

Uncover 8 foot mammoth tusk

Success hit the mammoth excavation big last week when an eight-foot tusk was uncovered by Don Weston at the site north of New Greenleaf.

The tusk, about 7 inches in diameter, is the most spectacular find at this site since digging began in early August.

Archaeologist Weston, director of the dig under Department of Natural Resources sponsorship, found the first evidence of the tusk Monday a week ago after he decided to bail out a pit flooded by rainfall.

Tuesday the whole tusk was visible, as well as part of a molar. A portion of cranial bone which Weston believes is a sinus cavity is also visible near the tusk.

Saturday workers removed the cranial bones, and the molar, which had been removed earlier by Weston, was weighed. The excellent specimen weighed six pounds.

A log lies over the tusk, which Weston believes fell on it after the animal was down. He tentatively identified it as spruce, dating about 12,000 years ago.

Excited about the find after 21 days of digging and finding little more than bits of tusk and ribs, the next major step is to remove the fragile fossil find, Weston told.

Because the tusk will decompose rapidly if exposed to sun and air, Weston keeps it covered with wet burlap and plastic taraulins.

A preservative of glue mixed with water will be brushed over the tusk's surface, and little by little the dirt surrounding it will be dug away from beneath the fossil.

Then layers of burlap, screen and plaster of Paris are wrapped around the relic prior to removing it from the pit.

Eventually the tusk will be displayed at the proposed Sanilac Petroglyphs Park, but will be stored at Michigan State University until then.

The tusk was found about 20 inches below the surface of level ground. The soil layers indicate it is lying on what was the edge of a bog.

Weston theorized that due to the rather small size of the tusk, it probably belonged to a young or adolescent mammoth which might have wandered into the edge of the bog and then became mired.

The soil levels show that the tusk is near a level peppered with fossils of small shells, indicating it was the floor of the bog.

Weston said he was also preparing a piece of the find, probably the molar, for carbon-dating. He said he hated to sacrifice the molar, but that verifying the date was much more valuable information.

Finding the tusk has given Weston and his crew of volunteers encouragement of finding more parts of the skeleton.

DISPLAYING the mammoth tusk found at the excavation site last week is Don Weston, who said the find was eight feet long and about 7 inches in diameter. The lumpy portion in the foreground is parts of the animal's cranium, which were removed Saturday.

County traffic death toll rises to 23 after rash of accidents

Tuscola county's traffic fatality toll was upped by one early Tuesday morning when Allan James Kelley, 25, Caseville, was killed in a one car crash at the intersection of Vassar and Waterman Roads.

Kelley became the 23rd road victim this year when he apparently lost control of his car when he was southbound on Vassar Road and attempted a curve, missed it and hit a tree at 1:30 a.m.

In another mishap Tuesday morning, a car driven by Ruth Schember Dorman, 53, 4205 Leach St., Cass City, was struck by a vehicle driven by Maurice Lee Taylor, 19, 6351 Greenland Road, Cass City, when the westbound Schember vehicle stopped for a left turn and was struck from behind.

Taylor told Tuscola county sheriff's deputies he was unable to stop in time. He was issued a ticket for failure to stop in assured clear distance. There were no injuries in the 10:30 a.m. mishap.

In a similar accident Saturday, a car driven by Joseph Lavrin Darling, 44, 1050 Fenner Road, Caro, was struck when he stopped on M-81 to make a left turn onto Seely Road and hit a car operated by David Lee Howard, 33, 1134 W. Cass Ave., Flint, who attempted to pass him.

Howard told sheriff's deputies he didn't see Darling's turn signal. Neither driver was injured in the 4:30 p.m. accident.

A car driven by Kenneth Duane Mead, 37, Hurds Corner Road, Cass City, struck a car of Edward Earl Weber, 49, 32022 Wayburn Drive, Farmington, in the rear at 3:30 p.m. Saturday when Weber slowed for traffic ahead and Mead was unable to stop in time. Both cars were headed northeast on M-81 when the mishap occurred near Cleaver Road. There were no injuries.

Michael Bruce Sherman, 19, 6991 Severance Road, Cass City, struck a cow belonging to Don DeLong of Englehart Road, Cass City, when he came upon the animal in the road at 8:40 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 29. Sherman was eastbound on Kelly Road when the accident occurred at the intersection with Englehart Road.

LOCAL MISHAP INJURIES

The only Labor Day accident recorded inside Cass City was a minor mishap involving cars driven by Joseph Jasper Gruber, 53, 6432 Church St., Cass City, and Ernest Gilmore Schwaderer, 4632 N. Seeger St., Cass City.

According to Cass City police reports, the eastbound Gruber car failed to come to a complete stop on Church Street and collided with the southbound Schwaderer car when he failed to see the vehicle.

Neither driver was injured. Injury was also avoided early Saturday morning when a car driven by Loretta Mary Osenoski, 16, of Bay City-Forestville Road, Ubly, struck a vehicle operated by David Alan Mills, 19, 3846 N. Cemetery Road, Cass City.

According to police reports, Mills was westbound on Main Street when the Osenoski vehicle failed to see him as it attempted to cross at Leach Street. Miss Osenoski was cited for failing to yield the right of way in the 1:30 a.m. mishap.

In another accident, Linda Christine Whittaker, 20, 8224 N. Van Dyke Road, Cass City, and a passenger in her car, Betty Decker, Cass City, were treated for injuries at Hills and Dales Hospital. Another passenger, Bonnie Parker, Bad Axe, was not hurt.

The accident occurred at 4:05 p.m. Friday when the Whittaker vehicle collided with a car driven by Mervyn Hiram Keyser, 54, Cumber Road, Ubly, at the intersection of Leach and Pine Streets.

According to police reports, Keyser was eastbound on Pine and the Whittaker car was northbound on Leach and neither saw the other vehicle coming. Keyser was ticketed for failing to yield the right of way.

Fred Cecil Lester, 65, 6466 Sixth St., Cass City, was injured Thursday morning, Aug. 31, when he apparently fainted at the wheel and ran off Main St., 30 feet east of Sherman Street. He was taken to Hills and Dales Hospital for treatment.

Witnesses told Cass City police the truck went off the right side of the road, came back onto the main roadway and then back to the other side where the vehicle hit a utility pole and a stop sign.

Lester told police he fainted and didn't know what happened. He was cited for driving left of center.

Pot garden destroyed by sheriff deputies

Approximately 425 pounds of marijuana plants were uprooted Monday by Tuscola county sheriff's deputies after they were tipped off by a resident of suspicious looking plants in the Ellington area.

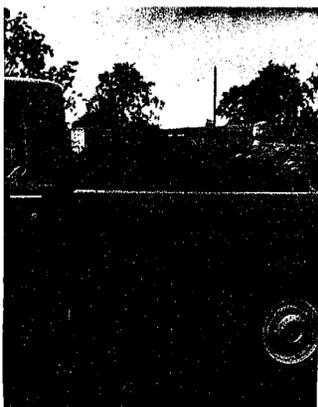

An area resident called the sheriff's office after he saw four persons frequenting the field near his farm. He told officers he thought the plants were marijuana and brought a sample into the office for identification.

Several deputies and Sheriff Hugh Marr returned to the area and questioned another neighbor who told them he wasn't sure what the plants were but that he'd always thought they were marijuana. He told the sheriff that he used to spray the plants and pull them out, but hadn't had time in the last couple years and the plants had gone to seed.

