State pursuing charge against SHS student

SEBRING — A warrant affidavit shows that serious and disturbing threatening statements were made by a Sebring High School student to another student prompting the May 11 lock down of the school and gate closures at all Highlands District Schools.

The State Attorney's Office is pursuing a second-degree misdemeanor charge of disturbing a school function against Dennis Barclay Cooke, 18, of Sebring.

A Highlands County Sheriff's Office warrant affidavit states that

Shaffer shares love of dance, children Named Female Coach of the Year

By ALLEN MOODY
HIGHLANDS SUN EDITOR

SEBRING — When Camille Shaffer first began dancing at Dance Unlimited almost 30 years ago, little did she know that one day she would become owner of the studio. But a love for dance and a love of children brought her full circle, beginning as a student and then evolving into an instructor and in 2001, she became the owner.

"I've been teaching dance since I was in 10th grade," Shaffer said. "I started teaching here at Dance Unlimited, but obviously that was before I owned it. This is our 30th year, so I've been doing it about 25 years. I started dancing here when I was in eighth grade."

Shaffer has been dancing since she was 4 or 5 and even when she's not at the studio, dance is never far from her mind.

"Some people can listen to music and do homework, I can't do that," she said. "I listen to music and choreograph."

The love of dance has always been there."

While many people may not associate a dance instructor with being a coach, Shaffer said the perception people have of what she does and what she actually does are probably vastly different. Her students may call her "Ms. Camille" instead of "Coach," but she's

CRA plans to make downtown sparkle again

By MELISSA MAIN

SEBRING — Are you familiar with what a CRA is? And what it does? "Our job at the CRA is reinvestment and revitalization of our downtown district," Kristie Vazquez, executive director of the Community Redevelopment Agency, said.

COURTESY PHOTO

Kristie Vazquez is the Executive Director of the CRA. Vazquez encourages people with a dream for a downtown business to contact her.

The CRA's master plan includes a map of downtown and the surrounding area that the agency actively attempts to assist with funding for improvements. The goal is to restore an area and prevent blight. It only provides funding to areas near downtown that are in the CRA district. The master plan guides the agency in how they can reinvest in the area.

Homeowners or businesses in the CRA district can apply for grants to help fund improvements. People must apply for the grants before improvements are made, but the grants are reimbursed following renovations. The CRA's website at downtownsebring.org/cra/ describes available reimbursement programs, including grants for new or existing businesses, restaurants and homeowners.

The CRA will help upgrade the exterior, or facade, of a home or business within its downtown district. The agency offers a grant for 30 percent of the cost to remodel the exterior, including windows, doors and paint. The limit for this grant is 30 percent of $10,000, or a total of $3,000 for exterior improvements.

However, if the home or business is on the local historic register, the national historic register or inside the downtown district, the CRA will contribute up to 60 percent of the costs to remodel the exterior for a total grant of $6,000 for improvements that cost $10,000.

Larger sums of money are available to remodel businesses and improve the heating, ventilation, air conditioning and electrical components of a building. However, all the improvements funded by the CRA must stay with the building. According to Vazquez, the agency does not help with tables and chairs or anything else that can be taken by businesses if they move.

Vazquez said the website is being redesigned and will be easier to use in the near future. She encourages people to contact the CRA office directly at 863-471-5104 to discuss the project or future business plan they have in mind.

"We have done out-of-the-box deals, not just the grant applications found on our website," she said. "We want people to feel like the CRA is here to help."

Even though there may not be a grant on the website that fits the needs of a particular business, the CRA can customize a package for a business as long as the business will benefit the downtown area.

When applying for a grant, businesses must have a solid business plan and have quotes from contractors. For those new to the business world, help in developing a solid business plan is available through the Florida Small Business Development Center (SBDC) at South Florida State College. Contact Michael

HOW TO APPLY TO THE CRA

1. Visit the CRA's website at downtownsebring.org/cra/ to learn about the various programs offered.
2. Call the CRA's office at 863-471-5104 to discuss plans to remodel a home or business in the CRA district.
3. For businesses who need help developing a business plan, contact Michael Noel with the Florida SBDC to discuss the development of a business plan. His contact number is 863-784-7378.
4. Complete the requirements stated on the application package, including getting quotes on repairs and remodeling.
5. Clarify any questions about the application process with the CRA office.

Noel at 863-784-7378.

With a good business plan, the CRA is more likely to approve a grant, especially one that involves a customized package that addresses specific needs.

A quick look downtown and it is easy to spot buildings, such as the Kenilworth Lodge, that are in urgent need of repair and could benefit from CRA funds. When asked about the possibility of redeveloping the Kenilworth, Vazquez said, "The Kenilworth is of great importance to the CRA. Once legal issues are resolved, the CRA is interested in opening the lines of communication to see if there is anything the CRA can do to help them reopen."

The CRA would enjoy a partnership with the hotel, because people staying at the hotel would shop downtown and help revitalize the downtown district.

"The CRA receives funding through Tax Increment Financing (TIF). TIF is a public financing method where future property tax revenue increases from our CRA district is set aside into a special fund to provide for redevelopment projects," Vazquez said. "The CRA receives TIF funds on an annual basis from both the city and county."

With a steady stream of funding, the

Sebring man charged with theft

By MELISSA MAIN
STAFF WRITER

SEBRING — While a female relative was recovering from a hospitalization, a Sebring man allegedly used her personal identification, credit cards and bank accounts to steal over $10,000.

Ross M. Lyons, 52, of Sebring was charged with criminal use of personal identification, theft from a person 65 years of age or older and executing a scheme to defraud a financial institution, according to the arrest report. He was arrested on June 6, however the fraud investigation began on Sept. 19, 2017.

The report indicates that Lyons offered help to a relative during the hospitalization and recovery period. When Lyons brought the mail to the relative, he did not bring the bank statements or credit card statements. Prior to Lyons providing assistance to her, the victim had regularly received her mail, including all her statements, the report states. She was unable to pay her bills on time and received late fees since she was unable to pay without her statements.

According to the arrest report, Bank of America provided documentation of over 50 fraudulent charges on the victim's account totaling $11,031.66. It was confirmed that Lyons charged $1,747.42 for expenses at a local hotel, the report stated.

Lyons had five pages of charges at the hotel where he stayed for approximately one month, according to the arrest report. He used the victim's Bank of America card to pay for the charges.

Law enforcement obtained video evidence from Walmart where the victim's credit card was used. According to the arrest report, Lyons was identified by the victim when she was shown the video surveillance.

The victim claimed this was not the first time Lyons had made charges in her name without her authorization, the report stated.

CRA looks toward the future with even bigger plans for improvements in the next few years. Every 20 years a new master plan is developed, and the current plan extends to 2024. Vazquez believes a new plan will address current issues and help revitalize the downtown area.

Approximately two years before the master plan expires, a consultant will be hired who specializes in helping cities and towns redevelop areas in need of assistance. While evaluating the area, the consultant will determine if there are areas around the CRA district that are at risk for slum and blight.

After considering the progress that has been made and additional areas that could use assistance, a new master plan will be developed. The community will take part in this process by providing input, and this input will be included in the master plan. Vazquez believes this new plan will provide for a brighter future for the downtown area.

However, improvements are being made on a continual basis, and the CRA has many success stories in its portfolio, including the renovation of the Circle Theatre, Legacy Bicycles and the Garden Cafe, which was later purchased by Faded Bistro.

The CRA provided funds to the Circle Theatre to assist with the installation of the mural on the side of the building, new doors, a marquee and storefront updates. It provided funds to assist with upgrades to undergo a complete renovation and redevelopment of an old cottage into a chic al fresco dining restaurant in downtown Sebring, now Faded Bistro.

For Legacy Bicycles, the agency provided funds to assist with upgrades made to the ceiling, electrical, air conditioning, flooring, walls and insulation.

5 THINGS That Will Make You SMARTER

1. The game of horseshoes is thought to have descended from the ancient Greek sport of the discus throw.
2. The story is that Greeks developed a sport where the discus was thrown at a stake. But many of the poorer people could not afford the discus so they used cast off horseshoes instead.
3. At the time, horseshoes were actually round, with a hole in the middle. This evolved into the game of quoits, which uses a 4 pound iron ring in a manner similar to horseshoes. Quoits then spawned the game of horseshoes.
4. Modern horseshoes might well be called "muleshoes" because it was spread by Union soldiers during the American Civil War playing the game with the discarded shoes of mules.

5. The first organization of Horseshoe pitchers was in Kansas in 1914, making that state the home of American Horseshoe pitching.

OUR VIEW

Possible water war would be waste of money

Everyone, hold your horses.

All the recent posturing by the Peace River Water Authority, the Polk Regional Water Cooperative (PRWC), the Winter Haven City Commission and Polk County government has created a bit of a controversy over water. If everyone would just calm down and talk, they would probably realize their concerns do not merit spending hundreds of thousands of dollars on lawsuits.

But that is what some folks — led by Polk County Manager Jim Freeman — are talking about. And the Peace River Water Authority wasted no time in rolling up its sleeves and getting permission from its board to set aside $500,000 to defend any potential suit.

So what would the lawsuit contend?

It all started when folks began paying attention to a year-old, or more, plan to build a third reservoir at the water authority's DeSoto County location to store water for emergencies — or to account for future growth. A permit to pump as much as 258 million gallons a day from the Peace River — just a couple of miles before it empties into the Gulf of Mexico — has been requested.

Currently, the Southwest Florida Water Management District, known as Swiftmud, permits withdrawal of 120 million gallons a day from the Peace. Of that, about 35 million gallons a day serves customers in Manatee, Sarasota, Charlotte and DeSoto counties.

Why pump so much more than needed?

Because the river slows down in the winter, or dry months. That is what the reservoirs are for. To make sure we have water when it does not rain for two months.

Polk County officials say they were caught off guard by the latest request to pump more water from the Peace. They have concerns about running out of water themselves. So, they asked, why not pump more water out of the Peace there and store it in a reservoir. They fear the "heavy drinkers" along the coast will get all the benefits of a river whose headwaters are just a couple miles east of Bartow. It is a question worth asking — but the simplest answer is likely that it would impact the minimum flow requirements, especially in the dry season.

We believe reasonable people will come to a reasonable solution before hundreds of thousands of taxpayer dollars are spent on a lawsuit.

There are potential answers to future water shortages in Polk County and its neighbors. Maybe in the rainy months of summer that rain-water could be stored in a reservoir or pumped into the ground. Perhaps the county could use gray water to irrigate instead of drinking water?

The bottom line is, taking water out of the Peace just before it spills into the Gulf is no threat to Polk County. A priority of Swiftmud and regional water authorities has always been to maintain minimum flow standards in the Peace. And, as long as that is accomplished, the water that makes it to DeSoto and Charlotte counties is ripe for the taking.

The other day, I turned 57 years old

It is one of life's true wonders, the perspective one gains as the aging process takes its course. This past Friday I turned 57 years old and, my goodness, what a birthday celebration it has been. If you will indulge me for a few minutes, I'd like to share just a few thoughts with you regarding the 57th anniversary of my birth.

Being 57 years old means that I was born in 1961. Did you know that in 1961, Alan Shepard made the first U.S. space flight, and the Peace Corps was established by John F. Kennedy. The average cost of new house $12,500 and a new car, $2,850. Perhaps, the most important development, though, was that Pampers introduced the first disposable diaper.

Other famous 57-year-olds (get it, "other famous" 57-year-olds?) are George Clooney, Antonio Banderas, Cal Ripken, Jr., and Julianne Moore — that's pretty good company. Isn't it interesting that we care who else shares our date of birth or our age? Why? Why does it matter that Antonio Banderas and I are the same age? It's curious, isn't it?

NEVER A DULL MOMENT

Perhaps the biggest or at least, most important, lessons that I've learned are that I don't have to be intimidated by what others do for a living or the amount of money they make. I don't have to be embarrassed by what I do for a living nor the amount of money I make, or don't make. I don't have to pretend to know all the answers nor do I have to be ashamed that I don't.

I have also come to terms with the fact that I may never be all I wanted to be in certain areas of my life. For example, I may never have a 32-inch waist or be a great 5-K runner or make a ton of money. I may never be a world famous speaker or author. I may never drive a BMW and may never travel to exotic vacation spots around the world. What's even better is that I don't feel jealous of those who can. It's quite liberating, actually.

On the flip side, I am at peace and truly content with much of my life. I have been married to the same amazing lady for 35 years — for whom I am incredibly thankful. I have two wonderful children, one caring and hard-working son-in-law, and the two most amazing grand-daughters in the world. I absolutely love my job as a high school social studies teacher. Can you believe that I get to hang out with teenagers all day long and I get paid for it? What a country!

Now, please don't, for a moment, think that all is right and perfect in my world. But, one of the benefits of having a good perspective is that it allows you to distinguish between the things you can control and the things you can't, between what is urgent and what is important, between what is worth spending time on and what isn't.

It's time now to take a look at your life, with your permission, of course. How would you describe your perspective on life? How are you dealing with the things you can control and the things you can't? Are you thankful, truly thankful, for the things that are important? Does your life reflect that level of gratitude? C'mon, what are you waiting for? Life is passing us by quickly. Let's get busy with what's truly important, now.

Tragic celebrity suicides should be a reminder to listen

When I heard my brother Jonathan had taken his own life, my first thought, unfiltered through the sieve of reason, was: "Why the hell did he do this to me, to my mother, to us?"

When I learned that Kate Spade had taken her own life, my first thought was: "Why did she do that to them?" referring to her husband and 13-year-old daughter.

And when, almost unbelievably, I learned that Anthony Bourdain had committed suicide in his hotel room in France, I thought "My God, he had everything to live for! Why?"

Twenty years have not blunted my instincts or reflexes. But unlike the decades it took for me to grapple with my anger and bewilderment at my brother's act, I quickly realized my gross mistake in blaming Spade or Bourdain for "hurting" their loved ones or making it about "fault," and felt ashamed. My friend helped me listen to those better angels in a Facebook post where she observed, "To paraphrase Olympia Dukakis in Moonstruck, 'What you don't know about depression is a lot.'"

