountains to the east. "That sound shouldn't scare you, hon'. That's the sound Uncle Whiskers makes to let you know his ace pilots are keeping one and all safe from foreign aggressors. Those explosions are coming from the United States Navy Live Bombing Range in the nearby Chocolate Mountains." Roy placed a protective arm around Liz's shoulders as they strolled back to the car.

They had been en route northward only minutes when Liz squinted through the windshield. "That sign! Roy, look. Do you see?"

"Mmmph?" he inquired, fishing an errant peanut shell from between his teeth.

"The FOUNTAIN OF YOUTH SPA!!!"

"Make like Ponce de León, and steer your craft accordingly," Roy said, bolting upright.

Swinging into a gravel lot, Liz and Roy were approached by a leather septuagenarian in form-fitting capris.

"Howdy, folks! Hazel's m' name. What can I do for you?"

Roy doffed his hat. "Well, ma'am, we're from down San Diego way. We're just takin' in the sights. We're curious as to what exactly this establishment has to offer."

Hazel grinned, gave Liz the once-over, and then linked her arm through Roy's. "My, you're a strong one, aren't you?" Hazel giggled, squeezing Roy's bicep. Hazel looked across Roy's chest to Liz. "Perhaps you'd like to sit down in the shade and cool yer heels, dearie?"

You look a little peaked."

Liz, flicking a match against her thumbnail, gave Hazel a sidelong glance. "Thanks, but I'm just aching to see what it is they put in this water. Whatever it is, it's certainly kept you spry."

"You said it babe — I'm 79 years young and loving every minute of it!" Hazel tugged Roy along to the pool area.

"In 1938, Roy, these mineral springs were discovered by big, burly construction workers during the building of the All American Canal. The workers attributed restorative powers to the searing mineral springs, experiencing relief from tension and everyday aches and pains." Hazel led them through a wrought-iron gate.

Tanned oldsters dressed in flowered prints padded about the concrete. On a sundeck adjoining the pool, a fiddle and banjo sawed through "Little Brown Jug." Hazel tapped her foot in time to the tune's quick rhythm and shot Roy a knowing look.

"We'd better go, Liz. Thank you, Hazel, for your time." Roy clanked the gate behind him loudly.

"Next time, leave the invalid home!" Hazel called after his retreating back. "I'll give you the grand tour!"

The tires squealed as Liz veered back onto Highway 111. The Salton Sea was a bright silver ellipse to the west. "Oh, Roy, I don't want the day to end. Let's do something different. Let's take Mexican Highway 2 from Mexicali to Tijuana."

After passing at a snail's pace in rush-hour traffic through portals from Calexico to her more effervescent sister to the south, Mexicali, Liz began to hum "Tequila."

"Got any cigarettes, Roy? I'm out." Liz gripped

the wheel purposefully and leaned forward.

Roy handed her a fresh pack of Camels and a soiled paper cup filled with dregs from the Thermos.

It was a moonless night. Highway 2 began its ascent into the mountains. Outside, a cold wind howled. Blackness fell sharply away from the car's sides. Roy lit a cigarette, breathed in the smoke deeply, then watched it whip out the half-open ventilator.

Liz, holding her cigarette close to her lips, recounted to Roy the history of John Hoxsey, who developed the herbal formulas the clinic prescribed.

It was easily 40 degrees outside, but Liz had rolled her window down. Warm sweat glistened on her brow. She kept her thoughts to herself: the passenger buses leapfrogging semis on blind curves; the tiny pinpricks of light — headlights — high, high above them that indicated where she, too, must climb.

"Liz, I... I think I should tell you... that our friendship...our friendship has always meant a great deal to me. And if I've ever said anything to hurt you, I'm truly sorry."

"Can it, Roy. I need a copilot, not a deathbed confession. Hand me your lighter; mine's gone out."

the surrounding hills. Liz relaxed her shoulders back into her seat. "I brought this." She fished out a white, spiral-bound notebook from under her seat and held it out to Roy for his inspection.

With undisguised horror, he read its title: "Alternative Cancer Therapies — Tijuana Clinics: Where and another. If it's not me, it's either going to be you — or...or...someone else!"

They followed road signs west to "Las Playas." As the map on the back of the book indicated, Hospital Ernesto Contreras sat kitty-corner from the bullring. The Pacific Ocean was gray and dirty-looking behind it.

Liz scanned the asphalt of Interstate 5 — the great cement river running from Mexico to Canada.

How to Go. Have you flipped your lid?"

"Quite the contrary, Roy. I think it's the sanest of choices. Some of the greatest physicians in the world have gathered in our border town. Mexico has welcomed them with open hearts and minds. One out of three of us will contract some form of cancer or

"You see," Liz lectured, climbing from the car, "this is probably the most famous cancer clinic in all of May-hee-co. Established by Dr. Ernesto R. Contreras, a pioneer in the use of laetrile and other non-toxic metabolic therapies to treat cancer."

An annoyed-looking orderly wheeled a cart past

Roy and Liz into the shiny maroon-walled clinic.

Roy, using the rolled cancer book as a crude megaphone, shouted into Liz's ear. "Can you believe it? Treatment here is up to $7000 for a three-week stay!"

He was still fuming as the Bel Air carried them south along Paseo Playas. At number 605, a plastic sunburst was emblazoned with the legend "Del Sol." Beneath it, a square sign: Hospital de Baja California.

Liz recited, "Now this is the home of Gerson Therapy. The late Dr. Max Gerson's treatment is perhaps best known to the public for its liberal doses of carrot juice and use of coffee enemas. Past patients claim to have experienced dramatic results for disorders ranging from migraines to cancer. His daughter now directs the clinic. The cost, if I'm correct, is $1750 a week."

back to downtown Tijuana, the Manner Clinic stood on a red clay bluff. Roy and Liz stepped through an open gate into a courtyard. Liz collapsed into a chaise. "You, Roy, may think this yet another laetrile clinic. It is. But Dr. Manner specializes in the use of enzymes that he says break down the protein shell that surrounds tumors. I quote: 'It is then that the laetrile can do its work.' " She raised an eyebrow. Roy followed suit.

Threading their way past a cemetery and across downtown Tijuana, Liz turned the car right from Boulevard Agua Caliente and mounted a steep residential street in Colonia Juárez.

Near the summit of Calle General Ferreira, two metal gates stood at the driveway leading to the Bio-Medical Center. Liz, holding her cigarette close to her lips, recounted to Roy the history of John Hoxsey, who developed the herbal formulas the clinic prescribed. "One day Hoxsey found a cancerous sore growing on one of his horse's legs. Later, he saw the horse chomping on some herbs and licking the mash onto its sore. Hoxsey examined those herbs and developed formulas based on them. He passed them on to his grandson Harry. The horse's tumor, you see, had disappeared."

In front of the Bio-Medical Center sat an aviary, wrapped in a blue plastic tarp. Beneath the tarp, birds chirped. A guard at the portals to the house in front of which they had parked peered at Liz and Roy suspiciously as the two left the clinic.

They rejoined an unmarked road in search of the Villa Floresta clinic in Rosarito Beach. There, Liz had learned, therapists were using a curious device known as the Ray Tube Machine to bombard cancer and AIDS sufferers with low-frequency sound.

"It's the same principle others have used to rid homes and businesses of roaches and other vermin. Tests done in 1934 indicated that 16 out of 16 cancer patients were cured using this method. Others claim that it had produced skin like a baby's when used on the face!" Liz said, massaging her cheeks as she steered through what was becoming a steady downpour.

Lost in the rain, they headed back to the international border. Liz scanned the asphalt of Interstate 5 — the great cement river running from Mexico to Canada. "I wonder where this baby's gonna lead us. Orange County's always been pretty much of an enigma to me."

Liz drove on silently as Roy consulted a AAA map. A couple hours and several traffic jams later, they cut out from the herd and rolled off the El Toro Road exit into Laguna Hills.

Liz spun the wheel and aimed for a guard shack manning the gate marked "Leisure World."

"A retirement community," said Liz, "the largest gate-guarded senior community in the country. In fact, the largest place of its kind outside the City of the Dead near Cairo, Egypt. Twenty-one thousand residents. Twelve thousand seven hundred thirty-six dwelling units. $25 million worth of recreational facilities. Six clubhouses. Five pools. Average age here is 76 years, Roy. This is where old money comes to die."

"Aren't you two a little young to be around here?" The frowsy blonde guard looked the pair over.

"We just wanna look around, sis. Any objections?" Roy gave her his best grin. All the teeth.

"You'll have to talk to security, then. Back up the road. Make a right. Then another. Back building — you'll see it." The guard watched them carefully as they made their U-turn.

They found it. Liz jammed a pin into her black picture hat as Roy held the door open for her. "Let's hope this works," she whispered to him as all eyes — each pair having long since seen 60 — followed them to the security office. They could tell from the faces they weren't popular.

Grandpa at the desk said he couldn't help them. Said they'd have to talk to "Rhonda in public relations."

She was an awesome spectacle. A mammoth jelly-roll with tight brown spicurls framing her face. She shot a glance at the door as they entered.

Roy pressed his palm into the crook of Liz's arm and said quietly, "Let me handle this." He sidled up and parked his haunch on Rhonda's desk.

Rhonda looked at him. She didn't smile.

"You look sorta outta place here," he offered, fingering the tired daisy in a vase.

"How can I assist you, sir? Would you have a seat?"

Roy looked earnest. "My partner and I were told by the guard we'd have to talk to you before we could get inside Leisure World."

"I'd like to help you, but I can't. It's against company policy to allow uninvited visitors on the grounds. People come here for privacy, you know..."

"I was thinking maybe you could invite us." Roy snapped his suspenders in a thinly veiled promise of violence.

Rhonda licked her lips nervously and added, "There is a tour on the 17th, which of course you'd be most welcome to attend."

Liz jumped in, all

FAT AND CELLULITE REDUCTION WITHOUT SURGERY!

MESOTHERAPY AN ALTERNATIVE TO LIPOSUCTION

Ron Rothenberg, M.D., is the first physician in San Diego to offer mesotherapy and to be board-certified in the specialty. Dr. Rothenberg is also the Director of Medical Education for the American Board of Mesotherapy.

Mesotherapy is scientifically based on current medical practice in the medical literature. FDA-approved drugs, vitamins and supplements are injected directly into the middle layer of skin (mesoderm) in problem areas. Medications applied directly to the skin are highly effective since they are not broken down by the digestive tract and liver. The result is dramatically reduced inflammation and/or fat in the targeted area.

The procedure takes only 15 minutes. Depending on the amount of unwanted fat involved, 5 to 20 treatments are needed.

ADVANTAGES OVER LIPOSUCTION

Mesotherapy offers a simpler, less-invasive alternative without the risks or downtime involved with liposuction. In addition, liposuction does not treat cellulite and can possibly make it more pronounced!

"AFTER JUST THREE TREATMENTS, I HAVE SEEN THE CELLULITE ON THE FRONT OF MY LEGS GO AWAY..."

"Gimme a break, miss. If you two don't get out of here, I'm gonna call security."

Liz kept an eye on the convertible's rear-view mirror until they were safely back on the freeway. In minutes they had reached Garden Grove.

"After that fiasco, I think we need a little inspiration. Ever hear of the Crystal Cathedral?"

In front of them Roy's eyes were blinded by light reflecting off the cathedral's surface. Beside the cathedral rose the "Tower of Hope" erected in 1968. A green park, fountains. A gargantuan parking lot for drive-in sermons.

Ensclosed in a reflecting pool on the cathedral's north flank, a group of statues depicted the New Testament story of Jesus defending the prostitute from the crowd that wanted to stone her: four men with large, hooked noses glared in mute rage at the kneeling, button-nosed Man of the Cross. The thinly

Liz and Roy attached themselves to a group of tourists being led into the cathedral itself.

The noise of the buzz saws and hammers rattled

Roy and Liz settled back into the car. Northward on Beach Boulevard. Liz opened the engine all the way. Roy pulled pensively on a cup of coffee. Motels, electronics shops, fly-blown cafes whipped past.

"Looks like you could use some R and R, soldier." Liz let it hang there. Her cohort didn't respond. "Can't make it to Honolulu in this heap, but I can take you to the next best thing. Say 'Aloha' for me, Roy. I'm taking you to Hawaiian Gardens."

As they turned onto Lincoln, palm trees played slender shadows across the car's hood. Liz rolled down her window and sniffed for hints of jasmine, plumeria, ylang-ylang. The air gave nothing back. Miles passed. Liz grew more confused. She wrenched the wheel over and slammed to the curb. No hula girls, no tiki huts in sight. Not one of the pedestrians wore a lei.

"I can't understand it," she said. "It's right there on the map — Hawaiian Gardens. West of Knott's Berry Farm. Wedged between the communities of Cypress and Cerritos." She threw the AAA Guide to Orange County at Roy's slumbering form.

Roy's eyes flew open and lit upon something Liz had not seen. A dismal testament to Hawaiian Gardens' fragrant, sensual past. There, beside the busy street, behind a high chain-link fence stood a sign. The lot behind it — once long ago, lush with papaya, mango, parrots, orchids, chattering monkeys, brightly hued snakes — looked desolate. "Hawaiian Gardens Redevelopment Agency," the sign promised. But the gray, sterile soil, the foot-worn sidewalk, in no way betrayed their tropical past. Liz and Roy felt that they could have been anywhere.

"Looks like we got here about 30 years too late," Roy grumbled.

The Bel Air swam

smartly through the afternoon traffic. Five blocks later, an emerald lawn stretched along the boulevard's side. A white-steepled chapel, a fountain, a colonial mansion sat in the green expanse. Liz pulled into the sweeping drive. "Miniature golf?" queried Roy.

"Think again." Liz pointed to the large letters across the colonial edifice's colonnade. "Forest Lawn Mortuary."

Liz's heels sunk inches into the verdant turf as she and Roy toured shady glens, oak-crested knolls, the Shrine of Love, the Wee Kirk o' the Heather, the Temple of Santa Sabina, the Gardens of Memory.

"Which area would you choose as your final resting place, Roy?" Liz shot her companion a coy glance. "Slumberland? Rest Haven? The Vale of Memory?"

"I liked the duck pool by Kindly Light...but I think it's a little soon to start planning..."

"It's never too soon! Like it says in the brochure, Roy, buying a family memorial before it's necessary eliminates emotional overspending at time of need!"

As they returned to the convertible, Roy admitted he felt funny walking around a cemetery. Liz smirked. "It's more than a cemetery, isn't that obvious? There's admission-free programs — high school band concerts, religious rallies, and a valentine-making contest."

Roy chuckled sheepishly. "And I thought graveyards were just for dead people!"

As chimes began to peal out "Rock of Ages," Liz and Roy aimlessly cruised Beach Boulevard.

They spotted a giant yellow and black sign.

"Hobby City." Roy's laugh was short and hard. "Are you woman enough for this? Yarn Cabin. Party Cake Shop. An official Cabbage Patch Adoption Center. Arts and Crafts Studio. And the Doll and Toy Museum."

With 23 specialty shops, Hobby City was a mecca for collectibles — sea shells, driftwood, coins, teddy bears, wallpaper for dollhouses.

Liz dashed to the Doll and Toy Museum minutes before closing time. Bea DeArmond, the curator, stood brushing a doll's hair. Liz asked for a brochure. Bea produced a full-color, ten-page pamphlet describing her exhibits.

"This," DeArmond stated sadly, "was our dream — Jay's and mine — to build a city where the entire family could come and spend an enjoyable day. You can just cross Jay's name out of the brochure. He's gone now. Poor little Jay." She resumed her combing of the doll's hair.

Liz felt her own hair rise on the back of her neck. "Poor little Jay," she murmured to herself as she grasped the doorjamb. "I'll just find my own way around the, uh, hummmm, museum, thank you..."

Floorboards creaked as she passed Kewpies, Bylo baby dolls, "Lady Long Fingers" — an 18th-century wooden doll chosen to reign as "Queen of the Museum."

"Find everything okay?" Bea was suddenly there beside her.

"Good golly!" Liz jumped straight into the air.

The laugh started deep from within Bea's chest and ripped through her throat. "Heh heh. Startled ya, did I?"

"No. No. Not at all. I was admiring Lady Long Fingers here..."

"Quite an unusual specimen, isn't she? She's pre-Georgian, you know."

Liz was still jelly-kneed when she reached the convertible; Roy manned the helm for the bleak miles that led home.

dreds of people who have special working relationships.

Bauder found people with an ax to grind but failed to interview the myriad of other people who think the world of either Coons or Donaldson. Bauder failed to seek failings in the people he quoted to balance the article, which renders his hit piece a slanted document. He failed to note that SOHO supported Maria Curry in her recent appointment to the Historic Resources Board, based on her many years' service on the SOHO board. Vonn Marie May has alienated many people in her pursuit of historic preservation and has actually been hired by SOHO for historic consulting.

I think everyone is sick over the threats to the San Diego Police Station. The Port District did not select a consulting architect that did not propose to demolish some part of the station, so Coons had to do the best with the alternatives possible. I think Willard is guilty of sour grapes because Coons found an alternative to support.

As to Coons's salary, whose business is it to smear a CEO in the newspaper? What makes Coons a public figure that you could publish such damning material? Coons makes significantly less than the CEO of the Museum of Fine Arts. What is wrong with Wayne Donaldson accepting a State of California appointment from Governor Schwarzenegger that is 60 percent less than he made as a master architect and owner of his own company? These men should get medals for valor in historic preservation.

Really, I can only imagine that Bauder has an ax to grind. What on earth motivated him to play into the hands of the building industry, the anti-preservation lawyers, and the politicians who care little for historic preservation in their pursuit of glory, fame, and wealth?

Narrow Wise

Had I read Ms. Wise's review on Cantina Panaderia sooner, I might have never found such a gem nestled in PB (Restaurant Review, June 10). In my opinion, Ms. Wise did not do chef Isabel Cruz or the restaurant justice. I sampled some of Cruz's cuisine early last week and was blown away by the fried plantain and caviar and the salmon with papaya mint salsa. I enjoyed my meal so much that I attended Ms. Cruz's cooking class held at the Prado, which only furthered my amazement for her ability to blend flavors at opposite ends of the taste spectrum to create delightful and delicious dishes. All other students were equally, if not more, appreciative of Cruz's practical yet ingenious hints for dinner parties. Was Ms. Wise suffering from a mental lapse or simply narrow vision the day she wrote her review? While she may not be able to appreciate this breath of fresh air craved by PB patrons, I find that Cantina adds another dimension to the otherwise dull dining options.

Strange Hang-Up

I had a lot of difficulty understanding why you published Deegan's article titled "How Is the Coaster Doing?" ("City Lights," June 3).

Are you that financially or emotionally invested in future freeway construction? Are you attached to your automobiles?

For starters, who is Mitchell Reiss? And why should I care? He is an expert??? Of what? I will admit that Mitch, the source of your disinformation, surely is committed, or should be.

Is Mitchell in high school, college, or working full-time?

Since ole Mitch "learned everything he could about... his preoccupation" (page three, paragraph two), then Mitch knows that of all the train traffic on the track used by the Coaster, the great majority of the train traffic comes from the nearly hourly Amtrak passenger service (seven days and nights a week), as well as a considerable freight volume, courtesy of the Santa Fe Burlington Northern RR.

Yet, lo and behold, only the Coaster trains — only the Coaster trains — which comprise a comparatively small percentage of train traffic on that track (compared to Amtrak and Santa Fe passenger and freight traffic) annoy him to the point of hysteria. That is truly a case of selective amnesia on Mitch's part.

Don't Amtrak and freight trains have lights?, whistles?, vibrations?, gathering mobs?, and all other forms of the distraction which poor Mitch had to suffer with for so long a time???

The Coaster does not run between 11:00 p.m. and 5:00 a.m. Monday through Friday. It has a total of eight trains on Saturday and no trains at all on Sunday.

Yet somehow, those mid-day Coaster trains keep poor Mitch up all night seven days and nights a week.

I had to check the calendar to see if it weren't April Fool's Day all over, when I read that column.

That article was truly an entertaining piece, pure fantasy and fallacy.

It was in serious need of a purpose, a touch of some validity, and at least a pinch of honesty to keep it interesting.

It clearly represents someone's agenda, someone terribly outraged by people finding alternatives to cars and freeway traffic. Strange hang-up, if you ask me.

Psychotic Stain Attempt

This is in response to "Psychotic Waltz," May 27. To Josh Board: For the most part, the story you wrote pertaining to Psychotic Waltz was pitifully negative. You made some shallow comments. We don't need that kind of talk here in San Diego. If you hadn't talked to Dan Rock, guitarist and songwriter, your words would have depicted just another San Diego metal band that faded into obscurity. You attempted to stain Psychotic Waltz and its members but failed to do so!

Well, Josh, regardless of what you think or say about P.W. and the three founding bandmembers — Dan, Norm, and Brian, who are respected and doing well here in San Diego — Psychotic Waltz were a big part of the mid-'80s San Diego metal scene. Aslan — the pre-Psychotic Waltz — released their demo in 1987, a metal contribution to the fans. It forged the band's success and status. Their songwriting was complex and mature, unlike the other San Diego bands in that era. I will mention their persistence and integrity, because they also contributed but not on the higher level of Psychotic Waltz's achievements. As the '90s approached, they continued to play shows here in San Diego, tour Europe on several occasions throughout the 1990s, and release records until calling it a day. I believe under the circumstances, Psychotic Waltz took the band as far as they could and was very successful at it. The record labels didn't realize what they had. The music industry can be quite deceitful and disloyal; always have been, always will be.

It is unfortunate that Josh Board doesn't understand the true definition of a musician or fan. When he asks Dan Rock, "Does it bother you when other San Diego bands make it, since Psychotic Waltz played for over ten years and it didn't happen?", what an evil, derogatory statement, Josh. With questions and assumptions like that, it's no wonder Norm refused to be interviewed or interrogated. The 1989 interview didn't do Psychotic Waltz justice, and Josh Board followed the same path — "how pathetic." If you hate metal, why don't you interview Jewel? Leave us the hell alone.

Save the Hams

Amateur Radio Touches Sky

Mike Lebo, a ham-radio operator since he was in high school, is a lone wolf. That's an alien concept in the ham-radio world, where making contacts is the whole point. Still, while most of Lebo's buddies are competing in the annual Field Day contest this weekend, he will be found in a clearing near Montgomery Field, willing to let anyone try his equipment.

As a do-gooder, the 57-year-old Lebo has an ulterior motive. When asked how many hams Lebo would estimate are living in the San Diego area, he says, "Okay, this is the problem, and it's a very serious problem. The death rate for ham-radio operators far exceeds the new-member rate."

On Field Day, hams nationwide practice their emergency communication skills by taking their home stations and setting them up outside. To measure their abilities, they compete to make as many contacts as possible in a 24-hour period. A secondary goal of Field Day is to introduce the hobby to newbies. But the contest gets in the way of that recruitment effort, says Lebo.

"The problem with having all these clubs in the contest mode is that, in order to win, they'll go to remote locations, like high up in the mountains, where you can get better communications." (The Amateur Radio Club of El Cajon, for example, is setting up its station in the Laguna Mountains.) "But the public doesn't want to drive all the way up to Mount Laguna to try ham radio. So I decided that I wanted to have a site in town."

He did not offer this opportunity last year and won't again next year. "This is a one-time deal," he says. That's because he hasn't had many people volunteer to help him. "One [volunteer] had to drop out because of ill health — he's old. Worst-case scenario: hundreds of people show up and there's just me."

In an emergency, amateur radio is one of the primary means of communication. "Take, for example, the fires," says Lebo. "Everybody was hodgepodging it," meaning people were trying whatever they could to get through when their cell phones failed them. But when Lebo is asked if he himself has participated in a disaster situation, he says, "To be honest, no." Not in all these years? "If called upon, I would act. But there are dedicated amateur radio people who have specialized in that." Lebo's specialty, by contrast, is building equipment. "When I first got started, I built my own transmitters and receivers. With today's technology you need at least $100,000 worth of test equipment to get started. So what I build is antennae, and I build big ones. You've seen the antenna I'm going to use for Field Day?"

It is impressively large — 65 feet tall, and portable. "And that antenna didn't just happen. That was the fifth attempt to put it up. The other four came crashing down. So there was a lot of learning. The engineering of it was complicated. It's not like you do what it says in the book. That's because there is no book. There are many ham-radio operators who won't help me with this event, but they say they're going to drive by just to take a picture of it."

The antenna is made of parts readily available at Home Depot, says Lebo, an out-of-work radio-frequency microwave-design engineer: "Steel and wire and post clamps and string and PVC pipe." Newbies, take note: you do not need such a thing to become a ham. "That's just an exotic antenna. There is a whole other aspect of radio that's called 'stealth' antennae. Those are ones that you could look at and don't see. They go into communities with covenants and restrictions. A guy will put up a flagpole, and he's got his flag waving. In reality, that could be an antenna."

Lebo's setup at home, which is also near Montgomery Field, is even more impressive than the one he will use on Field Day. Attached to a 65-foot palm tree in front of his house is a pole, and attached to the pole is a 30-foot antenna. How did he build that one? "It was very complicated." But did he risk life and limb? "Well, I climbed the palm tree. Does that risk life and limb? If the wind weren't blowing today, I would be putting another antenna on that tree.

But the wind is up, and if the wind is up, I don't climb."

Lebo had concerns that his neighbors would object to the home antenna. "But," he says, "the nearest neighbors cannot see it unless they look up and get a kink in their neck that would be unbearable. The ones a block or two away can see it but they don't care, because, well, they're a block or two away." And how unsightly could it be, anyway? "Well, it touches the sky."

OUTDOORS

Cobbled Shorelines are greeting some beachgoers early this summer season, as in past years. North County beaches tend to suffer most, as the natural sand replenishment in the area is disrupted by dams blocking the flow of sediment down the larger streams and rivers. Some sand scooped up from dredging operations is being moved onto the beaches to mitigate this problem.

South County's beaches fare better. The widest beach of all, Coronado, is protected from sand loss by the jutting Point Loma peninsula; it catches some sand drifting on currents northward from the mouth of the Tijuana River.

June Bugs are emerging as summer's warmth is finally upon us. The green June beetle, only one of some 300 species of scarab beetles found in Southern California, flashes a metallic green underbelly as it buzzes about erratically. The mature scarabs flying about have spent at least a year underground in larval form munching at the roots of lawns or your favorite ornamental plants.

Agaves, (a.k.a. century plants), are coming into bloom in many summer gardens this month. After a decade or more (not a century) of growth, the larger kinds of agave send up a tall, yellow-blossomed flower stalk from a base of fleshy, succulent, thorn-tipped leaves. The stalk and basal leaves die, but suckers make new plants and begin the cycle anew.

Historic Golden Hill explored by Walkabout perambulators on Friday, June 25. Moderate 1.5-hour walk starts at 10:30 a.m. at 25th and A streets. Optional lunch at Mexican bakery. Free. 619-231-7463. (GOLDEN HILL)

A Guide to Unexpected San Diego and Beyond • By Jerry Schad

Malibu Creek State Park, a jewel if not the jewel of the Santa Monica Mountains National Recreation Area, lies along Malibu Creek, a lively watercourse that completely bisects the coastal Santa Monica Mountains. The park is also relatively easy to reach. Either follow Las Virgenes Road three miles south from the 101 freeway at Agoura Hills, or follow Malibu Canyon Road six miles north from Pacific Coast Highway at Malibu.

If you only have time for a short visit to Malibu Creek State Park, consider taking the following easy hike of three miles. You will explore the park's main attractions and also drop by the visitors' center (open weekends), which is not accessible by car. Picnic tables and water are available along the route.

Start at the main parking lot (open 8 a.m. until dusk; day-use fee charged) beyond the park's entrance station on Las Virgenes Road, 0.2 mile south of Mulholland Highway. Walk west on unpaved Craggs Road. After 0.5 mile you come to a concrete-ford crossing of Malibu Creek. Youngsters come here to toss in a line for bass, bluegill, and catfish. A right at the fork in the road just beyond leads you most directly to the visitors' center.

The visitors' center is housed in a grand old home once occupied by the groundskeeper for Twentieth Century Fox, which used the area as an outdoor set during much of the last century. From the visitors' center, cross over Malibu Creek on a sturdy bridge and continue up the hill on Craggs Road, gaining about 200 feet in elevation.

When you reach the crest, look for the path descending left. In a minute or two, you'll reach the shady east shoreline of Century Lake, created in 1901 by damming Malibu Creek with a tall concrete structure. Subsequent silting-in has allowed a freshwater marsh to overtake much of what was previously open water. Ducks, coots, and herons frequent the lake, their squallings and callings reverberat-ing off the weathered, honeycombed cliffs rising from the reservoir's far shore. Redwing blackbirds flit among the cattails and rushes.

When you've had your fill of these engaging sights and sounds, backtrack to the bridge over Malibu Creek. Just before you reach it, though, turn south onto a footpath signed Gorge Trail. In a few minutes you'll come upon the Rock Pool, a placid stretch of water framed by volcanic cliffs. This generically wild-looking site has served as a backdrop for outdoor sequences filmed for South Pacific, Tarzan, Swiss Family Robinson, and many other productions.

To return to the starting point, simply backtrack to Craggs Road, and walk east on it for a scant mile until you reach the day-use parking lot.