Apparently, he continued, the persons who used to own the farm planted the marijuana years ago.

Deputies Ron Phillips, James Southworth and Detective Bruce Tait and several jail trustees pulled up the plants, which are being disposed of by the sheriff's office.

This is the third "pot garden" confiscated by sheriff's deputies in the Ellington area. Marijuana was planted during the World War II years for another of its by-products, hemp, which is used in rope making.

TUSCOLA COUNTY DEPUTIES uprooted 425 pounds of marijuana plants Monday on a farm near Ellington.

FROM THE Editor's Corner

Eggheads are in disrepute again.

Scientists trying to probe the mysteries of the universe had better hide their light under a bushel. They've had their day in the sun.

Remember several years ago when the Russians were ahead in the race for the moon? It was all because our best brains weren't allowed to think about abstract theories and problems.

Big business was forcing them to think about today and mundane problems connected with products and money rather than the broader field of science and basic research.

It got so it was almost a disgrace to work for GM.

The colleges and universities responded and the tax dollars rolled in to finance projects with no immediate results in sight or expected.

Well that hysteria is over and we've substituted another. It's career education.

The Federal and State governments have programs pushing for career centers. The Michigan State Chamber of Commerce comes out with a lengthy study showing the advantages of career education and little old Cass City High School responds with a vocational type program where students work and go to school.

You'd be hard pressed to find a businessman who wouldn't appreciate a graduate who can read, write and spell.

But swiping the lyrics from Patti Page, "Is that all there is?"

When school doesn't challenge, doesn't expand horizons, doesn't stimulate thought what real good is it?

It's nice to teach a student to operate a wrench, run a typewriter or read a blueprint. Nice and practical. But students should get more out of school than this.

Let's not trot out the figures about how many kids won't enter college. If kids never go to college reading Shakespeare should be as important as reading blueprints.

Career education? How about a program where every student has a chance to visit Russia, or China or South Africa or another culture anywhere.

It won't help make a living but it just might make living a little better.

Living with a little more understanding, a little more compassion and, perhaps, a little more enjoyment while turning a wrench on the neighboring factory assembly line.

THE LYLE CLARKE family just returned from a year in Australia where Clarke taught in the schools. Dressed in Australian Boy Scout uniform on the left is Robert. Next to him are his parents, Mrs. Clarke, Clarke, and two of their four daughters who went to the land down under with them, Sharon and Kathy.

The bird on the cloth calendar is a kookaburra, a large bird prominent in Australia that has a call resembling laughter.

Lyle Clarkes find life in Australia "backwards"

By Kit McMillion

The Lyle Clarke family of Cass City returned home Sunday, Aug. 27, from a year's stay in Australia, and it was their observation that the Australians really do everything backwards.

Clarke, 43, and his wife, Jean, and three of their five children, Sharon, 17, Kathy, 14, and Robert, 10, went to the land down under after Clarke was accepted to teach in the Australian school system for a year.

They left Friday, Aug. 13, 1971, and were first placed in Sidney for three months.

Speaking with a bit of an Australian accent, Mrs. Clarke said they had absolutely no regrets about leaving Cass City where her husband has taught Vocational Agriculture in Cass City High School for 18 years. They answered an advertisement in an educational magazine and were surprised they were even accepted.

School in Australia is quite different.

There is little discipline in the schools, they said, which is probably just an effect of an undisciplined society where people are frank and say exactly what they think.

Clarke said he was a bit surprised at this because the schools are semi-military in style, with the children in uniforms with ties and black oxfords, and each day began with formation.

The whole system of education seems to be directed toward the approximately 20 per cent who go on to universities, Clarke explained, while forgetting about the rest of the students.

The method of teaching is different. The teacher lectures and writes everything on the chalkboard and students copy it down in their books. The student does little research on his own but simply memorizes what he has been told.

Clarke tried a little more than what the average Australian teacher might attempt, his wife said. He explained one day about the parts of a flower. Then later he tested them on the material using a different variety of flower and the children said they hadn't had the material before.

Part of the problem may be due to the limited texts. Because they can't afford to buy a great many, high school students are given university texts which are much more complicated and more difficult to learn.

Facilities are not as good. "A school like Cass City would be non-existent," said Clarke.

Sports are not a part of the regular school activities. Competition is between town clubs. While there, Robert was a member of the rugby club and the girls joined a swimming club.

School days are considerably shorter than ours, too. Classes start at 9 a.m. and end at 3:30 p.m., but include an hour and 20 minutes for lunch and tea breaks. However, students attend more days out of the year, evening up the total time spent in class compared to local schools, explained the teacher.

Red tape was one of the most frustrating features, Clarke said. The schools are governed on the state level and all teachers are hired by the state and then placed wherever they are needed.

Mrs. Clarke related an amusing, to us, sidelight of the administration entanglements. An inspection of the school consisted of making sure all the little brief cases carried by the children were lined up in order outside the class room, that their feet all pointed in the same direction under their desks and that the black board was spotless.

After their assignment to Sidney, the Clarkes were sent to West Wyalong, a small inland town. They liked it better and said the people were friendlier and terribly interested about the United States.

"I never realized how important the United States was in the world," she said, adding that the Australians have even erected a monument to the States for keeping them safe in World War II.

While they like us, they're terribly jealous of the material things we have, she related. They think all Americans are rich and don't have to work for the things they have.

The cost of living is about the same, but their standard of living makes ours look very comfortable.

The homes are not heated. There are only a few days out of the year that it gets really cold, and it doesn't snow except in the mountains. Therefore, Australians wear a lot more clothing in the cold season and don't remove any of it when they visit someone because it's just about as cold inside as out, noted Mrs. Clarke.

When they moved to their rented house in Wyalong, Mrs. Clarke said she started right out

Mr. and Mrs. Gary D. Niziolek

Valerie Jane Ciesielski became the bride of Gary David Niziolek Saturday, Aug. 26, in a 3 p.m. ceremony held at the St. Pancratius Catholic Church, Cass City.

The Rev. Leo R. Gengler, pastor, officiated at the double ring rites.

Paul Kerbyson was organist, and the church was decorated with white gladioli and baskets of white chrysanthemums.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Mary Ann Porritt, 6068 River Road, Cass City. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Niziolek, 1120 S. 16th Ave., Wausau, Wis.

The bride was escorted to the altar by her brother, James, and her mother. She wore a floor length gown of white nylon polyester crepe with an Empire waist, high neckline and bell sleeves. The full train was trimmed in Venetian scroll lace.

A long veil was secured to her head by a headband of Venetian scroll lace. She carried a bouquet of daisies and carnations tied with streamers.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Barbara Ciesielski, sister-in-law of the bride. Bridesmaids were Sally Jo Porritt, sister of the bride, Lori Reed, friend of the bride, and Dee Ann McDiarmic, cousin of the bride.

The attendants wore princess-styled floor length gowns of lilac overlaid with white lace, featuring a high neckline and puffed sleeves.

They completed their attire with short white gloves and white lace hats trimmed with lilac ribbon. They carried white lace parasols filled with white daisies.

The mother of the bride wore a sleeveless floor length mint green gown of nylon crepe with an Empire waist and high neck, trimmed with mint green lace. She wore a corsage of seven white daisies tied with green ribbons.