I'm not a psychologist, and my judgment of human nature has been called absolutist, but even I understand that humans cannot live without hope. Emily Dickinson took her Baccarat crystal words and described it like this:

Hope is the thing with feathers/That perches in the soul/And sings the tune without the words/And never stops at all

And sweetest in the gale is heard/And sore must be the storm/That could abash the little Bird/That kept so many warm.

Indeed, depression is something that obliterates the ability to see light through the fog. I have never suffered from its heavy gravity, dragging its victim down to a place where reality is seen through a dark veil, even when the rest of the world can only see why he or she should be filled with gratitude for a wonderful life.

By all accounts, Kate Spade had that wonderful life. She was extremely talented, rich beyond any metric I would understand, married to a man who loved her, blessed with a sweet child, and a creative genius. Perhaps that last part is key, though.

My sister, who worked in marketing for almost a decade, told me that artistic people are often the ones most susceptible to suicidal thoughts.

That's probably why I shouldn't have been shocked about Bourdain's death, either.

The chef-turned-journalist-turned-troubadour of the road had lived a hard-edged life and had once noted that he was surprised to have made it to age 30. He was a manic, magnificent artist. But he was so full of life, that his death still came as a shock. It shouldn't have.

But depression doesn't discriminate. It affects kings and commoners. It affected my gentle brother, who, as a child, was kind but detached and seemed to have nerve endings right below the surface of his translucent skin.

Normal things that went unobserved by the rest of our rowdy crew of five would be a source of angst for him. His empathy was exceptional for a child. He felt things deeply. He had an otherworldly aspect to him, which might explain why his favorite show was Star Trek. Even when he laughed, he seemed vaguely sad.

I don't know if this was the beginning of his depression, but the fact that these things stand out in my memory lead me to believe that his albatross followed him from childhood. That's not to say Jon was never happy. But it was never complete happiness.

When we learned he had committed suicide on the cusp of his 31st birthday, I took comfort in the image of Jonathan Livingston Seagull rising to the heavens, finally free.

The idea that family wasn't enough to save him only sank in after years of anger. I forgave him for abandoning us, especially my mother, when I realized that if love could keep someone alive, he would still be with us. Depression is not caused by lack of love.

Some of the most beloved people commit suicide. And I have no doubt Kate Spade was surrounded by fierce, intense, profound love. I know that Bourdain was in love with Asia Argento, his apparent soul mate.

Suicide is the last act of someone in pain, and who has lost hope that the pain will end. Spade had all the outward signs of success and every reason to be happy, and yet it wasn't enough. Neither was the love for her child. Neither was Bourdain's love of life. Neither was my brother's love for us, or ours for him.

I have no answer, only a suggestion: Listen to the words not spoken when someone says that nothing is wrong. Be vigilant. Have compassion.

a coach to them in every sense of the word.

"My boys play flag football and on the field there's another dad whose daughter does dance with me, so he's experienced me as a coach," she said.

Shaffer's work didn't go unnoticed by the community, as she received 2017 Female Coach of the Year award at the inaugural Highlander Awards event May 3.

"I actually had a parent who said something to me because I think it was new this year, so I had no idea," she said.

One thing Shaffer wants to see from her charges when they leave the studio is self-esteem.

"Confidence is what I want to see, that's my goal," Shaffer said. "We do have male dancers too, I do have one male dancer who is now dancing professionally, but women who are successful and strong and confident."

Shaffer said the boys who are in her classes have a good time.

"The boys who do walk in here and make the connection, maybe not the younger kids, but those in middle school think, 'I'm one guy to 50 girls and all the girls want to dance with me and partner with me. It makes sense to come to dance.' The couple of boys who are here really enjoy it."

Shaffer draws kids from all over the county and beyond.

"We have kids from Babson Park, Wauchula and Zolfo Springs," she said. "A lot of the kids go to different schools. I would say they have their school friends and their dance friends. We spend a lot of time together here, so they probably do more together with their dance friends. This one may go to Sebring High School or Lake Placid High School, but I never see any rivalry. Their high school friends are their high school friends and their dance friends are like their family."

Shaffer said the family atmosphere of Dance Unlimited is one of the things that makes coming to the studio a pleasure.

"I have three kids, but this is definitely my fourth child," she said. "My husband knew nothing about dance before we were married. Now he's the maintenance guy and knows everything about dance. It's a big part of our family. We affect a lot of lives and they affect our lives."

She said having her own kids has changed the dynamics of how she coaches and how she teaches.

"Since I've had my own kids I'm definitely more of a Mama Bear, not just for my biological kids, but for my dance kids also," she said.

on May 10 Cooke made statements to a fellow student that he would stab him and rape him over a cellphone game.

Cooke also informed the student to not come to school on May 18 because he was going to shoot up the school with an AK-47, the affidavit shows. The reporting student further stated that Cooke had made several comments about killing his parents, other students and teachers.

On May 11, the Highlands County

Sheriff's Office tried to contact Cooke at Sebring High, according to the affidavit. His first-period teacher stated that Cooke was not present in class, but the teacher said he had seen Cooke on campus wearing a "monkey suit."

Due to the threats reported and Cooke's actions, the school was placed on lock down, the affidavit states.

This lock down procedure caused not only a disruption of the normal day-to-day functions of the school, it should also be noted this was an exam period and the students were in the process of testing, according to the affidavit. The exams were not completed and had to be rescheduled for another day.

During the lock down Cooke was located across the street in a parking lot on Kenilworth Boulevard.

Around 9:40 a.m., two deputies took him into custody from the driver's seat of a Toyota cross-over vehicle. Cooke was still wearing an animal costume, but he did not have anything on or over his head.

Cooke was issued a criminal summons on May 24 to appear June 21 before Judge Anthony Ritenour at the Highlands County Courthouse.

careers," Eddie Cuencas, program specialist, said. "We work with students from Highlands, Hardee, DeSoto and Okeechobee counties."

The students had to apply for the position, just as they would if they were applying for a job. The students put in a full schedule of manual labor from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. with a scheduled lunch.

In Lake Placid, the youth weeded the caladium beds and prepared them for new bulbs to be planted for the Caladium Festival in Stuart Park. Up and down Main Avenue and Interlake Boulevard, beds were raked and weeded. The Miracle League ball field got some special attention from the youth as well.

"The kids met every morning and we gave them the instructions and the tools they would need for the day," Donald Clarke with Keep Lake Placid Beautiful said.

"They have been working very hard. This is a big help to us; this is a big favor to the town. These kids will have a jump ahead of other kids because of the experience. This is a well-rounded program."

Panther Program Coordinator Leah Sauls said the young men and women received a lot of positive feedback from people in the town (Lake Placid), from people driving by, and from the business owners.

"People are telling the kids, 'thank you for keeping the town nice' and 'great job,'" she said. "Some people think they are out here doing community hours because they got in trouble but we correct them. The kids also get exposed to networking because they are meeting people when they are out."

Cuencas pointed out the young people are getting more than just hands-on learning; they are getting soft skills, resume help and social skills. He credits the success of the program to the partnership the college has with Career Source Heartland and working with the area school staff and principals to identify "at risk" kids.

"The kids are learning how to interact and use social skills. Most of them didn't know each other when they started, but now they have made friends and have added each other to their social medias," Cuencas said. "Even when we are at lunch, we are engaging them with ice breakers. On Tuesday, we asked what they would change in the world if they had the ability. Wednesday we talked about barriers to reaching their goals and how to overcome them."

Even in the heat, with sweat rolling down their brows, the youngsters still had smiles lighting up their faces. It seemed as if they were enjoying themselves.

"I'm doing it because I like helping the community," Neaychma Fogle, 17, from Avon Park High School said. "I would want others to do this for my city (Avon Park). I really like to see it well maintained. I met a lot of people from Lake Placid and Okeechobee. We all added each other to our social media to stay in touch."

Lake Placid Horticulture and Sidewalk Supervisor Danny LaMarre was thrilled to have the help weeding, raking, trash pick up and more.

"These students are an amazing help," he said. "They are working very, very hard. I cannot tell you how much they are helping out the town."

De Angelis earns Platinum Cup win

First in Ultra 94 Porsche GT3 Cup Challenge Canada

Special to Highlands News-Sun

MONTREAL – Roman De Angelis is now an Ultra 94 Porsche GT3 Cup Challenge Canada by Yokohama Platinum Cup winner.

After taking 11 of 12 Gold Cup class victories in 2017, De Angelis advanced to Platinum Cup in the No. 78 Mark Motors Racing Porsche for 2018 and in just his fifth start, found the top step of the podium.

At 17 years old, De Angelis led flag-to-flag in Porsche GT3 Cup Canada's first race of two at the Canadian Grand Prix after topping both practice session charts and starting from the pole position. Holding second place throughout the contest was De Angelis' teammate Zach Robichon – who entered the weekend undefeated on the season – in the No. 98 Porsche. This was Mark Motors' fourth 1-2 finish in five races.

"It really well," said De Angelis. "Really good pace by Zach as well, so I think we have some work to do tonight. There's never perfection, so there's always a little bit more to find, but awesome effort by everyone at Mark Motors and everyone at Best Line, they put together an amazing car today. Also a thank you to Kelly Moss on the other side of the border for their support as well. I'm looking forward to tomorrow and hopefully we can find some more time tonight and do the same thing."

While the win checks off another accomplishment for the Ontario-native, De Angelis has his eyes on the bigger picture – closing Robichon's 17-point lead in the championship standings.

"Obviously winning is a really good feeling, so I mean we've got to win tomorrow too, right?" De Angelis said. "It's a long series, so winning one race isn't a huge deal but I'm really, really happy about it and a win's a win."

Nasr is riding high heading into Le Mans

Special to Highlands News-Sun

June is already shaping up to be quite a month for Brazilian driver Felipe Nasr.

On June 2, Nasr scored his first victory in the IMSA WeatherTech SportsCar Championship, co-driving the No. 31 Whelen Engineering Cadillac DPi-V.R with Eric Curran to win the 100-minute Chevrolet Sports Car Classic at Detroit's Belle Isle Park.

The victory was the third podium result in five races this season for Nasr and Curran. It moved them into a tie for the Prototype points lead with their Action Express Racing teammates in the No. 5 Mustang Sampling Cadillac DPi, Filipe Albuquerque and Joao Barbosa, who will miss the next two WeatherTech Championship rounds due to an injury from a cycling accident.

Not long after taking the checkered flag in Detroit, Nasr was on his way to France to participate in the required Test Day for the 24 Hours of Le Mans on Sunday, June 3. He'll be competing at Le Mans for the first time in 2018, sharing the No. 47 Dallara-Gibson LMP2 car with Italian co-drivers Roberto Lacorte and Giorgio Sernagiotto for the Cetilar Villorba Corse team.

"It's an Italian-based team," Nasr said. "I had a first taste of experience with them back in Monza a couple of weeks ago. We are all excited to be joining Le Mans."

Nasr – who previously raced in Formula 1 – is quick to credit his experience in IMSA as a major reason why the opportunity presented itself.

"I think that was one of the reasons why I got the invitation from Villorba," Nasr says. "Because they believe in the experience that I can bring, along together with the time I had spent here with these boys in IMSA and Action Express driving the Whelen (No.) 31 car. There's a lot of pick up."

"There's a lot you understand about even the procedures, getting in and out of the car, how to be in a mutual environment for everyone, all of the drivers. All of this stuff counts in the end. It's not

Once again, the annual Heartland Triathlon proved to be a hit with competitors around the state, with nearly 700 finishing Sunday's even when you take into account relay teams, aquabike athletes and those who competed in the duathlon. They came from several different states — even different countries — to compete in the event.

There were 216 triathletes who finished the Olympic distance and none was faster than Bonita Springs' Josh Eaton, who finished the course with a time of 2:03.18, while the overall female winner was Clearwater's Katie Corbin, who finished with a time of 2:19.08.

Masters winners were Kissimmee's Andrea Ugazio with a time of 2:06.01 on the men's side and Lake Mary's Kerry Simmons, who finished with a time of 2:25.16.

The youngest competitors in the Olympic division were 17, while Lis Heckman, completed the grueling course at the age

Hackney records wire-to-wire victory Wins Bassmaster Elite Series event on the Sabine River

Special to Highlands News-Sun

ORANGE, Texas — If the Bass Pro Shops Bassmaster Elite at Sabine River presented by Econo Lodge had been a five-day tournament, the outcome might have been different.

But it was only four days — and Greg Hackney owned it from start to finish.

Despite exhausting his best fishing areas the first three days and bringing in only 7 pounds, 5 ounces to the weigh-in stage on Championship Sunday, Hackney claimed his sixth career B.A.S.S. victory in wire-to-wire fashion with a four-day total of 48-5.

Hackney's first win since 2016 earned him $100,000 and pushed his career winnings with B.A.S.S. to $2,415,784.

performance in Race 1 was Montreal-native Etienne Borgeat in the No. 2 Lauzon Autosport Porsche. This was the first race of the season for Borgeat – a Platinum Masters driver – with Porsche GT3 Cup Canada and the Quebecer took home third place overall and first place in the Masters category.

And while he held third position throughout the race, Remo Ruscitti in the No. 96 OpenRoad Racing Porsche was hot on his tails all 30 minutes.

“I knew I could be fast because it’s a track I like and I’ve been to many times,” said Borgeat. “In qualifying, I was super happy with what I did and in the race, I knew I would have some pressure because I’m in between younger guys, but I wasn’t sure.

“I was getting pressured all race long and that was great. I think (Ruscitti) did a few mistakes, so I was catching a little bit of space from him. He was all the time around me, but I never really felt there was one place or somewhere specific he could pass me. But he did put pressure, pressure, pressure. This is where sometimes experience pays and I guess in this particular experience, it helped me.”

Winning the Yokohama Hard Charger Award for gaining the most positions during the race was James Walker in the No. 83 Tullman Walker Racing Porsche. The feat was truly that, as Walker powered through the pain from a rib injury suffered a few weeks ago. “I feel good because my times are coming down,” said Walker. “This is only my second time racing on this track. I’m figuring how to drive the track and hopefully tomorrow will be even better.”