TO A GOOSE

If thou didst feed on western plains of yore;
Or waddle wide with flat and flabby feet
Over some Cambrian mountain's plashy moor;
Or find in farmer's yard a safe retreat
From gipsy thieves, and foxes sly and fleet;
If thy grey quills, by lawyer guided, trace Deeds big with ruin to some wretched race,
Or love-sick poet's sonnet, sad and sweet,
Wailing the rigour of his lady fair;

Or if, the drudge of housemaid's daily toil,
Cobwebs and dust thy pinions white besoil, Departed Goose! I neither know nor care.
But this I know, that thou wert very fine, Season'd with sage and onions, and port wine.

— Robert Southey

Something from the Oven: Reinventing Dinner in 1950s America

Laura Shapiro

Viking/Penguin; 2004; 306 pages; $24.95

FROM THE DUST JACKET: At the dawn of the 1950s, a woman was expected to be, in the words of Peg Bracken, “business manager, practical nurse, housecleaner, child psychologist, home decorator, chauffeur, laundress, cook, hostess — all this besides being a gay, well-groomed companion.” Something had to give. Big business chose the kitchen and the postwar food industry stood at the ready, promising to minimize a housewife’s time at the stove. Hoping to rid themselves of freeze-dried army leftovers and profit from new food technologies, the industry stuck a clumsy hand into American kitchens and tried to take over the cooking.

Tasteless “gourmet” horrors — frozen bouillabaisse and pâté

de foie gras, dehydrated wine — failed to convince any woman, no matter how frazzled, for very long. On the other hand, canned peaches, frozen vegetables, frozen orange juice, Spam, and other indestructible lunch meats were welcomed and are still popular. No matter how handy some of these ingredients might have been, implicit in the suggestion that instant food was the “housewife’s dream” was the debilitating idea that women were, and always had been, mere functionaries in the kitchen leaving the gourmet arts to male chefs: in other words, cooking was hard, and women were not up to the task.

There was a battle on, and women of all stripes pitched into the fray. Cooks and journalists such as the formidable author and House Beautiful editor Poppy Cannon — and the fictional Betty Crocker — championed the possibilities of instant cooking while others, M.F.K. Fisher, for example, pursued the sublime. Bemused chroniclers of domestic chaos such as Shirley Jackson, Jean Kerr, and Ernestine Gilbreth Carey laughed away any attempt to idealize the postwar family — or housewife. Then in 1963, just as Betty Friedan’s The Feminine Mystique appeared on the scene, a young, gangly housewife named Julia Child went on TV and changed both the American kitchen and Americans forever. In essence, she said to women, “You don’t need to get it from a package. You can take charge. You can stand at the center of your own world and create something very good, from scratch.”

WHAT THE CRITICS SAY

The Atlantic Monthly: The ambivalent relationship between Americans and what they eat is one of the main themes of Laura Shapiro’s Something from the Oven. How did we travel from the fresh, wholesome food our forefathers ate — if that is what they ate — to the endless array of processed crap we eat nowadays? How did housewives feel about themselves when they abandoned their 50-pound bags of flour in favor of cake mixes? What drove the changes — the food industry’s pushiness, advertisers’ wiliness, or consumers’ eagerness to wolf down trainloads of salt, sugar, and preservatives?

Shapiro began this saga in an earlier book, Perfection Salad (1986) — a charmingly idiosyncratic look at the way home cooking changed in this country during the early part of the 20th Century. Perfection Salad covered the horrors wreaked on middle-class food when nutritionists, home economists, and other “domestic scientists” got hold of it and turned everything into Jell-O salad and white sauce. Something from the Oven picks up the story after World War II, when standardized food was already entrenched in America. (Shapiro considers the 1950s to be the period from the late 1940s to the mid-1960s.)

Newsweek: After decades of eating boxed and frozen food, many Americans prefer artificial flavors to the real thing. But the desire to feed loved ones with food prepared “by our own hands,” says Shapiro, is one thing that hasn’t changed.

Entertainment Weekly: It’s easy to sugarcoat American food of the 1950s as a menu of marshmallow salad and frozen dinners served by housewives happily freed of kitchen drudgery. Shapiro upends that notion, showing that women were loath to give up home cooking in favor of prepackaged food, despite the efforts of manufacturers who created icons like Betty Crocker. Not only did innovations like canned deep-fried hamburgers and dehydrated wine taste terrible, convenience food had another problem: “The moral obligation to cook simply was not satisfied.”

The Washington Post: Shapiro’s convincingly researched findings are illuminating.

Booklist: Shapiro delves into this period of rapid change and comes up with absorbing stories of the era’s women. In addition to the familiar tales of the fictional Betty Crocker and cultural icon Julia

SAN DIEGO'S LAY CATHOLIC NEWSPAPER VOLUME 14, NUMBER 6 / JUNE 2004

A School is Born
New Catholic University Founded in North County

BY JAMES MCCOY

A group of North County Catholic enthusiasts, led by Dr. Jerry Connolly, have banded together to launch what they're calling New Catholic University. The school, which has locations in two sites in North County, "New Catholic University," the website states, "will be a new teaching center, based on an educational model that is a blend of the best of the best in Catholic education, with a focus on the personal and intellectual development of the student."

Jerry Connolly

New Catholic University of the Holy Spirit is probably our academy, but it is a new idea. When I hear it, I hear it as a new idea. When I hear it, I hear it as a new idea. When I hear it, I hear it as a new idea.

Coming Soon
A Chance to Make a Change

By which I do not mean a million dollars for the future. Right now, the future is being built by the present. This is the time, intended for the Catholic faith, will require an education to create at least one of the parents of an entire 20-year old generation about the faith's future.

Most of those parents will be needed in the next few years. So be sure you are on those calling lists, call 619-426-1111, email to: education@sdnewsnotes.com, or visit the website www.sdnewsnotes.com.

Child, Shapiro relates the astounding stories of other mid-century foodies such as Poppy Cannon, who publicized convenience foods while falling in love with Walter White, influential NAACP leader, in a time still suspicious of interracial marriage. She also tells of Freda De Knight at Ebony, who studied at the same Parisian cooking school as Julia Child and then brought French haute cuisine into the middle-class African American kitchen. Shapiro's graceful, flowing prose makes this history of both cooking and women utterly compelling.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR: Laura Shapiro was an award-winning writer at Newsweek for more than 15 years. The author of Perfection Salad, she has written for many publications, including the New York Times, Rolling Stone, Granta, and Gourmet. She lives in Manhattan with her family.

A CONVERSATION WITH THE AUTHOR: One delightful aspect of Laura Shapiro's newest book is her prodigious use of primary sources — old newspapers and magazines, advertising pamphlets, trade papers, and other paper ephemera. Something from the Oven, like Ms. Shapiro's earlier Perfection Salad, truly is "made from scratch."

On the afternoon that we talked, Ms. Shapiro in her Manhattan apartment and I here in California, Ms. Shapiro said, "I loved doing the research. I was a journalist for a thousand years at various places, including Newsweek, so I know how to do journalism, but what I love is going to a library and disappearing into the stacks and not coming out for years. That's my idea of research bliss. A lot of journalists love being on the phone and getting the thing of the moment. I originally signed this contract when I was still full-time at Newsweek just because I was so longing to do a project that was not 'of the moment.' This was of the past. And I could go into it as deeply as I wanted to, and I could take all the time in the world, and no editor was standing over me saying, 'You have to call Martha Stewart and ask her what she thinks.'"

"Even after many years of calling or visiting people to ask questions," I confessed, "I feel shy when I do it." Did Ms. Shapiro? Feel shy?

"Oh, yes. It's some sort of phone phobia. I hate doing things you have to do as a journalist. I'd much rather read a book. So I looked forward to digging into the research, and for this project, I started by doing what you do, which is turn pages of women's magazines. Then I did newspapers. My main fetish in research is primary sources. It's of course much harder, but it's so much more interesting and so much more fun to get your hands into the real stuff. With food it's not so easy.

"Plus, very little of it is directly from the people who did the cooking at home. It's all been mediated through the various writers, but I do think newspapers get you a little bit closer. So I loved the newspaper research.

"But, oh, goodness, the hours. Nicholson Baker talked about this in a piece he did on newspapers in the New Yorker several years ago. He says that the newspapers are on microfilm, which, of course, they are, but he doesn't talk about the fact that when they film, when they make these microfilms, the technology is such that you very often lose the end of the roll. And then it's gone forever. There are whole issues and years of the Chicago Tribune that I tried to read hundreds and hundreds and hundreds of food sections of, and the last two days of the week or something similar is always going to be missing.

"It drives you nuts. It's a very inadequate technology. Maybe it will be better when "Their writing reveals a kind of neediness that is heartbreaking. Even more heartbreaking was to learn the nonexistent Betty Crocker received 4000 letters a day."

everything is scanned into cyberspace, but I don't know. Anyway, newspapers and magazines and real life, when you can get to it, with letters and note cards and things like that, are wonderful sources."

I mentioned Ms. Shapiro's use, too, of trade publications, publications that the public normally never sees.

"Yes, to see what's going on, on the inside, was fascinating, and there were so many little things you could pluck out. I fell in love with Quick Frozen Foods, and this publisher, E.W. Williams, the man who thought that frozen water was going to be a big seller....

"But when you have the time — and if you love sitting there in the library, which I do — then it's like a kid in a candy store. Quick Frozen Foods was collected by the New York Public Library. They have this new business and technology branch, and you can sit there, and they bring them out. Those are not on microfilm, because who on earth cares about them? Nobody. So there they are, the original things, almost crumbling under your hands, really.

"You can see the personality of an industry through these trade publications. It gave me this sense of the frozen-food industry, that they were desperately chasing this illusion about frozen food, that it was going to replace fresh food. No matter how often people rose up and said, 'We don't want it!' they kept going."

Ms. Shapiro made good use of a Boston Globe column that has run in that paper for almost a century. Titled "Confidential Chat," readers, writes Ms. Shapiro, "write in with questions about every conceivable aspect of home and family life, and other readers respond with their advice and opinions." Ms. Shapiro quotes from "The Chatters" letters (the women who wrote in dubbed themselves "The Chatters"). I said that I found these letters so poignant.

Ms. Shapiro responded. "Given the fact that I'm always trying to get to the primary source to find these questions, these letters are wonderful. It's clearly a self-selected group of people who go to that trouble to write something like that."

"But their writing," I said, "reveals a kind of neediness that is heartbreaking. Even more heartbreaking, though, was to learn, as I did in your book, that the nonexistent Betty Crocker, back in the 1950s, received 4000 letters a day."

"Yes. Yes. And you see them there, completely flummoxed by the fact that this sponge cake is cracking across the top, and you feel their insecurity and who knows who's laughed at them, or who they are afraid is going to disapprove because they can't do it. And what corner of their pride or self-image has been slashed by this failure, and so they reach out for help to somebody who doesn't exist?"

"I gave a talk on Betty Crocker and cake mixes two summers ago, in this little place in Michigan where we often go in the summers. As a demonstration project, I made a simple cake from scratch, and then I made a cake-mix cake. I frosted them the same and then I cut them up, and I asked people to distinguish which was which, to taste them and say which they liked better. While I was making the cake-mix cake, which I had never done before, there was a direction that I didn't understand, something like 'do not overbeat,' and I didn't know quite what 'overbeating' was. You know, in a real cake the longer you beat, the better, in most recipes.

"I called the Betty Crocker help line, and I asked, and sure enough this home economist came on the line. I asked her about overbeating, and she explained something about texture. In cake-mix chemistry you get to a stage of overbeating, and she couldn't quite tell me what was overbeating, how I would recognize it, or when I would something I had gone on too long.

"It was funny; I felt like one of these people. Here was a direction I didn't understand, and there was somebody who could help me, and so I called her. And it worked, in a way; this corporation was reachable. And it's like Betty Crocker and Ann Pillsbury and all these people, their function was to be this bridge to the real world. And it worked. It actually worked. A real person got on the line and talked to me."

"So many of these letters," I said, "seem more about despair and loneliness than about cake frosting."

"Yes, they're reaching out, they're asking, they're calling from their inner soul." Ms. Shapiro mentioned the Betty Crocker TV show. "Though, with Betty Crocker, it was so interesting that that TV show was a failure. When you saw her, then you shrank back. You didn't want this person in the living room with you."

"Where you wanted her," I said, "was in your imagination."

"Yes, and so radio was perfect, and of course The Betty Crocker Picture Cookbook was this huge hit. But to actually see her, apparently that just gave people the creeps."

We talked about food writers from the first part of the last century, how so many had successful cookbooks, and yet now no one remembers these books' writers.

"That's really our luck," said Ms. Shapiro. "You don't meet many food writers who were well published who are absolutely loved. I mean, people remembered Poppy Cannon's name, and many people remembered The Can Opener Cookbook, or at least hearing about it. She's lost, but she's not that loved."

Gourmet recently had published an excerpt from Ms. Shapiro's book about Poppy Cannon. Ms. Shapiro said, about that piece, "That research went on for quite a while, and I scraped up everything I possibly could, in terms of research — her daughters, for instance, are alive and well, and they live in New York. I talked to them several times, and they were very, very forthcoming, very generous. So that was a help."

"Then there was this stash of letters at the Beinecke [at Yale], and that gave me access. So, on the whole, for a lost person, there was a fair amount out there. But putting it together, figuring out who this person was, was really daunting and difficult because she was so multifaceted and went through so many changes and was such a difficult person. It was just hard to get a grip on her."

"There was blood splattered on every page, in my mind, but I tell you one turnaround for me with Poppy Cannon was writing about that. I tried. I had a million false starts writing that chapter; I tried it from a million different angles. One day I was out for a run in Riverside Park, and I started to talk to her, and I said, 'Look, I'm trying all these things. Is it okay for me to say this, and is it all right? I know I'm not really getting it. I know the person I'm going to create won't really be you, but can I go ahead, can I do this?'"

"She was a journalist by trade, and she knew what it was like to write for money because that's what she did. She said, 'Fine, go ahead, I understand, it's okay.' So I got the go-ahead from Poppy herself."

The women about whom Ms. Shapiro writes, women who were in one way or another "cooking professionals," had quite different domestic lives than what we, now, imagine as the everyday life of the 1930s, '40s, and '50s. I asked about this.

"Yes. Once you get into these people, you see that each one has a little world that doesn't fit the cliché. And then you realize that, as always, there's truth to clichés, but it is far from complete. One of the things that I learned when I got to the Betty Friedan part was that her version of the '50s is our '50s. It's incredible. And nobody had even mentioned this. Of course there is a lot of revisionist Betty Friedan history going on now. But to sort of stand back and realize that we were handed that history by her, which has accuracy in it but is not the whole picture, was startling. Who knew?"

Shapiro posits Friedan and Julia Child as exemplars and muses for women in the early 1960s.

"I was sitting in the Schlesinger Library [at Harvard] when I came across that fact [that the Friedan book and the Julia Child TV show emerged at the same time], when I put it together. I thought, 'Okay, this means something. I don't know what it means now, but it means something. I'm going to hold onto it, and this is going to be the end of the book.'"

I confessed that when I was a young wife in the 1960s, I took it for granted my job was to learn to cook and to sew and to keep house, not to read books.

"Did you like housekeeping while you were doing it?" Ms. Shapiro asked.

"I didn't know anything else to do. It was my job. I didn't even think about liking it."

"Did it come easily?"

"No," I said and said it loudly. I added, "One thing that doesn't come easily — it's the only criticism I would make of your books — is that there is little to no mention in your newest book of the cleaning of pots and pans, the tidying of the kitchen, and all that, which is as time-consuming — or more — than actual cooking."

"It is true," Ms. Shapiro said. "It's true and it's an incomplete look at cooking when you don't have the cleanup added to it, and the other thing is laundry, which in both books was sort of breathing over my shoulder as I wrote. And frankly there isn't the scope in laundry that there is in food."

"So many young women, now, cannot cook," I said.

"That's right. And I don't know how that's going to unfold. Dealing with the present was the hardest part. But dealing with the present, which I only do glancingly, was hard because I did not want to be trapped into making generalizations."

"Both my daughters can cook," I said, "but few of their friends can. I tend to think that the reason so many children born in the '60s and '70s cannot cook is because their moms weren't home. Nobody was teaching them. I'm afraid somebody has to be home to teach you."

"Or," said Ms. Shapiro, "you see it, so that when you do cook, either you know how or you're not intimidated by just walking into the kitchen and figuring it out. It's funny, my mother was a wonderful cook, just a really wonderful cook. But I never paid much attention. I assumed that people could cook. So that when I got my first apartment, I wandered into the kitchen and started cooking. I am not a great cook the way she was, by a long shot, but I would open a cookbook and try to do things because it didn't occur to me that I couldn't. Later I learned that I wasn't very good."

I sighed agreement. "That's so humiliating and not dissimilar to my experience with my own cooking. At first, especially, I was not that good."

"But, you know, you go and do it because you think, you cook. And I wasn't intimidated. The more I learned, the more intimidated I got, really."

"Me too. I have over the years become more and more frightened of cooking."

"Yes, and now that I'm sort of in the food world, and I know real food people who are really wonderful cooks, I don't dream of cooking for them. So it's odd, but to walk into a kitchen where everything is strange, that would be enormously intimidating, and then you really wouldn't cook."

"I think if we did a survey, we would find that many women in their 20s and 30s simply can't cook at all."

"I think they can't, but I think it's also true that a lot of them make the effort at some point. I used to see this at Newsweek. You'd see the 22-year-olds parading around the office, and nobody cooked; they were in New York, they had this job, they're eating out all the time. And then after a while, either they get married or they start living with somebody or they just get sick of eating out, and then they start to pick up the cookbooks that would be sitting around my office, and they'd sign up for a cooking course or something. I think it's sort of cyclical. I think at times in your life, you're more

As to what she might work on next, Ms. Shapiro said, "I'd love to get back to work on something, and nothing is leaping out at me. It was a long and wonderful time, living in the '50s, doing my research, and I'm really glad I did this book. You know, you always wonder at various stages, 'Could it be worth it?'"

"People say, 'Now are you going to write about the present?' But I don't want to write about the present. It's too present."

"It's overdone, and it's still happening; it's still changing. That's what journalism is for. Even the '50s was a little too present; just the fact that people were still alive who had created that decade made me nervous. People had been through it themselves, and they would have their own perspective. I really did not talk to very many people. I wanted it to be my view, not theirs. I wanted to take possession of it myself, so that was another thing about the research."

"For the reader, like myself, who is a naïf in terms of her knowledge of the food industry, this book is very helpful. I was stunned by the building of the Betty Crocker persona, by her being a virtual but not flesh-and-blood woman."

"She's a doorway," concluded Ms. Shapiro, "into this amazing world." ■

The Costumes Were The Least of It

In one sense, this is very simple music; but...

The San Diego Early Music Society held its annual house concert on a warm Sunday afternoon in Rancho Santa Fe, at a lavish and artfully decorated home. The guest artists were a delightful little medieval ensemble called the Goliards, dressed in pretty (and pretty silly) “medieval” costumes. The group consisted of Janet Parish-Whittaker, playing a small wooden flute; David Parish-Whittaker, playing a brass-strung harp (and, at one memorable braying moment, a shawm); percussionist David Brewer; and vocalist Wendy Greene. They are all skilled musicians, and they performed in a manner that was both historically informed and musically imaginative.

Their program, determined to a considerable extent by their resources, consisted chiefly of monophonic song, both religious and secular, from the 12th, 13th, and 14th Centuries. This category included Middle-High-German songs of love and nature by the Minnesänger Neidhardt von Reuenthal and Walter von der Vogelweide; narratives of miracles of the Virgin (in Galician-Portuguese) from the Cantigas de Santa Maria compiled by King Alfonso “El Sabio”; and Latin songs from the Carmina burana, compositions of the itinerant students or “Goliards,” from which the group takes its name.

I can’t think of a type of music in which the imagination of the performers has a more crucial role than in this particular medieval repertoire. We have to guess at how the music originally sounded. There is nothing but anecdotal information about the number of performers, the kind of vocal production that was common, which instruments should be used, or how they should be played, or whether instruments should be used at all. The notation in the manuscripts (those of the Carmina burana, for example) gives only the vaguest notion as to pitch, and often contains no indication at all of meter. Virtually everything in the earlier periods is a matter of speculation, reconstruction, improvisation.

Hence the importance of the performers (a burden the Goliards bore with taste and intelligence). All performances of the Grieg Piano Concerto sound almost identical, differing only in subtle details. Any two performances of (for example) the extravagant drinking song In taberna, from the Carmina burana, may sound like two entirely different compositions, except for the teeming list they share of the innumerable classes of imbibers.

The issue of “orchestration” is central. If the music is monophonic — that is, composed of a single melodic line — how do the four musicians of the Goliards go about performing it? The text, naturally, is sung by the vocalist (although — as in Quen a omagen from the Cantigas de Santa Maria — the group may decide to perform the piece instrumentally, omitting the text); the flute and the harp may double the tune or play ornaments around it (they do not have independent tunes of their own, and do not provide harmonic accompaniment); and the percussionist emphasizes the rhythm (aided by the others, who at times clap their hands or play additional percussion instruments). In one sense, this is very simple music; but in another, it requires acute sensitivity to matters of color and texture, on which much of the charm of a performance is necessarily based.

In this respect, the Goliards were exemplary. Singer Wendy Greene possesses a pleasing, sharply focused soprano voice, perfectly suited to this sort of music; her enunciation in the several languages was at once clear and caressing; and she demonstrated a valuable ability to express textual meaning with delicacy and grace. Janet Parish-Whittaker made the most of the hollow, breathy contrast with the singer’s voice. David Parish-Whittaker’s wire harp, with its luminous, pungent ring, has a unique and irresistible timbre, and he handled it with an amazing variety of plucking techniques. And percussionist Brewer chose his instruments with finesse, providing each work with a distinctive palette adapted to its nature.

The program also featured two medieval pieces of a somewhat more complex sort, both of them from the Libre vermell, a famous 14th-century manuscript from the Benedictine monastery of Montserrat in Catalonia. The songs in this anthology — like the Cantigas in honor of the Virgin Mary — include several polyphonic pieces (there are some monophonic ones as well), and this posed a problem for the Goliards. Virgo splendens is a caça (a round), and a piece of such a type requires at least two (and, better, three) voices of more or less equal weight so that one can clearly perceive the lively interplay of the melody’s iterations. Three flutes might do it, or three singers, or another combination of instruments; but the Goliards’ enforced choice of a single soprano and a single wooden flute (was the harp carrying the tune too? — I couldn’t be sure) didn’t quite make the grade. What one heard was a singer with accompaniment, which is quite different from a round.

The Cantigas and the hymns from the Libre vermell are pious works of a popular flavor. But anyone who thinks the Middle Ages are nothing but this needs to pay attention to the secular music — for example, to that song of anguished, raunchy love-longing, Sic mea fata from the Carmina burana, that the Goliards performed. Dating perhaps from the 12th Century, and written no doubt by a young man in minor orders (not yet a priest), it is filled with material that Saint Thomas Aquinas would surely not have approved of (although Abélard, at a certain moment in his career, might well have done so):

When I glimpsed her breasts
I wanted to cup them in my hands,
Play with each nipple in turn.

I’m not sure that Wendy Greene, for all the loveliness of her singing, actually conveyed the gist of this to the audience in Rancho Santa Fe (the printed program did not include texts).

All these sources are familiar to fans of medieval music. The most extraordinary piece on the program, however, seemingly fell outside its boundaries. This was a solo harp work from Robert ap Huw's collection of Welsh harp music. The manuscript dates from 1613, and is thus a long way from the Middle Ages, but its compositions belong to the 14th and 15th Centuries. The one David Parish-Whittaker played, the Caniad San Silin, was — as he himself remarked — undoubtedly the weirdest piece the audience was going to hear that afternoon. This lengthy work was made up of 12 sections that sounded like an idiosyncratic set of variations on curious and constantly repeated harmonies driven by obsessive dotted rhythms, each section followed by an identical refrain (essentially nothing but two chords in outline) of uncanny beauty. The cumulative effect was numbing, overwhelming, and ultimately mind-blowing, somewhat in the manner of an Indian raga. Parish-Whittaker played with great virtuosity and a mesmerizing conviction; yet even scholars who deal with this obscure corner of music history seem rather puzzled as to its intentions.

I, too, was puzzled; but also dazzled, and intrigued. In conversation afterward, the harpist recommended a recording by his teacher, William Taylor, called Two Worlds of the Welsh Harp (Dorian), which I have now acquired and find utterly fascinating. If you have a taste for music off the beaten track, you owe it to yourself to listen to this. I think you'll be as grateful to me for alerting you to it as I am to David Parish-Whittaker. ■

Robot Circus

Maybe it's just the "gnarly neighborhood weed" he's been smoking.

"Quite a workout," said an awed first-nighter, exiting the Cassius Carter Centre Stage. "Think," added another, equally agape, "what it lets her eat!"

"Her" name is Seema Sueko. For two hours, as 22-year-old Jennifer Marcus, Sueko's an aerobic dervish. Like a cheerleader overamped on uppers, she hops, dances, jackknives, marches, fidgets, and whirls—talking as fast as she moves, and leaving notions of hyperactivity way back down the road.

Jennifer's the protagonist of Rolin Jones's Intelligent Design of Jenny Chow. Don't let the flat, abstract title fool you (or, for that matter, its self-conscious subtitle: "An Instant Message with Excitable Music"). This play's smart, poignant, and hilarious and is getting a superb production at the Old Globe.

Typical Jennifer day: she completes a Rubik's cube in seconds (then invents a bigger one with blinking, pastel-neon colors); she has yet another scream-out with her stepmother; she has cyber-sex with a Mormon in China on a mission; she solves a DOD crisis by getting antiquated missiles to communicate with satellites; and she almost goes outside.

It's said a bull in a bullring has a querencia, a place where it feels safe. Along with being obsessive-compulsive, Jennifer's agoraphobic. She fears open spaces and stays inside her Calabasas gated-community home. Her room—a raised circle on the Cassius Carter arena stage, watched over by paper globe lanterns—is her querencia. She leaves it only to help her father (also homebound due to a firefighting accident) look out for brushfires or when her pal Todd delivers pineapple/anchovy pizzas. Of his work, the often drug-addled Todd says, "It provides."

Jennifer has a dilemma. She was born in China.

Her mother wrapped her in a red silk scarf and gave her up for adoption. Since her new father has no expectations, and her new mother's "totally fed up" with her, Jennifer wants to go to China to find her real mother. But, she asks, how can she do that when she "can't even take out the garbage?"

Go by proxy. Jennifer's such a genius that, when she swears she can create a computer virus "that will make you piss on yourself," you vow never to open e-mail attachments. But can she invent Jenny Chow, a robot simulacrum of herself? Sure, she's in touch with manic Dr. Yakunin, world authority on such matters, even taught him a thing or two about android epistemology. But how could she afford the costs? A worried Todd, who has rare moments of clarity—okay, partial moments—offers heartfelt advice. "Four words: 'Proceed with caution.'"

In one of the play's funniest scenes, Todd (Zachary Quinto) sits on a bench with Jenny Chow (Michelle Wong). It dawns on him that she's doing things humans don't. Or maybe it's just the "gnarly neighborhood weed" he's been smoking. Then she flies off to China. He's impressed not only with the robot, but that Jennifer could make one so quickly. It once took him a whole month to make a dysfunctional bong.

Under Kirsten Brandt's sharp direction, the Cassius Carter rivals a circus for activity. Brandt, Sledgehammer Theatre's artistic director, specializes in bold physicality. She has a field day with Seema Sueko and Michelle Wong, especially when they mirror each other's moves—and when Wong does a standing backflip and other Olympian-quality gymnastics.

But Brandt does something else. In the wrong hands, the play could devolve into a jokefest, spoken in "Dude" and laced with, like, four-letter words. But Jenny Chow is also about roots and relativity, real and imagined fears. It resembles Stephen Wadsworth's recent Don Juan, at the Old Globe, in that both alternate the comic and the deeply serious. And Brandt stages scenes, back-to-back, that shift from funny to touching on a dime.

Sueko also negotiates actor traps with ease. How do you play a genius without being off-putting or loopy? An obsessive-compulsive, who traces and retraces her steps like a robot, without begging for sympathy or chuckles? And an agoraphobic: How do you play the opposite of cabin fever?

Sueko does it with intelligence (you become convinced she could walk off-stage and solve a Rubik's cube) and with enough energy to light Balboa Park. But she also does it with an astonishing openness that refuses to make Jennifer just a collection of Other-directed symptoms. Irrepressible, disarming, she's just like you, only more so.

Sueko's amazing performance shouts "must see." But so do Kelly VanKirk's efforts in minor roles. He plays a none-too-bright Georgian military tech; the Mormon missionary newly marbled with doubt; the white-maned, rabid Dr. Yakunin, who got dumped from MIT and now's stuck at lowly ole "New Haven" (in-joke: the playwright's a Yale MFA); and a full-of-himself Army colonel. VanKirk's so versatile that, when you see his picture in the program, it's hard to place the face on any of his creations.

The design work, and the intimate Cassius Carter, serve the script well. Michelle Riel's scenery spins circles on turntables, creating not only alternate playing spaces but enough metaphorical possibilities for a literary seminar.