The bride sewed her own gown and the gowns of her attendants and mother.

The groom's mother chose a street length white knit dress with pink trim.

Best man was Thomas Niziolek, brother of the groom.

Groomsmen were Henry Ciesielski, brother of the bride, Jerome Niziolek, brother of the groom, and Michael Niziolek, nephew of the groom.

A wedding dinner for the family was held immediately following the ceremony. A reception for 275 guests was held at the Farmer Hall, Ubyly, at 7 p.m.

The groom was recently discharged from the U. S. Air Force. The bride is employed at Hamill Manufacturing Bayview Plant, Ubyly.

Following a honeymoon in Canada, the couple will reside at 4205 Leach St., Cass City

Missing a daughter

BY JIM FITZGERALD

Our teenage daughter is away visiting our married daughter and all we have left at home is a 14-year-old redhead who washes his hair once a day and his feet once a month.

Old fogies keep proving they're liberal by saying, "I don't mind long hair on boys if they keep it clean." The boys must be listening. The last time I followed Eddie into the shower there were 18 bottles of shampoo on the floor—and no soap in the soapdish. After that shower, I was guaranteed to have no dandruff between my toes.

But I digress. My original intention was to write about our hippie-haired 16-year-old daughter, not her little brother.

Constant readers of this nonsense (Mother and Aunt Madeleine) may be surprised. I used to write about our kids when they were babies. But when they got old enough to read, they were banned from the column. I was afraid they'd get the idea I depended on them for material. The little mercenaries would have started charging me $5 per bright saying. I didn't want to have to stick a quarter up a kid's nose to get her to tell me her room was on fire.

But it has lately come to my attention that our 2 teenagers are too busy to read this stuff anyway. When pressed, they insist that they do "scan it." That means they step over it if I leave it on the floor between them and the phone.

So it is safe to mention daughter Chris in a column.

She'll never know what I wrote unless David Cassidy records it.

At first glance, the thing I want to write about Chris might seem rather incredible. But I suspect it will ring a bell with a lot of parents. It is this: She has been 150 miles away for a week now, but I keep forgetting she's gone. That's because she's never home when she is home. She's always staying overnight at a girlfriend's house.

Except, of course, when the girlfriend stays at our house. And then they are always locked off in a room by themselves, plotting the capture and enslavement of every boy in the 11th grade. They don't even eat with us. They set up their own table, far away from the adults in the leper colony. If they want us to pass the butter, they send a postcard.

Ann Landers is always telling me I should spend time with my daughter, and give her a reasonable explanation why she can't spend the week end at a Robert Redford film festival on the Isle of Capri. But how can I talk to her when she only has time to promise to bring back the change if there is any?

(There never is.) My wife advises me to appreciate the children now because "It won't be long before they are gone for good, married with families of their own, and you will miss them."

You bet. They'd better remember to invite me to the wedding. Otherwise, I'll think Chris is simply spending the night at Jan's again. Or is eating dinner downstairs while waiting for a surgeon who makes house calls—her car has grown into the phone and must be cut loose.

Teenage daughters are enchanting creatures. I have one living at my house and I miss her almost as much as I miss her. And I don't care if David Cassidy tells her I said so.

by insulting the natives. "I asked what that big tank on the back porch was," she said. A rapid reply said it was the rain barrel. Then she asked if they drank out of it. She noted that the Australians think our water is all contaminated and that Americans are very strange to have such high standards.

Another social pattern Mrs. Clarke said she found difficult to adhere to was the social segregation of men and women. Everyone drinks and everyone uses a great deal of profanity, freely, without anyone thinking a thing about it, she said. But the men drink in the pubs after work with their "mates" and the women drink sherry in the afternoon at their women's meetings.

At a mixed gathering, women gather in a circle and men in groups at another side of the room. And the term spinster is applied to anyone of dating age who isn't married, even 17-year-olds, laughed Mrs. Clarke. There are no family activities, they related, and everyone is quite informal. Most young girls own about two dresses, said Sharon, and run around in jeans the rest of the time. Sometimes they even wear them to church.

Foods are basically the same as here, Mrs. Clarke said, but so many things have different names. Bacon is rashers, hamburger is minced meat and cookies are bikkies.

A woman is expected to go shopping every day because preservatives are not added to the food. Mrs. Clarke said she tried to keep a loaf of bread over the week end once, and ended up with a chunk of mold.

But every week she had her green grocer come to the house to bring the "vegies," and she could call in an order and have it delivered, something rarely seen even in a small town here anymore.

Milk is sold only in Imperial pints, and the Australian women couldn't believe it when Mrs. Clarke told them Americans buy it by the gallon.

One of the funniest instances of lingual mixup was when her children said they like peanut butter and jelly sandwiches. In Australia, what we call jelly is always called jam. Jelly is what we call Jell-o.

Mrs. Clarke said those kids couldn't understand why we did it, but they actually tried to slice Jell-o and put it on a sandwich.

Now that they're home, and have the comforts of filtered drinking water, heat and toilets inside the bathroom, (Austrian toilets aren't) in their own house again, Mrs. Clarke said it's hard to believe they had been gone a whole year, except that the phone keeps ringing and requests are pouring in for the Clarkes to tell about their experiences.

Now you see it now you don't. The picture about Artrain in Cass City in Sunday's Parade magazine, Sunday's Detroit Free Press quickly sold out around town, but about 50 per cent of the buyers were disappointed. That's because the Artrain picture was in only about half of the Parades sold.

If you missed it (like we did) the picture included Ben Drews, Ken Kerbyson, Kurt Proctor and Cara Prieskorn.

When you are a raw rookie you tend to do what management says. That's why Rob Alexander was in the barbershop Tuesday getting his locks trimmed.

Rob, who is a chattel of Milwaukee is moving up to the Majors for the last month of the season.

Before he was called he got the word: long hair costs $50 a day. When I heard this I couldn't help but think what an established star like Dick Allen of Chicago would say if management didn't like the way he wore his hair.

With guys like Allen, the establishment is happy if they just show up to play.

When you consider that only 3 per cent of the players ever make the Majors, it's an honor just to be called up and Robbie is the nearest I've ever come to knowing a Major Leaguer.

His record is .15 but his fast ball is strictly big time and the reason that the parent club is calling Rob up for a closer look

Detroit city schools are in sad shape financially. Perhaps one reason is that last year 35 employees made over $30,000; 622 made over $20,000; 363 made over $20,000 and worked 39 weeks; there was one employee for every 14 students, and the superintendent of schools made more than the mayor.

Think about this the next time someone wants to place our schools under state control because taxpayers feel that all taxes (and especially property taxes) are too high.

The vogue among creative agencies these days is not to put a capital letter on anything. The University of Michigan has succumbed to the mania. In a special extension service brochure telling about the department's service capital letters are out. The school name is written "the university of michigan". Ann Arbor comes out "ann arbor". Other examples are "detroit, flint, saginaw, grand rapids, dearborn."

A brochure like this does appear to strike a low blow for the teacher who has spent years pounding the "right way" home to reluctant kids who struggled for years to learn it.

Friday rites set for Mrs. King

Mrs. Cyrus King, lifelong resident of Argyle, died Tuesday, Sept. 5, in Bad Axe General Hospital after a long illness.