Robichon Wins In Montreal

With the checkered flag of Sunday’s Ultra 94 Porsche GT3 Cup Challenge Canada by Yokohama race, the 2018 season is officially halfway complete and Zach Robichon reclaimed his place on the top step of the podium.

Entering the Formula One Canadian Grand Prix weekend in Montreal, Robichon was four-for-four in Porsche GT3 Cup Canada competition on the year. Yet in Race 1 on Saturday at Circuit Gilles Villeneuve, Robichon’s No. 98 Mark Motors Racing Porsche finished runner-up to teammate Roman De Angelis in the No. 78.

Robichon made sure that didn’t happen again on Sunday.

IMSA PHOTO

With the checkered flag of Sunday’s Ultra 94 Porsche GT3 Cup Challenge Canada by Yokohama race, the 2018 season is officially halfway complete and Zach Robichon reclaimed his place on the top step of the podium.

As soon as the green flag flew to start the 30-minute race, Robichon battled alongside polesitter De Angelis through the first few corners, but was able to overtake his teammate before the first lap was complete. Robichon held on for the remainder of the race, but not easily.

“It was really an incredible race with Roman,” said Robichon. “I kind of had a feeling we weren’t going to have the same pace as him, so I saw an opportunity at the start and we took it. He hounded us the whole race and every single time I made just the smallest of mistakes, he was right there. We were kind of going back and forth there a little bit.

“I have to give (Roman) full credit because I think he was a little bit faster than us. He’s had the hand on us all weekend and I think that continued in the race today. I just focused on not making mistakes and doing my best to keep him behind me.”

De Angelis came home with his fourth runner-up finish of the year and No. 2 Lauzon Autosport Porsche driver Etienne Borgeat again came home in third place, in addition to scoring his second Platinum Masters class win of the weekend.

With his fifth victory of the season, Robichon expands his Platinum Cup championship lead back to 20 points over De Angelis heading to Honda Indy Toronto. Rounds 7 and 8 – on temporary 1.755-mile circuit on the streets of downtown Toronto – will be completely unlike what the Porsche GT3 Cup Canada teams experienced this weekend in Montreal.

“Toronto is a whole different ball game,” Robichon described. “Here, we have walls. There, we have walls everywhere. We don’t even have curbs to give us a warning that we’re about to hit something, we just go right into it. It’s a difficult track and it’s all about car preparation.

“It’s also very bumpy, so it’s just a totally different atmosphere and a different style of driving. As we’ve done so far in the first three weekends, we’ve been able to figure out the car and I know we’re going to do the same in Toronto. Hopefully, the usual suspects out front with the Mark Motors guys.”

For the first time in 2018, the Gold Cup class was represented in Porsche GT3 Cup Canada. Michel Bonnet in the No. 76 Lauzon Autosport Porsche took home both wins, as well as the Yokohama Tire Hard Charger Award for gaining the most positions during the race.

“Being here in Montreal, it’s always amazing for a driver like myself,” Bonnet said. “Also, it’s my first time in Porsche. Of course I have to improve my driving because I’ve never driven this kind of car before. But today, I had a lot of fun and I really appreciate this organization.”

Racing alongside the Verizon IndyCar Series, the Honda Indy Toronto doubleheader weekend for the Ultra 94 Porsche GT3 Cup Challenge Canada by Yokohama series will take place on July 13 – 15 and tickets are available at www.hondaindy.com.

said. “I really don’t think all of the fish were gone. But we had all of that rain Saturday, and my best place had a couple of drains running into it.

“The water wasn’t dirty, but the water temperature dropped to 80 degrees after being in the 90s the first three days.”

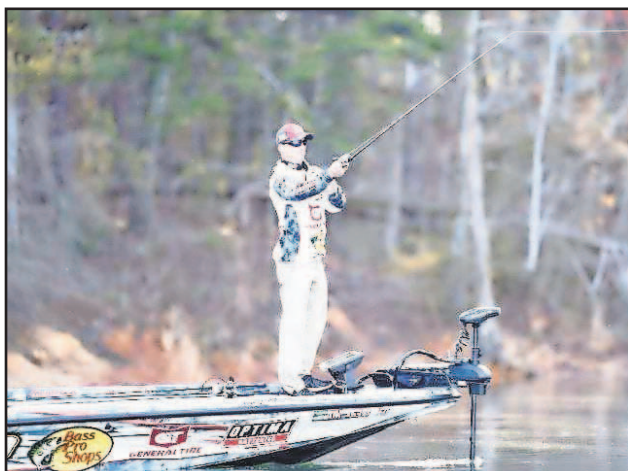

Hackney fished secluded canals and backwaters all week and relied heavily on two topwater presentations around shallow cover — a 1/4-ounce black Hack Attack Select Toad Buzz rigged with a black plastic toad (no skirt) and a KVD Sexy Frog Stump Jumper.

That drastic drop in the water temperature brought those tactics nearly to a halt today, and he had to switch to the technique he is most known for — flipping. When he flipped heavy cover, he used a Strike King Rage Bug in the Bama Craw color.

BASSTrakk, the unofficial leaderboard that fans can check on Bassmaster.com throughout the day, showed Hackney with only two fish several hours into the final round. But he said he always knew he could fill out his limit flipping — even if the fish he was catching with that technique were running much smaller than his topwater fish.

“I really was amped up a little bit today, and that’s why I got a lot quieter, said Hackney, laughing. “I always have a lot more to say when things are going right.

“But in the back of my mind, I knew I could pick up a flipping stick and catch a keeper anytime.”

The Bassmaster Elite Series event on the Sabine River attracted a strong field of anglers.

His two best fish still came on the frog. But when he switched to flipping, he caught 10 keepers in 45 minutes.

“I probably should have done that sooner, but I just felt like I would have been punting,” he said. “Out of those 10 keepers I caught in the last 45 minutes flipping, they were all about 12 to 12 1/2 inches long.

“That’s why I won. When a lot of other guys were dialed into that this week, I was fishing for those bigger ones with the frog and the buzzbait.”

While some anglers ran as many as 300 miles a day roundtrip, Hackney fished close to the launch site at the City of Orange boat ramp. He said he only burned 11.6 gallons of gas all week.

Before the tournament, Hackney predicted it would take “48 pounds, about 12 pounds a day” to win. He’ll take home the giant blue Elite Series trophy after weighing in 48-5.

“I thought I had an opportunity to have a good tournament, but I didn’t know that I would have a shot to win,” he said. “I knew I was going to be around a lot of other guys, and it’s hard to win in a crowd.

“Catching that 5-14 on the first day got me off to a good start. Even if I hadn’t caught that fish — if I had just weighed in four that day — I would have still been leading going into today. But that fish helped me start just the way I needed to.”

Alabama pro Gerald Swindle finished second with 43-11, and Keith Poche, a Louisiana native who grew up fishing the Sabine River, placed third with 43-0.

Brent Chapman of Lake Quivira, Kan., the 2012 Toyota Bassmaster Angler of the Year, retained the lead in his quest for a second AOY title. Chapman, who finished 37th at the Sabine River event, has 456 points. Bradley Roy of Lancaster, Ky., is second with 427, and Hackney, who was Angler of the Year in 2014, moved into third with 422 points.

Poche earned the Power-Pole Captain’s Cash Award of $1,000 for being the highest-placing angler who is registered and eligible and uses a client-approved product on his boat.

Brock Mosley was awarded $1,500 dollars as the winner of the Phoenix Boats Big Bass award. He had the largest bass of the tournament with a 6 pound, 3 ounce lunker on Day 2.

John Crews won the Toyota Bonus Bucks Award of $3,000 for being the highest-placing eligible entrant in the program. The second-highest-placing eligible entrant, Brandon Palaniuk, received $2,000.

just going there, ‘I want to be the quickest, I want to do this. No, you’ve got to think as a team. I think I’ve learned that so much here this year.’

The Dallara race car Nasr will be driving at Le Mans has the same underpinnings as his regular ride. All Cadillac DPi race cars are built on Dallara chassis.

“They are similar,” Nasr says. “The cars are similar, although the tires are very different and the engine package together with the gearbox is different. You get some similar reactions, but I have to say I kind of prefer the car here (in IMSA), the way it drives.

“I prefer our Cadillac here, in terms of the drivability, the whole driving style of the car together with the Continental tires. It’s just a question of getting used to (the Dallara LMP2 car). I’m sure with the test plus the race week, we’re going to have plenty of time to set up the car and get used to it.”

What also will take some getting used to are the differences in rules and procedures between the WeatherTech Championship and the 24 Hours of Le Mans, which takes place on a racetrack nearly eight and a half miles in length. That’s more than double the size of the longest track in IMSA, which creates its own challenges.

“Le Mans, they have some different procedures on safety cars,” Nasr explains. “They sometimes can deploy three safety cars at the same time.

“And (there’s) all the little things that a driver needs to know. Knowing exactly what part of the track you’re on. It’s such a long track, when they call you on the radio or if you have to say if there’s damage on the car where you are. It’s all part of the learning process.”

SFSC alumna gives back to Take Stock in Children

Special to Highlands News-Sun

At age 26, Rebeca Rivera, a South Florida State College alumna, is not only living her dream of being a nurse, but she is giving back to an organization that gave her the encouragement she needed to move ahead in her career.

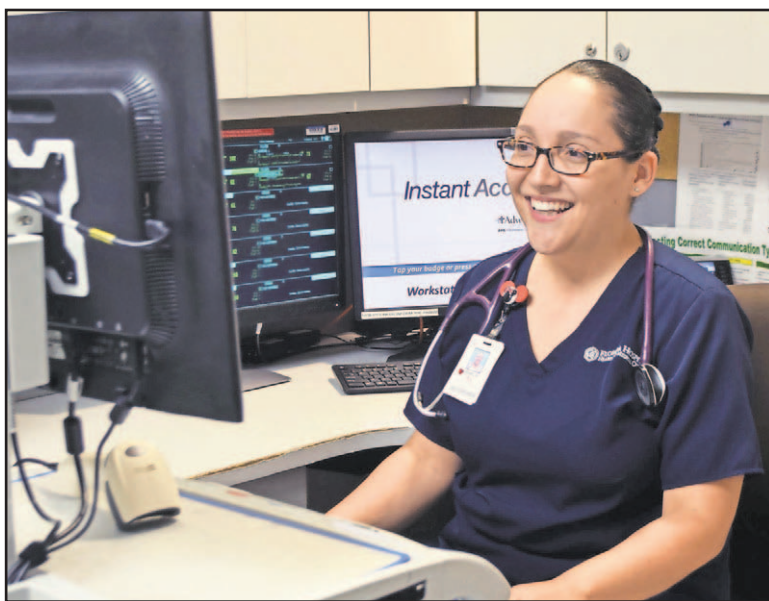

Rivera, who works as a registered nurse at Florida Hospital Heartland, recently graduated with a Master of Science in Nursing from South University and will soon take on the position of nurse practitioner with a local internal medicine practice.

She graduated from SFSC's Associate Degree in Nursing (ADN) program in 2013 and was immediately hired by Florida Hospital. In 2014, she completed her bachelor's degree through Grand Canyon University.

Rivera became interested in nursing at an early age and was always impressed by the professionalism and compassion of the nurse practitioner who worked in her doctor's office. "In sixth grade, big changes happen to every girl, such as the beginning of menstruation. At that time in my life, the nurse practitioner was caring and took time to explain things."

While in sixth grade at Hill-Gustat Middle School in Sebring, a Take Stock in Children representative spoke to Rivera's language arts class. "She encouraged everyone to Soup for summer?

Gazpacho is the perfect summer soup.

You'll find gazpacho on the summer menus of many nice restaurants. It sounds fancier and more complicated than it really is. Basically, gazpacho is cold vegetable soup. You can see why it's called something else now, yes?

Gazpacho doesn't sound very appetizing but it's actually a delicious and refreshing meal for a hot summer day. All of the water content in the vegetables helps to keep you nice and cool and depending on what spices you add, it can take on any number of flavors.

And making gazpacho is dead easy.

All you need to do is grab yourself a bunch of vegetables. My favorites for gazpacho are:

- Roma tomatoes
- Onion
- Cucumber
- Peppers
- Celery
- Parsley
- Garlic

But, you can use any combination you like (this is a great way to use up raw or cooked leftovers, by the way!).

Put those veggies in your blender (I use my Blendtec), and add some tomato juice or vegetable juice, a squeeze of lemon juice, a bit of balsamic vinegar, a drizzle of olive oil, some salt and pepper, and any spices you like.

Blend the whole works and serve cold. Just like that.

Or you can have it chunky and skip the blender. Both will work.

If you have leftover gazpacho, store it in the fridge for good quick lunches.

This is a wonderful dish to teach your kids how to make. If they're old enough to chop and use the blender, they can make this great meal — perfect for lunch or supper.

Getting ahead

SFSC Collegiate High School student Caroline Taylor is focused, determined

CORRESPONDENT

SEBRING — Sebring resident Caroline Taylor has recently completed all her spring classes and is technically a high school senior and a college sophomore through the Collegiate High School offered at South Florida State College.

When Taylor graduates, she will walk for her high school diploma and also receive her Associate's degree in Health Sciences.

Offered by SFSC, Collegiate High School allows well-prepared high school juniors or seniors to attend college classes full-time. Students complete at least 30 credit hours of college coursework and then apply those to the college or university that they attend for their bachelor's degree.

Students like Taylor have to think ahead as their two years of foreign language, English, Algebra I, Geometry, Biology I, Earth Space Science, Human Geography, HOPE and Leadership Techniques courses have to be completed prior to entering Collegiate High School.

Students desiring this advanced track also sign a contract acknowledging the need for academic readiness, social maturity and self-motivation. With five degree-related education tracks, Collegiate High School allows motivated students like Taylor a faster and surprisingly cost-effective way to their future careers. "It is pretty awesome," said Taylor. "I get my books through Sebring High School and the classes are already paid for me." She planned her schedule

Girl who lost legs advises new amputee: her mom

By PAUL GUZZO
TAMPA BAY TIMES

PALM HARBOR (AP) — After the accident, Nicole Nugent knew her mission.