There's good news beyond the production. Seema Sueko has moved to San Diego. Her new theater, Mo'oleo Performing Arts Company, premieres in September. The Old Globe would be wise to host all future premieres of work by Rolin Jones. ■

Bed and Sofa

Composer Polly Pen based her wonderfully imaginative musical on Abram Room's 1927 silent film. Joining the two creates a hybrid at once distant as a movie screen and intimate as a love letter. Due to a Moscow housing shortage, and against her wishes, Ludmilla's husband Kolya invites his friend, Volodya, to share their dinky apartment. Then Ludmilla has an affair with Volodya, and the apartment shrinks again. And then, as both men become set in their ways (disputing who gets the rocking chair), it dawns on Ludmilla that she exchanged an insensitive lunkhead for a sensitive one. Cygnet Theatre's set looks like an indoor version of Dorothy's Kansas. Everything's either black, white, or a shade of gray, even bricks on the wall. The costumes have a similar palette, as do the actors' pancake-powdered faces. Using mime and high-caliber voices, Julie Jacobs, Eric Anderson, and Michael Elliott perform a "silent musical," part silent film, part opera. They also provide the "color." In a way the show teaches you how to watch it. After a while you begin to realize that gestures and reactions, and musical flurries, often come in threes, and the next time the event occurs, the pattern repeats but with different characters. You also realize that lighting designer Karin Filijan adds a wonderful rinse of spots, strobe-flickers, and dissolves just like a silent film.

Continental Divide

Maybe if the actors didn't always speak in headlines, going nose-to-nose and giving every sentence an exclamation point; and maybe if director Tony Taccone moved the actors more like people than chess pieces, then maybe David Edgar's two-play cycle would feel more human and gripping to watch. But then Mothers Against and Daughters of the Revolution beg for an editor (it's hard to recall more explanatory scripts). What frustrates most: Edgar has things to say. These come in cross-referencing leitmotifs, and in various utopian dreams that exclude each other. And in the way the political process only permits stereotypes. To represent one's complexities in a gubernatorial race means to lose constituents. Edgar's insights have a cumulative, tapestry-like effect. But to reach that revelation requires a two-play, six-hour sit that's Darwinian in its survival demands on an audience. An Experiment with an Air Pump Backyard Productions always stages intriguing plays and performs them in lively, flexible styles. If Tom Stoppard's Arcadia didn't exist, their latest effort would seem brilliant. Like Arcadia, Shelagh Stephenson's Experiment's a tale of budding centuries (1799 and 1999). It even has a mystery, like Stoppard's, and interweaves similar characters from the different eras on an English estate. On its own terms, Experiment's a solid play about scientists on the "cusp" of new discoveries and the changing status of women. The production shows Backyard's versatility: English accents from two periods; appropriate costumes; spare, elegant furnishings; and seven quality actors in multiple roles. Directed by Robert May, Ron Choularton and Robin Christ excel as then-and-now married couples; as does Jessica John as sad-eyed Isabel, a deformed scullery maid who falls in love with Joshua Everett Johnson's well-spoken, loutish Armstrong. Daren Scott's a hoot as the list-making Roget (yes, Peter Mark Roget of the Thesaurus); and Allison Riley and Lauren Zimmerman do fine comic turns as Harriet and Maria, the latter having an epistolary relationship that isn't going at all well.

Worth a try.

HELIX AMPHITHEATRE, LA MESA, THURSDAY, JUNE 24, THROUGH JULY 10; THURSDAY THROUGH SUNDAY AT 8:00 P.M. 619-588-0206, OR 800-696-1929.

I Do! I Do!

The Fritz Theater extended the run of its latest show. Famous heretofore for tough, cutting-edge drama, especially about women, the Fritz presents Tom Jones and Harvey Schmidt's minimalist musical (and compendium of mid-'60s mainstream clichés about gender), which chronicles the 50-year marriage of Michael and Agnes. Jones and Schmidt wrote The Fantasticks. I Do! is a Fantasticks about marriage, and just as generic. Like the Neil Simon comedies of the period, bad things just seem to happen to these nice folks, under whom lurks a sitcom safety net. Duane Daniels and Leigh Scarritt, combining a rich baritone and silver soprano, are fun to watch and hear, even if the musical isn't. In the originals vocals were so demanding — staccato riffs verging on pure scat — that Robert Preston and Mary Martin performed only six (rather than eight) shows a week. Daniels and Scarritt sprint through tongue-twisters with dexterity. I Do! offers a dinner-theater package at the Sixth Avenue Bistro's downstairs cabaret: bar, round tables, small stage, and launched-rocket acoustics. SIXTH AVENUE BISTRO CABARET, 1165 SIXTH AVENUE, DOWNTOWN, OPEN-ENDED RUN; FRIDAY AND SATURDAY, DINNER AT 6:15 P.M., CURTAIN AT 8:00 P.M. 619-239-4196.

I Do, or Die: The Mother-in-Law of All Weddings

For its summer show, onboard the sternwheeler William D. Evans, Mystery Cafe presents one of its best: best balance between written and ad libbed materials, best array of credible suspects and clues, and also funniest of those I've seen at Imperial House. Patricia "Patti" Peccarino (Emily Anne Smith), heir to the Peccarino cheese fortune ("The Cheese Stands Alone"), is about to marry Wilhelm "Willie" Schmeterlinck (Ben Gilbert), last of the Schmeterlincks (who, some allege, invented Cheez Whiz) and a groom given to quoting Shakespeare ("to wed, or not to wed"). There's a death. Then another. Was the murderer "the Bavarian Battleaxe," Gretchen Schmeterlinck (Diane Thrasher)? Or Patti's mother, Theresa Rodham Peccarino (Bonnie Stone). Both exude insidious intent. Or was it lactose-intolerant Patti, who lost 17 minutes of her life at age nine? Or one of several other candidates, each eager to make a hostile takeover — of anything — and each living proof that "cousins shouldn't marry." Authors James Pascarella and the late Will Roberson set the piece in the 1950s (yet are somehow able to make numerous topical references to today). It's a consistently funny evening of interactive theater.

WILLIAM D. EVANS STERNWHEELER, DOCKED AT THE BAHIA HOTEL, WEDNESDAY, JULY 7, THROUGH SEPTEMBER 7; WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY, BOARDING AT 6:30 P.M., DINNER-SHOW AT 7:15 P.M. 619-544-1600.

I Love You, You're Perfect, Now Change

One of the longest-running shows in Off-Broadway history, Perfect covers the zodiac of relationships, starting with a first date ("Will I be a date from hell?"), through the singles scene ("Single Man Drought"), to marriage, children, even a funeral. Along the way a San Quentin con scares a timid couple into taking the Big Step ("You gotta compromise a little, you dickheads!"), and Rose Ritz tells the truth for her dating service videotape. Theatre in Old Town's engaging production features a four-person cast. They have the smarts not to push for comedy or drama, letting the audience choose its reaction (romantics can sigh, scoffers can, well, scoff). Andrea Chamberlain, Mylinda Hull, David Engle, and especially Stan Chandler, who must be one of the most versatile performers around, enhance every scene with strong voices and precise character details. Credit as well to the costume designer, unnamed in the program, who provided everything from tuxes to Chargers T-shirts — and enough Velcro to permit what must be, in many instances, split-second changes.

Worth a try.

Kid-Simple

Jordan Harrison's comedy-drama turns a radio play inside out, giving "flesh" to airwaves. As a narrator tells the story, people listen to a radio broadcast and perform it live. And teenage Moll invents the Third Ear, a device that hears sounds people can't ("toenails growing," "solitary jelly"); it can even detect a lie from how the liar breathes). When the Mercenary and Dark Dwellers steal the machine, Moll goes on a Joseph Campbell-like heroic quest to get it back. The concept's as lively as the script is, at times, thin (often a slender thread holds the playwright's four-weave tapestry together). Thanks to some fine performances, Scott Feldsher's inventive direction, and Scott Paulson's myriad sound effects, the Sledgehammer Theatre production carries the play. Sprightly Jeannine Marquie, as Moll, and David McBean, doing virtuoso shape-shifting as the Mercenary, head the cast. Brian Salmon evokes rich laughter in multiple roles. And as the put-upon narrator, Kim Strassberger's a kick, especially when the tale she tells refuses to behave.

Worth a try.

Late-Night Catechism

The Laguna Playhouse has extended the run of this popular show several times. It's an "interactive adult catechism" class, taught by a sister from the spare-not-the-rod school. The concept doesn't sound like much. The sister is substituting (it's the regular teacher's poker night, don't tell a soul). She used to teach but was deemed too strict for contemporary students. And the class is just that, part of a course in Catholic doctrine. But the sister's authoritarianism takes it to unforeseen places (you can hear cries of recognition from the audience, especially when sister brings out a hard ruler and taps her palm). The results, the two times I've seen the show: (a) an evening of almost nonstop comedy, and (b) a thought-provoking look at education, religion, and much more. The sister, it turns out, is not kidding.

Worth a try.

National Comedy Theatre

ComedySportz changed its name, but its methods (and madness) remain the same. Improvisational comedy, making up funny stuff on the spot, is difficult enough. Years ago, however, Keith Johnstone thought it'd be more exciting if done competitively. He got the idea from pro wrestling ("where Terrible Turks mangled defrocked Priests, while mums and dads yelled insults and grannies waved their handbags"). National Comedy Theatre, an offshoot of Johnstone's TheatreSports (artistic director Gary Kramer says the two compare like "rugby and American football"), resembles an athletic event more than an improv. Teams wear uniforms and compete on ActroTurf. The night I caught the show, three San Diego comedians played a "challenge match" against players from the San Jose franchise. Using suggestions from the audience, they played "Emotional Sympathy," "Shakespeare," "Blind Line," and "Freeze Tag," with judges awarding points to the best scenes. Klunkers and groaners got booed; quick wit, rewarded (one of the most refreshing parts of the contest: people acknowledged failure, abundantly, then forgot it). It made for a lively, often quite funny, evening. And Gary Kramer is one talented comedian.

Worth a try.

Places to Touch Him

Diversions Theatre stages Guillermo Reyes' comedy about a Latino politician who wonders how much of himself he should reveal to voters. Jeffrey Ingman directed. DIVERSIONARY THEATRE, 4545 PARK BOULEVARD, UNIVERSITY HEIGHTS, THROUGH JULY 25; THURSDAY THROUGH SATURDAY AT 8:00 P.M., SUNDAY AT 7:00 P.M. 619-220-0097.

San Diego Theatresports

A cross between improvisational comedy and Family Feud. Improv, making up a funny scene as you go along, is tough enough. Add competitive scene making, with the audience awarding points to the winning team. Purists might balk at the odiousness of comparisons used in this format, but San Diego Theatresports' "game show" is a hoot. The 90-minute evening offers different bits. The show I caught had "Team Sports" — two pairs of players competed, taking suggestions from the audience; and "Gorilla Theatre" — five directors invented scenes, using the other four as actors. The winner got a banana, the loser a "forfeit" (other formats include "Micetro" and "Improv Survivors"). Some attempts went nowhere (I repeat: improv is tough; I did it in my, as hindsight reveals, callow youth). Others made amazing twists and turns. The group makes the hits much more frequent than the misses. Their guru, Keith Johnstone, has written one of the few brilliant books (Improv) I've ever read about making theater. And they put his pearls to good use. Their motto: "Remember, when it's not funny, it's art."

Worth a try.

SATURDAY AT 7:45 P.M. (THE "FAMILY" SHOW) AND AT 9:45 P.M. ("RATED PG-13") 619-465-7469.

Side by Side by Sondheim

Songs for a New World

This musical revue, music and lyrics by Jason Robert Brown, is being staged at two San Diego venues. BROADWAY THEATRE, 340 SUITE B, EAST BROADWAY, VISTA, THURSDAY, JULY 1, THROUGH SATURDAY, JULY 3, AT 7:30 P.M. 760-728-1002.

The Sopranos' Last Supper

Dillstar Productions presents an evening with the notorious Baritone family: "gambling, dinner, dancing, and good old mobster fun." 1355 NORTH HARBOR DRIVE, DOWNTOWN, AND DAVE AND BUSTERS, 2931 CAMINO DEL RIO NORTH, MISSION VALLEY, OPEN-ENDED RUN; FRIDAY AT 7:30 P.M. 800-944-5639.

South Pacific

Lamb's Players have remounted Rodgers and Hammerstein's popular musical, sort of. The production takes place today, on the hangar deck of an aircraft carrier. In effect, we watch sailors and their wives doing South Pacific. But once things start, the new frame tale contributes little, other than making one wonder if the opening night's more amateurish moments — weak miking, thin-sounding band, tentative acting — were by design. Director Deborah Gilmour Smyth has done better work. The show has plusses, however. Linda Libby and Doren Elias, as tooth-begrimed Bloody Mary and sleazoid Luther Billis, inject much-needed energy, as do Antonio "T.J." Johnson and Dennis Scott, as harried officers. And newcomer Stephen Godwin's a find. Rather than imitate Ezio Pinza's immortal mispronunciations ("zommen-CHON-ted eee-vnig"), Godwin makes Emile a gentle-voiced man of mystery. He could be either an exiled Frenchman or James Bond in plantation mufti. Jeanne Reith's excellent costumes put us back in Polynesia during WWII. (Note: Lamb's has extended the show's run.)

Worth a try.

LAMB'S PLAYERS THEATRE, 1142 ORANGE AVENUE, CORONADO, THROUGH JULY 4; TUESDAY THROUGH THURSDAY AT 7:30 P.M. FRIDAY AND SATURDAY AT 8:00 P.M. MATINEE SATURDAY AT 4:30 P.M. AND SUNDAY AT 2:30 P.M. 619-437-0600.

Sullivan Players, Evening of One-Acts

Students of the D.J. Sullivan Workshop (one of SD's best acting teachers) present short one-acts by Christopher Durang, Tennessee Williams, and others. Sullivan directed.

SWEDENBORGEN CHURCH, 1531 TYLER STREET, SAN DIEGO, SATURDAY, JUNE 26, THROUGH MONDAY, JUNE 28, AT 7:00 P.M. MATINEE SUNDAY AT 2:00 P.M. 858-274-1731.

Tabletop

The Laguna Playhouse presents the West Coast premiere of Rob Ackerman's "frenzied comedy" about a film studio that makes TV food commercials. Andrew Barnicle directed. LAGUNA PLAYHOUSE, 606 LAGUNA CANYON ROAD, LAGUNA BEACH, THROUGH JUNE 27; THURSDAY THROUGH SATURDAY AT 8:00 P.M., SUNDAY AT 7:00 P.M. MATINEE SATURDAY AT 2:00 P.M. 949-497-2787.

Triple Espresso: A Highly Caffeinated Comedy

Hugh Butternutt's done his lounge act at the Triple Espresso Coffeehouse 20 years to the day. While patrons sip a house blend — "Grape," "Scandinavian Blizzard," or "Mokoko Cocoa Mocha" — Hugh plays '70s tunes on the piano. He and his companions, here to celebrate Hugh's anniversary, got stuck in the '70s. The trio used to be Maxwell, Butternutt, and Bean, a comedy group that never went far. They're "losers," they admit, but not "ordinary" ones. And, hey, their reunion could help them face searing issues from their mediocre pasts. A formulaic story line? Yep. Straight from Forever Plaid. There's also the Forever Plaid problem: the three comedians are far too talented to play inept characters. One's a whiz at the piano. Another's a first-rate mime, and the third's a crackerjack magician. The trio is so talented, when the plot has them complain of difficulties to overcome, you wish they'd quit trumping up the pseudo-drama and get on with this highly entertaining, if lightweight show. (Note: the original cast members have been replaced.)

Worth a try.

HORTON GRAND THEATRE, 444 FOURTH AVENUE, GASLAMP QUARTER, OPEN-ENDED RUN; WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY AT 7:30 P.M. FRIDAY AT 8:00 P.M. SATURDAY AT 5:00 AND 8:00 P.M. SUNDAY AT 3:00 P.M. AND 7:00 P.M. 619-234-9583.

Triumph of Love

Starlight Musical Theatre opens its summer season with an Ovation Series production of Stock and Magruger's adaptation of Marivaux's French farce — for four performances only. STARLIGHT BOWL, BALBOA PARK, SAN DIEGO, THURSDAY, JUNE 24, THROUGH SUNDAY, JUNE 27, AT 8:00 P.M. 619-544-7827.

When I Was Your Age

"CNN, ABC, CBS [had scheduled interviews with me, but]...because of Reagan [dying], they canceled. The Boston Globe has already it his way.

"I gave up in January of 2000. He [Congressman Randy "Duke" Cunningham] had come up with [the idea of] me opening up the 106th session of Congress [with the lowered anthem]... Assumed it was a done deal. All 435 [members of the House of Representatives] would have interviewed me...and somebody in Sarasota, Florida, wants to fly me out there to lead the national anthem."

Dr. Ed Siegel has been at it for ten years, and now someone is paying attention. He wants the national anthem lowered, and he wants it lowered now. Down a minor third, from B flat to G, so that the highest note is a D (9 notes above middle C, as opposed to an F, which is 11 notes above middle C). He almost had Congress singing been singing together."

Singing in unison is what Siegel wants — to feel the correspondence of the multitudes singing the anthem together — and reaching all the notes. He believes that right now, people are afraid to sing it.

"I come from Pensacola, Florida, a city where everyone sang. We sang in school, we sang in theaters... Football players had no problem being in the school chorus... [I am the] Johnny Appleseed of singing. When I moved to Solana Beach, there was no singing here. People tend to be embarrassed about singing. Most people, if I asked them to sing, it was like I asked them to take their clothes off... As a psychiatrist, I wonder what that's all about."

On Saturday, June 5, Siegel made the New York Times

cover (lower left corner). The story told how Siegel had gotten a proposal onto the Solana Beach city council agenda that would ask to officially recognize G as the key in which to successfully sing our national Anthem, "The Star-Spangled banner." The Times mentioned that Solana Beach had recently passed a "no smoking on the beach" ordinance. I ask Siegel if he thinks they picked up his story because it was another "crazy SoCal city passes useless amendment." He doesn't think so. "They [the Times] didn't even know about it [the smoking issue]." Siegel says he mentioned it to a local writer for the paper.

When I ask him why he thinks the story got picked up after ten years (he eventually went on CNN, Channel 8, MSNBC, and NPR), he says, "I was in New York City for an American Psychiatric meeting." He said that he told friends and family about his "Star-Spangled Banner" crusade. "My cousin is chairman emeritus of the Lincoln Center," he says, giving me an example of his well connectedness.

"You think somebody said something to the Times."

"Well, obviously. I wouldn't probably get any attention if I called the Reader."

As a psychiatrist, Siegel has a deeper motive for wanting the anthem more singable. "Most parents engage their children in singing; soon after, they're asked to perform, so singing is no longer a free expression of their feelings."

In order to encourage this free expression of feelings, Siegel has played almost every Thursday night for the last 18 years at the Solana Beach community singalong. He had many supporters show up on Tuesday, June 15, at the Solana Beach City Council meeting to sing "The Star-Spangled Banner" in the key of G and to encourage the council to adopt his proposal. The council voted unanimously to encourage the federal government to change the official key of the national anthem, even though one person (a professional musician who claimed to have perfect pitch) urged the council vote against it because he doesn't want to see Solana Beach become a "laughingstock." Perhaps his fear is that if the anthem becomes too accessible, fewer professionals will be hired to sing it.

"Fahrenheit is dead."

Editor Adam Gnade e-mailed that obituary out on Wednesday, June 16. Two days earlier publisher Patrick Glynn told his staff of eight that he was pulling the plug on the music-and-culture magazine. Launched in May 2003, the last issue hit the streets June 5.

"I accept the full blame," said Glynn. He said a lack of ads killed Fahrenheit. "I asked the staff, 'Why are we killing ourselves when the advertisers don't step forward?'"

Glynn still owns and operates Wireless Flash, a daily "news of the weird" service that employs ten full-time staffers and feeds offbeat news items to TV, radio, and print.

Neil Young put out a press release touting the fact that he tours the country in a bus powered by 80 percent diesel and 20 percent biodiesel. The Healing Waters Band boasts a bus that can run for extended stretches on 100 percent vegetable oil — reaching speeds of 75 mph.

To operate a vehicle on cooking grease or vegetable oil, the vehicle must have a diesel-burning engine — such as an old Mercedes or Volkswagen — and be started and stopped on diesel fuel. Once the grease heats up (about two minutes into the drive), the car can switch to run purely on the renewable energy source.

even looks up."

Ty Cox is the drummer of the rockabilly trio Hot Rod Lincoln. Unlike many bands that say they are big in Japan, he has photos to prove it.

"We were playing at a rockabilly festival in Green Bay, Wisconsin, and this Japanese singer and her manager came up and said, 'You guys are great. We want to make a CD with you.'"

"Kazu [the manager] flew us and a photographer over to Japan. We were there for nine days. He gave us rooms and fed us... We felt like rock stars."

Hot Rod Lincoln will return to Japan in September for another mini-tour.

"They love everything American... Everything American sells for five times what it is worth."

Hot Rod has invited Connie, the Japanese singer, to sit in with them at the annual Hootenanny rockabilly festival in Orange County Saturday, July 3.

Cox said cuts from their 14-song CD they recorded with Connie can be heard on their website (www.hotrodrincoln.net).

Hot Rod Lincoln and

Connie appear July 3 at Oak Canyon Ranch near Irvine Lake (www.thehootenanny.com) with the Cramps, Reverend Horton Heat, and five other acts. The show is all ages, $25, 11:30 a.m. to 7 p.m.

HOT ROD'S TY IS A ROLE MODEL IN JAPAN

Hot Rod Lincoln also appears Monday, 5–10 p.m. at the Pala Casino (free admission, must be 21) and July 1 at the San Diego County Fair from 9–11 p.m. on the Showcase Stage.

A woman was hauled away by at least four policemen from the Surf & Saddle two Sundays ago. As the police were cuffing her and trying to push her into the car outside of the Solana Beach club at 1:30 in the morning, she was yelling, "Help! Help! Call 911!" There were a number of spectators enjoying the altercation. One bystander observed, "They were being really quite gentle with her," adding that he'd seen a number of people resisting arrest in L.A. in the 1980s.

One of the Surf & Saddle bartenders told me that the woman came in demanding coffee and Patrone. When he told her that they didn't have coffee, she demanded that he brew her some, saying that she could have them arrested for not having coffee; that every bar had to provide coffee. He told her he wasn't going to brew a fresh pot at 1:30 in the morning. She settled on water.

The other bartender working that night told me that he said to her, "Fine, I can get you a glass of water, and I got her some water."

The final straw was when she turned to both bartenders and said, "So, what are you guys, a couple of faggots?" "I said, 'Okay, that's it. You're out of here,'" said the other bartender.

Both bartenders and two bouncers spent an entire song (the last one, "Soul Kitchen") trying to force the woman to leave the bar. "She kept going on about the coffee," said the one bartender, "not knowing that the guy in the cowboy hat next to her was a sheriff. She didn't believe him until Joe showed her his badge. Then she called him a faggot."

As the police were trying to put her in the car, she kept yelling, "I wasn't even drinking."

"We follow the basic bar policy — take it outside," said Linda E., hostess and promoter of Club Sabbat. "Unfortunately there is nothing anyone can do about random acts of violence except notify the authorities and keep a watchful eye."

There was an apparent assault at Sabbat (held at Shooterz, 3816 University Avenue, "the bar that goes from gay to gothic to Latin," according to Night Guide San Diego) Saturday, May 29. Word on the street is that the victim, while in the restroom, was bashed on the head with a beer bottle, kicked, punched, and called inflammatory, unflattering names.

No crime or incident report was found in the daily watch commander's logs at the San Diego Police Department regarding this assault.

Local Goths have banded together to find the beer-bottle-wielding culprit. Websites www.gothicsandiego.com and www.sdgoth.org, whose members were instrumental in helping authorities track down and catch the flimflammer behind the bogus Björk show at the Flame last year, are playing amateur detective by posting descriptions of the suspect and promoting the exchange of ideas about who he is and where he can be found.

"We have a full description of the assailant and have given these details to the victim and the police," said Linda E. "We have full confidence that he will be caught and charged."

Larry Clark, a.k.a. "Darkman," co-owner and moderator of www.gothic sandiego.com, e-mailed me, "We don't need any bad press brought to the attention of the public about the goth/industrial scene." He told me not to use anything posted on either the message board at www.gothicsandiego.com or on the e-mail list from www.sdgoth.org, adding that "doing so could be cause for legal action."

Clark told me that he did ask the victim if he would be willing to talk to me, but the victim declined.

All the Rest Records was launched April 1 out of an 8' x 5' kiosk in the Fashion Valley mall by singer/songwriter Greg Laswell. He sells only music by independent artists.

"CDs in general are a hard thing to sell," said Laswell, who has self-released two CDs. "We are just about breaking even."

Laswell says he sells music by 30 different artists, none of whom are with a major

"Our biggest obstacle is letting people know what we're doing. We sold out of Gregory Page several times. Parker Theory and Via Satellite have sold really well."

retail for $14.99. Laswell would not disclose his wholesale arrangement with each artist. "Rent is $3000 a month. We opened one in Carlsbad, and it went out of business in two weeks, and its rent was $1800 a month."

All the Rest Records (www.alltherest.com) is open 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. every day except Sunday (11 a.m. to 7 p.m.).

What you might see on VH1's 100 Greatest Artists of Hard Rock (all five one-hour installments air tonight) is Angus Young flailing away on guitar while riding on Bon Scott's shoulder as the singer ran through the audience at the San Diego Sports Arena, July 13, 1979. Midway through the run, Young tumbled to the cement floor, resulting in a dislocated shoulder that somehow didn't keep him from hopping back up onto Scott and completing the show through two encores.

Sixteen-millimeter film footage of the tumble was clear but silent, and the song they were playing when the fall occurred couldn't be identified by a "staff lip reader" (there is such a post). A memo from a producer (I was one of the freelancers obtaining clips to air) reads, "No sound ok, use cartoon BOING FX when he lands and horror movie strings/squeal when [he's]

Iggy Pop belly-flopping onto a tabletop full of drink glasses at the Catamaran in December 1981. The black-and-white video footage

(from a closed-circuit house feed) is clear though grotesque (Pop bleeds profusely, not even seeming to notice as he goes on performing until it looks like a Monty Python sketch).

"Too bloody but not in color and not funny," wrote one VH1 exec.

"It's not metal if you don't see the guitar," summed up another suit.

That Scary Moment

He prefers to sit against the windows facing Newport, what he calls, "O.B. TV, Channel One."

I recently saw a show so weird it could compete with the opening night of the L.A. club Vibrator, at which an Amazon woman named the Queen of Raunch performed a topless-aerobics routine on roller skates. (She had cheeseburgers tucked into crevices all over her body, including underneath and around her breasts. Man, I'll have to tell you THAT story sometime.) The recent weird show was at Winstons, one of the oldest bars in Ocean Beach. As I readied myself for the evening, nostalgia tricked me into smelling patchouli. (In high school, I would buy gifts from the Black to impress Andre, a surfer and O.B. hippie wannabe with long, blond hair who collected anything resembling mushrooms and waves.)

David and I met up with friends at their home, within spitting distance of Newport Avenue, O.B.'s main drag. Across the street from their place is Little Chef, where my father dines almost daily for lunch. He prefers to sit against the windows facing Newport, what he calls "O.B. TV, Channel One." The windows facing Cable Street are Channel Two.

On the walk to Winstons, we passed a young girl with hair so long she could have wrapped it around her body in lieu of clothes. There are three types of people in O.B.: hippies, surfers, and bikers. Half of the hippies have dreadlocks, half of the surfers are in their 40s, and half of the bikers are drunk at any given time. Exceptions to this rule do exist.

We traversed the sand-covered sidewalk until we reached Bacon Street, right in front of what used to be Java Joe's but is now an insidious Starbucks. All right, I'm not going to lie to you...on occasion I crave — and even purchase — a Frappuccino, but I still miss Java Joe's. I miss the poetry nights, the music, the scene. Those events used to bring me to O.B. at least once a week. Starbucks just seems so incongruous the way it is juxtaposed with homeless druggies and hippies eager to stick it to the same man who is selling them chocolate-covered coffee beans. Surreal.

But the surreality was yet to begin. We found the entrance to Winstons behind O.B. Bob's Hot Dog Cart. The bar was empty, save for a few barflies left over from an afternoon of drinking by the beach. I ordered a Barbarella. (Sandy, the bartender, uses raspberry vodka and Bailey's — different, creamy.) I staked out a seat up front, closest to the stage. Ted Washington arrived first. Ted is as famous for his spoken word and stipple-style art as he is for his appearance: a really tall, good-looking black man with shoulder-length dreads, always wearing his glasses and a smile. I've seen him perform at various venues, from a museum at Balboa Park to our own living room. Ted told us he would not be doing his usual spoken word, which consists of him speaking and another individual playing an instrument in the background; rather, he had created a spoken-word band, and this would be their first performance together.

Pruitt Igoe was his new band, named after a housing project in St. Louis that was built in the late '60s and eventually "blown up after ten years because the crime got so bad." I was excited to see something new (I like new things). Speaking and singing along with Ted would be Molly Wilmot, an opera singer recently seen in Turandot — and I only recognized the name because my father saw the show and loved it (sometimes I can be so unsophisticated). What a treat! Playing backup "music" would be Matt Kerr, Jon Cordova, and Are Jay Hoffman (not to be confused with R.J.).