The former Estella Pettinger, she was born July 3, 1891. She was married to Mr. King Dec. 18, 1912, in Wadsworth, Mich. She had been a member of the Argyle Methodist church over 60 years, where she had taught Sunday School and served as church secretary.

Funeral services are scheduled Friday at 2 p.m. at the Hacker Funeral Parlor, Sandusky. The Rev. Maynard Kent of the Argyle Methodist church will officiate. Burial will be in Elkland cemetery.

Survivors are: her husband; a son, Gerald of Detroit; three granddaughters and eight great-grandchildren. Also surviving are three brothers, William Pettinger of Calgary, David Pettinger of Bad Axe and Chester Pettinger of Argyle, and two sisters, Mrs. Ida Nugent of Bad Axe and Mrs. Minnie Mills of Oscoda.

Warn drivers to watch for kids

A warning urging drivers and pedestrians to watch out for each other was issued this week by Police Chief Gene Wilson.

Now that school has started, Wilson said, everyone should remember and practice traffic safety.

The worst offense he has seen so far, the chief said, is cars failing to give pedestrians the right of way when the car is making a left hand turn. The car must yield to pedestrians.

A car must also yield to persons crossing the street if the car has come to a stop at a stop sign and a pedestrian is waiting to cross.

The responsibility of the pedestrian, however, the police chief emphasized, is to stay on the sidewalk or between white markings of cross walks.

Cross walks are marked at Rose and Seeger, Ale and Main, Main and Seeger, Oak and Main and West and Main Street intersections.

Wilson urged drivers to watch for youngsters walking home from school. The children aren't supposed to attempt to cross a busy street unless it appears safe, but children often drop things or walk slowly, necessitating the extra caution of drivers.

Children on bicycles are also warned that they are to ride the bikes on the extreme right side of the road, cross only at intersections and abide by all traffic signs and signals. Both motorcycleists and bicyclists must use hand signals when turning.

Tickets can be issued to violators, Wilson warned. He added that pamphlets containing safety rules and suggestions are available at the sheriff's office. He is also willing to talk to any child or parent about any of the rules.

What about living expenses while it's being repaired?

Sure, fire damages in your mobile home can be repaired. Insurance will take care of that. But what about living expenses elsewhere, while they fix it?

It can all be down in black and white in our Mobile Homeowners Policy so that we would pay those additional living expenses while repairs are being made. Yes, it's altogether more than just fire insurance! Home contents, personal liability and many more coverages are altogether now in one convenient policy. Give us a call.

Mrs. Ione Weltin dies in hospital

Funeral services were held Saturday for Mrs. Fred T. (Ione) Weltin, 50, Uby, who died unexpectedly Tuesday, Aug. 29, at Henry Ford Hospital, Detroit, after suffering a stroke.

Mrs. Weltin entered the hospital for a routine check-up in preparation for a trip to Europe to visit a daughter.

She was born Oct. 3, 1921, in Austin township of Sanilac county, and graduated from Uby High School in 1938.

The former Ione Osentoski, she married Fred Weltin June 7, 1940, at St. John Catholic Church, Uby. Her husband is an Uby electrical contractor.

She served as postmistress at Uby and was substitute mail carrier for the Uby Post Office for 10 years.

Mrs. Weltin was a member of the Confraternity of Christian Mothers at St. John Catholic Church.

She is survived by her husband; two daughters: Mrs. Charles Bukoski, Zwibruck, Germany, where her husband is a captain with the U. S. Air Force, and Mrs. David Mathews, Bay City; one son, Airman 1-C Philip Weltin, with the U.S. Air Force at Oscoda; two grandchildren; her mother and step-father, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Creguer, Uby; and three sisters: Mrs. Stanley Fisher, Minden City; Mrs. Evans Quigg, Argyle; and Mrs. Emmett Archer, Ann Arbor.

Services were held at 10 a.m. at St. John Catholic Church, Uby, with the Rev. Kilar officiating. Burial was in the Valley cemetery.

BETTER HEALTH

Learning to live with epilepsy

BY DR. WALTER C. ALVAREZ

One of the finest books I have seen describing the sorrow and difficulty that an epileptic must face is written by the father of an epileptic boy. "Be Not Afraid; The Story of a Tragically Afflicted Child and His Stubbornly Courageous Family," by Robin White, shows how much ignorance, fear and prejudice still exist in this world against epileptics.

The book shows the difficult life parents have when they have a child with severe epilepsy that is causing endless trouble at school and in the home, where the child sometimes explodes with a violent temper. The boy, Checkers, began to have trouble with epilepsy when he was 8 after receiving a severe blow on his head when a playmate threw a rock at him. Then, some time later, he fell off his bicycle and lost consciousness. After that, he was given the diagnosis of epilepsy, and his remarkable family went through years of severe difficulties.

Checkers had a special type of epilepsy called psychomotor epilepsy, in which he had many different types of symptoms besides grand mal seizures. He might have blackouts or spells of apparent daydreaming. At other times he might have "focal" seizures, visual and auditory hallucinations, or periods in which he would perform automatic, unconscious actions that were sometimes antisocial.

One time in a spell, he wrote a number of garbled, confused notes to girls in his class at school. The notes were given to the principal. When Checkers was confronted with the notes, he had no memory of having written them, and was very upset that he had done so.

Checkers' family had a difficult time fighting the ignorance and fear that the boy's schoolmates, his teachers and society in general had about epilepsy. Mr. White says that the great majority of people with epilepsy resort to secrecy, often reacting as did the mother who, when told by the doctor that her child had epilepsy, said angrily, "I won't have it! This can't be true! She threatened the neurologist and the pediatrician with lawsuits if word ever got out.

But as Mr. White points out, "In some states Checkers would be forbidden to marry, in others he would be forbidden to have children, barred from school and subject to legalized sterilization. In all states his employment opportunities would be almost nil, in most his driving would be arbitrarily restricted or altogether forbidden, and he would have trouble securing good life insurance or any health insurance. . . The existence of legislation governing what is clearly a medical problem reflects our society's curious concepts of morality regarding some areas of mental health."

Of more immediate distress to Checkers was the merciless teasing of his schoolmates, which grew more severe with time. His father says, "He was an easy target. He was strong but not coordinated enough to outrun his tormentors. He was astute, but not articulate enough to tongue-lash anyone. He was slow to anger but not controlled enough when aroused to direct his energies effectively. He was an available social punching bag. Checkers was chased home from school after being rendered almost witless by teasing. It was my hope that he would toughen to it, that in time the persecution would taper off. But the abuse did not taper off, it grew."

In time, Mr. White talked with the youngsters who were causing the boy such torment. He explained to them why Checkers was different, and how they were unfair in abusing him. The boy who had been the ringleader confessed that his brother had blackouts but that the family kept it secret.

Another struggle was with the boy's teachers. Mr. White had a difficult time educating them to the fact that during the irrational periods of Checkers' behavior, when he was "acting up," he was not being intentionally difficult. As he said, "His momentary unacceptable behavior was as involuntary and unwanted as a convulsion. Castigating him when he emerged from it, bewildered and confused, only succeeded in punishing his ensuing acceptable behavior and singled him out for further abuse from his peers. In any event, I argued, if a child was lame, he could hardly be "disciplined" into running a four-minute mile."

As the teachers began to understand, the boy's grades improved, and school became happier for him. He began bringing home A's instead of F's, and he became more accepted by the other youngsters.