"You're beautiful," she would tell her blue-eyed, curly haired daughter. "You're perfect. You're not different."

Two-year-old Ireland had lost both legs below the knee to an April 2013 lawn mower accident. The Tampa Bay area mourned with the family. But afterward, Nicole was determined to show her daughter a normal life.

Ireland, now 7, has made it look easy, quickly mastering prosthetic legs. Outgoing and confident, she dances, surfs and is a cheerleader for the Palm Harbor Panthers.

"There is nothing you cannot do," Nicole told her.

The future seemed to be manageable. But a little over eight months ago, tragedy visited again. This time, it was Nicole who would need the words of encouragement.

Swim at your own risk, a sign on the beach warned that day.

Nicole was in La Jolla, California, treating Ireland to a day of surfing in October 2016 after visiting a program for physically challenged athletes that offered opportunities to mingle with the competitors.

"It was to show Ireland that she can do anything," said Nicole, a mother of six.

Seals and sea lions often gathered at the spot, tainting the water with waste and bacteria.

Nicole doesn't remember how she got the small cut on her right heel. She was concerned only about Ireland, bundling her in a rash guard and wet suit and ushering her to the shallow waves.

"I never thought to protect myself," Nicole said.

Within days, she was back home and in agony. Her foot and ankle swelled. Doctors diagnosed osteomyelitis, a bone infection likely contracted in the water.

Ten surgeries to clean the infection followed but she remained in terrible pain.

Then in September 2017, Nicole learned the infection was spreading up her leg. If it entered her bloodstream, she could die.

Her right leg had to be amputated below the knee.

"I wasn't worried at all," Nicole said. "I thought, 'I can do this. I know amputation. My whole family knows this.'"

"In reality, I had no idea."

She knew everything from the caregiver's side.

Nicole had been in the pool with the kids one evening in April of 2013 while her husband, Jerry, was out in the yard, cutting the grass.

She was ushering children indoors for baths when she heard the screen door click.

Ireland had slipped out and was running to the front yard.

Nicole followed, waving to her husband to signal that Ireland was behind him. He thought through her helpful guidance counselor and admitted she never really goes to the high school anymore. "I still do sports though and did cheerleading all through high school."

Taylor likes that she is able to finish her classes at SFSC in plenty of time. "I enjoy a shortened school week as I don't have classes on Fridays." The classes are harder though. "You have to pay attention and be responsible, but I like it. They treat you like an adult, not like a little kid."

Rules may be more relaxed than a typical high school experience, but more self-governance is needed. Taylor feels as though the college instructors genuinely care and try to help students too.

"There is less work in general, but it has to be amazing and more quality based. Expectations are much higher and there's less margin for errors," said Taylor.

Even with no time for slacking off, she finds the flexible experience more relaxed. Rules are focused on academics not social issues, and Taylor likes being away from what she referred to as high school drama. "I don't feel like I'm missing out on anything. I'm with like-minded, education-focused students."

Taylor's mother is a Florida Virtual School teacher who learned about the Collegiate High School and knew it would be a good fit for her daughter. "I want to go to medical school so this allows me to fast track and save money. It's like getting two years of college for free," added

Taylor.

Originally she was interested in pursuing plastic surgery so she could travel to other countries and provide care to those with deformities or birth defects. Now Taylor is leaning toward obstetrics and thinking she might want to specialize in Caesarean sections.

Her sister currently attends Florida State University so she's considering completing her prerequisites there, but hasn't decided what college she'd like to go to for her medical degree.

Considering she is still a teenager, her razor-sharp focus and determination are quite remarkable. In some ways however, Taylor feels like this is easier. "In regular school I felt like we completed so much busy work. I prefer to learn this way. It feels like I'm accomplishing something that will actually help me in the long run."

Starting classes at a later time of day and finishing earlier is also a plus for this busy young woman who provides her own transportation to the college.

In addition to her intensive educational experience, Taylor also works at a local preschool and her father's construction company office. For fun, she cheers with Edge All Stars and competes with Sebring High School's Competition Cheer Team. Cheering since age five, she has 12 years of cheer competition under her belt and recently returned from the D2 Summit in Orlando, which is a really big deal. Held at Disney's Wide World of Sports, she was quite excited for the opportunity.

"Everyone's different," said Taylor. "I like learning this way. For me

Women pilots from WWII return to Texas to celebrate flights

By RONALD W. ERDRICH
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SWEETWATER, Texas — Seventy-five years ago, Nell Bright stepped onto Avenger Field from Canyon, ready to serve.

The Abilene Reporter-News reports a newly-minted pilot at 21 years old, she had joined the WASPs, or Women Airforce Service Pilots, which had just been relocated to Sweetwater.

“Of course, since I was from West Texas, it was no big shock to me to find the dirt and the wind blowing, and for it to be hot,” she said, chuckling.

WASPs came from across the country. There were 1,102 of them who served during World War II, including those coming from more temperate climates.

“They were kind of in a state of shock when they saw what they were getting into,” Bright said of her classmates. “They were used to flying back east in the green hills, and no wind.

“They had to learn how to make crosswind landings. Those of us who trained in West Texas, we thought that was the only kind of landing you could make.”

The school would teach the women how to fly a handful of the U.S. Army’s aircraft. Eventually, WASPs would go on to fly every airplane in the Army’s inventory and cumulatively log close to 60 million miles during the war.

To put it into perspective, that’s about 125 trips to the moon and back.

WASPs didn’t fly combat missions and on paper they weren’t officially active-duty members of the military, serving in a civil service capacity similar to the merchant marines. But the missions they flew contained their own amount of risk and 38 WASPs lost their lives in the line of duty.

WASPs ferried aircraft across the country, or tested repaired aircraft to ensure those planes were ready for duty. Some, like Bright, flew the B-25 and B-26 bombers.

“I was sent to B-25 transition school after we got our wings, there were 20 out of our class,” she recalled. “It was just a wonderful airplane to fly, it was very dependable.”

The WASPs recently held its annual homecoming at Avenger Field. Two years ago, there were 105 WASPs still living. Now, no more than 54 remain.

Carol Cain, vice president of the National WASP World War II Museum, said the average age of the survivors is 96 to 105. On May 26, five of them, including Bright, returned to Sweetwater.

“The WASPs moved the training school from Houston to Sweetwater 75 years ago,” Cain said. “They only trained here from 1943-44. Our museum celebrates the WASPs who graduated from here.”

After World War II, the women were sent home and discouraged from talking about their service. Most went on to what they believed were normal lives and nobody ever knew women had flown high-performance military aircraft during the war.

It wasn’t until the 1970s, when women began to enter U.S. military academies to become pilots in the U.S. Navy and the U.S. Air Force, that the public learned more.

Headlines touting “First women pilots to fly military airplanes” sparked a movement to set the record straight — women had flown those aircraft 30 years earlier.

WASP records were unsealed, their history was revealed and their role has been celebrated ever since. A staple of the annual homecoming are the women military pilots who visit from bases around the country to meet the women who flew those planes first.

“We were very lucky, the ones who got to B-25 transition school,” Bright recalled. “Ten of us were sent to a tow-target squadron at Fort Bliss in El Paso to train the anti-aircraft boys in ground-to-air.”

The job required them to tow a target 50 feet behind their airplanes, hoping those on the ground knew what they should be shooting at.

“We towed targets in the B-26 and the B-25,” Bright said. “Of course, they shot real bullets at them.”

Her plane never took a big hit; but sometimes she’d find a bullet hole in a tail or on a wing.

“One night we were towing targets in a B-25, and they were supposed to get the target in the searchlights,” she recalled. The idea was one crew on the ground would spotlight the target with the bright beams while another crew would fire on the target once it was illuminated.

“They got our plane in the search lights instead,” Bright said. “But fortunately, they weren’t very good shots!”

She shook her head, chuckling.

“The flak started bursting in front of us, we took some evasive action, got out of the way and then just radioed and told him we were going back to base,” she said. “They couldn’t shoot well enough.”

She laughed again at the memory.

“So, that was fun.”

Bright left the WASPs when they were deactivated in 1944. She had no regrets, she had done her duty, and more.

“I enjoyed every minute of it,” she said.

apply to the Take Stock in Children program,” she said.

“So, I took the information home, and my mom said, ‘Why not give it a shot?’”

Take Stock in Children is a statewide program that provides children with a mentor and a two-plus-two college scholarship—two years at a state or community college and two years at a state university in Florida. The Take Stock staff also help the student obtain financial assistance for housing, transportation, and other such expenses. In return, the student signs a contract to earn at least a grade of C in every class, graduate from high school with good attendance records, maintain good behavior in school, and have no involvement with law enforcement or drugs. The SFSC Foundation serves as the lead agency for Take Stock in its service area of DeSoto, Hardee, and Highlands counties.

“On the application for Take Stock, the student is asked to relate what they foresee as a career after graduating from college,” Rivera said. “They want you to start thinking about your career plan. Then, they’re able to set you up with a mentor who will encourage you.”

Because of Rivera’s stated interest in nursing, Dolores Champion, a SFSC professor of nursing at that time, was assigned as her mentor. “Ms. Champion would meet with me during my lunch hour once a week,” Rivera said. “We’d not only talk about the nursing profession but also about personal things. For instance, she knew when my little nephew was born and how important that was to me. So, we’d talk about that.”

In 2010, Rivera graduated from Avon Park High School with higher than a 4.0 GPA and went on to her nursing studies at SFSC. “I planned my nursing career out completely along the way,” she said.

Now deeply entrenched in her profession, Rivera is transitioning from registered nurse to nurse practitioner. One of the differences she noted was her schedule. “I’m used to working three 12-hour shifts a week. As a nurse practitioner, my schedule will be Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.”

Rivera indicated that as a nurse practitioner she can diagnose patients and prescribe medications. “My passion in nursing is educating patients about their disease process, treatment plans, and prevention of certain illnesses,” she said.

Rivera has recently been working in the Critical Care Step-Down Unit, which is for patients who are one step away from Intensive Care Unit status. “We see patients who’ve had heart attacks, congestive heart failure, stroke, and pneumonia,” she said. “Anyone who has an underlying heart condition goes to that unit.”

In her current position, she said that she enjoys the teaching aspect as well. “I like teaching patients about various aspects of congestive heart failure,” she said. “We provide our patients with daily pearls, things they should do every day to manage their condition. I like educating them on prevention strategies to keep them out of the hospital. Some of the educating we do at the hospital, I’ll be able to do in my future role.”

“Ultimately, cardiology is my true passion,” she said. “But I need to get a solid foundation in primary care first. Primary care deals with care of the whole person.”

But Take Stock has followed

Rivera throughout her academic life, and she knew that Irene Castanon, director of the district Take Stock program, would always be a sounding board. “If I ever had questions about anything, I knew I could go to Ms. Castanon. I value her as a friend and someone who helped me along the way. In fact, when I got married, I emailed her about it. I’ve also told her about the bad stuff—when Hurricane Irma came and damaged our apartment.”

Although Rivera hasn’t yet become a Take Stock mentor, she has been available to speak to mentors and students at recent events.

“The first presentation I made was at the annual Mentor Appreciation Dinner in which I told the story of my Take Stock experience,” she said. “That speech was focused on the mentors, and I explained the difference they make to each Take Stock scholar. Not only does the Take Stock program provide emotional support and feel like a family, but mentors mold the scholars. For instance, when Ms. Champion came to see me, she was shaping me to become a nurse. She explained the positives and negatives of the nursing profession and illustrated the realities. It was helpful to hear from someone who’d been there.”

Another event Rivera spoke at was a financial aid workshop. “I addressed the high school students and discussed how Take Stock takes many financial concerns away, freeing the students to focus on their education and pursue a passion.”

Rivera offers this advice to high school students who may be undecided about their future. “If you can’t decide on a career while in high school, the best way to determine what sparks your interest is by trying things. I have a cousin who’s four years younger than I am, and she was undecided. So, she started working toward an associate degree. Use your elective courses wisely. And you can always volunteer to see if you’re going to like a particular course of study.”

As encouragement to nursing students, Rivera said, “Always remember the excitement and passion you felt as a new graduate, don’t forget what lit a fire in you, and never lose sight of why you wanted to be a nurse.”

To learn more about Take Stock in Children or to volunteer as a mentor, contact Castanon at 863-784-7343.

his wife was warning him about something in his path, so he put the riding mower in reverse. That should have triggered a safety mechanism to stop the blades, but the mower had come from Craigslist. A prior owner had disabled the device.

“Who would think to check that?” Nicole said.

It was an oversight the Nugents would never be allowed to forget, one they now share freely with other parents as a warning.

Neighbors heard the screams.

The buzzing sound of yard equipment still traumatizes Nicole. They had an attorney get rid of the mower. Getting rid of the regret was more difficult.

“I always thought this would get easier, her accident, in my mind,” she said. “I always thought over time it would diminish. It is still just as raw for me as it was five years ago.”

She wears a tattoo on her left forearm, a lifelong apology to Ireland.

I am sorry I couldn’t get to you.

It was Nicole who held her family together in those months immediately following the accident, when Jerry was riddled with guilt.

Over time, their roles reversed.

Her Navy veteran husband relied on military discipline to find the strength to lead the family. When Nicole’s sore foot turned into a devastating disability, there was Jerry, taking on more responsibility.

A mechanic at the Pinellas County Courthouse, he worked an overnight shift for a few months so he could tend to Nicole during the day. He would come home, nap and then get the kids ready for school.

“You don’t have any control over things like this,” said Jerry, 53, “but we can control how we deal.”

Nicole had dark days, but she knew she would use her experience in the water to educate others, just as she had done with Ireland’s accident.

“You think lightning won’t strike,” she said. “It struck my family twice.

“But if any family can overcome this, it’s us.”

Ireland received her prosthetics just two months after losing her legs.

Nicole would have to wait much longer, as her leg healed.

The house could already accommodate her wheelchair. Following Ireland’s accident, the doorways had been widened and ramps installed.

The Nugents had already tapped into an online support group for families of lawn mower accident victims. It wasn’t hard for Nicole to find advice. But getting by on one leg wore on her.