As more friends arrived behind us, Ted kicked off his show by sitting alone on the stage, reading notes and poems scribbled on napkins and flyers from bars he'd bounced at. Sexual, political, angry, Ted's words are one man's view of the world around him. I love poetry for this reason — you get to hear what people feel. I've read my poetry in front of crowds before, and each time I felt naked...yet exhilarated. We listened attentively to every word spoken, and an hour later, everything changed.

After a short break and some instrument setup time, Pruitt Igoe was on...or was it? Molly and Ted were talking back and forth, a sort of dialogue, as electronic music and guitars blared behind them. At first, I couldn't decipher the noise. Despite the fact that I had no idea what they were saying, I was mesmerized by the cacophony of sound surging from the stage. If you've ever eaten a hallucinogenic mushroom, you may have experienced that scary moment when words around you seem to change and mutate into another language — this is what I experienced. For a moment, I forgot what language I spoke, and I feared that if I attempted an utterance, I would embarrass myself among these speakers of another language.

I snapped out of my reverie as I began to recognize the random syllables for the words they were... Ted was repeating the word "asses" over and over, but he was pronouncing it "AAAAH-HHSSSSSSSSSS." Molly was spouting a one-sided conversation, speculating as to why Ted insisted on repeating the word. Ah, SENSE! I could make sense of things, and finally, rather than being terrified by my own ignorance, I was intrigued, curious...where were they taking this? It didn't matter, really. I finally realized that they were talking over a conversation they had recorded, hence that sensation I had that there were more than two voices coming from the stage. Molly did sing (I would have liked to hear more; her voice was so fluid and lovely). There were few moments that the music behind the two stopped long enough for me to comprehend most of the words being spoken, leaving me exasperated and bewildered.

David loved it. Every time I looked his way I found him grinning broadly, eating up each word, swallowing each assaulting noise with alacrity. My friends also loved it. I felt confused, which is probably the main reason I can't tell you that I loved it as honestly as I can say that I found it interesting and hypnotic. Three long "songs," and Pruitt Igoe finished their first set ever.

MUSIC SCENE

Just when I thought I had seen the strangest, most stunningly different show of my life, enter Maiden Taiwan, stage left. Earlier in the evening, I had met this cute little Asian woman. She was friendly, effervescent, adorable...and she was now getting ready to perform.

A hip-hop sort of beat (courtesy of a DJ scratching records onstage) came out through the speakers as Maiden Taiwan took off her coat to reveal her outfit — a one-piece black jersey with the number 69 on the front and silver, glittery stripes down each side. The jersey barely covered her crotch, where you could see a strip of black panties. She introduced herself, elicited applause for Ted and Pruitt Igoe, and then launched right into her music.

I was stunned. Appalled. Confounded. Amused. Really, really amused. After three words, I was laughing so hard I almost fell off my stool. That beautiful, innocent-looking visage framed by pigtailed was shouting, "Fuck my face! Oh, baby, won't you fuck my face! Fuck my face!" What? Did she just say what I think she just said? Before I could recover from the shock of that first minute-long chant, she pulled a girl from the front of the crowd onto the dance floor (her go-go appearance giving her away as an accomplice) and sang, "Take off your panties, so I can eat your ! Take off your panties, so I can eat your !" This, too, was repeated for over a minute. The crowd was riveted. Her catchy phrasing was so effective, my friends have been humming the tunes all week; I sang it into more than one friend's voice mail, and, this morning, I was horrified to find myself mumbling the lyrics at my niece's baptism.

Adding to my amusement, someone told me Maiden Taiwan is a schoolteacher by day. After three or four graphic rap songs highlighting genitalia and other delightful imagery, she took it down a notch and actually sang something. Her voice was pretty and clear, and the lyrics of the one obscenity-free song were poignant and comprehensible. I concluded that her intro, her outfit, and her words are all part of her shtick to get the audience to listen before she can impart her talent. Her energy was infectious.

As we left, my friend Kip said, "This is one of the WEIRDEST things I've EVER seen." I have to agree with him. The only thing weirder would be a dance-off between this Asian bombshell and the Queen of Raunch. But I'm still going to see Maiden's show at the Casbah at the end of July. It's too entertaining to miss. ■

OF NOTE

BY DAVE GOOD

The pipe organ at my church, St. Paul's in Hillcrest, is like a living thing. You can almost hear it wheezing gently in the gloom right before a performance. When played, the sound registers from all angles inside the cathedral with a presence that bounces off of stone and glass and rattles the timbers. Such is the magic of old-fashioned organs. They are handmade and temperamental and subject to the vagaries of climate. They need air to function and therefore have a mechanical pulmonary system. They also require humans to constantly keep them in tune and in repair. There's something of a dying art in all that, in spite of any recent pipe-organ revivals.

I learned of St. Paul's while tagging along with San Diego civic organist Carol Williams, the first female civic organist in the country. She plays the granddaddy of them all, the ancient 89-year-old Spreckels organ in Balboa Park. You may have heard it on a Sunday afternoon in the park, but to really appreciate the monster, you've got to sit close. I suggest front row, center. From that vantage point, the 4500-plus pipes can get loud enough to buzz fillings. But it's a grand kind of loud, majestic and otherworldly, like a carousel gone mad.

Classically trained in her native Britain at the London Royal Academy of Music, Williams is a world-class keyboard and recording artist. In other words, she can rip. She's not afraid to take on the radical scores that require an exhausting keyboard workout; indeed, she favors them. But for this performance, no Reger or Mozart — she's elected to play the soundtrack to The Empire Strikes Back. Could be fun. "I've got an arrangement by an Italian organist that is really nifty," she says by phone. "It's beautiful. His stuff is really cutting edge, but good. It's impressive. [The arrangement] uses the organ's quiet effects all the way to as loud as you can play the Spreckels organ."

OF NOTE

BY WILLIAM CRAIN

Junior Brown first started to get national attention about ten years ago. He was the Texan in the cowboy hat, the one playing a weird-looking guitar, singing hilariously cynical songs like "Joe, the Singing Janitor" in a wonderfully deep voice. There were a number of places you might have seen him: on tour; at the Grammys; on the cover of guitar magazines; in his slapstick-comedy video for "My Wife Thinks You're Dead"; in television commercials for Lipton tea or the Gap; or playing a farmer on an episode of The X-Files. You might even have recognized his voice in an episode of SpongeBob SquarePants.

One place you probably did not come across Junior Brown was on the radio. No doubt Brown would like that to change, but he's probably not losing any sleep over it. He's been playing around Austin for 30 years, and he may well be playing there 30 years from now.

Although his music is steeped in the tradition of country, rock, blues, and surf music, Brown's just as much an original as the custom-made, double-necked creation he calls the guit-steel. His trademark instrument allows him to switch back and forth between a regular six-string electric and lap steel, and he switches so quickly that you might swear he's got four hands. The guy plays guitar like a man possessed. The third thing, however, may be the most important: He writes really great songs. Despite the gimmicky nature of his instrument and the humor of his lyrics, Brown is the real thing.

>hometown CDs BY MARY MONTGOMERY

Artist: Yovee

Label: Elf Magic Records

Songs: 1) Intimate Controversy 2) Addicted to Chaos 3) Pockets Inside Out 4) Rage in Ruins 5) City Strolling 6) Dreamer on the Run

Price/Where Available: loserkids.com for $10

Band Members: Brandon Parkhurst (vocals, guitar), Micah Mattson (guitar, harmonica), Evan Polselli (piano, keyboard, organ), Nell Blevins (female vocals), Brian Cook (drums, percussion), Dylan Raasch (bass)

Extra Info: Yovee plays the Belly Up Tavern (143 S. Cedros Ave. in Solana Beach) tomorrow. Show starts at 8:30, $8 cover.

Website: www.yovee.com

Six-piece Yovee rocks out on their first EP with edgy folk/alternative rock in a drastic turnaround from the punk roots of Kut U Up, the precursor to Yovee (three members are the same).

Ditching the overdone hardcore punk thing was probably the best decision these guys (and gal) could have made, but it's nice to see they haven't gone completely soft.

"Addicted to Chaos" proves sardonic lyricism is still a staple when it comes to a good rock song. "If what was thought was really said / I'd socialize 'til the day I was dead...so I will look for the tunnel to come / instead of the light that it was taken from / don't get this wrong 'cuz you kill to be right / as I drink everything in sight."

Subtle acoustics colliding against ambient noise produce an overall sound that's something like Pinback meets Rush. The recording is clear and vibrant. "Dreamer on the Run" is the standout track, with an urgency provided by layered male/female vocal harmonies. "Pockets Inside Out" and the bouncy beats of title track "City Strolling" (which, oddly enough, has g, as opposed to the album name), mask some of the embittered lyrics.

Yovee

The entire disc is marked by an ethereal hum that dips and dives with stinging guitars and intertwined vocals that create a unique San Diego sound.

(To hear a sample of City Strollin', call 619-233-9797, wait for the prompt, then punch in ext. 4122.)

THE ALIBI

1403 University Ave.
Hillcrest
619-295-0881

MUSIC > rock, country, alt-country, rockabilly, roots-rock, blues, alternative

CLIENTELE > 21 and up; average age early 20s; 50% female; a few gay couples; 65% Caucasian, 15% African-American, 10% Latino, 10% Asian

COVER > none

HOURS > 8:00 a.m.-2:00 a.m.

DRINKS > no happy hour; on tap includes Budweiser, Bud Light, Sierra Nevada, Bass, Guinness, Hefeweizen; famous for their "Big Dipper," which is 24 oz. Budweiser for $2.50

FOOD > they used to have a kitchen, but no longer (they sell bags of chips); McDonald's across the street, the Living Room coffeehouse next door

ACCESS > from 163, take

University a half mile east; no parking lot, but street parking is easy to find (the five spots in front of bar will probably be taken)

DRESS > casual; some shorts, sandals, but most in jeans and T-shirts ("Exciter," "Army," "USA-Mexico," "Cafe Moto," and "South 32 Cigarettes")

DANCE FLOOR > small area about 10' by 15' in front of the band

FIRE EXITS > three — the main entrance, another door going onto University, and one from the back

BATHROOMS > men's had one toilet with seat liners that had graffiti around them saying "ass gaskets," "free party hats," "free tortillas"; women's had one toilet, a painting on the wall, and an overflowing wastebasket

SPECIAL AREAS > recent

renovations include a back smoking area with five tables and four chairs at each table and a counter area (not covered); the section the band plays in has two pool tables (one is covered during music), pinball, and one video game

FURNISHINGS > only three tables in both sections with four seats each; you can see the band from most areas of either room; 20 seats at the bar, four TVs, three ceiling fans (one without blades), framed black-and-white photos of old movie stars; a three-foot ship in a display case, a pay phone (with the sign "out of order"), and a disco ball

DECIBEL LEVEL > 121 when the Deere Johns played; last week 117 at Java Joe's

WEIRDEST BAND NAME IN

LAST MONTH > Bored to Death

QUOTABLE > "I wish those idiots would've stayed over at the Living Room" (coffeehouse next door), a guy said when five girls, one with a punk haircut, walked in loudly.

One of the bartenders here told me the Alibi has been here since 1972. But one of the patrons told me, "It's been here longer than that. This is the oldest bar in San Diego. They used to have a story on the wall from the newspaper that said it was the oldest."

Another patron pipes in, "We don't need neon signs like those other yuppie places in Hillcrest. And this is the one bar in Hillcrest that isn't a gay bar."

That's somewhat debatable. I did see a handful of gay couples, but this is Hillcrest after all. One of my poker buddies who's straight is always here, and he insists it's not a gay bar. A gal I know who's a lesbian comes here, and she confirms it's not a gay bar. A Reader from 2000 had, "It's the best gay bar for heterosexuals."

One wall here is covered with graffiti. I was in a bar in Utah that has graffiti covering the walls, some of it written in the 1800s. Now that's an old bar.

— Josh Board

Flurries of Curries

Monsoon is the Gaslamp's little sister to Hillcrest's Bombay Exotic Cuisine of India. On the site of the former Kalahari, the owners have redone the interior to hint at East Indian decor. An expanded version of Bombay's North Indian menu is amended by dishes leaning toward flavors from the south. "We wanted to make it more of a fine-dining atmosphere, as opposed to the casual neighborhood restaurant feeling of Bombay," says manager Mark Lewis. "And we're able to make the buffet line here at lunch and for Monday dinner about twice as long."

A monsoon is a southwest wind that brings torrential summer rainstorms. India's monsoon season, from June to September, can dump 86 inches of water on Bombay (now called Mumbai) and 200 inches on Darjeeling. One oil painting in the restaurant portrays a drenched chapatti vendor ankle-deep in water. Monsoon also recreates the sound of a downpour with a fountain's roaring waterfall.

There are other sound effects, too. During our visit, new Bose speakers blasted what sounded like Indian film music. (Other evenings might be quiet ragas.) The restaurant filled up, and the din increased as customers chatted over the racket. The staffers (not Indians but Anglos, well versed in the menu and wines) couldn't hear us order; we had to yell to converse.

The crowd included large groups of East Indians (tourists or conventioners, since few women or children sat among them), clumps of senior-age American travelers, random parties, and the occasional couple. My companions were my steady, Alan; Sam the gourmand; and Sheila, a UC Davis-trained Aussie wine-growing expert. In Australia, Indian restaurants are ubiquitous and often excellent, much as they are in England, so her input was welcome. As we ate and compared notes, we came to feel that Monsoon's food was spiritually tied to the eponymous rains, the singular flavors of regional Indian cuisines washed into a deluge of tomato and turmeric. The cooking is appetizing, and if you like one dish here, you'll like them all. That is not a compliment.

There are two appetizer samplers, veg and non-veg. We ordered both. The platters come with a cilantro dip and a brown tamarind sauce with more sugar than is customary. The veg group offers a potato samosa (turnover), veggie pakor (fritters), and onion bhaji (the Indian equivalent of onion rings). The *pakor*s and bhaji feature a crunchy batter surrounding crisp-soft vegetables; the potato turnover is pleasant despite a bland filling.

The non-veg sampler comes with a lamb-stuffed samosa, fish and chicken breast *pakor*s, two tandoori seekh kebabs, and a pair of tandoori chicken legs. The fish in the *pakor*s was soft and tasty, like mini bites of fish and chips, hold the chips, but the chicken breast in the fritters was parched, and the coarse-ground lamb in the turnover tasted greasy and underseasoned. The seekh kebabs were wonderful, though — the uncased lamb sausages were juicy and flavored with cilantro. The chicken legs, rubbed with yogurt, spices, and crimson food coloring, had a mild flavor that contradicted their scarlet hue. "Mom's oven-baked chicken," said Alan (whose mom never dreamt of buying a bottle of Patak's tandoori marinade). But we did wonder whether the restaurant keeps its tandoor oven heated to less than the usual 700°F inferno, since neither the chicken nor the kebabs sported the typical hard crust.

Indian food goes best with fruity beverages, whether non-alcoholic mango lassi or "umbrella cocktails." We ordered an Alexander Valley gewürztraminer, and its citrusy flavors were perfect. Alan experimented with a Yeti lager from India, and it tasted like the gewürz's hoppy twin, sweet for a beer but enjoyable with this cuisine.

The fare offers India's leavened flatbreads, pakora and naan, available straight up or in variation. We chose garlic naan, which was garlicky indeed, and "Kabuli" naan, layered with dried sweet cherries, pistachios, and coconut shreds. (The word "Kabuli," meaning, "in the style of Kabul," indicates a mixture of cashews, pistachios, and raisins. Dried sour cherries would be more credible than sweet ones, but coconut is out of range — tropical

The menu describes the entrée curries ingredient by ingredient, creating the impression that each dish will be distinct from the next. We were distressed when the server delivered five soup bowls of orange-colored mud and a sixth of green and orange mud.

The waiter asked how spicy we wanted the "hot" dishes. We specified 7 on a scale of 10. Just one dish, the delicious saag paneer (spinach with house-made yogurt cheese, the green mud described above), was atypically spicy, reaching a 3 for a dish that's usually a

1. (The paneer cheese was also the creamiest I can remember.) Our other dishes ranked 1 or less. "I think we're eating the cuisine of the British Raj here," said Sheila. "You know, during the British reign over India, the functionaries that England sent over there had their Indian servants cook dishes that were partway between Indian and English food."

There's more yogurt in Indian culture than there is on Monsoon's menu. Yogurt (dahi) or a yogurt relish (raita) is offered free at restaurants in India to provide relief from hot peppers. Upon tasting our entrées, we realized we didn't need it here. (However, cucumber-yogurt salad is served with the tandoori entrées and at the buffets.)

Not only were our dishes universally chili-less, they tasted alike. Dizzy noo shak, for instance, is a specialty of Gujarat (the Indian state next door to Mumbai). It normally consists of (as Monsoon's menu describes it) "bananas slit and carefully stuffed with a spicy mixture of spices..." Spicy, really spicy, should be the operative word. Monsoon served banana chunks swathed in a coconut-curry sauce. We loved it for itself, but it was not the dish the menu depicted. Another entrée called Calcutta shrimp claims a sauce made from "cream, cardamom, garlic, and ginger," classic ingredients of upper-class North Indian cuisine. But this dish, too, was laden with coconut shreds, more typical of the southernmost states. The dark-orange sauce, colored by tomatoes, was far from the ivory color I expected.

Sam did a bite-by-bite comparison of the cilantro chicken (dhaniya murgh) and the lamb meatball (kofta) curry. He discovered that the sauces of the two dishes were almost identical in flavor, although the chicken curry was thinner. Sheila measured the house special mango curry ("sweet and spicy...") against the banana curry and decided they, too, were near twins — and neither of them sweet or spicy, just pleasant. Later, when I spoke by phone with the chef, he verified that because of the large volume of customers the restaurant serves, most curries start with the same house-made "base" of onions, tomato paste, garam masala (an aromatic spice mix), and other spices. The variations — mango purée here, coconut shreds or cilantro there, powdered hot chiles when requested — are applied during the final prep of the individual entrées. The best way for a group to get a meal with contrasting flavors and textures might be to order a tandoori dish and a biryani (fancy rice) entrée along with some curries.

We welcomed a chance to sample a triple dessert plate. At one end was a mango mousse tasting of fruit, sugar, and whipped cream, nice but not very Indian. In the center was a cylinder of mint-flavored kulfi, Indian ice milk, topped with pistachios; its underlying flavor was sweetened condensed milk, which is one authentic way to make the dish. Then there was the rice pudding, called kheer.

"This isn't Indian kheer," said Alan at first bite, tasting the cinnamon pervading the pudding. "This is the Swedish rice pudding my Minnesota grandmother always made at Christmas — cinnamon, cardamom, raisins..."

"Well, I'd say that's the key to the food here," said Sheila. "It's Indian food for Minneapolis-St. Paul. Look around," she concluded. "That's who they're cooking for."

ABOUT THE CHEF

Monsoon and the long-running Bombay are owned by the brother-sister team of Ashley (Ashita) and Rakesh Popat, born of Indian parentage in Uganda. Chef duties at both restaurants are shared by executive chefs Padhu Krishnam and "Juggy" Singh. The menus are determined by the owners and their mother and by the chefs. Padhu was on duty at Monsoon the day I called. Padhu was born in Bangalore, in Southern India. "I have a passion for cooking: I like to feed people, and that's why I got into [the field]. I did my Food Craft Institute in India, and I used to cook for my spiritual leader whenever he came here. My wife was originally from Louisiana. We met and married in India, but she was living in San Diego. That's why I came here."

In his new country, Padhu studied cooking at San Diego State and took a crash course in the kitchens of St. Vincent de Paul, doing "huge industrial cooking." The experience allowed him to share cooking tips with many Vietnamese and Filipino culinary students who'd started their careers as cooks in the Army. Then he started working at Bombay Restaurant. "Every region of India has a different way of preparing food. At Bombay, they began with a lot of family recipes of North Indian cuisine, but there was a little bit of 'fusion' there, too. Here at Monsoon we do a few southern dishes; for instance, a Balti dish from Kerala, some curries from Madras, some dishes with coconut milk. But most of the dishes are still northern, with cream and yogurt.

"Every day I make my curry base, starting with sautéed onions, tomato paste, a little butter, garam masala, turmeric, chili powder, a little bit of ginger and garlic. The chicken and lamb I precook every day because the volume here is so great. My chicken tikka masala I do every morning; it has a special marinade and is cooked with a little cream. On the dinner menu, we have mild, medium, and spicy, and according to request, we blend in more or less of the hot spices. If customers ask for the food very spicy, I put in a lot of chili powder, turmeric, and cumin. Since I did my culinary school over here, I also bring a little of my experience from that — curry garnishing and that sort of thing. And I love to watch the Food Channel; I get a lot of ideas from that. Those chefs are so amazing, the way they create such beautiful food on the plate!

"We do have to adapt the food to the tourists in the Gaslamp. The convention center is always the biggest source of our patrons. I make a lot of very mild things, especially for the lunch buffets, but then we put out a spicy sauce that people can add if they want. But a lot of tourists are actually used to the spicy sort of blend. We have a lot of Middle Eastern people coming here, and of course when we have British people, they all want it as spicy as possible. And the people who come from New York ask for the real southern dishes, dhosas and appam and foods like that. We're working on that for the future." ■

Bee Pity

"We're open so late, the lights were wrecking their biorhythms. So we hauled them out."

"I never eat before I perform," Teresa says. "But this looks so good," I say. "Look, 'Apple Tree. Our signature apple BBQ grilled chicken, $6.50.' You're not...?"

"I never eat before I perform."

"You sure...?"

"I..."

"Oh. Right." I shift around a little. "Mind if I do?"

"Heck, no."

Teresa doesn't even want anything to drink. Right now she's focused on the concert her class from Door of Hope (the Salvation Army place for young mothers) is going to give across the road at City College tonight. She makes me feel worm-high to a grasshopper. Not only does Teresa sing — did you ever hear Teresa's "Trailer Park Queen"? Janis Joplin, eat your heart out — but now Teresa's caught up with her teen mothers and drawing their singing and poetic talents out of them. She's gotten their poems published, a CD out. Has created an organization, Street of Dreams. City College has gotten involved. I mean, she's giving them a voice, man. And you know they've got hearts bursting with things to say.

Still, I do gotta eat.

So as soon as Teresa takes off up the stairs, I shift from the black Naugahyde booth we were in to the bar, grab a high stool, and pick up one of the black plastic menus.

This is the Bee Hive. Just happened to be here.

Convenient place to meet Teresa. It's beside KB Books, the place for recycled college textbooks, in a low, white '50s building. Talk about dive bar. You dive downstairs into this kind of cellar cavern, with bare rafters, black furniture, blue velvet drapes, giant mirror, and golden wood horseshoe bar.

And cool people hanging out around it. Half of them have books, things they're studying. Other half sit arguing loudly about the Padres, or the continental shelf, or tsunamis.

Jeez. It's happy hour. Four to seven. They have a house draft, Honey Bee Hive, for two bucks. Hmm. But no. Need to stay awake for Teresa's concert.

I check out the black plastic-covered menu. Appetizer wings "with our signature apple BBQ sauce" cost $4.50. So do the cheese sticks, jalapeño poppers, zucchini sticks, and a baked potato with "the works."

Serious stuff's on the other side. Entrées. Big Daddy Steak, 12-ounce top sirloin for 12 bucks, including a baked potato and salad. Nearer reality, fish and chips are $8.00. Oh, and grilled mahimahi — lemon or Cajun flavored — with "garden salad" and baked potato is $8.50. Calamari tacos look good too. "Two beer-battered tacos with red pepper aioli and fresh garden salad," $6.50.

"No sniveling. Drink your Jäger Blaster!" says an ad on the wall. Hip-hop blasts on the sound system. I order up a lame-duck Coke ($1.50). Mi-los, the guy behind the bar — the owner, turns out, God! looks too young to be an owner — he's waiting for me to decide, just as I'm seeing all the "bee" meals on the menu. The Bee Keeper burger ("Our classic ½ -lb. cheeseburger, $6.00"); King Bee, honey-lemon-grilled chicken sandwich or wrap ($6.50); Queen Bee, Cajun honey-grilled chicken sandwich or wrap ($6.50); Drone, "buffalo-style chicken" ($6.50); Bee Sting, spicy Cajun-grilled mahimahi ($6.50); and on.

"What's with the bee thing?" I ask Milos.

"Well, I've been running this place four years," he says. He's Czech but has hardly any accent. "It feels like a beehive down here. Plus I play drums. Have a band, called Buckfast Superbee. At one point I hired a beekeeper to bring an actual hive of bees to live here inside. We put them up there above the TVs. We pointed a videocam at them and projected whatever they were doing onto the big screen on the wall so everybody could see. It was great."

"So what happened?"

"It wasn't fair to them. We're open so late, the lights were wrecking their biorhythms. They need to sleep nights. So we hauled them out. Pity. Uh, decided yet?"

"What's the most interesting?"

"Guess it'd have to be the Apple Tree. If you like sweet flavor to your chicken, that is."

Huh. Just what I was showing Teresa. "Fine. I'll have one."

"Me too," says this gal sitting next to me. Lisa. She's got all these papers spread out in front of her. Studying for her film class across the road.

So that's how I come to be chowing down this big sesame-seed sub filled with chicken chunks covered in sweet, cheesy ooze, with red onions, lettuce, and a gaggle of french fries gathered around them. On a beautiful, big, round black plate.

And yet I'm feeling squirrely, uptight. How come? Surrounded by too much talent, I guess. Everyone you talk to. Lisa's got the entire history of the film world wrapped. Juergen, the guy a couple of stools away, turns out to be a first-time movie director. Just directed Out of the Circle. Psychological horror movie. Then it turns out Milos and his band played the Knitting Factory in L.A. last night. Knitting Factory. Plus, Teresa's giving new life to unwed teen mothers and has produced CDs. Me? Sweating to pay rent. That's it. Life.

Quality Pie

“He came in with a group, and he didn’t want to taste — he had that kind of ‘I’m from Napa and I don’t need to taste stuff.’”

There is no question that wine, whatever its objective character, is open to subjective influences. Beyond the matter of varying palate sensitivities, there is a host of factors that may color judgment — the accompanying food, the company, the occasion, the reputation, the price, and so on. So I will hesitate to gush overmuch about the Palumbo Family Vineyards Sangiovese since I tasted it in the presence of winemaker Nick Palumbo, in the winery’s Temecula tasting room, after an amiable conversation. We had just finished talking about California’s difficulties with the grape, in particular, the way some winemakers seemed to be trying to make Sangioveses as if they were Cabernets — big, brawny, tannic beasts, as opposed to lighter, more acidic wines.

“If you go up into some of the hills throughout Chianti,” he explained, “you’ll see it’s totally different — the hillsides, the plantings. The vines are on steep rocky slopes, a foot off the ground, with two short arms — and they’re not irrigated. Everybody up and down the coast of California is radically different from that in the way they approach the growing of the grape. And because of our climate, the grapes tend to get a little overextracted, especially in drought years. But I

Palumbo had long since sold out of this year’s Sangiovese, but he said he was planning to drink some for dinner that evening and so he popped the cork on one from his personal stash. “This is a Sangiovese with 15 percent Cabernet in it, but it’s not Cab-like at all,” he said, lifting his glass to let the light pour through the translucent red of the wine. “I pick up a sweetness and toastiness of a sun-dried tomato on the nose.” My own nose is not made of stone. I sniffed, and sure enough: sun-dried tomato. I sipped and thought it was one of the finest California Sangioveses I had tasted.

My conclusion was hardly scientific — too many influencing factors — but it has received a measure of corroboration: the Sangiovese is on the wine list at Arterra restaurant. “I’m careful with restaurants,” said Palumbo, who sells most of his tiny (under 2000 cases) production directly from the winery. “I subscribe to a hardcover magazine called Art Culinaire. There was a feature on Arterra and chef Carl Schroeder, and it was talking about how he’s a San Diego boy, committed to top quality and local growers and local produce. I consider myself a farmer first, and I thought that approach to food and the food world would be a perfect fit.” A friend who worked part-time at the restaurant’s banquet bar got Palumbo a contact. After a couple of tastings with the restaurant’s wine director, the Sangiovese and Bordeaux-style Tre Fratelli were in. Palumbo has since made it onto the list at 910. “When you say, ‘Hey, I’m in Arterra,’ they say, ‘Well, we’ll at least taste it,’ instead of saying, ‘Temecula? Get out of here.’”

“And even beyond that, I’ve gotten some attention from other restaurants without even trying. They’re finding me. I had all these plans for expanding, having a new tasting room. Then I thought, ‘No. It’s working; don’t screw it up.’ Just build another building for production. Keep the limos out of here, keep the tour buses out of here. Just eventually do what Vincent Arroyo does: have my special wines, like he does with his Petite Sirah. You can’t just go buy it, because you can’t find it. You have to be on a list. That’s where our Cabernet Franc is, and that’s where I want to be. I want to be able to just sell wines to people that know me.”