Although there were times in Checkers' life when he had help and understanding from the people around him, as he grew older his symptoms became more severe and he became dangerous to his family. Once he violently attacked his father and might have killed him. They realized that Checkers would have to be hospitalized. After many difficult times for the family, they were told by physicians that his brain was so damaged that he would become permanently retarded. With this, 14 years of struggling to help the boy ended. The Whites learned to accept the fact that they had "lost the battle of mind," and that Checkers would have to spend the rest of his life in a hospital.

Mr. White is the author of several novels and is a well known writer for national magazines. "Be Not Afraid" gives a vivid picture of the struggles that a family must face with a child who has a severe form of epilepsy. The book was published by Dial Press, 750 Third Ave., New York, N. Y. 10017.

Annual ram sale slated at MSU

The annual Ram Sale Day sponsored by the Animal Husbandry Department at Michigan State University in cooperation with the Michigan Sheep Breeders' Association will be held at the MSU Beef Cattle Barn in East Lansing Wednesday, Sept. 13. Purebred sheep breeders will assemble over 100 top quality rams and offer them for sale.

All rams will be inspected, weighed, and priced and penned by breeders. This procedure makes it possible for buyers to look at a large selection of rams from some of the best flocks in the state with a minimum of time and travel. It is becoming an increasingly popular place for flock owners to select a ram.

The offering will include yearling and two-year-old lambs that have met rigid weight requirements. The rams will be for sale from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The use of a good ram is one of the first steps toward increased income from a flock. The cost of a good ram is a very small item per lamb when spread over a two year period. It is easily paid for by an increase of as little as one or two pounds in weight of lambs sold.

Lottery Commissioner Gus Harrison earned reputation as penal officer

Prior to his departure from the Department of Corrections to become the new commissioner of Michigan's new lottery, Gus Harrison developed a well deserved reputation as one of the nation's best penal officers. This reputation is one of the reasons he was tapped for the lottery job by Gov. William G. Milliken. Milliken wanted a man with a solid reputation to begin a rather sensitive operation.

Harrison's success in corrections came because he was progressive and firm. He needed to be both because the job of a corrections officer-taking thousands of men who couldn't get along in society and trying to convert them into solid citizens, has been likened to "trying to win the Super Bowl with a high school football team."

Two of the innovations which went into effect earlier this year demonstrate the kind of effective but low key changes he has made in Michigan's corrections system.

Unit at Ionia. Its success in those places led to a directive calling for the creation of such committees in all institutions. The program involves establishment of representative committees from each cellblock, with each unit having six representatives. These men are elected by secret ballot and must reflect the racial balance of the cellblock.

Issues which can be settled at the cellblock level are dealt with there and go no further. But recognizing that some issues are bigger than that, officials have set up a committee made up of some members from the cellblock units. This committee meets on a monthly basis with the warden. The Warden's Committee also will select two men to serve on a five man body which supervises the Inmate Benefit Fund of the institution. Inmates will have a voice in how the funds are spent for the first time. The fund comes from profits of sales in inmate stores and hobbycraft commissions.

Don't get the idea that the inmate committees are just sops to the inmates with no real influence, either. For example, the Warden's Committee at Jackson was instrumental in eliminating the automatic "10 p.m. light's out" rule that had prevailed for years. The idea came from one of the cellblock groups. Since no decision on the proposal could be made at the block level, it was forwarded to the Warden's Committee, where other block representatives said they had similar requests.

The report on the change from prison officials said they Warden Perry Johnson "was at first somewhat pessimistic, and concerned about noise which might persist until the lights were out." However, he agreed to a 60-day trial which proved so successful the "lights out" rule was dropped permanently before the 60 days were up.

It involves a questionnaire which is being given to men leaving institutions on parole. It asks them, in effect, to grade the institution they are leaving. "It is probably too much to hope that men still in prison and awaiting release will be totally candid in their remarks," Harrison said. "But results so far indicate that their comments can identify some areas where improvements can be made." At Ionia, for example, Superintendent Richard Handon was dissatisfied with the ratings given by inmates of their counselors. The inmates were saying corrections officers and academic teachers helped them more than counselors.

Handon made counselors more accessible to inmates by moving their offices into the housing units and changing the working hours of the counselors to be more convenient for contact with inmates.

"The results didn't mean the counselors were doing anything wrong," Harrison said, "but merely told us that we could do better. This kind of thing can point to continuing complaints in our educational programs, food services, recreational programs and other areas, and cause us to make some moves before the complaints become serious."

It is this willingness to experiment and change which makes a top notch administrator in any field. And it is changes such as these which have earned Michigan a high rating in the corrections field.

Uncle Tim From Tyre Says:

Dear Mister Editor:

Say this for Zeke Grubb's preacher, he can speak on any subject at the drop of a hat or the rattle of a collection plate. He stopped by the country store during the session Saturday night, and he talked just long enough for the feller that runs the store to find a fresh case of his pipe tobacco. But that was more than plenty to keep the fellers going til closing time.

Zeke allus allowed his preacher can wrap up the weather, the United Nations, terrors of booze and the high cost of living in one sermon. Well, Saturday night he throwed in his side of fighting a war. The preacher said he had saw where the Vietnam war has got more American veterans than any other war in this country's history except World War 2, and he was of a mind civilized man can come up with a better plan for controlling one another. What we ought to do, he said, is stage some game like them Olympics. Ever country interested in taking part would enter the events, and all the countries would agree that the winner's country would have say so in certain affairs.

As soon as the preacher left, Zeke said he must of had his pipe in his mouth, cause he shore was talking thru his hat. All the fellers except Josh Clodhopper was agreed with Zeke. Josh was of the mind that one kind of war makes as much sense as another, and if you can cut down on the folks taking part, so much the better. Probable, Josh said, the preacher had in mind the story of David and the giant in the Bible. The giant was picked to fight for one side, reminded Josh, and David was fighting fer the other.

That might be, declared Ed Doolittle, but the only thing anybody learned from David flinging the rock up side the giant's head was to duck. Folks and countries was fighting afore and they've been fighting ever since, was Ed's words. We have worse fights nowadays over a friendly game of cards than that little run-in of David's, Ed said. Most of the time we don't even git to play the games, cause we fall out over the rules, declared Ed, and he recalled last year where one man killed another over whose younguns was first in line to see Santa Claus.

Actual, Mister Editor, it was Bug Hookum that final made some sense of what the preacher said. He said wars between countries is fought by people, so if we can git the folks playing games instead of fighting, the governments won't have nobody to fight their wars.

Personal, I'm agreed with Ed that the preacher must've been speaking in parables, cause they ain't no chanct of countries gitting along til peopple git along. You even find some that say we need war to keep the economy humming, and that God uses wars, car wrecks and disease to his greater purpose. Mister Editor, I figger the Lord must be awful suprised at some things he gits credit fer.

Yours truly,
Uncle Tim

Youth lured to 4-H dog program

By Bernard Jardot

A dog is a 4-H'er's best friend to some 117,000 4-H member participants in the national 4-H dog care and training program. "And if dogs could talk, they might reverse that statement."

Caring for and training a dog is something that can be done by 4-H members where they live in cities, towns or on the farm. The 4-H members in the dog care and training program come from all of these areas.