While Ireland could scurry up a bunk bed ladder on her knees, Nicole initially struggled to complete simple chores.

“I hate relying on people,” she said. “I am used to doing my own thing and being in charge and running the house.”

Friends and family drove her places. Her husband helped with bathing. He also stepped into her role as “super mom” by taking on the bulk of the cooking, cleaning and taxiing the kids to activities.

Along with her thoughts, she could not escape the reality that her leg was gone for good.

“This is never going to end,” she would remind herself.

She put on a smile and tried to say the right things.

But she hid the stub with clothing. Her oldest daughter, 16-year-old Italia, noticed and told her she would need to accept her situation, and Nicole knew it was true. She was an adult. Ireland had accepted this at 2.

If Nicole let on to Ireland that she felt ashamed, what kind of message would that send?

Nicole, 37, recalled the inspiring things she told Ireland over the years.

When she said them, she believed them. Yet she struggled to find the same amount of hope for herself.

“I was surprised with the amount of depression I felt,” she said. “I didn’t see a light at the end of the tunnel.”

Over time, Nicole has become adept at getting out of the tub on one leg. She’s back to cooking and washing dishes.

Still, she said, there are times she feels like a burden.

“I feel like I am another person, a problem to deal with.”

Cheerleading takes a special type of confidence. There is no hiding, no blending in. Cheerleaders stand in front of a crowd and through their routines scream out, “Look at me.”

Ireland does it with joy on her face. In addition to dancing with the others, while wearing prosthetics, she serves as a backspot with outstretched hands to lend support to the stunt performers above her.

When it comes to surfing, she can kneel on the board but expects one day to stand.

“She has taken life by the horns and just goes,” Nicole said. “She doesn’t feel like anything can stop her.”

For weeks, Ireland has been excited about the prospect of teaching her mother to walk.

The girl’s plan was to have Nicole lean up from the wheelchair on her good leg and do laps around the dining room table on her prosthetic, with the table to keep her steady.

In her innocence, Ireland views the loss of her mom’s leg as the gaining of a prosthetic partner.

“Once she gets the hang of it,” Ireland said, sounding chipper, “she’ll graduate.”

Nicole had never understood the tantrums that Ireland threw each time the growing girl had to be fitted for updated prosthetics.

“Everything hurts,” Ireland would say.

“Everything cannot hurt,” Nicole would respond.

Nicole’s prosthetic debuted in mid-May and settled the debate. Everything hurt, at least in the beginning.

There were three days of adjustments at Prosthetic & Orthotic Associates in Orlando, as Nicole tried to pinpoint the spots where the prosthetic bothered her stub. Once the prosthetic was adjusted, the pain would pop up somewhere else.

“I started crying,” she said, “thinking it was never going to happen for me.”

But she came home with the prosthetic on May 18.

Ireland lived up to her promise. As her mother practiced walking around the dining room table, Ireland coached.

“She keeps telling me to bend my knees more,” Nicole said.

One day earlier in the spring, the two were at a swimming pool, when Ireland had an idea.

“She wanted to jump in together,” Nicole said.

Nicole had not been swimming since her amputation. Ireland was recovering from surgery for bone spurs. Both were in wheelchairs.

But the woman who taught her daughter that all things are possible could not argue.

They wheeled to the edge of the pool and held hands, then leaned forward and plunged in.

SINGAPORE — President Donald Trump and North Korea's Kim Jong Un kicked off a momentous summit Tuesday, with Trump declaring the two would have a "great discussion" and Kim saying they had overcome "obstacles" to get to this point.

Before a row of alternating U.S. and North Korean flags, the leaders shook hands warmly at a Singapore island resort, creating an indelible image of two unorthodox leaders as they opened a conversation that could determine historic peace or raise the specter of a growing nuclear threat.

Trump and Kim planned to meet one on one for most of an hour — joined only by interpreters. Then aides to each were to join for more discussions and a working lunch. But even before they met, Trump announced plans to leave early, raising questions about whether his aspirations for an ambitious outcome had been scaled back.

US launches bid to find citizenship cheaters

By AMY TAXIN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — The U.S. government agency that oversees immigration applications is launching an office that will focus on identifying Americans who are suspected of cheating to get their citizenship and seek to strip them of it.

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services Director L. Francis Cissna told The Associated Press in an interview that his agency is hiring several dozen lawyers and immigration officers to review cases of immigrants who were ordered deported and are suspected of using fake identities to later get green cards and citizenship through naturalization.

Cissna said the cases would be referred to the Department of Justice, whose attorneys could then seek to remove the immigrants' citizenship in civil court proceedings. In some cases, government attorneys could bring criminal charges related to fraud.

Until now, the agency has pursued cases as they arose but not through a coordinated effort, Cissna said. He said he hopes the agency's new office in Los Angeles will be running by next year but added that investigating and referring cases for prosecution will likely take longer.

Poll: Americans want more of what journalists want to report

By DAVID BAUDER
AP MEDIA WRITER

NEW YORK — There's substantial agreement on what Americans want from the news media and what journalists want to report, according to a pair of studies that also reveal a troubling caveat: a nagging feeling among both the ideal isn't being met.

Public suspicion about journalism is also fueled by some basic misunderstandings on how the process works, particularly in an era of rapid change, according to the twin surveys of the American public and journalists released Monday by the Media Insight Project. The effort is a collaboration between The Associated Press-NORC Center for Public Affairs Research and the American Press Institute.

The close look at attitudes comes in the midst of President Donald Trump's relentless attacks on the news media and the continued downsizing of the economically beleaguered newspaper industry. It has left journalists beaten down: The surveys found about 3 in 4 journalists believe the public's level of trust in the news media has decreased in the past year. Yet only 44 percent of American adults actually say their level of trust has decreased.

The public actually wants what most journalists say they want to give them — news stories that are factual and offer context and analysis, said Tom Rosenstiel, executive director of the American Press Institute. But the public doesn't feel like they're seeing enough of that work, with 42 percent of Americans saying journalists stray too far into commentary, according to the new research.

That's one reason that Anna Retana, a mother of five from Enumclaw, Washington, said that she's cut back on her news consumption.

Gov. Scott calls lapse in background checks disturbing

By GARY FINEOUT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

TALLAHASSEE — Florida Gov. Rick Scott on Monday questioned how the state office under fellow Republican Adam Putnam went more than a year without completing background checks used to determine if someone could get a concealed-weapons permit. Scott's criticism came at the same time that Democratic legislators formally requested that GOP leaders in the House and Senate initiate investigations into the lapse that ultimately led the state to revoke permits from 291 people.

"It's disturbing," Scott told reporters after a campaign event in Tampa. "We all expect our government to do their job. What I've read so far is very concerning." Putnam, the state's agriculture commissioner who is now running for governor, oversees the office responsible for processing and handing out concealed-weapons permits in the state.

Florida does not allow the open carry of weapons, but more than 1.9 million residents have permits to carry guns and weapons if they are concealed.

An inspector general's report released in June 2017 — but not widely known about until last week — showed that an employee in Putnam's office failed to review applications through a national database for more than a year because she couldn't log into the system. The employee was ultimately fired and the state then revoked permits it determined had been issued to people who were ineligible for them.

Officials say the state did conduct criminal background checks, however, and last Saturday Putnam insisted that "no one's safety was put at risk." He said the fired employee's job was to review applications flagged by the national database. Putnam said he has made changes in the department to ensure it won't happen again.

"This was a very serious issue. We took immediate action," Putnam said.

Putnam called news media coverage of the lapse misleading. He said he initiated the inspector general's report that resulted in the employee's firing.

That is not clear in the inspector general's report, however.

Supreme Court allows Ohio, other state voter purges

By MARK SHERMAN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — States can target people who haven't cast ballots in a while in efforts to purge their voting rolls, the Supreme Court ruled Monday in a case that has drawn wide attention amid stark partisan divisions and the approach of the 2018 elections.

By a 5-4 vote that split the conservative and liberal justices, the court rejected arguments in a case from Ohio that the practice violates a federal law intended to increase the ranks of registered voters. A handful of other states also use voters' inactivity to trigger processes that could lead to their removal from the voting rolls.

Justice Samuel Alito said for the court that Ohio is complying with the 1993 National Voter Registration Act. He was joined by his four conservative colleagues in an opinion that drew praise from Republican officials and conservative scholars.

The four liberal justices dissented, and civil rights groups and some Democrats warned that more Republican-led states could enact voter purges similar to Ohio's.

Ohio is of particular interest nationally because it is one of the larger swing states in the country with the potential to determine the outcome of presidential elections. But partisan fights over ballot access are playing out across the country. Democrats have accused Republicans of trying to suppress votes from minorities and poorer people who tend to vote for Democrats. Republicans have argued that they are trying to promote ballot integrity and prevent voter fraud.

Ohio's contested voter purge stems from an inoffensive requirement in federal law that states have to make an effort to keep their voter rolls in good shape by removing people who have moved or died.

But Ohio pursues its goal more aggressively than most, relying on two things: voter inactivity over six years encompassing three federal elections and the failure to return a card, sent after the first missed election, asking people to confirm that they have not moved and continue to be eligible to vote.

Voters who return the card or show up to vote over the next four years after they receive it remain registered. If they do nothing, their names eventually fall off the list of registered voters.

The case hinged on a provision of the voter registration law that prohibits removing someone from the voting rolls "by reason of the person's failure to vote."

Alito said that the two factors show that Ohio "does not strike any registrant solely by reason of the failure to vote."

Justice Stephen Breyer, countered in his dissent: "In my view, Ohio's program does just that." Breyer said many people received mailings that they discard without looking at them. Failure to return the notice "shows nothing at all that is statutorily significant," he wrote.

Italy: EU faces turning point in migrant boat standoff

By NICOLE WINFIELD

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROME — Spain stepped up Monday and offered to take in a rescue ship carrying more than 600 migrants after Italy and Malta refused. The diplomatic standoff left the migrants stranded in the Mediterranean Sea and laid bare the brass-knuckled negotiating tactics of Italy's new anti-immigrant government.

The U.N. refugee agency, the European Union, Germany and humanitarian groups had all demanded that Italy and Malta put their domestic politics aside and urgently consider the plight of the 629 migrants, among them more than 120 children, seven pregnant women and people suffering from hypothermia.

Italy quickly thanked Spain's new Socialist prime minister for the offer to receive aid group SOS Mediterraneo's ship at the port of Valencia and announced that it had forced a turning point in Europe's migrant crisis.

But politics aside, it wasn't certain if the voyage to Spain was feasible given how far that was from the ship's current location and how long the rescue vessel had been at sea. The Aquarius on Monday was more than 1,400 kilometers (over 750 nautical miles) from Valencia and by late Monday said it hadn't received any instructions yet to head to Spain.

"It means that we need at least two more days of sailing, which is not possible today with 629 people on board," SOS Mediterraneo Maritime Operations Manager Antoine Laurent said. "The situation is stable but it cannot run" forever.

Doctors Without Borders, which has staff aboard the Aquarius, said the rescued migrants were stable for now but that food and water on the ship would run out by Monday night. It said some passengers had seawater in their lungs as well as chemical burns caused when gasoline mixes with seawater.

Late Monday, Malta sent a motorboat with food and water to resupply the migrant ship.

Tiny ancient Quran on display in Israel for Ramadan

By CARON CREIGHTON

JERUSALEM — A 10th-century Quran, unique in size and style, has gone on display for the first time as part of a collection of Islamic texts being shown at Israel's National Library to mark the Muslim holy month of Ramadan.

The 16 texts, all from the 10th- through 18th-centuries, are shown in a small room, with an entrance decorated by ornate flowers that resemble the manuscripts in the showcase.

"We have opened a small, yet powerful exhibition of beautiful, rare Islamic manuscripts that tell the story of Islamic culture across a thousand years," curator Raquel Ukeles said of the exhibit this week, called "Select Pearls from the Islam Collection."

"Here in Israel, where Jewish culture is the majority culture, the minority cultures often don't get enough airtime or space, and so one of the roles of the National Library, with its flagship Islam collection, is to draw attention and broaden awareness, and to make space in Israeli social and cultural consciousness to the culture of Islam," she said.

Featured in the showcase is an exceptionally small and fragile Quran from the 10th century, only 2.5 inches by 1.5 inches, which is on public display for the first time.

While the library has a collection of 1,800 Islamic manuscripts, this is the first such exhibit for all of Ramadan, Ukeles said.

Peace talks between Russia, Ukraine get underway in Berlin

BERLIN (AP) — The foreign ministers of Ukraine, Russia, France and Germany met in Berlin Monday for talks on bringing an end to the fighting between Ukrainian troops and Russia-backed separatists in eastern Ukraine.

The focus of the meeting was implementing an unfulfilled peace accord reached in the Belarus capital of Minsk in 2015 and the possibility of bringing United Nations peacekeepers to the region where an armed conflict has killed more than 10,000 people since 2014.

The talks in Germany's capital were the first of the so-called "Normandy" group in more than a year. They brought Ukrainian Foreign Minister Pavlo Klimkin and Russian Foreign Minister Sergey Lavrov together at a German Foreign Ministry villa along with French Foreign Minister Jean-Yves Le Drian and German Foreign Minister Heiko Maas.

Heading into the meetings, Maas said he hoped they would provide new impetus toward a possible U.N. mission in eastern Ukraine.

UN approves EU ships seizing illegal arms off Libya

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The U.N. Security Council has voted unanimously to authorize the European Union's maritime force to enforce an arms embargo on the high seas off the coast of Libya for another year.

The British-drafted resolution adopted Monday authorizes EU ships in Operation Sophia to stop vessels on the high seas off Libya's coast suspected of smuggling weapons in violation of a U.N. arms embargo.

Operation Sophia is also charged with seizing migrant-smuggling vessels. Secretary-General Antonio Guterres' latest report on implementation of the embargo said the only inspection resulting in the seizure of banned weapons took place on June 19, 2017, on the motor vessel El-Mukhtar.

Heavy fighting on Yemen's west coast kills hundreds SANAA, Yemen (AP) — Heavy fighting in Yemen between pro-government forces and Shiite rebels has killed more than 600 people on both sides in recent days, security officials said Monday.