The reference to Napa’s Vincent Arroyo is perhaps not accidental. Palumbo said the winery’s tasting room manager paid a visit a while back. “He came in with a group, and he didn’t want to taste — he had that kind of ‘I’m from Napa and I don’t need to taste stuff.’ My wife Cindy didn’t back down; she gave him a glass and said, ‘Here you are.’ We were really friendly. He tasted, and he walked out of here with six bottles of wine. And this is a guy that I’m sure tastes a lot of the best wines Napa has to offer — for free.”

wines are always going to have a stigma, no matter how good the wines get,” he said, acknowledging the region’s less-than-stellar reputation. But stigma or no, “I think the days of sloppy, poorly grown, poorly made wines in this valley are soon to be done. Wineries are saying, ‘We want a piece of that bigger pie, that quality pie.’ It’s tough, with more wineries coming into the valley, to just keep selling plonk for seven bucks a bottle. I wouldn’t be happy or comfortable doing that. This is my career from the get-go.”

So when it came time to price his first vintage a year and a half ago, Palumbo looked around the best the valley had to offer for guidance. The decision was based partly on his tiny production, partly on the desire for his wines to have the "perceived quality" that a higher price can confer, and partly on what the competition was charging. "I didn't necessarily think I could beat the stigma, but I thought I could hang in there with the best of them and, with this vineyard, surpass what had been done before. There are some guys in the valley that are pushing $40 and I figured, 'I'm right in there with all the other guys. I'll go right at them.'" While his Sangiovese sold for a relatively inexpensive $22, he felt confident pricing his Tre Fratelli at $36.

"There was a guy in here who knew California wines. He looked down at the prices and said, 'A bit expensive, isn't it?' Without blinking, I said, 'No, not at all. If it said "Napa" on the label, I'd charge you $100 for it.' There are wines getting $75 a bottle that aren't as good as mine from this year. I'm not going to say I'll compete with the $100 bottles out of Napa, but I'll compete with their $25 or $35 bottles. That whole Temecula perception? We're beating it." ■

NORTH COASTAL

Big Jim's Old South Barbecue

190 North Coast Highway 101 (2 blocks north of Encinitas Boulevard), Encinitas, 760-635-1166. At this outstanding barbecue, you can "Put Some South in Yo Mouth!" The smoking-wood is mellow hickory, and each type of meat (sublime "pulled pork," smoky skewered shrimp, huge pork ribs, chicken, steak) gets individualized treatment, including a tangy Alabama-style mustard sauce for pork and chicken. (Beef gets the more familiar tomatoey Texas-style sauce.) Side dishes are superb: Don't miss the thick, smoky-sweet Brunswick stew (you'll not find its like anywhere on this coast), exemplary hush puppies, corn muffins with honey butter, well-balanced slaw... Oh, just taste everything you can fit under your belt. Lunch/dinner daily, breakfast weekends. Low moderate. — N.W. (10/01)

Cafe 101 631 South Coast Highway 101, Oceanside, 760-722-5220. This is the oldest li'l eating establishment in Oceanside. Cooks have been flipping burgers here since 1928. The café is named after Route 101, the Pacific Highway. Old-timers remember when everyone from truck drivers to movie stars would stop for a bite before heading on to San Diego and Tijuana. Try the ABC (avocado, bacon, and cheese) Omelet, the 101 Original Cheeseburger with its "secret sauce," chicken fried steaks with eggs and, of course, the Great Depression dish: biscuits with gravy and home fries. Open daily, three meals until midnight. Inexpensive. — E.B. (3/01)

Cafe Sevilla Carlsbad 3050 Pico Pico (off Carlsbad Village Drive), Carlsbad, 760-730-7558. The atmosphere is cozy and pleasant. Dine upstairs for larger tables. Tapas and Spanish specialties of average competence. Music will warm your blood. Lunch Monday through Friday. Dinner nightly, to midnight Friday and Saturday. Moderate to expensive. — E.W.

The Encinitas Cafe 531 South Coast Highway 101 (at D Street), Encinitas, 760-632-0919. This American café serves breakfast from opening to closing, with egg dishes, biscuits, and gravy for breakfast, sandwiches and salads for lunch, and American entrées for dinner. Fast, excellent service. Open daily, three meals. Inexpensive. — E.W.

Kim's Restaurant 745 First Street, Lumberyard Shopping Center #103, Encinitas, 760-942-4816. Both Vietnamese and Chinese dishes are offered in a calm atmosphere with quick, pleasant service. The menu lists 265 items, including 18 Vietnamese house specialties, 28 seafood dishes, and a whopping 45 vegetarian/vegan dishes, many made with seitan (mock poultry). The seafood isn't necessarily fresh catch — some shellfish is evidently obtained frozen, scallops are phosphate-preserved, and the reasonably priced abalone dishes involve slightly chewed, rehydrated dried abalone from Asia. On the other hand, portions are enormous, and the cooking is careful and tasty, although some flavors have evidently been adapted to American palates and ingredients. Open Tuesday through Sunday, continuous service lunch and dinner; closed Monday. Moderate. — N.W. (10/01)

Meritage 897 South Coast Highway 101, Lumberyard Shopping Center, Encinitas, 760-634-3350. Chef-owner Susan Sbicca creates pristine California Cuisine here, highlighting fresh (and usually organic) local produce. A few pick hits are direct imports from her Sbicca down the coast — the irresistible lobster-crabmeat croquettes and lobster-shrimp bisque are pure Del Mar deluxe. But some simpler dishes cleverly complete themselves as you eat them — salmon served with peas and mushrooms on one side and a creamy sauce on the other creates a whole new sauce when you broach the fillet. A lemon-pistachio cake, too, changes as you cut it, the pieces crumbling into a berry coulis. It's a fun way to eat, engaging the mind along with the palate. The setting is family-friendly (only well-mannered kids come here) with a handsome, airy dining room and charming patio. Wide-ranging wine list, plenty by the glass and even some half-bottles. No corkage on Tuesdays; Mondays and Wednesdays most bottles half price. Reservations advisable. Lunch and dinner daily, bar menu ongoing. Moderate to slightly expensive. — N.W. (7/03)

Palomar Airport Cafe 2162 Palomar Airport Road, Carlsbad, 760-438-9665. Top Gun, anyone? Chow down and choose views of planes like the 1935 Harvard, "The Texan," or the Life Flight choppers scrambling. Expect to see greats like Chuck Yeager or his buddy Lowell Williams, who still trains stunt pilots here. It's not gourmet, but it's down-to-earth solid nosh, with plenty of beer and spirits flowing. The café's sexy waitresses serve generous plate-loads of everything from breakfast burritos (scrambled eggs, onions, bell pepper, potatoes, cheese) to corned beef hash with eggs and spuds. Or lunchwiches with quirky plane names like Almost Famous Mustang Burger (open-faced with chili) or the B-29 (turkey, Swiss cheese, Ortega chilies "melted together on grilled sourdough"). Delish. Breakfast, lunch daily. Inexpensive. — E.B. (8/03)

eries in a friendly town, this is a sushi bar where everybody knows your name (or acts like they do). The chefs love to whip up special dishes for the many regulars at the counter, so if you're a newbie, keep an eye out for what your neighbors are eating. A blackboard lists the specials, guiding you to the day's freshest catch. Should you spot pompano on the list, get two orders — with two orders (but not if you just order one), after you've consumed the delicate raw fillets, the chefs will deep-fry the skeleton to a lacy crunchiness. If you don't feel like sushi, there are several tables, and standard Japanese appetizers and entrées are available. Lunch Tuesday through Friday, dinner Tuesday through Sunday. Moderate. — N.W. (9/01)

Sbicca American Bistro 215 15th Street, Del Mar, 858-481-1001. The roof garden has an unobstructed ocean view and is especially pleasant for very good American or Mexican breakfasts. Select simplest preparation for dinner: Chilean sea bass, salads, soups. Roasted half chicken best bet. Lunch Monday through Friday, dinner nightly. Brunch Saturday and Sunday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Moderate. — E.W. (9/98)

NORTH INLAND

Dicrescenzo's 11625 Duenda Road (off W. Bernardo Drive), Rancho

Bernardo, 858-487-2776. This is a stand-in-line, order-at-the-counter, grab-a-table, listen-for-your-order-number kind of a place. If you're looking for pampering and atmosphere, this isn't gonna cut it. If you're wanting yummy Italian comfort food to eat in or take out, this the spot. The bread alone is worth a trip. Real, flaky, honest-to-goodness French rolls complement pastas and salads or encase meatballs, eggplant parmesan, or deli meats. The meatballs, a DiCrescenzo family recipe, are unusually moist and tender, perfectly seasoned. The subs — especially Rocco's Imperial Sub — are packed with deli goodies and just enough Italian dressing. Thin crust pizzas are a popular treat. Open Monday through Saturday, lunch to early dinner. Inexpensive. — S.M. (10/03)

The French Market Grille 15717 Bernardo Heights Parkway, San Diego, 858-485-8055. Ambience is served in generous portions at this romantic establishment with elegant indoor dining or a charming garden setting. The wine list has over 50 selections, including several available by the glass, and the varied menu offers Gallic dishes of duck, lamb, fish, veal, frog legs, and more. Most dishes are served with the usual French cuisine sauces, but if you're dieting, they'll gladly omit sauce. Ingredients and execution of the entrées can be inconsistent (e.g., some nights the fish is overcooked or the meat is tough, other nights they're fine) but the crab-cake appetizer is always outstanding. Save room for dessert, especially the excellent crème brûlée. Open daily for lunch and dinner. Moderate. — S.M. (11/03)

Mille Fleurs 6009 Paseo Delicias, Rancho Santa Fe, 858-756-3085. One of the area's top destination restaurants, Bertrand Hug's beautiful room with beautiful food draws "the beautiful people" — Hollywood honchos, high-end high school graduation parties, and a steady influx of rarefied Rancho Santa Fe residents flaunting huge twinkling rocks. The daily-changing menu sports first-rate modern French cuisine (with a few German touches) by long-time chef Martin Woelsle. Order at will — everything's flawless. The menu's most exciting on weeknights, when crowds are sparser and the kitchen has time to stretch. The wine list is fabulous but exorbitant even at the bottom. Lunch weekdays, dinner nightly. Reservations a must. Very, very expensive. — N.W. (5/01)

GOLD COAST

Beach House 2530 South Coast Highway 101, Cardiff-by-the-Sea, 760-753-1321. This beautiful restaurant with its breezy seafont patio is a branch of an upscale beach mini-chain (others are in Dana Point and Laguna Beach). Its main menu features steaks, seafood, and some "Continental" warhorses (lobster thermidor, et al) that are best avoided. The view is even more spectacular from the upstairs "Top of the House" which features pub grub and fish in a lighthouse-like setting. On Sundays, local families flock in for the moderately priced à la carte champagne brunch featuring the standard dishes of the genre plus some less-successful fancied-up ones, with endless Freixenet champagne. Whatever the meal, stay simple here — burgers, steak, unfussy eggs — and enjoy the atmosphere. Reserve for a view table or outdoor seating at Sunday brunch. Full bar but few wines. $2 valet parking. Restrooms accessible by elevator, may be tight fit for wider wheelchairs. Daily brunch/lunch and dinner. "Top of the House" serves until 11 p.m. nightly; "early bird" cut-price dinners weeknights. Brunch moderate, dinner moderate to very expensive. — N.W. (7/03)

Charlie's by the Sea 2565 South Highway 101, Cardiff-by-the-Sea (a long block south of the stoplight), 760-942-1300. This seaside spot offers a blissful patio right on the breakwater and a terrific, authentic Boston-style clam chowder to match the view — it's light, creamy, and loaded with clams, unpeeled red potato chunks, and bits of honey-cured bacon. The kitchen's good with simple dishes, including fresh raw oysters and the lively "Bayou Burger" with Cajun seasonings and well-made spicy fries. The dinner menu includes more ambitious items, but the weekly

main event here is Sunday brunch, with a menu of standard brunch dishes at affordable prices, featuring endless refills of champagne. (Hint: Veuve Clicquot it's not.) Huge wine list, full bar. Free valet parking. Brunch reservations advisable. Open daily, lunch or brunch and dinner. Moderate to expensive. — N.W. (9/03)

Le Bambou 2634 Del Mar Heights Road, Del Mar, 858-259-8138. Nouvelle Vietnamese cuisine is prepared here that's fresh, light, delicate. But the portions are small and two people should order three entrées for a satisfactory meal. Soups are outstanding and the imperial rolls, lemon grass chicken, soft-shelled crab, vegetarian rolls, and charbroiled pork do well here. The wine list includes 40 items. Fast service and aesthetic surroundings. Lunch Tuesday to Friday; dinner Tuesday to Sunday; closed Monday. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.W.

LA JOLLA

808 Restaurant The Aventure, 8980 University Center Lane, University City/Golden Triangle, 858-552-1048. Chef-owner Jean-Marie Josselin brings his Hawaiian-French fusion food from Kauai to The Aventure and it's a delight. The restaurant's ever-changing seasonal menu reads like a Frenchman's dream of happy tropics, and the decor looks the part — part glitz, part grass shack. The kitchen emphasizes superb fresh seafood, cooked up with tropical inspirations and rigorous Galic technique. It's always an adventure. Try the lobster tempura, slow-roasted butterfish, or the scallop-crusting salmon when they're available. Full bar, heated patio. Dressy-casual; reservations strongly advised; reasonable valet parking. Dinner nightly. Expensive. — N.W. (7/03)

Azul La Jolla 1250 Prospect Street, La Jolla, 858-454-9616. The unobstructed ocean view and opulent interior are glamorous. Cuisine is Mediterranean with California influence. Menus change daily. When available, try pan-seared scallops and the outstanding asparagus soup, not duplicated anywhere. Fresh fish and seafood. Moderate to expensive. — E.W. (7/99)

Forever Fondue 1295 Prospect Street #201, La Jolla, 858-551-4509. Also at 6110 Friars Road, Mission Valley, 619-295-7792. Once every thirty years, a person should experience the novelty of fondue. Forever Fondue offers patrons the opportunity to cook or dip a variety of food items in a shared pot at their own table, accompanying the morsels with six different but universally disappointing sauces. Ambiance is minimal, other than the harsh chemical spray that bussers use for cleaning vacated tables. Dessert, however, is yummy — you can't miss with anything dipped in chocolate. The restaurant is clean and the staff friendly, although service can be extremely slow. Mediocre wine choices. Seating space is limited so reservations are recommended. Open daily for dinner. Moderately priced. — S.M. (2/04)

Fresh Seafood Restaurant 1044 Wall Street (at Herschel), La Jolla, 858-551-7575. The fare is mainly fishy and the room is truly dishy, with lots to look at — the open kitchen, floor-to-ceiling sculptures, street-patio scene, or the decolleté of the date dresses among the younger half of the crowd. The older half shows up in business suits, whatever their gender. Here you'll find that Chef Matthew Zappoli's seafood creations and lush sauces live up to the restaurant's name, although reined in enough to keep from scaring business-suited palates. Fish not your dish? Meats and poultry are of fine quality, too. Save room for the hazelnut mocha mousse cake, so sensual it should be X-rated. Good wine buys in Sauvignon Blancs and "interesting whites." Dinner reservations a must. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Moderate to expensive. — N.W. (7/03)

Marrakesh 634 Pearl Street (at Draper), La Jolla, 858-454-2500. The North African fare of Morocco is like no other in the world — influenced by Arab cuisines, but more intense and sheerly hedonistic. At our sole Moroccan restaurant, the fare is arranged into a nightly five-course prix fixe feast, with superb lentil soup (harira), a salad plate, bastilla (a chicken-filled filo pie), an entrée, and finally mint tea poured from on high to accompany almond baklava perfumed with orange-flower water. The setting and service are dramatic — tented ceilings, low banquette seating at carved round tables, belly-dancing interludes, servers in fezzes. (You're the Sheik of Araby.) A short list of entrées (a maximum of two choices per table, to be shared) features fine chicken (or lamb) with olives and preserved lemons; moist, fatless duck; lamb with couscous; and rather dry fish. On quiet weeknights, you can request the dreamy lamb with honey, an extravaganza that includes fruits, almonds, sesame, and cinnamon. Dinner nightly, reserve for weekends. Moderate. — N.W. (4/01)

Roy's 8670 Genesee Avenue, Costa Verde Center (across from UTC), La Jolla, 858-455-1616. Our own noisy outpost of top Hawaii chef Roy Yamaguchi's ever-expanding chain has elements of both "top chef" and "chain" about it. Decoding Roy's Rules of Ordering can make the difference between a mediocre dinner and a very happy meal: 1. Steer clear of combination platters — the same dishes come off much better when ordered separately; 2. You can get any element of a combo (including the yummy off-menu ahi poke) by asking for it; 3. Don't waste your palate (or money) on weak umbrella drinks when the wine list is brilliant. The menu changes daily, but some frequent tasty choices are pot stickers, lumpia, "Kahana" shutome (swordfish), or chocolate soufflé. Special dietary requests accommodated, including vegetarian meals. Reserve, and hope for a table far from the raucous bar. Open nightly. Very expensive. — N.W. (4/01)

Sky Room Top floor of La Valencia Hotel, 1132 Prospect Street, La Jolla, 858-454-0771. The stunning ocean view offers three essentials for a memorable evening: privacy, intimacy, and the ability to talk without the interruption of noise. The food is a feast to the eyes as well as the palate. Best bets: abalone and scallop steak appetizer, the daily soup, diver scallops, and lobster. Dinner only, with two seatings on weekends. Very expensive. — E.W. (10/99)

Zenbu 7660 Fay Avenue (at Kline Street), La Jolla, 858-454-4540. It was a natural for fisherman-restaurateur Matt Rimel to open a sushi bar-fish house, featuring sparkling fresh catch, much of it from his own boats. Sashimi and the simpler sushi are better here than the big party rolls, which can be lunkish. Don't miss the sashimi of live local umi (sea urchin) served on its shell most weekends. Cooked fish entrées feature equally sparkling seafood, sometimes in almost goofily elaborate preparations. No reservations; 30-minute wait likely on weekends. Sushi bar is up a short staircase; dining room and patio tables are wheelchair accessible. Several vegetarian choices. Full bar, good sake list. Dinner nightly. Upper moderate to expensive. — N.W. (6/01)

MISSION VALLEY & THE MESAS

Korea House 4620 Convoy Street, Kearny Mesa, 858-560-0080. Korea House offers floor seating or a table if you want to barbecue your own food. The menu offers fine "down-home" Korean food, such as traditional mandoo (beef) dumplings, gaejang backban, or raw crab, and yookhwe, a steak tartare worth risking. Make a meal from enormous appetizers like gul bosam (raw oysters, pork, and cabbage leaves). Open daily. Inexpensive to moderate. — M.N. (9/98)

Nijiya Market 3860 Convoy Street, Kearny Mesa, 858-268-3821. If you're not willing to sacrifice quality for convenience when eating fast food, try this Japanese market in Kearny Mesa. Nijiya Market offers prepared box lunches, or bento, that are pretty to look at, appetizing, and a real bargain. I suggest, however, passing by Nijiya's steam trays and heat lamps and going straight to the coolers, where you'll find delicious chicken cutlets, fresh sushi, and chilled noodles, as well as dessert delicacies like sweet bread roll filled with sweet bean paste. Inexpensive. — M.N. (8/99)

Pampas Argentine Grill 8690 Aero Drive (at Montgomery Field), Kearny Mesa, 858-278-5971. The Argentine specialties feature grilled grass-fed beef, including a somewhat Americanized version of the gauchos' great parillada mixta (mixed grill), with a great chorizo but minus any exotic organs. The naturally raised meats are lower fat and lower cholesterol than feed-lot beef but are salted heavily in the kitchen unless you request otherwise. Specify rare or medium-rare, unless you really like brown cardboard. Lighter fare includes free-range chicken and fresh, well-treated seafood. Beef empanadas are a tasty, authentic starter. Potatoes (fries and mashed) are splendid, salads are exuberant. The full bar features Chilean and Argentine beverages with many affordable South American wines by the glass. Park in lot at restaurant's front door, not the back-door lot. Lunch (mainly sandwiches) on weekdays, dinner nightly. Moderate. — N.W. (4/02)

Prego Hazard Center, 1370 Frazee Road (at Friars Road), Mission Valley, 619-294-4700. In a stylish North Italian restaurant set in a come-as-you-are mall, a million-dollar renovation at the turn of our century has turned down the noise level to match the pleasing, easy-going North Italian cooking. Good starters include the antipasto platter, sparkling salads, and yeasty, fresh-baked rosemary-garlic bread (actually a mini-pizza crust). Pastas (many featuring fresh seafood) are near-perfect, but risotto can be risky. Entrées are mainly simple grilled or rotisserie meats and fish, but the nightly specials are where chef Josh McGinnis gets to strut his stuff. Service is warm and well-informed. Lunch weekdays, dinner nightly. Moderate (pastas) to expensive. — N.W. (4/01)

Seau's Mission Valley Center mall, 1640 Camino del Rio North (next to Robinsons-May), Mission Valley, 619-291-7328. Footballer Junior Seau contributes more to San Diego than just sacks. His extravagant multivenue sports pub is major league fun — a real-life reincarnation of some 1960s McLuhanite media art show, with 70 video screens (ranging from large-normal to giant HDTV) running sportscasts and a professional DJ on high, periodically spinning cool sounds over muted talking heads. The menu offers mainstream “something for everyone” choices, including pizza, hefty but so-so burgers, some elementary sushi, all-American entrées, and Seau's family recipe of Samoan teriyaki “plate lunch.” Above all, there's pub grub. The chicken wings are pretty good, and you can get all three sauces (Buffalo, BBQ, and Asian) on one order. Perfect hangout for mismatched couples with one sports fan and one fashionista (the latter can head for Nordstrom and Saks discount outlets nearby). On game days, patrons are allowed just one game in the dining room ($15 minimum), but you can linger from wake-up to closing on the patio or in the bar. Open daily. Inexpensive to moderate. — N.W. (1/03)

Sheila's Cafe & Bakery 4577 Clairemont Drive (Wilson Plaza), Clairemont, 858-270-0251. A “Glatt Kosher,” a non-dairy Orthodox Jewish restaurant and bakery with a mission. Sheila was determined to create food observant Jews could eat without worrying — from Italian to Mexican to ribs to fried chicken to lactose-free cheesecakes — and that everybody else wouldn't know was different. The result: a menu stretching from chicken soup with matzoh balls to standards like hamburgers and even Sunday prime rib dinners. You don't need a yarmulke to feel comfortable here, but it's comforting to know everything down to the least lettuce leaf has received extra-careful preparation. You'll find Sheila's breads and pastries at supermarkets all around town. Lunch and dinner Monday through Thursday, lunch Friday, dinner Sunday (closed Saturday, of course). Moderate to slightly expensive. — E.B. (11/01)

Via Italia Pizzeria Trattoria 4705-A Clairemont Drive, Clairemont Square, Clairemont, 858-274-9732; also at 565-569 South Pacific Coast Highway 101 (between E and D), Encinitas, 760-479-9757. Don't look for spaghetti and meatballs or Alfredo here — the menu features wonderful, authentic dishes from all over northern Italy (not Naples or Brooklyn). The nightly specials and well-priced Thursday night tasting menus are particularly inspired — they're what Chef Alan Martinelli really feels like cooking. The pizzas (whole pies only) are a must — thin-crusts and dressed with perfect proportions of sauce, cheese, and lovely, simple toppings. The long, helpful Italian wine list includes bottles at every price range. The downside? At the original branch (in the “Food Court” near the Clairemont mall's theaters), the room is noisy, service can be abrasive, and reservations, while recommended, are not always honored timely. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Moderate to slightly expensive. — N.W. (6/02)

THE BEACHES

Alfiere Sheraton Harbor Island, West Tower, 1590 Harbor Island Drive, Harbor Island, 619-692-2778. Sophisticated, deluxe Italian/Mediterranean cuisine takes center stage in a handsome, view-endowed dining room decorated in a “Venetian Carnival” theme. In a menu that follows the seasons, San Francisco-born Chef Antonio Friscia proves he's capable of brilliance. His thin-skinned ravioli stuffed with marinated braised short ribs shouldn't be missed, and his goose foie gras on ciabatta crostini is divinely playful. Traditional dishes take on new life, too: The house "antipasta" (of marinated vegetables and top-quality Italian deli meats) is everything you'd hope for, while house-made pesto gnocchi float off the plate. Some dishes are invariably less successful, but boredom will not be a problem — this is nothing like "hotel food." The Italian/Californian wine list emphasizes lesser-known Italian reds. Daily, three meals. Upper moderate to expensive. — N.W. (5/02)

Baleen Paradise Point Resort, 1404 Vacation Road (off Ingraham Street), Mission Bay, 858-490-6364. Take a quick trip to chic Miami at the local branch of Florida's famed new resort restaurant. Whimsical tropical decor features a monkey motif (carved in the chandeliers, peeking from the paintings) and mambos play on the speakers. But the unlisted prices for chilled shellfish may make a monkey of you unless you ask before you buy. The menu features high-quality seafood and land creatures in refined renditions, including gorgeous lobster bisque, salmon with a clever hummus crust, herbed sea bass, and a hunk of free-range veal. Servers are charmers. The wine list is long and rather steep at the bottom end with better values farther up the range. Reservations recommended. Very expensive. — N.W. (12/00)

Cucina Fresca 1851 Bacon Street, Ocean Beach, 619-224-9470. OK, it's a cliché, but "bring your appetite," really applies here. We're talking northern Italian food, with southern Italian generosity. The family-run place has been open since 1990, but it feels more like 1890. Italian flags and murals, varnished wood, banknote collections, terra cotta floor tile, and very traditional dishes. All the usual suspects are here, like chicken Parmigiana, chicken marsala, veal florentine. But who cares? It's their old-fashioned size you'll love. Order, say, the "sausage and peppers" pasta. You'll be half-full from the delicious minestrone soup they toss in first. Then your pasta arrives — woah! A Sargasso Sea of linguini capped by large quantities of sliced, herby Italian sausage. But hey, this is OB. What's your hurry? Attack this thing slowly, man, one whip-lashing linguini at a time. Lunch, dinner. Moderate. — E.B. (2/03)

Humphrey's by the Bay 2241 Shelter Island Drive, Shelter Island, 619-224-3577. Most diners at this resort/concert venue restaurant eat at the prix-fixe pre-show dinners because they guarantee good seats for the concerts at the next-door amphitheatre. They're missing the best food, which emerges once the music-mavens leave the premises. The kitchen features top-quality seafood, juicy meats, and prime steaks with lively, seasonal veggie garnishes. Reserve for show-nights or to snare a window table with a gorgeous marina view. Open daily breakfast through dinner; brunch buffet weekends. Reservations strongly advised. Pre-show prix fixe moderate, à la carte high-moderate to expensive. — N.W. (11/01)

Kono's 704 Garnet Avenue (on the boardwalk), Pacific Beach, 858-483-1669. This inside-outside café is your prototypical California surfer hangout. It's cream and green with maroon canvas window canopies, red-painted make-believe shutters, and three surfboards sprouting through the roof. On weekends, lines of tourists come looking for their California fix. But Kono's is known among locals, too, for generous breakfasts. Check out their PBS: Pancakes, Bacon and Scrambled eggs. Or the breakfast sandwich with eggs, bacon, cheese, and tomato on a toasted English muffin. Or the CB Burger (chicken breast, green chili, and pica sauce). Best time: foggy mornings. Chow down on their patio on the pier while you enjoy a birds-eye view of surfers appearing out of the mists below. Breakfast and lunch daily. Inexpensive. — E.B. (10/00)

Lotsa Pasta 1762 Garnet Avenue, Chollas View, 858-581-6777. At this large, loud family restaurant, you pick your noodles (from 9 flavors and 6 shapes, plus 7 stuffed pastas) then choose one of 17 sauces to dress them. Entrées come with soup or salad and garlic bread. For a little extra, you can choose a pasta combo or add ingredients such as garlic shrimp, breaded meatballs, or good spicy sausage. The big deal is timpano, a bread-shell enclosing a cornucopia of pastas, sauces, cheeses, and meats (made famous by the movie The Big Night). But don't expect authentic Italian (or even New Jersey Italian) cooking. The fare is more midwestern American-Italian, with all pastas cut to the same hefty thickness and mostly weighty sauces. (The vodka sauce and Thai peanut sauce are lighter choices.) Wines live up to their rock-bottom price tags. A retail counter offers most pastas and sauces to go. Open daily, lunch through dinner. Inexpensive to low moderate. — N.W. (4/03)

Mardi Gras Cafe 3185 Midway Drive (near Rosecrans and East Street), in mini-mall with a 7-11, across the street from Godfather Pizza), Loma Portal, 619-223-5501. The Creole cooking at this café/grocery, to eat in, take out, or have catered for your next party, is sound and tasty, if deliberately underseasoned (just add salt and hot sauce to taste). You can also buy the real and rare ingredients from the freezer, deli case, and grocery shelves, including Cajun tasso (spiced ham), boudin blanc (rice sausage) and crawfish sausage. Daily brunch through early dinner. No alcohol, everything available for takeout. Inexpensive. — N.W. (2/01)