Club members involved in the program, not only take care of their family dogs, but some raise and train dogs that aid others, notably the blind. You need a love of animals and a love of people to succeed in this project. Beside the satisfaction of caring and training your own dog, or dogs for other people, 4-H members who participate in the dog care and training program can receive other benefits. There are rewards at dog shows and state and national awards. National Dog Week is Sept. 24-30 this year.

For more information about the 4-H dog care and training program, contact the county 4-H office, Civil Defense Center, Caro.

FROM THE LITTER BOX
First days at school
By Kit McMillion

This is the first time in all my conscious life that I have not prepared to "go to school."

Talking with new college-bound kids and mothers with youngsters and the first day tensions of finding out who the teacher is and where's the classroom and the washroom and how do you get a schedule changed seems like a part of the past, and thank goodness it's past.

I don't get nostalgic about very many things, but I vividly remember my first day at kindergarten. While some of the kids were crying and clinging to their mothers' skirts, I couldn't get away from my mom fast enough to see the new sights and find new adventures.

It was great. We were on half days and I was a morning kindergarten, in fact, I think I belonged to the first kindergarten class of my old grade school alma mater, and at noon came the time to go home.

My teacher tried to get us all to the right places, and not knowing where I was supposed to be, I just stayed in the room.

My memory fails, but on the second day of school last week I saw a little boy with "Bus 3" tagged to his shirt.

Seems my mother did the same for me. Only she had to include my last name, too, because at that time I had just discovered I owned more than one.

Then came first grade. The first day there is also memorable because the first thing I proceeded to do was get INTO TROUBLE.

My mother said I was such a nice kid until I started school, and I guess there's a lot to that old saying about learning evil things from the other kids.

An enterprising young man (He must have been a second grader) and I decided that the school building would be a whole lot more attractive and therefore conducive to learning if it were colorful instead of red brick and white mortar. So we fixed it.

Crayolas are a wonderful invention. They come in so many colors and running them along the center of the ugly white mortar makes the building awfully pretty.

That's when I learned about administration. They took me to see the principal, who then introduced me to chin pinching. It was also the first of many attempts to stifle my imagination, but I like to think I won that battle.

That year also I learned what the classroom looked like from a teacher's point of view. I earned the nickname of "The Mouth," and spent a great deal of my time with my diminutive desk pushed right next to the teacher's so she could keep an eye on me.

This, of course, had great advantage on my part, too. I could keep an eye on her and still make faces or hand signs to other kids when I was sure she wasn't looking.

When I stop and think about each year, something stands out vividly marking each as a single entity and very important part of my life.

Like the time I was in fifth grade and kept a dead sparrow I felt sorry for in my desk until the teacher started smelling it, or the time some kid unscrewed the drinking fountain in the classroom and we had our own geyser.

Those are the sort of things that make going to school worth while, I guess, because I can't remember a single thing I learned or a single lesson except the very first one when we had a large book in front of us propped against the blackboard that matched our little books we were holding on our laps and the teacher proudly taught us how to read our very first word—"LOOK!"

A ghastly memory. I wonder if things have changed any.

Mcow.

Watson-Nicol reunion held

The Watson-Nicol reunion was held Sunday, Aug. 27, at the Shabbona Community Hall. There were 60 in attendance and potluck dinner was served at one o'clock.
 Officers for this year's reunion were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rich and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bader.
 It was decided to have the next reunion at the same time and probably the same place in 1973.

 Newly-elected officers are Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Wallace, president and vice-president, and Mr. and Mrs. Dave Matthews, secretary and treasurer.
 The Want Ads are newsy too.

The heavens declare

People are so busy here and there that they often fail to perceive the beauty and grandeur of Creation.

A storm at sea, a beautiful sunrise or a full moon riding in a clear sky are but commonplace aspects of the weather. Towering mountains, a great waterfall or a far-spread fertile valley are but features of the landscape.

Blessed is the man gifted with the vision and understanding to see the deeper meaning of Nature's matchless wonders.

For behind all the wonderful phenomena of earth and sea and sky is the pattern of a sublime plan which stirs the awe and challenges the imagination of man. There can be but one answer to the marvels and wonders of the universe—God! The Church brings man into spiritual relationship with his Creator.

AGENT'S CORNER

Garment labels show fabric care

Judy Marks - Extension Agent

How many different fabrics make up the clothes in your clothes wardrobe? It's a large number! The large variety of fabrics adds interest and versatility to a person's wardrobe - and headaches and confusions when it comes to caring for the garments. Which ones to be dry cleaned - laundered and at what temperatures.

Help is here in permanent care labels! The Federal Trade Commission has ruled that, as of July 3, 1972, most clothing must have permanently attached labels which give care instructions.

The labels must be easily visible on each garment and remain attached and legible for the life of the garment.

They must also apply to all parts of the garment unless indicated on the label - linings interfacing.

Now it will be up to you. Will you use this labeling in

A FIFTEEN YEAR WAIT of Elkland township firemen was rewarded this year when this new firehall-township building was constructed at the corner of Ale and Church streets.

New firehall fulfills firemen's 15 year dream

The firemen's dream of over 15 years has been fulfilled with the near-completion of the fire hall-township building at Ale and Church Streets.

Everything in the 60 x 90 foot fire hall is completed except finishing work in a utility-storage room.

The 23 x 29 foot township hall portion lacks floor tiling, a small kitchen planned for the room and cabinets for the 16 x 16 foot filing area.

The firemen spent about $50 of their own funds to buy sod for the land area.

The only holdback is lack of ready cash. A one-mill levy for five years was continued by the township voters by a vote of 181-56 a year ago, but the sale of the bonds is temporarily halted. A building authority was established to sell them, and a recent Michigan Supreme Court ruling in the Detroit Memorial Stadium case said that method is unconstitutional.

Supervisor Maynard McConkey said the attorney the township is working with is expected to meet with them at their next regular meeting Sept. 11 to advise them of what to do.

The original estimated cost of the building of $100,900 was exceeded by the first round of bids, which the township board rejected. After paring away the frills, a bid of $87,495 plus architect fees of $6054 was awarded Fay McComb.

The fire hall has capacity for six trucks. The firemen's coats, helmets and boots line the back wall where they are easily accessible. They used to be kept in small lockers. Three large sliding garage-type doors face Ale Street. Presently these are opened by

Call 2-FIRE

To report a fire, simply dial 2-FIRE. A lot of people may have known that a long time, but it was recently brought to the attention of the Chronicle. The number is really 2-3473, but that's hard to remember.

Firemen request that residents use that number only for reporting an actual fire. When it is dialed, 13 other phones ring in firemen's homes.

Residents might also like to know that the charge for calling out the fire department is $100 the first hour and $25 for any hour or portion thereafter.

hand, but sometime in the future when the firemen have the money, they'd like to install an automatic door opening device to save wear and tear on the doors and save time when there's a fire call, said Chief Dick Root.

The interior of the building is white with grey trim along the bottom. The exterior is white painted block, a concession from a brick veneer for economical reasons.

The new building also provides for a hose drying rack, a feature the firemen find convenient for preserving the life of the hoses. They hang in a tower topped by the new fire siren.

Root also related that sometime the firemen would like to hang a plaque listing all the names of firemen and the length of time they served on the walls of the township meeting room as a memento to the men who served the community.

RADIO CONTACT is maintained with the sheriff's office and trucks in this little room off the main garage area. Fire Chief Dick Root demonstrates the pose one man would take during a fire.