Government forces, backed by a Saudi-led coalition, have been advancing along the western coast in recent weeks as they battle the Iran-allied rebels, known as Houthis. The fighting has escalated as government forces close in on the Red Sea port of Hodeida, a vital lifeline through which most of Yemen's food and medicine enters.

Your internet use could change as 'net neutrality' ends

By MAE ANDERSON
AP TECHNOLOGY WRITER

NEW YORK — Your ability to watch and use your favorite apps and services could start to change — though not right away — following the official demise Monday of Obama-era internet protections. Any changes are likely to happen slowly, as companies assess how much consumers will tolerate. The repeal of “net neutrality” took effect six months after the Federal Communications Commission voted to undo the rules, which had barred broadband and cellphone companies from favoring their own services and discriminating against rivals such as Netflix. Internet providers such as AT&T, Verizon and Comcast had to treat all traffic equally. They couldn't slow down or block websites and apps of their choosing. Nor could they charge Netflix and other video services extra to reach viewers more smoothly. The rules also barred a broadband provider from, say, slowing down Amazon's shopping site to extract business concessions.

Now, all that is legal as long as companies post their policies online. The change comes as broadband and cellphone providers expand their efforts to deliver video and other content to consumers. With net neutrality rules gone, AT&T and Verizon can give priority to their own movies and TV shows, while hurting rivals such as Amazon, YouTube and startups yet to be born. The battle isn't entirely over, though. Some states are moving to restore net neutrality, and lawsuits are pending. Also, the Senate voted to save net neutrality, though that effort isn't likely to become law. For now, broadband providers insist they won't do anything that would harm the “internet experience” for consumers. Most currently have service terms that specify they won't give preferential treatment to certain websites and services, including their own. However, companies are likely to drop these self-imposed restrictions; they will just wait until people aren't paying a lot of attention, said Marc Martin, a former FCC staffer who is now chairman of communications practice at the law firm Perkins Coie. Any changes now, while the spotlight is on net neutrality, could lead to a public relations backlash. Companies are likely to start testing the boundaries over the next six months to a year. Expect to see more offers like AT&T's exemption of its DirecTV Now streaming TV service from customers' mobile data limits. Rival services like Sling TV and Netflix count video against data caps, essentially making them more expensive to watch. Although the FCC issued a report in January 2017 saying such arrangements, known as “zero rating,” are probably anti-consumer, the agency did not require companies to change their practices right away. After President Donald Trump appointed a new chairman to the FCC, the agency reversed its stance on zero rating and proceeded to kill net neutrality. Critics of net neutrality, including the Trump administration, say such rules impeded companies' ability to adapt to a quickly evolving internet.

Stock markets rise slightly ahead of Trump-Kim meeting

By KEN SWEET
AP BUSINESS WRITER

NEW YORK — U.S. and global markets rose modestly on Monday, as investors made preparations for President Donald Trump's meeting with North Korean leader Kim Jong Un in Singapore. European investors also focused on Italy's new government, and its future using the euro. The Dow Jones industrial average rose 5.78 points, or less than 0.1 percent, to 25,322.31. The Standard & Poor's 500 index rose 2.97 points, or 0.1 percent, to 2,782.00 and the Nasdaq composite rose 14.41 points, or 0.2 percent, to 7,659.93. Investors spent most of Monday waiting for Tuesday's meeting between Trump and Kim, aimed at settling a standoff over the North's nuclear arsenal. North Korea has reportedly said it is willing to deal away its entire nuclear arsenal if the United States provides it with reliable security assurances and other benefits. But many say Kim's government is unlikely to give up weapons that help guarantee its survival. If successful, the meeting would lower geopolitical tensions in an area that involves three of the world's largest economies: South Korea, Japan and China. “There's a lot of potential volatility that could come this week: we have the Trump-Kim summit and the central bank meetings,” said Ryan Larson, head of U.S. equity trading at RBC Capital Markets. “A lot of the tone for this week will be set out in Trump's meeting with Kim.”

Judge spars with Justice Dept lawyer on foreign favors suit

GREENBELT, Md. (AP) — Lawyers for Maryland and the District of Columbia accused President Donald Trump in federal court Monday of “profiting on an unprecedented scale” from foreign government interests using his Washington, D.C., hotel, but a Justice Department lawyer insisted Trump isn't breaking the law because he provided no favors in return. At issue is the Constitution's “emoluments” clause, which bans federal officials from accepting benefits from foreign or state governments without congressional approval. The plaintiffs argue Trump's D.C. hotel, which has become a magnet for foreign governments, harms area businesses because of the president's financial ties to its operations. No previous case on the subject has made it this far. “This is the first oral arguments focused on the meaning of the emoluments clause in American judicial history,” said Norman Eisen, chairman of the left-leaning Citizens for Ethics and Responsibility in Washington, which is co-counsel with the two jurisdictions. U.S. District Judge Peter Messitte peppered lawyers for both sides over their arguments Monday, and had a particularly pointed exchange over Justice Department lawyer Brett Shumate's view that emoluments required a clear, provable “quid pro quo” — an exchange for an official action. “Wouldn't that be bribery?” Messitte countered. “Another clause in the Constitution makes bribery a basis for impeachment. Are you saying that Congress could consent to bribery?”

Hawaii volcano unleashes more small blasts, snaking lava

HONOLULU (AP) — Small explosions at the summit of an erupting Hawaii volcano could send ash into communities. Scientists say the blasts happened Monday, including one after a magnitude-5.4 earthquake. Ash expelled from the Kilauea volcano may cause poor visibility and slippery conditions for drivers. The Big Island volcano has been erupting for more than a month, sending lava into neighborhoods from cracks in the ground and destroying hundreds of homes. A river of molten rock is flowing toward a community that got wiped out last week. A fissure is shooting fountains of lava into the air, which is flowing to the ocean. Gas emissions from the vent have doubled. Scientists warn against venturing too close to lava hitting water, saying it could expose people to dangers from flying debris. New Jersey governor signs bill allowing sports betting ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — New Jersey's governor signed a law legalizing sports betting on Monday, three weeks after winning a U.S. Supreme Court case paving the way for all 50 states to allow an activity that has long thrived in the shadows of organized crime and shady offshore operators. Gov. Phil Murphy, a Democrat, signed the bill that was passed unanimously last week by the state Legislature allowing casinos and racetracks to offer sports betting in a taxed, regulated setting.

Do statin drugs completely deplete the body of CoQ10?

DEAR DR. ROACH: I am writing to inquire about the effects of statins on the body. My husband is a 66-year-old diabetic taking metformin and atorvastatin. A highly respected chemist friend told us that the statin drugs completely deplete the body of CoQ10, and recommended blood testing of the lipid particle size before beginning any statins. Is there any evidence that shows that this depletion is factual? If so, would taking a CoQ10 supplement help? Should my husband begin taking this, or does he need to consult with his doctor first? Do you know if the PSA (particle size assessment) blood test is covered by Medicare? — Anon.

Dr. Roach

It isn't clear that CoQ10 supplementation works to prevent or treat muscle side effects. I don't recommend it in people who have no trouble taking statins. I have had patients who used it for muscle aches associated with taking a statin, sometimes with success, but it isn't clear whether this is a placebo response. Since CoQ10 is safe, it's not unreasonable to try it. Pravastatin and Fluvastatin do not use the same pathway for metabolism and do not deplete CoQ10; they are not as potent at lowering cholesterol as atorvastatin.

Your second question is about particle size. There is fair evidence that smaller LDL particles are worse in terms of causing damage to blood vessels. If someone had an unusual proportion of small LDL, it would make sense to treat him or her at lower levels of cholesterol than would otherwise be recommended, or possibly to use a more-intensive treatment. However, in practice, the number of people whose recommendations would change by knowing their particle size is relatively few.

In your husband's case, being 66 and diabetic, being on a statin is very likely to have more benefit than harm in almost all levels of cholesterol, so I don't see the indication, in his particular case, to get an LDL particle size test. It is reasonable in someone for whom a clinician is undecided about whether to give a statin.

In these cases, I also consider family history and the use of HS-CRP, another marker that predicts coronary risk independent of cholesterol.

I do not believe the test is covered by Medicare.

DEAR DR. ROACH: When someone gets an arm or leg amputated, how does the blood that goes into where the arm/leg was, get back into circulation? Why don't the blood vessels/arteries swell up with blood, since they are no longer connected to the "loop" that brings the blood back to the heart? — A.W.

ANSWER: After an amputation, or when an organ is removed, the artery supplying blood to that area is tied off by the surgeon, who has to be sure there is enough blood flow to the area to allow it to heal. The body is adaptable, and veins will adapt themselves to new needs of that part of the body.

Medical students spend a lot of time learning about how well the body works and how many ways it can fail. Still, it is an amazing system, and we shouldn't lose the ability to wonder at how magnificently it works, most of the time, under an incredible amount of stress.

Dad's rocky relationship makes life a bumpy ride

DEAR ABBY: I'm turning 17 and live with my dad and his girlfriend. They have broken up four times, causing my dad and me to retreat to the basement where we live the happy life we did before he met her.

Dear Abby

When they first started dating, she was very nice, and I liked her. However, because my mom is gone, she decided to assume the role of "mother" after they moved in together.

Dad has told me that he doesn't want to continue a relationship with her, but she always manipulates him into getting back together.

I know I'm not responsible for this situation, but she makes me feel that way. What should I do? — Teen In Turmoil

DEAR TEEN: Talk with your father about how you are being made to feel. That he and this woman have broken up four times should have given him a clue that his relationship with her isn't a healthy one — for him or for you. Your father is the adult in the family, and it is up to him to deal with this — not you.

DEAR ABBY: I have been having boundary issues with my neighbors and their children. They are hands-off, free-range parents. I keep an eye on my daughter.

Problem is, every time I take my daughter outside their children immediately run over to play with her. I'm seven months pregnant, I do not want to be the neighborhood baby sitter!

I'd like to enjoy the nice weather alone with my daughter once in a while. She loves playing with them, but they just want to play with her toys — not her — and it almost always ends up with her in tears. What can I do? — Tears In Connecticut

DEAR TEARS: Explain you would like to spend time outdoors with your girl, and you are not prepared to watch their children. You should also mention that when their children run over to play, it's not with your daughter but with her toys.

Stay safe on social media

Dear Readers: There's concern about PRIVACY ON THE INTERNET; here are some hints that can help you stay safe on social media sites:

Hints from Heloise

* Allow access to your social media pages only to people you know.

* Don't list your complete date of birth, physical and/or email address or phone number. This information could be used to steal your identity.

* Be careful with pictures you post. Think of everyone who could see them.

* Make sure you must approve a post you are "tagged in" before it goes on your social media page.

* Change your password often. All of these hints can be taken care of in the "Settings" section of a social media website. Staying safe online is your job. — Heloise

HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Many scientists believe that in human evolution, the ability to communicate musically came before the ability to use complex speech. Today's balm and pleasure will be a piece of music that seems to take you to a primal place.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Someone has disappointed you. You may relegate this person to a lower status in your mind and heart and offer up less attention than you would have before. Maybe it's what you need to do to heal. But is it a just punishment?

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). The day will roll out on wheels of complex beliefs and tendencies. The spiritual part of you will be looking to science for a guide to reality, and the scientific part of you will turn to the spiritual for meaning.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You're drawn to the same thing as others. Among them will be kindred spirits. You'll only know that if you open up, start shaking hands, talking and asking questions.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). That thing you once thought was disastrous is now a rather trivial matter, or maybe even a fond story. You might find this comforting, as something that's really bugging you now won't seem so big tomorrow.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Something you thought you needed to do never got done at all, and the consequences have been largely unnoticeable. Decide today if such things really matter to you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Slow things down so that you can deliberately pay attention to your sensory experience of them. Otherwise, the fun will be like a short and expensive carnival ride instead of like a day at the fair.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You can identify what a feeling is without attaching your identity to it. You can accept a feeling without acting on it. You can feel a feeling instead of fighting it. These are all power moves.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You get to choose how you engage with the world, which includes the choice not to engage, too. To push pause in the face of stimuli coming from all directions — this is a kind of freedom.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). There's a point at which altruism becomes excessive altruism. Altruism involves giving what you have to give, not giving until it puts you in a precarious and needy position.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Ideally, spiritual seeking will connect you with a power source that is already inside you. Beware of those who would rather have you believe that the power can only be accessed through the shelter of their particular group.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Even though you think you understand what's going on, talk to all people involved anyway and you'll learn more. You'll find out what each party wants so you can broker a plan that will allow you to work happily together.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (June 12). You'll admit what you don't know and as a result become educated to such an impressive level you'll be emulated. Consider teaching for a price, as people will pay high dollar to be your student. Family unites when you take the high road often in 2019. Invest fully in matters of love. Happiness is wholehearted commitment. Libra and Taurus adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 8, 40, 3, 33 and 18.

The bidding:
WEST NORTH EAST SOUTH
INT 5♦ Dbl All pass

Opening lead: Three of ♥ Today's deal is from a top-level team competition. West's decision to open a 15-17 one no trump with his hand can only be called remarkable. To say the least, it wouldn't be everyone's choice. North bid five diamonds and played it there doubled, losing one trick in each red suit to make his contract.

At the other table, where West opened a more traditional one spade, North was Geoff Hampson.

Hampson is a Canadian who relocated to the USA many years ago, winning two world championships representing the USA.

Hampson bid two no trump over one spade, showing at least 5-5 in the minors, and had to decide what to do when East bid four spades. He was willing to gamble out a slam, but he wanted his partner to pick the suit. To help partner pick the correct suit, Hampson wanted to make a bid that would emphasize his diamonds. A bid of five no trump would suggest equal strength and length in the minors. A bid of six clubs would be correctable to six diamonds, but would emphasize his clubs. Hampson made the brilliant bid of five spades, hoping that his partner would read that as forcing to slam with better diamonds. He showed great confidence that his partner would pick up on this inference when he passed six clubs.