Qwiigs Bar & Grill 5091 Santa Monica Avenue, Ocean Beach, 619-222-1101. That name, Qwiigs? "Queeners Who Indulge In Great Sports" refers to a bunch of surfers who surfed a Hawaiian spot named Queen's. And they could get away with culinary murder here if they wanted to — the beach, surf, pier, horizon, and sunset are such eye-candy you tend to auto-feed your mouth. But this brass-rail and varnished-wood upstairs eatery produces interesting food, featuring seafood from seared ahi to grilled mahi

mahi to a substantial sushi bar. Some of their nicest surprises are in their simple plates, like a field greens salad, scrumptious with candied walnuts and chèvre cheese; or farfalle pasta with rock shrimp, goat cheese, roasted garlic, spinach, and cream; or a cheeky smoked turkey-brie-pepperoni sandwich. Also a good deal: pungent BBQ prime rib served on the bone on Mondays (other days as a sandwich). Fresh-est aperitif? Blackberry lemonade. Lunch and dinner daily, breakfast Saturday and Sunday. Moderate. — E.B. (11/03)

Sapporo Japanese Restaurant 5049 Newport Avenue (by the pier), Ocean Beach, 619-222-6686. It's small, but Sapporo has big deals, particularly the lunch specials that usually give you a miso soup, salad, and a combo such as chicken teriyaki and California rolls and white rice — all presented like a piece of performance art. Other specials include yaki soba (stir-fried sautéed chicken, vegetables, and noodles) and champon noodle soup (udon noodles, scallops, shrimp, vegetables), and the value-packed Chicken Bowl — a big plate of sliced chicken, broccoli, other vegetables, and a swag of rice. Open seven days, lunch and dinner. Inexpensive. — E.B. (9/01)

CENTRAL SAN DIEGO

Asia Cafe 4710 Market Street (at 47th Street), Chollas View, 619-527-1917. May be Asian San Diego's best-kept secret. You have to look behind the smog shop at this all-Laotian shopping center to find it. The menu's Southeast Asian, but the owner — and most of the conversation around you — is Lao. Lao dishes include the famous larb-kai (chicken salad with hot peppers, lemon grass, and sticky rice). Good regional alternatives: bamee (egg noodle) roasted pork soup, Crying Tiger (ground beef salad with vegetables), Duck Head BBQ, and lard nar (seafood, beef, or pork with sloppy wide noodles and vegetables). Closed Tuesdays. Inexpensive. — E.B. (10/01)

Huffman's Bar-B-Que 5039 Imperial Avenue (at Euclid Avenue), Chollas View, 619-264-3115. This café has a huge multigenerational following, some famous — check out their wall photos, in which Jesse Jackson and Muhammad Ali are just two — and some not so famous. The big draw is Huffman's fabulous Southern soul food. Try their gravy-smothered fried chicken served with collard greens, yellow peppers, red beans, rice, and white mopping-up bread, or their Louisiana Creole gumbo, thick with crab, shrimp, links, ham, and chicken. Other fine eats include the catfish sandwich and half-pound rib tips. Open daily, lunch and dinner, to 11 p.m. weekdays. Inexpensive. — E.B. (11/00)

Lao & Chinese Cuisine 4212 National Avenue, Logan Heights, 619-263-0914. This restaurant is a simple place, large and spare around Formica tables, that serves uncomplicated, home-style Lao cuisine. I highly recommend the larb, a spicy salad with poached minced beef, chicken, or pork and seasoned with lime juice, hot pepper, cilantro, onions, fresh mint, and ground toasted rice. This dish is earthy and wild, spectacular. Nate's Deli 3120 Euclid Avenue, City Heights, 619-284-0206. This deli-café is in City Farmers' Nursery, the one with sheep, geese, Clyde the horse and a mini forest in the middle of town. The late Nate was the father of owner Bill Tall, and this deli was his dream. (Nate died just before opening.) Try appetizers like smoked salmon, or "Kishka," a spicy wrapped filling, hot with brown gravy, or the grilled chicken fillet salad. But really, sandwiches are "it" here, and huge, and you can choose your cheeses, breads, and condiments as the sandwich-making proceeds. Go for, say, beef bologna, pastrami, liverwurst, salami, or vegetarian, then take it out to the eatin' deck, and check out the wild life. Town's a block and a world away. Breakfast to early dinner six days; closed Sunday. Inexpensive. — E.B. (9/03)

EAST COUNTY & STATE COLLEGE

Barnes Bar-B-Que 2625 Lemon Grove Avenue (at Cypress, tucked in the back of Liquor Mart Square), Lemon Grove, 619-462-9206. The sign on the window reads: "Soul Food: 99 cents"; inside is the homey solace of good cheer and excellent Memphis-style barbecue. Pork gets star billing; in a sandwich, it appears as tender chunks laced with smoke; on ribs, as luscious, multicolored strips slathered with sauce that balances sweet smoke, citrus tang and a mild, persistent spice. BBQ beans are a revelation, creamy yet substantial, swimming alongside rich bits of pork in a sauce that delivers a sweet molasses bite. Macaroni and cheese is gooey and gummable, a mild counter to the murky, sour/salty greens. On Fridays, you can get Southern-fried catfish or red snapper, plus hush puppies. Inexpensive. — A.M. (2/01)

Charley's Famous Hamburgers and Kebobs 8312 Broadway (at Sweetwater Road), Lemon Grove, 619-460-2690. When you spot an old red-and-white gas station that looks like a café, don't hesitate. That's Charley's. The palm and ficus trees have replaced the gas pumps and a fountain now gurgles where the air hoses used to be. The menu is a long list of hamburgers, as well as hot dogs, sandwiches, and kebobs. Charley's sweet dough beef-and-onion sandwich is scrumptious. Mostly take-out, but you can dine out at their picnic tables under bougainvillea. Open daily, three meals. — E.B. (12/01)

D.Z. Akin's 6930 Alvarado Road, Alvarado Plaza, College Area, 619-265-0218. Surely the best Jewish delicatessen in San Diego. Soups are wonderful, and so are the 110 sandwiches, especially the corned beef. The knishes and chopped liver easily rival Mother's. Excellent breakfasts and outstanding, fully stocked bakery. Open daily, breakfast, lunch, and dinner. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.W.

European Bistro Lake Murray Square, 6062 Lake Murray Boulevard (at El Paso), La Mesa, 619-698-5555. Here at the center of a Russian new-immigrant community, in a strip-mall just south of Ross and Big Lots, you'll find an array of savory Eastern European dishes. They're nowhere as heavy as Nonna's — here they're done with the lightness of the Russian-French chef tradition, applied to specialties from Russia, Poland, and the Ukraine. Following classic Russian custom, there's a splendid choice of small, savory, and substantial salads (try the sensual Stolichny chicken-potato salad) and delightful appetizers, including airy crêpes with juicy (and affordable) red or black caviar. The outstanding main course is lamb shish kebab featuring tender marinated ribs cut from a rack. But don't look for borscht; it's not on the menu. Entrées come with a choice of starches; trust me, you want fries with that. Open daily, lunch and dinner (early dinner Sundays). Inexpensive to low moderate. — N.W. (7/03)

Rodeo Bar and Grill 10109 Maine Avenue, Lakeside, 619-390-7996. Agnes and Ildikor are the two blue-eyed Hungarian-born sisters who run this only-in-Lakeside institution. It's a low, red, grapevine-covered onetime produce barn near the rodeo grounds. A dirt parking lot hides under the trees, and an old freezer door is the main entrance to the restaurant, which has decor straight out of Dodge City. The menu has two sides: the A-side features big steaks, while the B-side offers bargain-priced sandwiches like grilled barbecued beef or the Ponyburger, a flame-broiled quarter-pounder with steak fries, barbecue beans, and fixin's. On Thursday nights, the sisters' mom cooks one of her special Hungarian dishes, depending on what the customers have asked for — so get on down there and vote! Open until 1 a.m. (with karaoke) on weekends. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.B. (10/00)

FAR EAST

Kountry Kitchen 826 Main Street, Ramona, 760-789-3200. Thank goodness the Kountry Kitchen's still around. They still open at 5 a.m. for the farmers and anyone else who's up then. They still make their own sausages, and grind their own burger meat, too. The Italian Sausage Breakfast is truly delicious: a fat pale-brown sausage with a rich, sharp, livery flavor, along with eggs and hash browns. Up there, too, is the Cowpoke Country Special, a buttermilk short stack with eggs and sausages or bacon. Open daily, breakfast through early dinner. Inexpensive. — E.B. (5/02)

La Casa Del Zorro Borrego Springs Drive (Rte. 73) (five miles south of Palm Canyon Drive at Yaqui Pass Road), Borrego Springs, 760-767-5523. swimming pool; the restaurant's small, dimly marked door is just to the left.) The California Cuisine menu offers elaborate seafood appetizers (out here in the desert) and entrées with fine, subtle sauces, fresh veggies from nearer the coast, and rather mild-flavored, exquisitely tender meats, evidently chosen to be gentle to the dentures of the duffers. Desserts are few and very sweet. Full bar; great (but pricey) wine list. Collared shirts and jackets required on men (they'll lend you a jacket if needed), dressy-casual wear on women. Open daily, continuously (in theory) from breakfast through dinner. Reserve for weekend evenings. Very expensive. — N.W. (4/03)

The Olde Homestead Fudge Factory The Center, 590 Palm Canyon Drive (north side of the street), Borrego Springs, 760-767-7782. The Fudge Factory's greatest dish is not what it's named for, and some of its pick hits aren't fudge, either. Of the 24 flavors of housemade fudge, barely a half dozen are available on any given day. The chocolate walnut is especially delicious, but the real masterpiece is the "date shake" — a cold quaff that's ambrosial on a hot afternoon. Then, too, a former pastry chef of the famed La Casa Del Zorro provides trays and trays of delicate pastries, and this is one of the few spots in town with an espresso machine. Open 6 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily. Inexpensive. — N.W. (4/03)

UPTOWN & OLD TOWN

Berta's Latin American Restaurant 3928 Twigg Street (at Congress, diagonal to Rockin' Baja Lobster), Old Town, 619-295-2343. Sampling the whole range of little-known cuisines from Guatemala down to Patagonia, Berta's lengthy menu reads like a culinary "pick hits" list of each country's best flavors, typically rendered with expertise and verve. Some outstanding dishes include sweet-savory Chilean pastel de choclo (a casserole of beef, chicken, and corn pudding) from Berta's homeland, spicy ceviche and subtle seco de cordero (citrus-flavored lamb stew) from Peru, earthy Guatemalan chilemal (cilantro-laden pork stew), aromatic beef curry from Trinidad, and a sensuous vatapa (seafood in coconut sauce) from Brazil's African-influenced Bahia coast. Vegetarians will find many meat-and-fowl-free options. Lunch and dinner. Moderate. — N.W. (4/01)

Cable Car Cafe 1945 Adams Avenue, University Heights, 619-291-8607. A lot of San Diego history is tied to this place. For starters, a real Frisco-style cable car used to terminate near here from downtown. So did later electric trolleys at Trolley Barn Park across the road. Harvey Bentley's ostrich farm was here too — which explains the mural of ostrich characters inside. They say the first Cable Car Café opened on this spot in the 1920s. Today it's a happy little red-and-white corner joint offering honest American fare. Breakfast includes two eggs any style with potatoes and toast, or "make-your-own" three-egg omelets. Walk by late morning and your nose will lead you in — the owners roast their own beef with fresh garlic every day. One great result: the Cable Car cheese steak (sliced beef, grilled onions, and cheese on a hoagie roll). Or try the BBQ pork sandwich (with coleslaw, potato, or pasta salad). Open daily. Inexpensive. — E.B. (6/02)

Cafe Caspian Persian Eatery & Tearoom 4646 Park Boulevard (at Adams Avenue), University Heights, 619-298-2801. It's colorful, small, and intimate. This two-room café pulsates with multicolored cloths, midnight blue cushions, Aladdin-shaped pitchers and samovars. What you're eating is basically Persian health food — most Persian fare is healthy food anyway. Try the pomegranate soup, made of spinach with lentils, beans, wheat, and pomegranate juice, or the strawberry tabbouleh salad. Lamb is often a part of dishes. Ghormeh sabzi is a lamb stew. Koufteh-Berenji is a ball of basmati rice with lamb, eggs, onions, and plums. And don't forget tea. They have everything from Darjeeling and Caspian to Lapacho Bark, Black Peach, and, if you really need a boost, Temple of Heaven Gunpowder. Breakfast through early-ish dinner Tuesday to Saturday; breakfast and lunch only, Sundays. Inexpensive. — E.B. (10/02)

Crest Cafe 425 Robinson Avenue (at Fifth Avenue), Hillcrest, 619-295-2510. "Heartly Homemade Comfort Food" is the boast, and this small retro-deco café backs it up. Cecelia and her dad, Luis Moreno, took over this place back in 1985. Some staff have been here since the start. Loyal customers get their photos and names on an honor roll that fills one wall. Lots of lazy ceiling fans, long, hanging blue lights, and art. "Matisse in Morocco," Salvador Dali, Frida Kahlo. Consider momsy dishes like Sloppy Joes, honey-glazed pork chops, or the healthy Vegetable Steam Basket. And don't turn down their 11 different kinds of burgers, including the Fresh Salmon Burger, the OuiOui Burger ("aged bleu cheese crumbled under melted jack cheese") or the wicked, spicy Butter Burger (half a pound of lean ground beef stuffed with garlic, tarragon, basil, parsley butter, topped with cheese, garlic-paprika-cayenne-cumin mayo and more butter). Best of all, late hours: open 7 a.m. to midnight, seven days. Dinner at 11 is no problem. How rare is that in San Diego? Inexpensive. — E.B. (5/02)

Extraordinary Desserts 2929 Fifth Avenue (at Palm), uptown, 619-294-7001. The desserts here do live up to the name, whether you gobble them on the spot on the patio of this charming café or buy them to take home. Owner Karen Krasne's pastries are created with strict French techniques with flavors inspired by the global reach of her travels, from the rice fields of Bali to the souks of Morocco. The white cakes are true food for angels — ethereal and not excessively sweet, vibrant with flavors of fresh ripe fruits — and some of the chocolate cakes (e.g., the "Caribe") follow suit, while others are rich and dense. Not your piece of cake? There are also tarts, cookies, chocolates, ice cream dishes, puddings, breakfast pastries, and fine teas and coffees, along with Krasne's own lines of honeys, jams, chutneys, syrops, and popcorn — plus a truly lovely assortment of international craft objects. Open for weekday breakfast, weekend brunch until late, closing at 11 p.m. Sunday through Thursday and at midnight on weekends. — N.W. (5/02)

Fifth And Hawthorne 515 Hawthorne Street (at Fifth Avenue), Banker's Hill, 619-544-0940. This warm, cozy cottage near Balboa Park offers once-radical dishes that have long since turned into familiar California comfort cuisine. The menu changes only slightly and the kitchen has the dishes down so pat that execution is almost inhumanly flawless. It's a little like an ideal airplane dinner — on the Concorde, say. Highlights include spicy duck soup, tender stuffed chicken breast, melting calamari steaks, and mustard-coated catfish. Most weeknights, couples can opt for a "wine dinner" that includes four courses and a decent bottle of wine — a great bargain. Full bar, reasonable California-dominated wine list. Good pre-theatre dinner spot (near the Old Globe); let server know your curtain time. No wheelchair access to rest rooms. Diner nightly. Moderate to slightly expensive. — N.W. (2/03)

Hamburger Mary's 308 University Avenue (at Third Avenue), Hillcrest, 619-491-0400. All the action is on the patio, under ficus trees, ferns, the palapa bar, and white umbrellas. Bougainvillea bursts out of tables. Hamburger Mary's mural comes at you in a Stetson, wild red hair, big blue eyes, and a plump butt. Basically it's a gay rendezvous, but everybody's welcome. The burgers are way-big with funky ti-gles like the "I'm Sooo Bleu" burger with bacon and bleu cheese crumbles, or the "Two Tons Of Fun," a six-inch-high double-burger with mushrooms, bacon, lettuce, cheese, and onions. The kicker is they're all served between wickedly crisp, sweet slabs of golden Hawaiian bread. Open daily until 2 a.m., grill until 11 p.m. Moderate. — E.B. (3/01)

Hob Nob Hill 2271 First Avenue (at Juniper Street), Banker's Hill, 619-239-8176. It opened in 1944 as a 14-stool lunch counter. Now, you sweep in under the maroon canopy to shiny red booth seats, deep blue carpet, blond wood, paintings, and a half-wall of wine. You're thinking "business class," but don't be fooled. We're talking coffee-shop prices, especially with the all-day breakfasts and sandwiches, not to mention the burgers with a salad tossed in. It's across the street from a retirement condo complex and at dinner, says the owner, "We cater to seniors." While there are à la carte choices, affordable three-course prix fixe dinners (with a regular entrée for each day of the week, Mom-style) are the order of the day — e.g., tasty barbecued pork on Saturdays, roast lamb or turkey Sundays. Open daily. Inexpensive to low moderate. — E.B. (10/01)

Kazumi Sushi 3975 Fifth Avenue (at Washington), Suite 120, Hillcrest, 619-682-4054. A simple neighborhood sushi bar offering imaginative rolls, each one so distinctively seasoned that there's no need to mar the pretty fish-scapes with wasabi dip. The fish is super-fresh and includes salmon that Kazumi-san cold-smokes himself. For a family-style dinner, "The Ultimate Boat" (serving two or more) is an encyclopedia of Japanese specialties, a huge platter of sushi, gyoza, assorted appetizers, yakitori, teriyaki, and terrific tempura. Need comfort food? The tempura also graces the top of a satisfying bowl of nabeyaki udon (noodle soup) with an onion-sweet broth. With just a small staff of family members in the kitchen and house, expect a wait for food at busy times. Lunch Tuesday through Friday, dinner daily. Inexpensive to moderate. — N.W. (10/00)

The Mission North Park and City Bakery 2801-2805 University Avenue, North Park, 619-220-8992. The two winners are breakfasts and the adjoining bakery, especially for its Russian pecan bread and cinnamon rolls. Lunch and dinner offer California food with Asian and Latino influences. Lots of items under $10. Open daily, 7 a.m.

The Parkhouse Eatery 4574 Park Boulevard (at Madison), University Heights, 619-295-7275. A small house provides a charming setting for dining. The eclectic menu is prepared with average competence. Picasso Spanish Restaurant 3923 Fourth Avenue (near University Avenue), Hillcrest, 619-294-3061. Interesting Spanish tapas and entrées are served in a small, modern, art-filled room that draws a casual neighborhood crowd. The regional style is Basque, from Northern Spain, but these aren't the tiny pinxos of that area — in fact, these bites are larger than usual, sized generously for two eaters. Some top tapas include chicken-stuffed empanadillas, baby eels in garlic sauce, stuffed greenlip mussels, and an outstanding paella (available as both a tapa and entrée). A bargain-price bottomless pitcher of the house's workmanly sangria (made with Livingston Cellars Burgundy) is the patrons' favorite beverage. Lunch Tuesday through Friday, dinner nightly. Moderate. — N.W. (6/01)

Whole Foods Market 711 University Avenue, Hillcrest, 619-294-2800. For vegetarians on the go, Whole Foods' prepared food section will feed you better — and faster — than any vegetarian restaurant in town. Outstanding selections include green chili and cheese polenta; Emerald Mushrooms salad or Rapid Dragon greens, both with a sweet surprise of raspberry jam; and, especially, their farofa salad, like American stuffing, but it's couscous studded with almonds, fat raisins, thin strips of scrambled egg, and bits of carrot and bell pepper. Whole Foods' vegetarian meals will tempt any meat-eater with their delicious originality. La Jolla branch at 8825 Villa La Jolla Drive, 619-642-6700. Inexpensive to moderate. — M.N. (4/99)

rity of style. Chef-owner Martin Gonzales trained there and serves as charming host of the local outpost. Best bets are the vegetarian pasta and rice dishes made with aromatic porcini mushrooms. The tasting of five pastas may sound tempting, but they're chef's choice — and he tends to choose the dull ones. "Tastings" of salads, cheeses, and desserts are also offered. Mains are mainly rather plain. Moderate (pasta) to expensive. — N.W. (11/00)

The Blarney Stone 510 Fifth Avenue, Gaslamp, 619-233-8519. This handsome establishment, made of dark wood from the Emerald Isle, includes a large, good-looking separate dining room that opens when the dining public forms a critical mass, or around 8 p.m. Like most local Irish pubs, the menu is mainly American and gringo-Mex snack foods, including an "Irish quesadilla" (corned beef and cheese on a flour tortilla). The three wannabe Celtic dishes are an indifferent corned beef and cabbage, "steak Kildare" (a tough, mushroom-smothered rib eye), and "fish and chips Liffey," which aren't noticeably different from, say, fish and chips "Thames" or "Afton" or even "Missouri." Open daily. Inexpensive to low moderate. — N.W. (4/01)

Buster's Beach House and Longboard Bar 807 West Harbor Drive, East Plaza, Seaport Village, 619-233-4300. There really is a Buster, a surfer who traveled the world working in restaurants. Baja, Oahu, Fiji, Naples, Ocho Rios, Phuket — you name it, there's a dish from each of those waters, and every one of them ethnically incorrect. The menu's actually an international anthology of surfer-bar grub — and like Waimea Bay's waves, it has huge ups and downs. Skip the greasy "Short Board" pupu platter and risky daily fish special and go for the well-seasoned crab cakes, shark tacos, spicy "paella" (more like jambalaya), or pizza. The surfy, fun decor and breezy patio easily compensate for some of the spiciest service in town; a full bar offers a great beer list and decent umbrella drinks. To snag a patio table, reserve it and make sure they write it down. Three hours validated parking, kid-friendly, plenty for vegetarians. Open three meals daily. Prices cover the waterfront. — N.W. (7/03)

Croce's Restaurant and Jazz Bar 802 Fifth Avenue, Gaslamp, 619-233-4355. If you enjoy premises with doors open to the street and nightly jazz in the adjoining room, try Croce's. The chef prepares excellent appetizers, pastas, salads, and entrées. Menus change seasonally. Outdoor as well as indoor seating. Nightly jazz. Dinner only. Moderate to expensive. — E.W.

Deco's 731 Fifth Avenue (between G and F), Gaslamp, 619-696-DECO. When the disco is not in session here, there's surprisingly fine food in this vast, multiroom glamorama, stunningly done up like a Fred-and-Ginger 1930s ballroom. The eats are in a lightly adventurous California-Asian-Mediterranean mode featuring quality seafood handled with care and creativity; don't miss the ethereal bread pudding for dessert. (The requisite sushi "party rolls" are merely okay.) Service is hip, smart, and kind. Best dining nights: disco-less Tuesday and Wednesday. Call ahead if you want to book an off-menu meal. No cover charge on disco nights for patrons who order dinner before 9 p.m.; no sneaks, shorts, or Ts if you're clubbing. Serious wine list runs high; full bar. Happy hour Friday; dinner 6 p.m. to 11 p.m. Thursday through Sunday. Very expensive, but somewhat affordable if you graze on appetizers. — N.W. (7/03)

The Field Irish Pub and Restaurant 544 Fifth Avenue, Gaslamp, 619-232-9840. This spirited, colorful saloon, physically transported wholehog from the Ould Sod, offers delicious Irish music live most nights, and also attempts serious Irish cooking — with some successes. Try the lovely herb-rich Irish stew, or the boxty, potato crêpes rolled around your choice from a variety of fillings (salmon, beef, etc.). Or start the day here with a huge, carnivorous Irish breakfast. Open daily. Low moderate. — N.W. (4/01)

BY ANDREW ENRIQUE

Day Chef, The Gathering, Mission Hills

I'm from San Antonio, Texas. I'm not Mexican. I'm not American. I'm Texican. This recipe was actually my grandmother's. She was from San Luis Potosí, Mexico, so I grew up eating these enchiladas.

It's something we eat at home. We don't serve it in the restaurant. My wife and I eat enchiladas at home at least once a week. My wife loves them and she is from Syria. We make a big batch and eat them the next day for leftovers. It's an easy recipe using ingredients that are accessible. The New Mexico chile powder can be found in almost any grocery store.

You can adjust the amount of cheese to suit your taste. I don't like mine too cheesy.

Being a diabetic, I'm only allowed three alcoholic beverages a week, but when I have the enchiladas, I have a beer. My favorite is Negra

HOW TO DO IT

In a large pot, place 2 quarts of water, the chicken, onion, celery, bay leaves, garlic, chipotle chiles, chicken bouillon, chili powder, cumin, oregano, salt and pepper. Heat to a boil, skim surface of foam for a few minutes, then cook at medium heat until chicken is falling off the bone, about a half hour.

Remove chicken and set aside to cool. Skin and debone and reserve.

Strain the broth into a large saucepan over medium flame. Discard the solids. Reduce the liquid over a medium flame for about 15 to 20 minutes until you have about 2 cups of liquid. In a game, and roasted spices. Now, the Pacific Coastal cuisine takes in more coast than most, drawing upon ingredients and techniques from Alaska to Oaxaca. (The decor, dark and urban-primitive, follows the theme.) Unexpected combinations are a mainstay; a single dish, such as the seafood mixto, may span the entire distance, bringing together a multitude of flavors that work together to create a wondrous whole. Fine breads are made in-house, as are desserts (try the decadent, crispy-creamy plantain cheesecake flautas). The wine list includes interesting varieties like Mourvedre and Viognier. Lunch weekdays, dinner nightly; closes early Sundays, but open until 11 p.m. Friday and Saturday. Lunch: inexpensive to moderate; dinner: moderate to expensive. — A.M. (11/02)

Lou and Mickey's 224 Fifth Avenue (between K and L), Gaslamp, 619-237-4900. The onetime ornate Royale Brasserie across from the Convention Center finally had to bow to conventional tastes and simplify into a fifties-style steak-and-seafood house. Kings Seafood is still the owner, so the fish quality remains fine. The fare is simple, with minimal sauce or garnish; vegetables cost extra, coming in large portions but merely adequate preparations. Best dishes include "BBQ Shrimp, Manales' Style," a buttery, spicy New Orleans extravaganza (available as starter or entrée), and the huge, juicy rib-eye "Cowboy Steak." Valet parking at door. Wraparound heated dining patio. Noisy in dining room near bar; request "Nude Room" for quiet. For interesting wines at good prices, look into "Adventures" sections of the list. Dinner nightly, weekends until 11 p.m. Fish moderate, meats expensive. — N.W. (7/03)

Pokez Mexican Restaurant and Vegetarian Cuisine 947 E Street (at 10th Avenue), downtown, 619-702-7160. Rafael — his buddies call him Rafa — started this cool student/artist hangout years ago when he was 18. Lunchtime business people come here. Evenings, seems like it's all Rafa's friends: people from downtown, Golden Hill, City College. The food is mostly Mexican vegetarian (though he's got meaty things like chicken or steak ranchero or sautéed chicken fajitas). Tip well: the servers volunteer and share the take from the gravy pot. Three meals weekdays; closes earlier on weekends. — E.B. (12/01)

Rice Hotel W, 421 B Street (at State), downtown, 619-398-3082. The W's several amusing bars and lounges serve as a weekend amusement park for a spiffy singles crowd. Rice is there to feed them on Fusion-lite nibbles created by corporate chefs far away, emphasizing appetizers and desserts over entrées, as you'd expect. Cool, witty decor and a loud, nonstop pop soundtrack drive home the point: This is a scene. Reservations usually necessary for lunch or dinner. Pricey valet park-separate small pan, melt and simmer a half cube of butter and gradually stir in 1 cup of flour, forming a roux. When it is the consistency of pancake dough, slowly blend it into the sauce over low heat, until sauce thickens. Keep sauce warm over a very low flame or in microwave.

For the filling, sauté garlic and onion with chicken bouillon cube in olive oil until onions are translucent and the cube has dissolved. Add cumin and oregano and the reserved chicken. Let cool slightly.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Fill tortillas with the chicken mixture, roll them into tubes, and line them up in a large baking dish. This should make 15 to 20 enchiladas.

Pour about half of the sauce on top of the enchiladas so they don't dry out. Bake in 350° oven until heated through. Plate the enchiladas and top with sauce and grated cheese.