SO TRUE

Life consists mainly of what we haven't done. And what we are going to do tomorrow.

FIREMEN of the Elkland Township Fire Department and the year they started service: in the truck, Elwyn Helwig, '58; left to right along the front: Fritz Neitzel, '47, Joe Gruber, '61, Jack Hartwick, '64, Chief Dick Root, '52, on the step, Jim Jezewski, '65, Eldon Stoutenburg, '59, Don Finkbeiner, '63, Jim Burk, '72, Norm Coates, '71, and Bob Wischmeyer, '70.

Roy Tuckey is an auxiliary fireman, and the department has three more potential auxiliary firemen.

Fire department changes in all ways but service in 88 years

You smell smoke-fire! Almost without thinking you call the fire department. Your phone call sets off a chain reaction that sounds the siren and makes 18 men stop in their tracks and rush to the fire hall, where they jump into boots, grab slickers and get the trucks on the road.

And they're volunteers, some afraid of fires, some afraid of heights and all of them risking their lives.

That's the Elkland Township Fire Department. Almost every facet of the force has changed since the first group of 12 volunteers grouped together in 1884, except 88 years of dedicated service.

This group of men reorganized in 1885 and called themselves the Cass City Fire Department. They responded to the calls of a sledge hammer banging against a steel railroad tie, and pulled two brightly painted red and gold fire wagons by hand from the first fire hall located on the southeast corner of Seeger and Pine Streets. One cart carried the hoses and the other the ladders. They must have been pretty good, too. A tarnished silver megaphone sits in a case in the present fire hall, a trophy for first place won in August 1886 at a hose contest held at Caro. The next year, 1887, the name of the group was changed, this time to The Cass City Fire Company. It wasn't until 12 years later, however, that a major change in fire fighting occurred.

In 1899 a public water supply system and water mains were in operation. Before then, buckets of water were kept handy on building tops, and the public water supply consisted of open wells, covered with wooden planks, and scattered through the town at two-block intervals.

Firemen dropped one end of the hose into the well. Pumps were operated on the principle of a railroad hand car, with six men on each side.

November 1944 marked the beginning of acquisition of modern equipment. The first pumper truck was authorized by the village council. It replaced the hose cart and featured a pump with a 500 gallons per minute capacity, two lines of hose with fog nozzles and an auxiliary water tank.

The second pumper was bought by the township in the fall of 1948 to add rural protection. At this time, the village sold the first pumper to the township for $1 and relinquished control and sponsorship of the department, but agreed to continue to furnish the firehall on S. Seeger Street where the trucks had been kept since 1921.

The tank wagon was purchased in 1955 and replaced with a new wagon and chassis in 1970. The third John Bean pumper was acquired in 1968.

The department also has a grass buggy on loan from the Department of Natural Resources and a jeep, also on loan from the DNR, is being outfitted for fighting grass fires.

Besides the local equipment, Chief Dick Root explained that as members of the Tuscola County Firemen's Association, a total of 23 pumpers, 10 tankers and two ambulances plus other emergency equipment and over 200 men can be called at no charge to local residents if a really big fire occurs somewhere in this district.

"We can call any member of the association to ask for whatever equipment and men we need that they can spare," said Root.

The Elkland Township Fire Department protects a total of 162 sections in three counties, or 162 square miles. Root explained that the area is allocated according to telephone exchanges.

This area includes all of Elkland, Elmwood, Ellington, Novesta, Grant, Greenleaf and Evergreen townships and portions of Lamotte, Sheridan, Kingston and Wells townships.

Firemen are paid a small amount by the township—$4.16 per month for attending meetings and $2 per hour for fighting fires. Money earned in fund raising service projects is used to buy dress uniforms, which cost about $50, and buy equipment such as the hose washer and sod for their new fire hall building.

Only 18 men are allowed to be on the force at any single time. They attend training practices monthly, arson seminars in Bay City, training sessions on the John Bean pumper in Port Sanilac, the John Bean Fire Fighters school at Tipton, Ind., and seminars at Houghton Lake.

Mrs. Elery Sontag Phone 665-9956

Wednesday visitors of Mrs. Elery Sontag were Mrs. Betty Forgas, Mrs. Jesse Schachtner, Mrs. Christine Wootton and Mrs. Eleanor David, all of Detroit. The former Gillis girls are former residents of this area.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Carroll entertained about 20 guests at dinner Saturday evening in honor of their son, Daniel Rabideau. He graduated from CMU in August and will leave Sept. 15 for Puerto Rico where he plans to teach for the coming year.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Carroll and daughter Leann and son, Dan Rabideau, spent Monday at Sand Point, guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Johnston of Cass City.

Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Devore and sons, Chris and Cary, left Friday for their home in Normal, Illinois, after spending the past two weeks with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William C. Hunter and family.

Miss Julie Johnson of Bad Axe spent on Wednesday until Friday at the William C. Hunter home as the guest of her cousin, Miss Debbie Hunter.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Bain of Drayton Plains spent the week end with her father, Arthur Freeman, and also visited her sister, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Comment.

Rick Hunter of Kalamazoo spent the week end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Downing.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Comment and Miss Mary O'Rourke went to Detroit Friday to meet Michael Comment of Pittsburgh, Pa., who flew into Metro airport. He spent until Monday here with his family.

Saturday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Comment and Suann entertained at dinner, Mr. and Mrs. James Comment and daughter of Unionville, James O'Rourke and Misses Mary and Nellie O'Rourke and Michael Comment of Pittsburgh.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Wetzel and Jodi of Grand Rapids spent from Wednesday until Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Comment.

Mr. and Mrs. John Arvoy and boys of Owosso were week-end guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Comment.

Patrick Bliss of Anchorage, Alaska, spent from Wednesday until Friday of last week with his sister and family, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Comment.

Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Wald and George and Miss Mary Wald entertained guests at dinner Sunday. Those present were Susan Phelan of Gagetown, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Bartholomy and daughter Marsha of North Branch, Mary Ellen and Jim McCrea of Detroit, Mr. and Mrs. Carl O'Brien and children of Flint and Mr. and Mrs. Ken Maharg and Jeff of Cass City. The occasion was to celebrate the birthday of Miss Susan Phelan.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Shope and family spent Saturday and Sunday with Mr. Shope's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. George Mitcheal, and other relatives at Massillon, Ohio.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond DeShano and daughter Kathy of Prescott were week-end guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Munro. Other Sunday dinner guests of their parents, at the Munro home, were Mr. and Mrs. James Munro and family of Pontiac and Mr. and Mrs. Max Kreger and sons of Sandusky, also James O'Rourke of Gagetown and Mrs. Myrtle Nelson of Owendale.

Sentence Coleman to Jackson prison

James Lin Coleman, Flint, was sentenced to the state prison at Jackson Tuesday by Tuscola County Circuit Court Judge James Churchill for a term of 2 years, 8 months to 4 years.

Coleman was sentenced for larceny in a building belonging to Paul Jakowczyk at the corner of Bray and Birch Run Roads.

In other action, Ronald Kaechle, Royal Oak, entered a plea of guilty to simple larceny of a motorcycle. He will be sentenced Oct. 2. The charge was reduced from larceny by conversion of a motorcycle belonging to Ronald Hill, Caro, valued at about $800.