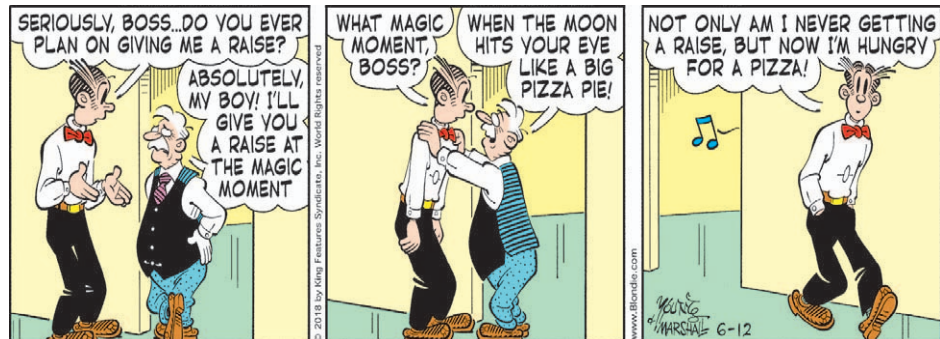

There was nothing to the play. Playing in clubs allowed South to ruff out the queen of diamonds and bring home his slam. All of Hampson's bidding choices would have resulted in the same contract on this deal, but we admire his bid.

Republicans reluctant to criticize Trump

By LISA MASCARO
AP CONGRESSIONAL
CORRESPONDENT

WASHINGTON — Republicans in Congress are often hesitant to publicly criticize President Donald Trump, even when they have strong disagreements. And the reaction after his outbursts over the Group of Seven summit was not much different.

Trump badmouthed the prime minister of Canada. Abandoned a joint statement with longtime trading partners. And soured relations with top U.S. allies in one of the most startling outbursts ever, at the typically diplomatic G-7 summit.

Yet Republican leadership in Congress said little. Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell declined public comment, as did House Speaker Paul Ryan. In fact, only a few Republicans said anything at all.

"There's just some movies you don't want to see again," said Sen. Pat Roberts, R-Kan. "It was what it was."

Sen. Mike Rounds, R-S.D., said he wanted to know what provoked Trump, saying the president doesn't usually attack first, but is more of a counter-puncher. Still, he doesn't like "that kind of language any time."

"It's better if we keep those kinds of comments and those arguments with friends, in private," said Rounds.

That left the heavy mop-up mostly to those who are retiring from Congress. Sen. Jeff Flake, R-Ariz., was among those willing to speak his mind, and the ailing Sen. John McCain has rarely been one to shy from a fight.

Some Republicans say it's protocol not to criticize the commander in chief while he's traveling abroad — especially now, as Trump begins the historic summit with North Korean leader Kim Jong Un in Singapore.

Others remain fearful of provoking Trump, worried they will become the subject of his presidential tweets. Many have said their overall strategy in dealing with the White House is to steer the administration toward shared goals.

But they are also coming to realize that on the trade issues that set Trump off at the G-7 — and led to his specific attack against Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau over his country's steep dairy tariffs — they might have irreconcilable differences with the Republican Party leader.

Sen. Lindsey Graham, R-S.C., said Trump won the presidency by tapping into a protectionist strain that's increasingly popular in America, and around the globe, and it's calling into question the GOP's longstanding preference for free trade and open markets.

Still, some senators are trying to push back. A group of Republicans is struggling this week with legislation from Sen. Bob Corker, R-Tenn., and Sen. Pat Toomey, R-Pa., to prevent Trump from imposing tariffs on steel and aluminum imports in the name of national security.

US hits Russian firms with sanctions

By MATTHEW LEE

AP DIPLOMATIC WRITER

WASHINGTON — The Trump administration on Monday slapped sanctions on several Russian companies and businessmen for engaging in cyberattacks and assisting Russia's military and intelligence services with other malicious activities.

The Treasury Department said it was imposing sanctions on five Russian firms and three executives from one of them under legislation passed last year and an executive order aimed at punishing efforts to hack into U.S. computer systems. The sanctions freeze any assets that they may have in U.S. jurisdictions and bar Americans from doing business with them.

"The United States is engaged in an ongoing effort to counter malicious actors working at the behest of the Russian Federation and its military and intelligence units to increase Russia's offensive cyber capabilities," Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin said in a statement. He said the sanctions targeted entities that have "directly contributed to improving Russia's cyber and underwater capabilities" that jeopardize "the safety and security of the United States and our allies."

Gunman holds 4 kids hostage in standoff

ORLANDO (AP) — A man who police say shot an officer then barricaded himself in an apartment with four children was being urged Monday to release the hostages and peacefully end a standoff that had lasted more than 12 hours.

Police negotiators have communicated with suspect Gary Lindsey five times since the standoff at an apartment started around midnight Sunday, Chief John Mina said at a news conference.

"We are urging him to release the children and let this come to a peaceful resolution," Mina said.

Police continue to work at the scene of a hostage standoff where a police officer was shot Monday morning in Orlando.

The children with Lindsey range in age from 1 to 11. Some of them are Lindsey's children and some belong to his girlfriend.

Officers were called to the apartment by his girlfriend because of a domestic dispute. Upon arriving, the officers were fired upon, and Officer Kevin Valencia was shot. An officer was able to return fire, the police chief said.

Valencia was expected to survive but had "very significant injuries," Mina said.

The first meeting of a sitting U.S. president and a North Korean leader was the product of dizzying weeks of negotiations over logistics and policy.

Up early in Singapore, Trump tweeted with cautious optimism: "Meetings between staffs and representatives are going well and quickly ... but in the end, that doesn't matter. We will all know soon whether or not a real deal, unlike those of the past, can happen!"

In the run-up to the talks, Trump had hopefully predicted the two men might strike a nuclear deal or forge a formal end to the Korean War in the course of a single meeting or over several days. But on the eve of the summit, the White House unexpectedly announced Trump would depart Singapore by Tuesday evening, meaning his time with Kim would be fairly brief. And Secretary of State Mike Pompeo sought to keep expectations for the summit in check.

"We are hopeful this summit will have set the conditions for future successful talks," Pompeo said, describing a far more modest goal than Trump had outlined days earlier.

The sudden change in schedule added to a dizzying few days of foreign policy activity for Trump, who shocked U.S. allies over the weekend when he used a meeting of the Group of Seven industrialized economies in Canada to alienate America's closest friends in the West.

As for Singapore, the White House said Trump was leaving early because negotiations had moved "more quickly than expected," but gave no details about any possible progress in preliminary talks. On the day before the meeting, weeks of

TRUMP: ECONOMIC ADVISER LARRY KUDLOW SUFFERS HEART ATTACK

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Donald Trump says his top economic adviser, Larry Kudlow, has suffered a heart attack.

Trump tweeted just minutes before his historic meeting with North Korean leader Kim Jong Un that Kudlow is being treated at Walter Reed Medical Center.

Kudlow joined Trump last week in Canada for the G-7 meeting of world leaders.

Trump tweeted, "Our Great Larry Kudlow, who has been working so hard on trade and the economy, has just suffered a heart attack."

Kudlow is the director of the National Economic Council.

preparation appeared to pick up in pace, with U.S. and North Korean officials meeting throughout Monday at a Singapore hotel.

The president planned to stop in Guam and Hawaii on his way back to Washington.

POLL

"Most people who watch the news or read a newspaper, they're wanting to find out the truth," Retana said. "They don't want to have tons of propaganda to sift through, and that's what we see a lot of."

Journalists can't take for granted that the public knows what it's getting, Rosenstiel said. Much of journalism's shared language and structure is rooted in newspapers, yet many Americans get their news through social media streams, where it isn't always clear from where stories come, Rosenstiel said. Newspapers have "op-ed" sections, yet half of the public doesn't know what the term means.

That may contribute to the finding that most American adults aged 18 to 29 think the news is fairly inaccurate, while most above 30 felt it was fairly accurate.

There's broad agreement that journalists need to do a better job of explaining their work. Sixty-eight percent of the public said the media should offer more information about its sources — and 66 percent of the journalists agree. Nearly half of the public said journalists should explain how their story was reported and 42 percent of the journalists said the same thing.

"You need to explain the mystery of how the meal was cooked," Rosenstiel said. "We ought to take a cue from the way people go to the grocery store. Before they buy something, they need to learn what the ingredients are."

The public and journalists answered similarly on what each thought the media should be doing, with one major exception. Only a little more than half of the people said the press should act as a watchdog to powerful people and institutions, while 93 percent of journalists view this as their role.

There's some good news about journalism. When Americans are asked about their favorite news organization, a third of them say they trust it more than they did a year ago, while only about 1 in 10 say their level of trust has declined.

Lamar Walker, of Huntsville, Alabama, said he follows the news on his smartphone and smart TV and feels smarter for it. He thinks the news media is doing an "excellent" job.

"As long as they're telling the truth, a lot of people are going to like the news," Walker said.

"We finally have a process in place to get to the bottom of all these bad cases and start denaturalizing people who should not have been naturalized in the first place," Cissna said. "What we're looking at, when you boil it all down, is potentially a few thousand cases."

He declined to say how much the effort would cost but said it would be covered by the agency's existing budget, which is funded by immigration application fees.

The push comes as the Trump administration has been cracking down on illegal immigration and taking steps to reduce legal immigration to the U.S.

Immigrants who become U.S. citizens can vote, serve on juries and obtain security clearance. Denaturalization — the process of removing that citizenship — is very rare.

The U.S. government began looking at potentially fraudulent naturalization cases a decade ago when a border officer detected about 200 people had used different identities to get green cards and citizenship after they were previously issued deportation orders.

In September 2016, an internal watchdog reported that 315,000 old fingerprint records for immigrants who had been deported or had criminal convictions had not been uploaded to a Department of Homeland Security database that is used to check immigrants' identities. The same report found more than 800 immigrants had been ordered deported under one identity but became U.S. citizens under another.

Since then, the government has been uploading these older fingerprint records dating back to the 1990s and investigators have been evaluating cases for denaturalization.

For many years, most U.S. efforts to strip immigrants of their citizenship focused largely on suspected war criminals who lied on their immigration paperwork, most notably former Nazis.

Toward the end of the Obama administration, officials began reviewing cases stemming from the fingerprints probe but prioritized those of naturalized citizens who had obtained security clearances, for example, to work at the Transportation Security Administration, said Muzaffar Chishti, director of the Migration Policy Institute's office at New York University law school.

Maine town works to save statue of famous harbor seal Andre ROCKPORT, Maine (AP) — A Maine town is raising money to save the statue of a beloved harbor seal that brought the community together.

The Bangor Daily News reports Rockport's 1978 statue of Andre the Seal is undergoing $14,000 in repairs. Two local organizations have raised most of the money, but $2,000 is still needed.

Residents recall fond memories of the orphaned seal pup, which was rescued in 1961 by local tree surgeon Harry Goodridge. Goodridge cared for the seal until it was old enough to be released into the ocean.

Andre went on to spend his winters in southern New England and his summers in Rockport for the next 25 years. The friendly seal was the subject of the 1994 film "Andre" and the book "A Seal Called Andre."

Five things we learned from minicamp

By GREG AUMAN
Tampa Bay Times

After rookie minicamp and a month of voluntary organized team activities, the Bucs have their full squad together for three days of mandatory minicamp starting Tuesday, the last work before they convene for training camp in late July.

Here are five story lines to watch this week and into August, with unanswered questions and roster battles that could carry over to final cuts in early September.

1. How much improved will the Bucs defensive line be? The team won't have full contact this week, but these practices will be the first chance to see all five newcomers to the defensive line together. That means Pro Bowl end Jason Pierre-Paul makes his first appearance, joining DE Vinny Curry and three new DTs in Beau Allen, Mitch Unrein and rookie Vita Vea.

So more than half of the top-eight rotation will be new this fall, with Gerald McCoy, Will Gholston and Noah Spence the top returners. DE Will Clarke would be in line for the fifth end spot, and if the Bucs carry a fifth tackle, there's good competition between DeVonte Lambert, Channing Ward and Stevie Tu'ikolovatu.

New defensive line coach Brentson Buckner is tasked with turning around the front of a defense that managed a league-low 22 sacks. Along with the running game, it's widely expected to be the Bucs' most improved area in 2018, and it will need to be if they want to be relevant in December.

COMMENTARY: Rays

GROWING PAINS

MONICA HERNDON | TIMES

The Rays' Johnny Field takes some time to reflect after being easily thrown out at the plate against the Mariners to end the game at Tropicana Field on Sunday.

Losing might continue for these young Rays, that's okay

By MARTIN FENNELLY
Tampa Bay Times

ST. PETERSBURG — It's as hard to construct a losing baseball season as it is to build a winning one.

Your Rays remain hard at work, Tampa Bay.

Case in point was Sunday's 5-4 loss to the surprising, surging Mariners at Tropicana Field. The game ended with a mistake: Rays third-base coach Matt Quattraro waved rookie Johnny Field home to try and score from first base on a Carlos Gomez bloop fly ball that was trapped, then fumbled by sliding rightfielder Mitch Haniger. Bad idea.

Haniger threw to catcher

Mike Zunino. Bang-bang. The ball arrived well before Field, who was out by 20 feet.

This is what happens when you're losing, things go bang and bang. Don't look now (and only 10,512 bothered at the Trop on Sunday), but the Rays are on another reverse roll. After winning three games in Oakland to start a road trip, Sunday made it nine losses in 10 games to fall to 29-35, with six of the losses coming to Seattle.

Moreover, Sunday made it five times in the past eight games that the Rays have lost by a single run. The Rays have played 26 games decided by a run and are 9-17 in them, the most one-run losses in the majors. They can't figure out how to win the close ones, which is what good teams do.

That's how truly losing seasons happen.

"It was overaggressive, but we've got a lot of guys trying to do a lot right now to impact it in a positive way," manager Kevin Cash said. "Maybe a tick overaggressive."

Understand, the Rays might go out next and sweep Toronto, which hits the Trop on Monday night.

Or they might just keep losing. "We can play better baseball than what we've done the last 10 days," Cash said "We've shown that. When we do, we usually get on a pretty good run."

COLLEGE: South Florida

Prior AD experience preferred, but not required for USF

By JOEY KNIGHT
Tampa Bay Times

The head of the search committee charged with helping USF find a new athletic director shed some light on the type of person being sought for the job during a brief meeting Monday.