Sadaf 828 Fifth Avenue (at E Street), Gaslamp, 619-338-0008. Vegetarian-friendly. Quiet and relaxed weeknights, the room becomes an ear-splitting mob scene weekends (even before the restaurant goes disco at 9:30). The hearty but sophisticated Persian fare centers on well-marinated kebabs and herb-rich stews, served with various savory rice dishes. There's excellent spinach borani, sieved yogurt relish with cucumbers, lamb chop kebabs, and a vibrant, sweet-sour fesenjan (pomegranate-walnut sauce with chicken). But the Gaslamp branch's kitchen is wildly inconsistent, e.g., your fesenjan dumped on dry kebabs instead of mingling with simmered poultry. Desserts are always dreamy — try rosewater ice cream and/or pudding, or bamieh, a delicate ladyfinger soaked in (what else?) rosewater syrup. Moderate. — N.W. (12/00)

Shiraz 837 Fourth Avenue, Gaslamp, 619-238-0203. Owned by the admirable Persian restaurant Bandar a couple of doors down, this restaurant offers nothing exotic — just steaks, chops, seafood, and roast chicken. Go for the steak — it's USDA Prime, juicy and flavorful and reasonably priced. Creamy mashed potatoes and veggies come at no extra charge. Fish quality isn't great; lobster tails (frozen from Australia) are safer. The nightly soup is where the Persian chef shines; don't let the clueless waiter's shrug dissuade you. An appetizer of creamed mushrooms makes a tasty side for meat, better than the "official" sauces. Other starters are mainly steakhouse standards, with airy fried calamari worth a try. California supermarket wines at ruthless markups; steep, skimpy beer list. Dinner nightly from 5 to 11 p.m. Moderate to expensive. — N.W. (7/03)

Vincenzo Ristorante Italiano 1702 India Street, Little Italy, 619-702-6181. The specialty at this tourist favorite is Sicilian seafood. The cooking is competent, but the restaurant's fishmonger settles for ordinary quality (as does the produce provider). The meat jobber does a better job, providing succulent lamb and veal that the chef grills expertly, and the Italian sausages (from Pete's Meats, up the block) are the zestiest in town. The restaurant's hard-surfaced interior is so noisy you'll hear every conversation but your own; reserve for the sidewalk patio for a quieter evening. Open lunch weekdays, dinner nightly. Moderate. — N.W. (8/01) getaway for locals. The California-French cuisine emphasizes seasonal ingredients in slightly unexpected combinations, with especial ingenuity in the appetizers. Along with the six-course "chef's menu," there's a reasonably priced five-course vegetarian menu showcasing fresh herbs grown in the resort's garden. A good wine list at reasonable markups is strong on half-bottles. Free valet parking at the porte cochere of the main lobby. Dinner Tuesday through Saturday. Very expensive. — N.W. (11/01)

Bistro D'Asia 1301 Orange Avenue (at B Avenue), Coronado, 619-437-6677. The relaxing restaurant attached to the hardy perennial "Lizard Lounge" serves gentled-down dishes from all over East Asia. Among the tastiest are delicate lemon shrimps, vegetarian "monk's curry," and ice creams from Mootown Creamery. Reserve for weekend dinners. Lunch/dinner daily. Moderate. — N.W. (12/01)

Bob's on the Bay 570 Marina Parkway, Chula Vista Harbor, 619-476-0400. Big, breezy Bob's, with

SOUTH BAY & CORONADO

Azzura Point Loews Coronado Bay Resort, 4000 Coronado Bay Road (Silver Strand Boulevard), Coronado, 619-424-400 or 619-424-4477. The quietly luxurious dining room with a serene bayfront view is romantic and a bit dressy, but far from stuffy. It's not just for tourists, but a lovely evening's its beautiful Bay view, seems to be the unofficial community center of Chula Vista. It's a rambling building overlooking the Yacht Harbor where all sorts of folks pop in for a night off or a fun lunch. The food is serviceable American cuisine centered on steaks and seafood, but on Fridays and Saturdays the scene turns into a pretend-luau complete with Hawaiian band, hula dancers, a party atmosphere, and a few vaguely Polynesian dishes amid the standard mid-American buffet items. Full bar. Reservations advisable for luau nights and Sunday champagne brunch. Casual, family-friendly to the max. Breakfast and lunch buffets inexpensive; Sunday and dinner buffets moderate; à la carte expensive. — N.W. (7/03)

Cafe 1134 1134 Orange Avenue, Coronado, 619-437-1134. Rick Chapman has created a French café atmosphere with round Parisian tables and slat chairs outside and a balcony inside. Here Coronado's arty types mix with admirals, CEOs, and SEALs. Big fat cups of tea are a favored drink. Breakfasts are mostly steamed eggs plus extras, such as the Americana with two steamed eggs, Swiss cheese and ham, a side of fruit and sliced baguette. Lunches are sandwiches (like curried tuna or brie con pesto) or salads (try the chicken). Best deal: the Combo Special, a half sandwich and soup or salad. And there's always an art exhibition going on inside. Open daily, three meals; service until midnight on weekends. Inexpensive. — E.B. (11/01)

Galley at the Marina 550 Marina Parkway, Chula Vista, 619-422-5714. This is a great place to relax, take in the view and decide which yacht you're gonna buy when you win the lotto. It's run by Fran Muncey, widow of Bill Muncey, San Diego's greatest speedboat-racing champion. The tasty, bargain-priced Happy Hour specials (3 p.m. to 6 p.m., Monday through Saturday) make a visit worth the trip west of I-5: try a 1/2-pound steerburger with French fries, chicken Caesar salad with sourdough toast, or a filet mignon steak plate with steak fries. Next morning, catch the breakfast favorite: biscuits and sausage gravy with eggs. Inexpensive. — E.B. (11/00)

Point-Point Joint 916 East Eighth Street, National City, 619-474-2866. You're in Little Manila here, heartland of San Diego's Filipino community. So the food has to be authentic. Your problem's going to be choosing. Dozens of dishes with mysterious meats and veggies. You can play safe and choose, say, chicken barbecue on a bamboo spit, chicken adobo, or longaniza sausage. But you should seek out less familiar choices, too. Kare-kare (yam, peanut butter sauce with beef and tripe) is delicious, and so is binuguan, pork in pork blood, also known as "chocolate meat." Want healthy? There's monggo (mung beans) with bitter melon leaves, or point to a pile of split, deep-fried fish — daing na bangus, vinegar-soaked milk fish, said to be popular with old men with high blood pressure. Lunch, dinner seven days; breakfast Friday, Saturday, Sunday. Inexpensive. — E.B. (8/03)

Zorbas Family Restaurant 100 Broadway, Chula Vista, 619-422-8853. We haven't got to plate-breaking yet, but Greek dancing is alive and well at Zorba's on Fridays and Saturdays. That includes the zembekikos, where the dancer picks a glass of ouzo off the floor with his mouth and drinks it. The rest of the week? Families fill this place. They're here for the buffet, spooning up the spanakopita (spinach in deliciously flaky pastry), dolmathes, (ground beef and rice rolled in grape leaves), moussaka (eggplant, zucchini, and ground beef), and lamb. Try dividing your meal into three: first visit the salad section. Grab their real, strong-tasting olives, tabbouleh, hummus, onions, lettuce, and pita bread. Return for the heavies, the lamb and beef dishes. Then leave room for baklava and other desserts. It may not be the gourmet's method, but there's no better way to fill a belly. Lunch, dinner. Inexpensive. — E.B. (2/03) stirring huge steaming pots of soup, foot-high clay pots simmering with frijoles, and dark-brown ceramic bowls of meat simmering on the flames. This isn't TJ, it's Central Mexico. Some great choices include bistek ahumada (smoked beef) or costilla de res (beef ribs), pollo en mole, lengua de res (ox tongue), and carne de cerdo (pork), all around $3, including soup, dessert, and pleasant culture shock. Open 24/7 except from midnight on Sunday to 7 a.m. Monday. Inexpensive. — E.B. (11/00)

El Rincon Del Oso Location 47, Mercado Hidalgo, Calle Victoria, Rio District, Tijuana. Eating goat is an acquired taste. This little market restaurant is a good place to start acquiring. It serves kid for breakfast that's surprisingly easy on the taste buds. The best part is scooping the juices and the meat into a hot corn tortilla, adding cilantro, lime, grated onions, and a splash of salsa, and chomping in. It's meaty, slightly rich, almost gamey, like deer or buffalo, except the juices round out that gamey aftertaste. Come early morning for the best kid and the best market scenes. Open seven days. Inexpensive. — E.B. (11/01)

Fonda Roberto's La Sierra Motel, Old Road to Ensenada, Avenida Cuahutemoc #2800, Tijuana, 686-4687. Unusual regional specialties are found here. Beef tongue in sesame seed sauce, spicy shredded pork with artichoke seeds, two preparations of chicken, a half dozen of steak. Don't miss the soups or chile en nogada. Portions are small, so two people may order three entrées. Take Avenida Revolución all the way to Agua Caliente Blvd. At Calimax, make a right; go up two blocks and make a left. After one block, make another left. Roberto's is in the motel just after the road veers right. Closed Monday; open Tuesday through Sunday, 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.W.

La Petite Cafe Avenida Constitución #720-Q, in Foreign Club Passage off Revolución between 3rd and 4th (beside Maxim's), Tijuana, 688-2171. You're in a side eddy here from the storm of Revolución among Olmec sculptures, Aztec calendars, trees, and amazing quiet. It's standard casera (homestyle) food: Spanish chicken with rice and beans, pork chops in green sauce, red enchiladas, steak ranchero, liver-and-onion stew, chicharrón (crisp fried pork rind) in a red sauce, and of course carne asada, but cooked well and priced amazingly low. Check the generous five-item-plus-coffee breakfast special. All-day breakfast and lunches, seven days. Inexpensive. — E.B. (8/03)

Loncheria La Poca Lucha Municipal Market, 105 Avenida Niños Héroes, Tijuana. Venturing to the far end of Tijuana's Mercado Municipal is like entering a scene from The Sorcerer's Apprentice. Shafts of sun penetrate the dark of an incredible kitchen of great black iron stoves and giant steaming pots, and hoods gathering into black pipes that snake up and out through the roof. But what a welcome! As you walk through the mercado, ladies bounce up, enticing you away to their eateries. Hang in there till you reach Loncheria La Poca Lucha, "The Small Struggle Lunch Place." Ask for carne de puerco (pork), chiles rellenos, bistek ranchero, or higado al gusto (liver), all around $3. Pescado frito (fried fish), milanesa con papas (veal with fries), pollo frito (fried chicken), and carne asada are slightly more. Price includes soup, steaming hot corn tortillas, and a soda. Open seven days, 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. Inexpensive. — E.B. (11/00)

Mr. Fish 6000 Blvd. Agua Caliente, Tijuana, 686-3603. It's fun to eat in this restaurant with its thatched roof and wide variety of fish and seafood. Don't overlook the whole fish, either steamed or fried, the filet in garlic butter, or, for those who'd like a smorgasbord, the "Combination Mr. Fish," which supplies fresh lobster, shrimp, squid, and a filet of fish. The half-dozen preparations of crêpes are wild — there's even a Mexican version of blintzes. Open Sunday through Wednesday, 11:30 a.m. to 10:30 p.m.; Thursday through Saturday, 11:30 a.m. to 2:00 a.m. Follow Revolución until it bends to the left and becomes Agua Caliente. Continue past the twin high-rise towers. Mr. Fish is on the right-hand side of the road, just before the country club. Moderate. — E.W.

Salon Azteca Rosarito Beach Hotel, south end of Boulevard Jubarez, Rosarito, 661-612-1111. This fabled old hotel's all-you-can-eat Sunday brunch buffet offers a great excuse to check out the gorgeous architecture and meet other travelers in town. To reach the buffet, go to the left behind the registration desk to the Salon Azteca, walk in, grab a plate, and start dishing up your breakfast from the long line of cafeteria-like bins filled with gringo, gringo-Mex, real Mexican (menudo), and international specialties. Expect to tip if you want something from the omelet or carving station. Next, plunk down at a table where a waiter will arrive to serve you juice and endless cups of decent coffee. Casual dress. Secure parking in hotel lot for a small extra charge. Sundays only, 7:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. Somewhat expensive for the area; Visa and MasterCard accepted. — N.W. (4/03)

Super Antojitos 1810 4th Street (between Constitución and Niños Héroes), Tijuana, 665-685-5070. Sr. Lechuga's restaurant has been around for 40 years, for good reason. Early mornings, people line up for breakfast. You enter a sort of heaven: arches, hidden lighting, glass chandeliers, even a statue of the Virgin Mary. The breakfast special, called mole poblano, includes two eggs, enchilada de mole, rice, beans, and bread or tortillas. The delicious mole, Sr. Lechuga's own, contains raisins, avocado, plantain, almonds, peanuts, thyme, and cilantro. Plus, you're drinking Sr. Lechuga's own coffee. He grows it down south. Super antojitos means super snacks, so search out the pastes — pastries stuffed with mole, cheese, or ground meat and potatoes. Also delicious: pork rind gorditas. Open daily, three meals. Inexpensive. — E.B. (3/20)

MULTIPLE LOCATIONS

Karl Strauss Brewery Restaurant 1157 Columbia Street, downtown, 619-234-2739. One-time Pabst brewmeister Karl Strauss heads his own brewery and a bunch of brewery restaurants bearing his name, so you can't help but be a little wary of an over-slick operation. But at least at downtown's ivy-covered brick drink and eatery, the food's honest, tasty, and sleek, not slick. And Karl's beers are still interesting. Go for honest-but-beautiful dishes like his "Hump Day" meatloaf (Wednesdays only), which comes looking like a Magic Mountain, or the grilled marinated eggplant sandwich on focaccia. Beer influence is everywhere. Filet mignon has an Amber Lager glaze. Ribs boast a Red Trolley Ale barbecue sauce. It can get pricey; try to hit happy hour. Lunch and dinner daily. Moderate. Other branches at 9675 Scranton Road, Sorrento Mesa, 858-587-2739; 5801 Armada Drive, Carlsbad, 760-431-2739; 1044 Wall Street, La Jolla, 858-551-2739. — E.B. (11/03)

The Living Room Coffeehouse 5900 El Cajon Boulevard (at 59th Street), College Area, 619-286-8434.

With deep-draft couches, Persian carpets, pictures on the wall, chunky wooden tables, and a tree-shaded patio, this Swiss-owned café is a student hangout with a lively notice board, a rental computer, and good cheap breakfast food in huge quantities. Try "The Works" omelet, with bacon, ham, onions, tomatoes, pepper, cheese on top, potatoes, fruit, and bread. Open daily, three meals, until late at night. Inexpensive. Additional locations in Hillcrest, Old Town, Point Loma, and La Jolla. — E.B. (10/00)

The Original Pancake House 3906 Convoy Street, Kearny Mesa, 858-565-1740. Starve yourself for eight hours, then come in here and order up an Apple Pancake — a foot-wide, batter-filled, five-egg paradise pelted with slices from two Granny Smith apples and baked till it puffs up like a golden mini-superdome. Cinnamon cinches it. The German Pancake, or its kid brother, the Dutch Baby, are good oven-baked alternatives, as is the really, really filling mushroom omelet, which comes with three pancakes. Oh, and the Eggs Michael: sausage patties and poached eggs lost somewhere under a mushroom-sherry sauce. The whole atmosphere — striped gold-and-cream wallpaper, dainty cups, shelves of ceramic dogs — feels like it's the Fifties and your granny took you here when you were five. at JFK Airport (amid numberless corporate plugs: Hugo Boss, Borders, Sbarro, etc.) when a military coup unsettles his fictitious homeland of Krakozhia, invalidating his passport and entry visa, while simultaneously closing off his return route. A man without a country, but not without a bed and all the amenities: a nest feathered in a construction zone of the airport unaccountably outside the sweep of security patrols. The pity-please protagonist — part Chaplin-esque, part Capra-esque, part Kafka-esque — has one scene of emotional turmoil over the carnage back home, then never seems to give it another thought. In the meantime — month after month of it — he gets involved deeper and deeper with officious officials, affable laborers, a beautiful stewardess. There is much mangling of language for comic effect — mispronunciation, misunderstanding, misuse — though his increasing fluency in English fluctuates widely depending upon where the joke lies. Even by Spielberg's standards, the treacle runs high, but the unwritten proscriptions against "plot spoilers" — e.g., the contents of the Planter's Peanuts tin that the foreigner carries with him, the deathbed promise to his father, the entire purpose of his visit to the States, the eventual fulfillment of it — will allow the reviewer to keep his head above the molasses. Spielberg appears for the time being — ever since he channelled Kubrick in A.I., and on through Minority Report and Catch Me If You Can — to have given up his pursuit of box-office records and/or Oscars. What he is pursuing in their stead, with all the wherewithal in the world, is hardly less a waste of time.

Napoleon Dynamite

High in podunk Idaho, a misfit for much more than just his name. Sporting a tumbleweed of kinky blond hair atop his gangly slope-shouldered frame, breathing through a troutlike open mouth, speaking in a monotone by turns belligerent and resentful, peering out at the world through half-closed eyes and an oversized pair of aviator glasses, he is almost an Ex-pressionistic caricature of adolescent discomfort. And the unknown actor, Jon Heder, gives not so much a performance as a mere presentation: here I am, like it or lump it. His unfamiliarity (is he really like that?) harmonizes beautifully with his many discomforts: his clumsiness with the opposite sex ("I see you're drinking one-percent. Is that 'cause you think you're fat?"), his mortification over his closest relatives (an older brother involved in an Internet courtship, an uncle pathologically nostalgic for his footballing heyday in the Eighties: "It's a time machine, Napoleon. We bought it on-line"), his bond of alienation with the only Latino in his class, his favorite pastime of solo tetherball. The clever credits sequence, composed of unappetizing plates of food and assorted other mundanities (a Chapstick, a library check-out card, and so on), correctly forecasts the relentless quirks of the film, a feel-odd comedy that takes a hard turn at the end toward a feel-good comedy (not without adequate preparation: a closed-door practice session in which the hero "gets his groove on" with a dance-instruction video found at a thrift shop). The equally unknown director, Jared Hess, whom we might like to imagine got to know his star by way of alphabetical seating in Study Hall, would appear to have undergone some sort of artistic epiphany while watching a Wes Anderson film: flat, squared-up images, dealt out in a kind of hammer-and-anvil rhythm. The consistency of it all, not just the rhythm but the tone, is ultimately persuasive. The viewer is given plenty of time to attune, to adjust, to acclimate. He is given no special inducement.

Ishiro Honda's black-and-white Godzilla, fully restored for its fiftieth anniversary, with English subtitles in place of dubbing, and no trace of Raymond Burr, comes across predictably as crude, primitive, and ineffective, a grade-Z monster movie in any language. Those selfsame qualities, however, have their advantages in the special-effects department — the man in the lizard suit, the miniatures, the models, the toys — as against the limitless capabilities of CG effects today. By leaving something to the imagination (a lot, actually), they implicitly leave space for the unimaginable — not a bad idea when contemplating an apocalypse. They leave something, in other words, to the intellect, so that the disaster remains a matter of speculation rather than just spectacle, and the viewer becomes an active collaborator rather than an aloof onlooker. Nor is it a bad idea to surround such a disaster with a buffer zone of laughability. (Always our best defense, if not our only.) The Japanese, needless to say, come by their dread of the H-bomb honestly. And in that respect a lumbering relic of the Jurassic era, roused from the ocean floor by nuclear tests, may be seen as the soul of discretion,

Well, it's too late now. The Ladykillers, still hanging on at the Pacific Gaslamp more than two months after its release, finally slipped out of town without my seeing it a second time, much less a third or a fourth: a new test for the Coen brothers. Are their movies intrinsically more memorable than other people's movies, or do I simply give them unfair opportunities to be memorized? Even though this latest one is by any measure a lesser one — hence my hesitancy to re-see it — its characters and its ambience linger in the mind (and two of its lines, "Easiest thing in the world" and "Just a trial balloon," have worked their way into my standard phrase book), while other movies I was seeing around that same time — The Prince and Me, Ella Enchanted, Dawn of the Dead, Hellboy, et al. — have evaporated. I would not know this had I yielded to habit. ■

Around the World in 80 Days — A remake of the Jules Verne circumnavigatory adventure, converted into a vehicle for a Jackie Chan plot about a stolen jade Buddha. (The voyage is a mere getaway from the police and a passage to China.) No doubt the Mexican comedian Cantinflas, in the 1956 version, was no more faithful a piece of casting as Phileas Fogg's French manservant, Passepartout. But nor did he command top billing and a complete retailoring. With Steve Coogan, Jim Broadbent, Ewen Bremner, Cécile de France as a very un-Vernean liberated woman, and Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger in a cameo as a polygamous Turk; directed by Frank Coraci. 2004.

The Chronicles of Riddick — The marble-eyed dragonslayer of Pitch Black — a decent little movie, four years previous — is enlisted, over his grumbled protests ("I just wanted to be left alone"), to face a bigger challenge: the planet-by-planet blitzkrieg of the Necromongers, otherwise known as the World-Enders, who want to bring everyone, everywhere, to heel, and eliminate the differences and diversities that are at the root of so much discontentment, especially discontentment with the advance of the Necromongers. A young girl plaintively sums up the plot: "Are you going to stop the new monsters now?" David Twohy, who directed Pitch Black as well as the equally smallish but even better The Arrival, maintains his "personal" touch of tilted cameras amid the grotesquely swollen production: maybe the most hideous steroidal growth witnessed in a sequel since Terminator 2. With Vin Diesel, Colm Feore, Thandie Newton, Alexa Davalos, and Judi Dench. 2004.

Coffee and Cigarettes — A collection of eleven comic sketches filmed over a period of almost two decades by Jim Jarmusch, all of them involving, if not actually revolving around, coffee and cigarettes (or in one case, tea and cigarettes) and the various restaurant tables on which these are arrayed. Each takes place in a new location with new characters, although certain ideas and actual lines of dialogue will recur. Each, too, observes strict formalities in its manner of presentation: black-and-white photography; the camera permitted only one direction of approach, as through a proscenium arch (one exception: the outward-looking angle on a sparking science-fictional gizmo); and every table, at least once, viewed from directly overhead (praise be to Godard!). Many in the motley cast — Roberto Benigni, Steven Wright, Iggy Pop, Tom Waits, Cate Blanchett, Alfred Molina, Steve Coogan, Bill Murray, two members of the Wu-Tang Clan, former Warholian Taylor Mead, et al. — play themselves, but not the Southern-accented Steve Buscemi, and Blanchett plays not only herself but also, in a brunette wig, her look-alike lower-class cousin. The last-mentioned skit is a virtuoso acting display, and it vies with the Molina-Coogan duet as the best of the bunch. All of them, however, have their little drolleries — very little and very few, yet just enough to fend off boredom. 2004. ★ (HILLCREST CINEMAS) nation of the coverage of the Second Gulf War on the Al Jazeera satellite channel. The spokespeople for the Arab news station represent their own viewpoint very well; and as the only critical analysis of their work comes from the likes of Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld (in press-conference footage), it doesn't cut very deep. The one thing the viewer will learn with certainty is that the people who work for Al Jazeera are people. So, too, apparently, is the baby-faced media liaison who works for CentCom ("Sounds too much like sitcom"), Lt. Rushing of the U.S. Marines. Directed by Jehane Noujaim. 2004.

★★ (HILLCREST CINEMAS, FROM 6/25; KEN, THROUGH 6/24)

The Day after Tomorrow — Domsday science fiction — emphasis, as is only fit and proper, on fiction at the expense of science — about how global warming brings on a new Ice Age in the northern hemisphere, and in consequence a southward migration that reverses the flow of illegals across the Mexican border. (That consequence, alas, is only a throwaway irony instead of a central plotline.) The accelerated pace of the change — the already mind-boggling six to eight weeks projected early in the action must soon be revised downward to just seven to ten days, or the duration of a single monstrous storm, a pluperfect storm — can be taken as poetic license for the urgency of the situation today. To quibble, as some have done, with the accuracy of the science, besides exposing the quibbler as a small-minded square, is simply to get sucked into the promotional campaign of the film and to get sidetracked from the film itself. Sidetracked, that is, from legitimate quibbles with the routine-ness of the human drama (young love, filial love, paternal love, buddy love, bibliophile love, etc.), or with the diaphanous thinness of the cliffhanger thrills, or with the smoothness and seamlessness of the computer-generated special effects. Smoothness and seamlessness might sound like good things, but in the face of a global catastrophe of this magnitude they lend a facile-ness, a glibness, even a glee, that trivialize the spectacle. Roland Emmerich, the director also of Independence Day and Godzilla, has not allowed 9/11 to much dampen his destructive high spirits. As long as Jake Gyllenhaal and Emmy Rossum (attractive youngsters, to be sure) stay warm in front of a book-fueled fire at the New York Public Library, and as long as Dennis Quaid (the I-told-you-so scientist and re-prioritizing dad) finds his way to them on snowshoes, the rest of mankind can go merrily to hell. 2004.

A Day without a Mexican — Grade-school-level sociology lesson disguised, ever so slightly, as satirical science fiction: a mysterious "wall of fog" closes off California from the outside world and inexplicably causes the disappearance of all residents of Hispanic origin, all the way, apparently, to the Spanish-born tenor, Plácido Domingo. This in turn causes Californians to realize — duh! — that they need their Latinos. (One-third of the total population, we are instructed in one of the frequent facts and figures typed out on screen, for note-taking purposes.) Shot on video, with a no-name cast, and directed with a heavy hand by Sergio Arau, the movie arouses a sense of wonder only over its standard-issue release in multiple multiplexes. Yareli Arizemendi, John Getz, Suzanne Friedline, Maureen Flannigan. 2004.

The motto of the underdog is the motto of the movie: "Aim low." new director — Alfonso Cuarón, of A Little Princess and, less pertinently, Y Tu Mamá También — and a new Dumbledore — Michael Gambon, in place of the late Richard Harris — in addition to new roles for the likes of Gary Oldman, David Thewlis, Timothy Spall, Emma Thompson, and Julie Christie, thus closing in rapidly on the apparent goal to employ every name actor now alive in the British Isles. None of this makes much difference, or at least not the sort of difference to lighten the eyelids. It's not as if Cuarón, even had he felt so inclined, could put his foot down and stem the tide of fulsome special effects, or crack the whip and bring in the elephantine kiddie film at under two hours. (It may be — if you care to go back to the earlier installments to check — that he has leached out more of the color and has added a percentage of form-stretching wide-angle shots.) He can only go along for the ride. And what a long ride it is. Story interest, even with all that time on his hands, is minimal: Harry, now fully into adolescence (what is it he's getting up to in his bedroom under the sheets with his wand?), seems to be the target of a wizardly escaped convict called Sirius Black, who does not turn up till the hour-and-a-half mark. Werewolves play a major role (Prof. Lupin's name rather gives him away), and there's a mythical equine bird or avian horse known as a hippogriff, as well as a flying flock of faceless soul-suckers called Dementors. The whole sticky mess is only partially cleaned up through the expedient of two-places-at-once time travel. Now if only the Patronus Charm —

Japanese Story — An Australian geologist (Toni Collette) is obliged to squire a Japanese speculator (Gotaro Tsunashima) around the Outback: "I'm a bloody geologist, not a geisha!" The clash of cultures and languages produces unexciting results: e.g., a toneless rendition of "Danny Boy" at a karaoke bar. Events take an unexpected turn, however, after taking an expected romatic turn. The unexpected turn and its immediate aftermath are well executed, but then things turn, and stay, mawkish. Handsome photography by Ian Baker. Written and directed by Sue Brooks. 2003.

Kill Bill, Vol. 2 — The second half offers no convincing evidence that Quentin Tarantino needed two installments to tell his scrambled tale. It convinces us instead that in its entirety the film is even worse than initially believed. For much of the time, it looks more like sweepings from the cutting-room floor than like a legitimate sequel: a dumping ground for the slow parts. Certainly, any part that features David Caradine — the titular Bill, who finally puts in an appearance, tooting his own musical motif like Charles Bronson in Once upon a Time in the West — will necessarily be a slow part, inasmuch as the actor enunciates his lines like a drunk driver in a roadside conversation with a Highway Patrolman. The sole sensation of speed, the sole release from the Leone-like longueurs, could come from getting caught up in trying to keep pace with the cinematic in-jokes and allusions. But the only profit in that line of pursuit — a trivial pursuit par excellence — would be the verification of Tarantino's credentials as a movie nut. His knowledge and his enthusiasm have never been in question; his intelligence and taste are something else again. Uma Thurman, Michael Madsen, Daryl Hannah. 2004.

Lana's Rain — American Nightmare about a Bosnian brother and sister who flee the Balkan Wars for Chicago, where the eye-patched brother pimps for his language-handicapped sister (among others), and the sister furtively studies English from Dr. Seuss. A cheerful Chinese sculptor offers her the prospect of a better life. Crass exploitation filmmaking, under the "indie" flag. With Oksana Orlenko, Nikolai Stoilov, and Louyong Wang; written and directed by Michael S. Ojeda. 2004.

Love Me If You Dare — Two schoolchildren, bound together by a spirit of anarchy and a never-ending game of "dares," can't escape the binds as they go their separate ways into adulthood: an unwinning combination of the cute and the cruel. The most "daring" escapade is perhaps the pillow fight that has the nerve to evoke Jean Vigo, the French cinema's poet of childhood anarchism. With Guillaume Canet and Marion Cotillard; written and directed by Yann Samuël. 2003.

Man on Fire — Soft-boiled thriller about an alcohol-impaired bodyguard (Denzel Washington) who goes on a revenge rampage after his button-cute charge (Dakota Fanning) gets snatched by a Mexico City kidnapping ring. Long and lugubrious, the movie sets aside a full hour for the guard to bond with the body, dropping his defenses under her peppering of personal questions, helping her with her homework, treating her to ice cream, and most significantly, perhaps even self-consciously symbolically, pulling double duty as her swimming coach: she's slow off the blocks, like the movie itself. Things hardly pick up once the murder and the mayhem start: Tony Scott's jiggly, jumpy, jerky visuals propel the action sideways rather than forwards. Christopher Walken, Radha Mitchell, Marc Anthony, Giancarlo Giannini, Rachel Ticotin. 2004.

Mean Girls — A home-schooled teenager, raised in the wilds of Africa, is let loose as an innocent in the American public school system, and the worn-out subject of adolescent cattiness and bitchery receives an infusion of fresh blood, or at any rate a megadose of caffeine. The snap-crackle-pop script (from a book by Rosalind Wiseman) is by Saturday Night Live veteran Tina Fey, who also plays the sympathetic math teacher, the most human character in the group. In truth, the script could stand to take a breath once in a while, and the nominal heroine (Lindsay Lohan) too facetiously straddles too many fences — a naïf, a misfit, a hottie, a math whiz — but then again, the real heroine is Tina Fey, who we may be sure has a few scores to settle. Rachel McAdams, Lacey Chabert, Lizzy Caplan, Tim Meadows; directed by Mark Waters. 2004.