Bernard G. Stratton, Deford, stood mute to a charge of statutory rape. A plea of innocent was entered for him, and a pre-trial was scheduled for Sept. 18. Bond of $5000 was continued.

Dairymen eye double crop rye

by William Bortel

Dairymen and cattle feeders might wish to consider double cropping rye and corn for more silage and 40 to 50 per cent more nutrients per acre for your livestock.

Trials at Michigan State University show that Wheeler rye can be planted in mid to late September (just after corn silage harvest) and harvested in the third week of May.

If there's any problem with this double cropping system, it's the harvest time for rye. This delays corn planting two to three weeks after the optimum time for the area. And MSU crop scientists say that you lose one bushel of corn per acre for each day you go past the optimum date. Just how much this affects silage yields is not known.

Rye offers farmers "good insurance" for getting enough forage for cows and cattle. Alfalfa crops aren't always dependable, especially when farmers encounter a drought year or very rainy harvest conditions.

Further research on double cropping is being conducted this year to see if the advantages (40 to 50 per cent more nutrients per acre) outweigh the disadvantages (shorter corn yield because of late planting). In the meantime, some farmers might want to experiment with double cropping in a small area to see how well it does for them.

John Y. Brown family meets

The annual John Y. Brown family reunion was held Sunday afternoon, Sept. 3, at the Cass City Gun Club. Around 85 persons were present.

Officers elected during the business meeting were: Donald J. Brown of Detroit, president; Tom Gunther of Cass City, vice-president; and Chris Brown of Detroit, secretary-treasurer. Mrs. Gerard Marchand and Mrs. Laurence Gunther volunteered to serve as recreation committee.

After the potluck dinner at 1 p.m., games were played under the direction of Mrs. Dick Szarapski and Mr. and Mrs. Stan Gunther and prizes were awarded. Ice cream was served in the afternoon and a corn roast was held in the evening.

Next year's reunion is scheduled the Sunday preceding Labor Day at the Gun Club.

A politician takes the stump and finds himself up a tree.

MOMENT OF TRUTH

The paramount issue at this time of year seems to center around the fall elections.

Veteran Hawks prep for bright grid season ahead

You won't get Coach Roland Pakonen to make any rash predictions about where his Cass City Red Hawks will end this season but there is a gleam in his eye when he talks about this year's squad.

And why shouldn't there be? With a veteran at nearly every position and no super team in the Thumb B Conference, Cass City should rate right up there with the best when the Conference season starts Sept. 22.

And what a start it promises to be. For that's when the Hawks face the Caro Tigers who rate as the team to beat in the league again this year.

No one expects Caro to be as impressive as last year's juggernaut, but then, they probably won't have to be.

Caro is a slight favorite, but Cass City has to rank right up there. The Hawks are coming off a 6-3 season (4-3 in the conference) and lost less than any of the other contenders.

Frankenmuth, which was 5-2 last year, ranks as a strong team and the remainder of the league must be considered dark horses.

The Hawks' football renaissance started two years ago when the team was 3-5-1. They moved to 6-3 last year and hopes are high in 1972.

Probably the only big problem will be filling the shoes of Tim Knoblet. An all-stater last year he was a good offensive player and an outstanding line-backer.

Also sure to be missed from last year's squad are Fred Harbec at end and Craig Guernsey, a tough runner and hard nosed defensive player.

While there may not be any individuals that measure up to Knoblet's standards, the team over-all should be stronger.

There's a veteran at every position except a tackle. Dave Brooks, up from the junior varsity has nailed down the right tackle spot. The other tackle is Chester Sieradzki. A junior, Sieradzki was outstanding last year as a sophomore, and if anyone can make fans forget Knoblet he can.

At the ends are Paul Bliss and Scott Hartel. Bliss is a senior who didn't report for football last year after winning a letter as a sophomore quarterback.

Hartel played offensive end as a sophomore and also was used part-time on defense.

The center is Randy Wright, a veteran at the position. The guards are Ron Turner and Dave Doerr. Neither is big but both are quick and play the game with zest. Both were regulars last year.

In the backfield Gene Salas will be a fullback, Kip Hopper and Drew Guernsey at halfbacks and Curt Strickland at quarterback.

The unit should be able to score points.

Many from the offensive eleven will play on defense. In the interior line, Turner and Brooks will see action. But two other players are expected to be defensive specialists. One is Dave Reed who is by far the biggest man on the squad. He has little varsity experience but his size could be enough to give the Hawks a defensive lift. Jim Kilbourn is another defensive specialist for the team.

The ends will be Wright and Doerr while Bob Ross, Sieradzki and Hartel are slated for line backing chores with Bliss, Guernsey and Hopper in the backfield.

If these boys fail to produce, Coach Pakonen can turn to Steve Izydorek, Don Karr, Mike "Pete" Frederick and others waiting in the wings.

We'll know a lot more about how the team shapes up after we scrimmage Friday in game-like conditions, Pakonen said.

At this stage of the competition the veterans have the edge, but performance when it counts will determine our starting line-ups as the season progresses, the coach concluded.

ONE OF THE larger varsity squads in recent years is practicing daily.

an unusual feat, competing against top fair winners from all over the state.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Karr, S. Cemetery Road, Cass City.

Sluggers lead Catholics to church league play-off title

The Catholics rolled over 3 opponents in the Cass City Church League play-offs to win the post season toga with ease.

The results were a reversal of the previous year when the Catholics won the regular season crown and the Methodists won the play-offs.

Probably the key game of the play-offs pitted the Catholics with the Catholics. The Catholics won easily, 11-2, behind Al Zawilinski. It was sharp contrast to the championship game which the Methodists won, 1-0. Usually reliable Eldon Stoutenburg had an off night and was hit hard by the winners.

The Catholics won with equal ease in two other play-off games. They overwhelmed the Lutherans, 17-2, and rocketed past the Baptists in the title game, 20-7.

Zawilinski wasn't having one of his best nights for the Catholics against the Baptists, but he didn't need it. Gary Mellendorf was hit hard and had trouble finding the plate. He was relieved by Craig Helwig who showed flashes of brilliance and moments of frustration because of inexperience.

The Baptists worked their way to the finals with wins over Missionary, 7-5, and Owen-Gage, 10-6.

Against Missionary, Jack Hillaker slapped a home run and two other hits and Craig Helwig also hit for the distance.

Jim Tuckey slammed a home run for the Missionary nine in a losing cause. Roger Root took the loss.

In the semi-final game the Baptist win over Owen-Gage was paced by Jack Hillaker with another home run and Elwyn Helwig who slammed three hits. Jim Rayl led Owen-Gage with three hits.

Owen-Gage had previously moved into the semi-finals with a slugfest win over Colwood, 18-16. Dennis Koch pitched the win. Dale Smith was the loser. Koch, J. Lorenz and M. Lorenz slammed three hits each for Owen-Gage while Joe Graham led Colwood with 5 hits. Home runs were hit by Don Smith of Colwood and Kurt Karr of Owen-Gage.

In the opening round, the Lutherans edged Church of Christ, 8-7.

Nelson Willy, who relieved Ken Martin, was credited with the win over Englehart. John Hacker with two for two led the winners.

PLAY-OFF CHAMPIONS of the Cass City Church League were the Catholics who won the post-season classic by slugging easy victories over three opponents.