The Mother — Post-menopausal romance (it might as aptly have been titled The Grandmother) centered around a brand-new widow, a self-described "shapeless old lump," who warms up to her son's hunky, hairy handyman and her daughter's married boyfriend (one and the same man) and warms him up in turn: "I thought nobody would ever touch me again, apart from the undertaker." Crudely put, it's All That Heaven Allows meets The Graduate. Meets Lady Chatterley's Lover. Murmurous, understated Brit mundanity has been incongruously gussied up with arty, off-kilter compositions, odd croppings, and sterile Bergman-esque lighting. (Director Roger Michell, of Persuasion and Notting Hill, has somewhat overreached himself.) Adeptly acted, under crushing burdens, by Anne Reid, Daniel Craig, and Cathryn Bradshaw. 2004.

The Notebook — Young love relived in the old folks' home: James Garner, every day, reads to a memory-impaired Gena Rowlands the story of a different-worlds romance ("It was an improbable romance. He was a country boy, she was from the city"), the story — you guessed it — of their own romance in the Forties, in the hopes of jogging her memory. (The very different-looking Ryan Gosling and Rachel McAdams play them in flashback.) Another river of slush from the pen of novelist Nicholas Sparks, sluggishly navigated by director Nick Cassavetes (Rowlands's son), unable to dredge up even the snickers of Message in a Bottle and A Walk to Remember. With James Marsden, Kevin Connolly, Joan Allen, Sam Shepard. 2004.

Raising Helen — A career girl in the glamorous world of high fashion discovers what really matters in life when she inherits three children from her deceased sister, and meets a hunky Lutheran minister. (She's stunned to learn a Lutheran cleric can date.) True-to-form Garry Marshall comedy: starry-eyed (over Kate Hudson), saccharine, smarmy, and of course a small part for Hector Elizondo. With John Corbett, Joan Cusack, Helen Mirren, and (fleeting as the departing sister) Felicity Huffman. 2004.

The Right Stuff — Why go to epic lengths — a three-and-a-quarter-hour duration, a sixteen-year time span, a $27 million budget — and not also go to epic heights? Or to ask it another way: who wants to see a smart-ass epic? Philip Kaufman's portrait of the first American astronauts does not want to treat its subjects with anything near reverence (it saves that attitude for the unsung test pilot, Chuck Yeager). But this means, practically speaking, that in order to preserve the Special Breed status proclaimed in the title, everyone else in the cast of characters must be reduced in proportion. Hence, character after character, or caricature after caricature, gets chopped off at the knees. Or hips. Or upwards. There are perhaps enough good moments here — most of them revolving around John Glenn, a.k.a. Dudley Doughty, Harry Hairshirt, and The Clean Marine — to sustain a movie of average length; but not to sustain one twice that long. Based on the book by Tom Wolfe; with Ed Harris, Sam Shepard, Scott Glenn, and Dennis Quaid. 1983.

★ (MUSEUM OF PHOTOGRAPHIC ARTS, 6/24 AND 25, 7 P.M.)

Saved — Teen comedy with a different slant: it takes place at American Eagle Christian High School, a breeding ground for born-again, and the exclusive social clique calls itself the Christian Jewels, an all-girl "road band for Jesus," and the misfit rebel is a Jewish nicotine fiend. The movie, directed and co-written by a would-be Alexander Payne by the name of Brian Dannelly, is brave in its choice of subject, perhaps, but bullish in treatment, pallid in image, and sanctimonious in its irreverence. With Jena Malone, Mandy Moore, Macaulay Culkin, Patrick Fugit, Eva Amurri, Martin Donovan, Mary-Louise Parker. 2004.

The Stepford Wives — A warm-up of Ira Levin’s scare story about the robot spouses who fulfill the domestic ideals of Madison Avenue in the Fifties. Or rather, a cool-down of it. The original screen version, directed by Bryan Forbes in 1975, plowed into the battlefield of Women’s Lib when there was still a lot of shooting going on. Since then, we’ve come a long way, baby — into the period of Political Correctness, the shouting down of social diagnostics by social prescription, the substitution of soft soap for hard truths, and the progressive pampering and sissifying of the movie audience. A remake of the story for the new millennium could hardly help but be archly knowing, smugly self-congratulatory, and blandly predigested; it could hardly help but give fair representation, too, to the male homosexual mate (a “witty and stylish and ironic” one, naturally); it could hardly help but be a comedy, still less a “dark” one (you know it’s a comedy not because you can find things to laugh at, but because the scampering, scurrying Witches of Eastwick-y background music keeps telling you it’s a comedy); it could hardly help but have a triumphant ending in which the tables get turned on the lordly menfolk and the women are restored to power; and it could hardly help but introduce a “surprise” twist or two at the cost of logic and sense. Even apart from all that, it seems a serious miscalculation to rewrite the Nancy Drew heroine — the woman charged with sniffing out the dastardly scheme — as a type-A career woman, a card-carrying rabid bitch, a cold-blooded profit-motivated head of a schlocky TV network, in fact a Faye Dunaway in Network, who starts out the movie as already less than human. (Are we meant to root for her robotization?) It seems a further miscalculation to divulge the plot secrets so early, to dispense with things like crescendoing suspense and dramatic climaxes, and simply to race along (the running time barely reaches an hour and a half) as if we all know where we're headed from the outset. But that's just to say that the whole idea of a comic remake in the first place was a miscalculation. Nicole Kidman, Matthew Broderick, Bette Midler, Glenn Close, Christopher Walken; directed by Frank Oz. 2004.

The Story of the Weeping Camel — Dromedary tearjerker, part ethnographic documentary, part folklore. The story is this: a Mongolian camel rejects her first-born colt, and a tribe of herders in the Gobi Desert send for a violinist to perform a "Hoos ritual," a musical mediation between estranged mother and babe. Illuminating in a dull sort of way. And all the camel footage you could ever want. Co-directed by Byambasuren Davaa and Luigi Falorni. 2004. ★ (LA JOLLA VILLAGE)

Super Size Me — Hectoring documentary on the relationship between American fast food and American obesity, and insufficiently funny to compensate for the preaching. Filmmaker Morgan Spurlock, attempting to walk in the shoes of Michael Moore, risks his own body for science, if not for art: eating nothing but McDonald's for thirty days straight. He doesn't die, but he throws up on camera, puts on twenty-five pounds, and imperils his liver, among other things. The video image is as rough as the rhetoric. 2004. ★ (HILLCREST CINEMAS; LA JOLLA VILLAGE)

The Terminal — Reviewed this issue. With Tom Hanks, Stanley Tucci, Catherine Zeta-Jones, Chi McBride, and Diego Luna; directed by Steven Spielberg.

Troy — Big (two hours, forty minutes) old-fashioned (not to say ancient) sword-and-sandal epic, complete with the traditional Cast of Thousands (however many of them may nowadays be computer-generated) and the mandatory Wooden Horse, plausible in its physical appearance if implausible in its placement at the foot of a downsloping sandy beach several miles from the city walls (why bother to lug it inside?). In basic outline a fairly straightforward illustration of events in The Iliad, or at any rate events on the human plane, it is all apt to seem terribly familiar to anyone who made a habit of actually reading his assigned reading in high school, regardless how long ago. Which is not to say it is all apt to seem terribly interesting. The casting of the movie, to begin with, can be said to be a little off when Achilles and Briseis (Brad Pitt and Rose Byrne) look prettier than Paris and Helen (Orlando Bloom and Diane Kruger, a Teutonic Ursula Andress type). Nor is it good storytelling to balance the legendary love that brought down an empire, and even to overbalance it, with a rival love whose only purpose is to flatter the movie's star. And not even his prelude one-on-one duel against a bald, multi-scarred, mountainous Goliath, and his zigzagging jump-and-stab maneuver in slow-motion, can convince us of Pitt's claim as the Greatest Living Warrior. A larger problem, though, seems to have to do with the aforementioned familiarity: the plainness, the bareness, the rudimentariness of the basic myth. Myth demands a bit of dressing-up if it wants to continue to turn heads in the modern world. (See what the Coen brothers did with The Odyssey in O Brother, Where Art Thou?) And it's not enough simply to instill the characters with a self-conscious, an unbecoming, an almost obnoxious certainty as to their own immortality and their place in history: "This war will never be forgotten, nor will the heroes who fight in it." They're right about that, but it's not for

Van Helsing — The brand-name vampire hunter seen as an Indiana Jonesian swash-buckler, armed with a rapid-fire crossbow and saw-toothed boomerangs, rather than an ivory-tower savant: Hugh Jackman in gunslinger's garb rather than Peter Cushing in gentleman's get-up. What Stephen Sommers did for the Mummy, twice over, he now does for a horrific Dream Team made up of Dracula, the Wolfman, Frankenstein's monster, and Mr. Hyde. Lest that be misconstrued as a compliment, let's be clear that what he does for them amounts to a steroidal disfigurement, an abomination against nature — or, as you like, against art. (Sommers appears to have borrowed from The League of Extraordinary Gentlemen, not just the Dream Team idea, but the particular misconception that Mr. Hyde is bigger than Dr. Jekyll, when the reverse should be the case.) It takes some doing, to give credit where due, to conceal completely the talent and the beauty of Kate Beckinsale; even Underworld couldn't do it; but this busy, noisy, instantaneously tiresome movie succeeds spectacularly on both counts. With David Wenham and Richard Roxburgh. 2004. ● (VOGUE)

The Twilight Samurai — Unmythic contribution to the classic Japanese martial-arts genre. It skimps on action and piles up, instead, the domestic problems of a modest master swordsman of the mid-19th Century, widowed, deep in debt, burdened with a senile mother, two little girls to raise, tattered clothes, and b.o. An assassination assignment in the final quarter of the film ("Bring me the head of Zenemon Yogo") restores a modicum of dignity. The calm, measured, sure-footed style of veteran director Yoji Yamada (forty-odd films, alone, about the "lovable tramp" known as Tora-san) has a dignity of its own. Hiroyuki Sanada, Rie Miyazawa. 2003.

I had to shave off my eyebrows. I was playing the game "Hour of Power," where you drink a shot of beer every minute. The bet was: whoever is the last one to vomit wins and the other guys have to shave off their eyebrows. The game went on for about an hour and 20 minutes, which translated to about 80 shots of beer. Personally, I made it to about an hour before I opened the floodgates. It was about a month before eyebrows started to grow back. During that time, I got a lot of strange looks and wore big pairs of sunglasses.

The last time that I was in Vegas, I was on my way out of the casino and I put 600 dollars on black. I hadn't had anything to drink; I threw the money down in hopes of winning. If I had won, I would have walked away a happy man. When I lost, I wasn't a happy man; the car ride home was pretty bad. I hadn't gambled at all the entire weekend. It was completely spontaneous because to win big, you have to bet big.

I jumped off a roof wearing nothing but my boxers into a swimming pool. I bet this guy that my friend could outdrink him. My friend is a pretty big guy, so I thought it was a sure thing. I bet that my friend could drink at least 20 beers. I lost because my fat friend got to about 15 beers and took a nap. That left me with nothing to do but strip down to my underwear and jump off the roof.

I lost 500 bucks on a boxing match; Lennox Lewis, that guy kills me every time I bet against him. Another time, I had to shave my entire body and streak an SDSU football game. Unfortunately, I also broke three bones in my foot as I was running on the hard pavement. I don't know how they broke, except that they seemed to give out on me. I've never been threatened with physical injury for betting. Don't get me wrong, I've been threatened with physical injury a million times, but never because I welshed on a bet.

One night I was drinking, playing some cards with my best friend, and we stopped betting for money. We started betting on stupid things, but then it got to the point where we were playing the card game Speed and my friend said, "Whoever loses has to sleep with the other guy's girlfriend." So, anyway, I ended up losing and I slept with his girlfriend, which turned out to be the best sex that I ever had.

"I love working as an acupuncturist. There are many different types of settings available to work in from a clinic or private practice to a hospital. In my practice, I enjoy incorporating acupuncture with Chinese herbal medicine and bodywork. I make a comfortable living and have flexible hours. But, the most rewarding part is being able to help my patients feel better."

SLOW WAVE

I WAS STANDING IN THE BATHROOM WHEN MY WIFE CAME IN AND MEASURED THE SECOND TOE ON EACH OF MY FEET.

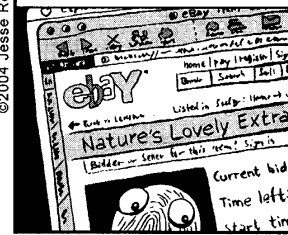

THEY WERE LONGER THAN THE BIG TOES, SO SHE EVENED THEM OUT WITH A CARPET KNIFE.

APPARENTLY SHE HAD TO KEEP TRIMMING THOSE TWO TOES BECAUSE THEY WOULD GROW BACK.

LATER, I FOUND OUT SHE WAS SELLING THEM ON EBAY, WITH GOOGLY EYES GLUED ON. SHE CALLED THEM "NATURE'S LOVELY EXTRACT."

LEAD STORY

— Several George W. Bush-supporting punk-rock bands have gained prominence in the United States recently to challenge the generally assumed dominance of rock music by political liberals, according to a May dispatch from New York by BBC News, which reported that bands such as Gotham Road and Bouncing Souls “are not raging against the machine, they are raging for it.” A Rolling Stone writer attributed the upsurge to conservatives’ general pugnaciousness, but one maven of “conservative punk” laid it to Republicans’ and punk’s joint “emphasis on personal responsibility.”

Things That Are Not As They Seem

— (1) After a ten-year study with a global positioning satellite system, researchers at England’s Oxford University concluded that homing pigeons do not get their bearings from the sun, as previously thought, but rather just follow roads and highways home. (2) Mr. Jian Feng, of Hegang in northern China, suspicious when his wife gave birth to a baby he regarded as ugly, got her to admit that, though she was not adulterous, she had been ugly before she met Jian but had had major plastic surgery in South Korea and now did not much resemble her genetic look. Jian divorced her and in May sued her for fraud.

Chutzpah!

— The Miami Herald reported in April that BellSouth called state representative Julio Robaina three times by cell phone on the floor of the Florida legislature during debate on a massive telephone-rate increase and ordered him to abandon his Democratic Party cohorts and vote for it. BellSouth had influence with Robaina because for the nine months a year that the Florida legislature is not in session, Robaina is an installer for BellSouth, and he was described as close to tears at BellSouth’s lobbying. ... In Tennessee in January, state senator John Ford, faced with a claim for increased child support from the mother of his nine-year-old daughter, formally challenged the constitutionality of the state’s child-support rules; however, among the rules challenged were those ushered through the state General Assembly last year by senator John Ford.

Unclear on the Concept

— In March in Hartford, Conn., Rebecca Messier, who was convicted with her husband, Joseph, in 1998 of giving $8500 to a prosecutor to get a lenient sentence, petitioned in superior court to get her $8500 back. ... Jeffrey Cameron Fitzhenry, 17, was arrested in Palm Desert, Calif., in May after walking into a clinic with a 9 mm handgun and shooting his girlfriend because she was about to abort his baby.

— In February and May, respectively, Father Paul Shanley and Father Robert Meffan were defrocked by the Catholic Church for having had sexual relationships with boys (Shanley) and nun-recruits (Meffan) starting in the 1960s, according to church records. Included in the church’s actions were notifications that the men are now officially “dismissed from the obligation of clerical celibacy.” Shanley is scheduled to stand trial in Massachusetts, though most of his alleged activities are protected by the statute of limitations.

Police Blotter

— Robert Hesketh was acquitted of drunk driving in Chilliwack, British Columbia, in March because police were too zealous in getting him a lawyer. After arresting Hesketh, constable Rick Murray asked him several times if he wanted a lawyer, but Hesketh each time refused. Murray eventually called one on Hesketh’s behalf. Only after the lawyer and Hesketh talked did police administer a breathalyzer test, and judge John Lenaghan ruled that that was too much of a delay and tossed out the test’s results.

— From a police report quoted in Seattle’s newsweekly The Stranger (April 29): “[A] witness stated that he and another witness watched the suspect walk up to several different men [at the University Book Store on the University of Washington campus], get on his knees, and sniff their anuses. He would then lean forward as though he was getting a book off the lower shelf. [One witness] also said that when one male got up from a bench and walked away, the suspect walked over and started smelling the area where the male had been sitting. When the witnesses confronted the suspect about the incidents, the suspect said, ‘Sometimes I forget myself and get carried away.’”

— The robber of a Bank of America branch in St. Mary, Fla. (near Orlando), was still at large at press time, but police released the surveillance tape showing the man in a bright Hawaiian print shirt holding his newly acquired stash to his lips and kissing it before making his getaway.

Least Competent Criminals

— Thinking Outside the Box: Teresa Jones Smith, 44, was arrested in Lexington, N.C., in January after trying to spring her incarcerated boyfriend, Roger Johnson, from jail. According to deputies, Smith, who had been seated across from Johnson at a visiting-room bench, was found with a mini blowtorch and other tools trying to cut through the Plexiglas shield that separates prisoners from visitors, but more smoke was created than she was prepared for.

Update

— “News of the Weird” reported in 2002 and 2003 on exploits of “extreme ironing” athletes who set up boards and press creases under difficult circumstances, such as while sailboarding or bouncing on a trampoline. Several British “ironists” made a publicity tour of the United States in May in their campaign to make their obsession an Olympic sport. Events are now judged at 120 points each, half of which is based on the quality of the pressing. Founder Phil Shaw said he got the idea one day in 1997 when he faced a load of wrinkled shirts and thought he would be less bored if he hooked up a long extension cord and ironed while he went rock climbing.

Darwin Award Attempts

— An 18-year-old man survived (but was in critical condition) after losing at a variation of Russian roulette (six open cans of Mountain Dew, one spiked with antifreeze) at a party (Princeton, W.Va., May). ... A high school student survived (at one time in critical condition, bleeding from the mouth) after drinking an unidentified chemistry-lab substance in order to win a $2 bet (Odessa, Texas, May). ... Fidel Cueva, 41, survived with only scrapes and bruises after he bailed out of an emergency window of a Greyhound bus at 55 mph in the fast lane of California’s 101 freeway at rush hour because the bus, an “express,” had just bypassed his stop. (Ventura, Calif., May).

More Things to Worry About

— After an investigation, the FBI concluded that a motion sensor found on the tracks near Philadelphia’s 30th Street rail station just after the Madrid train bombings was not related to terrorism but was put there by an employee trying to sleep on the job but worried about a supervisor catching him. ... As gasoline prices cleared $2 a gallon in May, Minnesota’s Commerce Department levied a $70,000 fine against Murphy Oil Co.’s ten stations for charging too low a price. A 2001 state law requires that dealers make at least eight cents a gallon profit.

BATTERY

Location: [1900] Thomas Avenue, Pacific Beach

Time/Date: 7:10 a.m. on 6/14/04

Investigation: Edward H. and Reuben K. got into an altercation over their cars being parked too close to

arrived, H. and K. were in the middle of a physical fight. Both were arrested.

Statement of Edward H.: There was a pounding on my bedroom window, someone yelling for me to wake up. A few minutes prior, I had heard knocking on the door. My girlfriend said, "There's someone at the door," but we were both too asleep to get up. Then they were at my window. I looked out my window and said, "Whoever you are, this better be important." It was my neighbor, this guy who lives across the way. He was yelling about how my car was parked too close to his truck and he couldn't get out. I was mad. I went out to the parking lot and started cursing at him. I said, "What the fuck do you think you're doing pounding on my window like that and waking me up?" He told me he didn't care and said I was parked too close to his truck and that he felt he might scratch his paint job. He has one of those rockabilly flame paint jobs on his truck. I told him to go to hell. He said, "Go to hell, huh?" and slapped me across the face. He said to me, "How do you like that, going to hell?" He slapped me again and then he punched me in the gut. He didn't punch too hard, but it hurt. It was like he was trying to show me something. So I went to my car, acting like I was going to move it, and got out a monkey wrench in the backseat. I hit [Reuben K.] across the face with it. I don't know what I was thinking but I know this is self-defense.

Witness Statement: I heard two men arguing outside my bathroom window. I don't know what it was about, they just kept calling each other names. I looked out and saw two of my neighbors beating on each other. I was afraid they'd hurt each other badly, or worse, so I called the police.

ASSAULT WITH A DEADLY WEAPON ON OFFICER

Location: [1900] Felspar Street, Pacific Beach

Time/Date: 8:56 p.m. on 6/10/04

Investigation Summary: A Hispanic male, 20s, with a shaved head, broke into a black 1996 Honda Accord in the alley behind Felspar. Responding officers entered the alley on foot and as they approached the vehicle, they found the suspect in the driver's seat with the engine running. The suspect put the car in reverse and as he backed up, he hit one of the officers. The suspect fled the scene. After a short pursuit, he drove into the driveway at 4790 Olney Street, almost crashing into the house. He exited the vehicle and went into a residence at 4755 Olney Street but quickly came out and was taken into custody.

Witness Statement: The suspect burst into my house and told me to be cool. I said, "No way," and went

ATTEMPTED KIDNAPPING

Location: 3800 Fairmount Avenue

Time/Date: 5:06 p.m. on 6/9/04

Report: A 9-year-old black male was walking southbound on Fairmount when he noticed a large brown sedan occupied by two black males in their 20s.

Victim's Statement: I had my eye out. I knew something was up here. The van pulled alongside me and I saw these two men. They were smiling like they wanted to be my friend or something. I asked why they were following me. The van stopped and one of the men got out. He grabbed me from behind, grabbing my arms, and tried to force me into that van. I told him he was gonna be sorry. I said: "Let go of me, you freak!" He grabbed me around the chest. I bit him on the hand really hard and he let go of me. He yelled: "I'm bleeding!" Then I ran home and called the police.

PETTY THEFT

Location: [15000] Nawa Court, Rancho Bernardo

Time/Date: 12:00 p.m. on 6/5/04

Officer's Report: Lynda M.

noticed that her ATM card was missing from her wallet. No other items were missing. M. believes her daughter may have taken the ATM card as she was having a difficult time controlling her daughter's behavior. I suggested that M. discuss the issue with her daughter. I also suggested that she contact the staff at Mt. Carmel High School and obtain professional help to deal with the relationship.

LOST/STOLEN ITEM

Location: 9410 Mira Mesa Boulevard

Time/Date: 1:00 p.m. on 6/11/04

Officer's Report: While working Northeastern, I spoke to Amit G. He told me that he brought his laptop computer with him to the In-N-Out Burger and set it under the table. He left the store without taking the computer. When G. returned to the store 30 minutes later, the computer was gone and none of the employees knew where it went. A follow-up investigation is not required.

A Gem, Not a Golf Cart

Janet Podney is a Pacific Beach native, which I suspect is one of the reasons she bought an electric car. Why have a car you can drive on the freeway when there's no life east of I-5?

"P.B.'s the perfect community for it," she says. "I was looking for a vehicle just to get around town, and I didn't want to spend $20,000. I also have an internal-combustion-engine car. Or as we call them in electric vehicle geek talk, ICE. Like when someone pulls into an electric-vehicle-only parking spot ahead of you, you got iced.

"I bought the GEM because — it was more like, why not? Once I got the image in my head, I couldn't think of enough reasons not to buy it. It's the ultimate beach cruiser. Plus, I'll admit, it's like a giant middle finger to the oil industry. The only time I go to the gas station is when I want a Slurpee."

The batteries aren't much bigger than the battery in my Corolla. Two of them under a tiny hood, up front, and four more are under the back seat. Janet tells me, "It plugs into a standard 110-volt outlet. People always ask me, 'Your utility bills must be substantial, right?' But I haven't noticed any change at all. If it were completely discharged, to bring it back up to 100 percent, it would take 7.2 kilowatt hours, and I think in San Diego a kilowatt hour is 6 cents, so that's about 47 cents to get myself around town for 20 miles."

By my calculation, which is always suspect, that equals about 93 miles to the cost of a gallon of gas.

"The only maintenance is, you top off the batteries monthly with distilled water and check tire pressure.

"And I've gotten an unbelievable positive reaction from people of all ages. I thought I'd get much more of harassment on the road for going too slow, leading a parade. But mostly it's curiosity and wonder. Thumbs up, honks, smiles. I've had people chase me down and say, 'What is that?' Everyone wants to know how much it costs (about $6000 new), how fast it goes (25 mph, legally), and if I can drink and drive in it (no). Once a man threw his arms over his head when I went by and shouted, 'The car of the future!' The best was when a tow-truck driver rolled down his window and asked, 'So if you get hit by lightning, does that mean you travel back in time?'"

Still, I question how practical is a car you can't drive on roads with a speed limit above 35 mph.

Janet says, "You have to plan your routes. I've cruised over to the La Jolla Beach and Tennis Club, that's the farthest north I've gone so far. And the farthest south I've been was down by Morena Boulevard near Rosecrans. I had to go on Pacific Highway for a short stretch. But I think the rule is, if that's the only road you can use, you can take it for a short distance.

"You pretty much need to keep them within a community. But, around-town driving is no longer a chore, that's for sure. Every time I get in it, I smile."

Surrender to the Chaos

I am not a messy person. When I was growing up, I called myself a "neatnik." "A place for everything and everything in its place" could have been my motto. I remember noticing when I was a very small child that my mother didn't keep the house quite clean enough. Once when I was four, I clambered up on top of my parents' mahogany stereo console so I could rearrange the books on a high bookshelf.

Long into my 20s, I prided myself on how organized and tidy I was. The roommate I lived with at the time I met my husband Jack once told me, "I've never had a roommate who kept the kitchen so clean."

These days, my motto could be, "Yea, how the mighty have fallen." When I bow my head, it's with shame over how dirty my house has gotten. A couple of weeks ago, Jack and I hired Jack's friend Thomas to remodel our downstairs bathroom. Early on, Thomas discovered a leak in the pipes that run between the downstairs bathroom and the upstairs master bath. Thomas and his helper Carlos knocked out two walls and part of a ceiling looking for the leak. Jack and I decided to have Thomas remodel the upstairs bathroom as well.

The day after Thomas discovered the leak, Jack went to Home Depot and bought a new vanity, countertop, and mirrored medicine cabinet to go in the master bath. Jack also bought a tall, narrow cabinet that matched the vanity. "It'll be great," he told me when he came home with his purchases. "The tall cabinet will fit beside the vanity. We can put towels in it and free up some space in the linen closet." With five children, Jack and I always need more space for towels and blankets and sheets.

"I bought the vanity and cabinet unassembled," Jack continued. "I saved $100 just by putting it together myself."

Over the next few days, Jack began to assemble the bathroom furniture. Because Thomas and Carlos were working in the bathroom, Jack had to put the pieces together in our bedroom. He moved our king-size bed into the corner. He stacked the drawers full of toileties and other bathroom accoutrements from the old vanity against the wall. He shoved the nightstands around the bed. He set his tools on our dresser. Every night when I crawled into bed, I had to negotiate my way through the drawers and maneuver around the half-finished vanity. The vanity sat so close to my side of the bed, I feared I might turn over during the night and scratch myself on a rough edge.

In the meantime, Thomas and Carlos knocked down another wall. They laid tile. They installed new drywall. They textured and sanded and painted. Every day when I came upstairs to survey their progress, I noticed the growing layer of dust that had come to rest on everything. Lucy used the occasion to express her artistic side. I found flowers and hearts and "I love yous" drawn in the dust on my dresser.

While Thomas and Carlos were working on the drywall upstairs, we decided to have them refinish the inside of the closet in the girls' bedroom. The previous owners had installed a series of shelves. When Jack removed the shelves last year, some of the wallboard and most of the paint came off, too. "We might as well take care of this," Thomas said as he looked at the mess in the closet. "After we tape it off, it'll only take another 15 or 20 minutes."

Jack and Thomas took the closet doors off and leaned them against a wall near the foot of Angela's bed. Jack and I and Rebecca and Angela and Lucy picked up all the closet's contents and stacked it in the center of the room — stuffed animals and tea sets and clothes and boxes of books. By the time Carlos finished repairing the drywall and sanding and refinishing and priming the closet, the girls' room also sported a dusty patina. Rebecca, my neatnik, stood in the center of the room and said, "I just can't stand it, Mom. Everything is so dirty."

"I can't see out the window," Angela complained.

Indeed, dust had gathered so thickly in the window screen that the back yard looked foggy on a sunny day. That evening, I took the brush attachment and the vacuum cleaner and cleaned the screen. "What about the rest of the room?" Rebecca asked.

"We're probably going to have Carlos paint this room next week," I answered. "The mess is going to get worse before it gets better. It doesn't make any sense to clean now."

Rebecca sighed. I sighed, too. I thought of the living room where the backpacks full of end-of-the-school-year papers and books still lay strewn next to the front door. I thought about the family room where the contents of the downstairs bathroom sat in boxes. I thought about the office/guest room where piles of junk had been moved from one side of the room to the other when Thomas and Carlos found the leak and knocked out the wall. I thought about my own dusty, chaotic bedroom.

I hugged Rebecca. "Surrender to the chaos," I told her. And myself.