Prior administrative experience in an athletic department is preferred, but not a prerequisite. Fundraising chops are important but not paramount. Relationships with the nation's collegiate movers and shakers? That could move one's resume to the top of the pile.

So were the statements of Dr. William Sutton, director of the nationally prominent Vinik Sport & Entertainment Management Program and head of the six-person search committee, during a public 15-minute sit-down with the group Monday. Four of the six members attended the meeting at the Selmon Athletics Center.

"Would we consider people that are not in college athletics?"

Possibly. I don't know that, I don't have the answer for that," Sutton told the group. "I think anybody that's qualified, we're gonna take a look at and vet them out and see how they stack up against other people that have expressed an interest in the job."

Sutton said he has been given no time frame for finding a replacement for Mark Harlan, who resigned 10 days ago for the same job at Utah. He and the committee will work with the Eastman & Beaudine search firm to help USF find its third AD in less than five years.

"Our job is to get the possible person for 2018 to come in here and help take this program to the next level," Sutton said. "That's my charge, and that's what we're gonna do."

In a brief followup session with reporters, Sutton said prior AD experience is something the committee would be very interested in, but added, "It won't hold anybody out."

Nadal not obsessed with Federer's 20 Slams

By HOWARD FENDRICH
Associated Press

PARIS — Rafael Nadal's 11th French Open title raised his Grand Slam trophy count to 17, three away from the men's record held by Roger Federer.

That doesn't necessarily mean Nadal is fixated on catching his rival.

"Of course I would love to have 20, like Roger, in the future — or even more," Nadal said Sunday evening after beating

Dominic Thiem 6-4, 6-3, 6-2 in the final at Roland Garros, "but being honest, (it's) something that is not in my mind."

He added that it's not an "obsession."

"Let me enjoy this title," Nadal said. "I can't be always thinking of more. Of course, I have ambition. Of course, I have passion for what I am doing. But I never have been crazy about all this kind of stuff."

Mickelson trying not to look ahead at another US Open opportunity

By DOUG FERGUSON
Associated Press

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y. — Phil Mickelson is running out of time.

Mickelson doesn't need to be reminded that this is his 27th appearance in the U.S. Open, more than any of the 156 players at Shinnecock Hills. He wouldn't want to be reminded that 65 players — including the last four major champions — were not even born when Mickelson was low amateur in his first U.S. Open in 1990 at Medinah.

"I just can't believe that time has flown by so fast," he said Monday.

Late-inning drama ends in Charlotte win

Staff Reports

Brendan McKay suffered the worst start of his professional career in Monday's win for the Charlotte Stone Crabs.

But Jesus Sanchez took McKay off the hook when he delivered a two-run double in the 11th inning to send the Stone Crabs home with an 8-6 victory over the Dunedin Blue Jays.

It didn't always look like the Stone Crabs would force any late action after the start of McKay.

McKay entered Monday with just three walks in 45.1 innings pitched this season. He needed just 2.2 innings Monday night to match that total.

The Tampa Bay Rays' No. 3 prospect was unable to escape the third inning after allowing five runs on six hits and three walks.

The Stone Crabs took advantage of the rule which puts a runner on second base to begin extra innings. Tristan Gray moved to third base on a passed ball and Jake Fraleley's two-out soft pop up behind the shortstop got Gray home.

J.D. Busfield blew a save in the 10th when he allowed the game-tying run to come across the plate. He held on for the victory in the 11th.

The Blue Jays were leading 5-2 after three innings, but with a lock-down bullpen and batters chipping away at the lead, they managed to tie it in the ninth inning when Fraley's RBI scored Gray.

Charlotte was able to make the comeback thanks to Reece Karalus, who relieved McKay and tossed 3.2 scoreless innings, allowing just two hits, two walks and struck out four batters. Trevor Sharpie also kept Dunedin off the scoreboard over 1.2 innings.

Rays shortstop Adeiny Hechavarria, rehabbing from an injury, went 0-for-3.

Sanchez went 3-for-6 with two doubles in the win. Gray, Josh Lowe and Robbie Tenerowicz all had doubles as well. Fraley totaled three RBI in the win.

Longhorns, Red Raiders win super regionals to advance to CWS

Texas and fellow Big 12 member Texas Tech won their best-of-three super regionals on Monday and became the fifth and sixth teams to advance to the College World Series.

Kody Clemens homered for the third straight game and fill-in starter Matteo Bocchi held Tennessee Tech to one run in a career-high five innings as the Longhorns locked up their NCAA record-extending 36th CWS appearance with a 5-2 win in Austin. Texas Tech's Gabe Texas' Kody Clemens (2) and Duke Ellis (11) celebrate with teammates following their win over Tennessee Tech Monday in Austin, Texas. Texas won 5-2.

Holt, Brian Klein and Michael Davis homered, and the Red Raiders beat Duke 6-2 for their third trip in five years to the CWS in Omaha, Nebraska.

The eight-team CWS field was to be filled out Monday night after South Carolina played Arkansas and Auburn met defending national champion and No. 1 overall seed Florida in Game 3s.

Bocchi was called on to make his fourth start of the season because the Longhorns' No. 3 starter, Blair Henley, was unavailable after throwing three innings of relief Sunday.

David Pierce is taking the Longhorns to Omaha in his second year as coach after spending the previous five seasons at Tulane and Sam Houston State.

"It's never been about me and it never will be, but the thing that I loved is I told these guys back in the fall I want this for you guys," Pierce said.

Bauers hits first home run in Rays' win over Blue Jays

ST. PETERSBURG — Jake Bauers hit his first career home run to put Tampa Bay ahead in the fourth inning and the Rays went on to an 8-4 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays on Monday night.

Bauers' two-run homer off Sam Gaviglia after Matt Duffy's single erased a 4-3 Toronto lead.

Tampa Bay tacked on three runs in the seventh with the help of a bases-loaded throwing error by reliever John Axford.

Left-hander Ryan Yarbrough, who leads the major leagues with 44 relief innings, started and pitched six innings for the Rays. Yarbrough (5-2) gave up four runs on seven hits while striking out three in his first start since May 14.

Bauers, playing in his fifth major league game, got on base his first four times and scored three runs. Rookie Willy Adames, recalled earlier Monday from the minor leagues, also drove in two runs for the Rays, who won for only the second Teoscar Hernandez hit his 11th homer for the Blue Jays, who had won four straight.

KIERMAIER'S COMING

Rays Gold Glove CF Kevin Kiermaier (right thumb torn ligament) is hopeful of returning June 22 for a series against the New York Yankees. He faced two minor leaguers in a simulated game and will join Class A Charlotte on Tuesday.

GUERRERO SHOWS UP

Vladimir Guerrero Jr. attended the game while in the process of rehabbing the strained patellar tendon in his left knee. "I'm not frustrated at all. Stuff happens that you can't control," said Toronto's 19-year-old 3B prospect, who has driven in 55 runs in 53 games for Double-A New Hampshire. He is expected to miss at least four weeks.

RAYS

Because this is the streakiest and at times shakiest team in baseball. The Rays this season have already had winning streaks of eight, six and five games and losing streaks of eight, eight, five and four games, and it's only June. Sunday made it two losses in a row. Plays like the one that ended Sunday's game won't stop happening, either. And it will continue as the Rays continue to go young and younger. "Yes, it will," Cash said.

That doesn't excuse the mistake that ended the game. Quatraro put the blame on himself, admirable thing. You could also shoot some blame toward a pair of Seattle two-run homers that erased a 3-1 Rays lead. "I saw (Haniger) on the ground," Quatraro said. "I thought ninth inning, two outs, good closer on the mound, good baserunner with speed, take a chance. Obviously, it turned out to be bad judgment on my part." "I heard him say, 'Go, go, go,'" Field said. Tick, tick, tick.

You can't get better all at once, on one first-to-home dash. The Rays will have a lot more days like Sunday this season. It goes with the territory. And I'm fine with the territory. I'd drive up to Durham this morning to go and get Willy Adames. Let's do it. The more sobering reality is the Rays have a hard time beating good teams. They have the record to prove it. They're 18-9 against teams currently below .500. But they've played 26 games against teams currently in position to make the postseason and they're a decidedly lousy 5-21 against them, including 1-6 against the Mariners and 4-9 against the Red Sox. It could get worse. After the series at the Trop with the Blue Jays, the Rays finish up the month and head into July by playing a combined 16 consecutive games against the Yankees, Nationals and Astros, who are a combined 50 games over .500. Is that trap door right around the corner? On Sunday, Johnny Field rounded third, headed for home. Out by a mile. Tick, tick, tick.

NFL: Lions

Matt Patricia adjusts to being scrutinized leading the Lions

By LARRY LAGE
Associated Press

ALLEN PARK, Mich. — Matt Patricia worked in relative obscurity in New England.

The burly man with a bushy beard, baseball cap on backward, with a pencil above his right ear was noticed only occasionally while coordinating the Patriots' defense.

As a first-year NFL head coach with the Detroit Lions, his every move and word have been watched and listened to while reporters have had access to him and his team during minicamp and offseason workouts. Patricia's past has also been scrutinized.

What does Patricia know about the job now that he didn't know a few months ago?

"Kind of everything," Patricia said Monday. "Everything is new. Everything is different."

A Detroit News report last month shed light on allegations against Patricia from 1996, when he and a friend were indicted 22 years ago by a Texas grand jury on one count each of aggravated sexual assault. The accuser did not testify and the case was dismissed.

Patricia has said he was falsely accused. The Lions have said a pre-employment background check did not reveal the incident, adding they are standing by Patricia. The NFL determined allegations against Patricia are not subject to its personal conduct policy.

While not referring specifically to the fallout from the allegations, Patricia acknowledged his job description includes more than Xs and Os on the football field.

"The requirements are different," he said. "So, that's kind of the biggest adjustment from that standpoint."

The Lions are making adjustments, too, under Patricia after practicing and playing for Jim Caldwell the previous four seasons.

"He's a guy that's going to push you and try to get the best out of you every day," cornerback Nevin Lawson said.

Patricia lashed out at his players last week, screaming for them to move faster from one drill to another with words not fit to print even if team policy allowed it. Caldwell wasn't heard yelling at players when the media was around and players didn't hear him use profanity even privately.

"Coach Patricia is an intense guy," tight end Michael Roberts said. "He's a smart guy. Obviously, he knows what he is doing. Things were done differently last year. He comes in with his way of doing things. ... If you're not getting better, you're getting worse. He says that a lot."

Return specialist Jamal Agnew was one of the many players who mentioned, "high expectations," when asked about Patricia. And, Agnew doesn't have a problem trying to live up to lofty goals with the Lions under their new, hard-driving coach.

"He's won," Agnew said. "He's played winning football."

The 43-year-old Patricia helped New England win three Super Bowls over 14 years, working as its defensive coordinator the previous six seasons. He was hired by Lions general manager Bob Quinn, who had his eye on Patricia as a candidate to replace Caldwell after working together for a dozen years with the Patriots.

Lions linebacker Jonathan Freeny, one of a handful of former Patriots playing on Detroit's roster, said Patricia looks and sounds like the same coach he was in New England.

"He brings the same enthusiasm — to the game every day," Freeny said.

NHL: Capitals

A Washington Capitals fan watches the celebration of players on the ice after the Capitals defeated the Vegas Golden Knights in Game 5 of the Stanley Cup Finals Thursday in Las Vegas.

Capitals parade a welcome chance to cheer for DC sports

By STEPHEN WHYNO
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Nicklas Backstrom dreamed about the road less traveled.

Driving down Constitution Avenue on his way to each home game since his NHL debut in 2007, he imagined the street lined with overjoyed Washington Capitals fans.

"It always popped up in my head that one time we're going to have a parade here, and finally that day is here," Backstrom said.

It all becomes reality Tuesday when Backstrom and the Stanley Cup-champion Capitals give the city its first parade for a major pro sports team since the NFL's Redskins in 1992. The parade is 26 years in the making for Washington sports fans who endured long, lean years of heartbreak.

"I don't think anyone doubted what this city would do," longtime Nationals infielder Ryan Zimmerman said. "It's just a matter of getting there and having the ability to do it. They definitely held up their end of the bargain."

Tens of thousands gathered for viewing parties of road play-off games on the way to the Capitals' first championship since beginning play in 1974. They camped out on the streets to watch on giant video screens — the kinds of scenes more germane to presidential inaugurations in this town than sporting events.

"I thought it was really cool when we were even at home and everyone was outside and going nuts and they would show that right after we would score a goal," defenseman John Carlson said. "I think that was probably one of the coolest moments of the playoffs for me and just seeing the support. ... I think we deserve it, and so do the fans."

It has been a long time coming. Since the Redskins won the Super Bowl in January 1992, the 1998 Capitals were the only Washington team in the NHL, NBA, NFL or Major League Baseball to reach a league semifinal until this spring, a drought of 74 combined seasons without a championship.

When the Capitals took the Cup into the Nationals' clubhouse on Saturday, coach Barry Trotz wanted players to know: "There's no curse or anything. It's all gone." All they had to do to know that was look around the past two months to see the doubt being chipped away.

Pistons land Dwane Casey with 5-year deal

By LARRY LAGE
Associated Press

DETROIT — Dwane Casey lost his job in Toronto because the Raptors wanted to advance further in the playoffs.

In Detroit, it would be an accomplishment if Casey can simply get the Pistons into the playoffs.

The Pistons hired the NBA coach of the year finalist Monday, hoping he can help the three-time NBA championship franchise regularly reach the postseason and eventually compete again for titles.

"Dwane is one of the most successful and highly respected coaches in our league," Pistons owner Tom Gores said. "He's a great communicator and a leader who will connect with our players and accelerate their growth. Having spent many hours with Dwane over the last few weeks, I'm confident he is the right person to get us to the next level."

A month after being fired by the Raptors, Casey agreed to a five-year deal to become head coach of the Pistons, two people familiar with the situation told The Associated Press on Monday. The people spoke on condition of anonymity because the team had not announced the move, which was first reported by ESPN.

Casey led Toronto to a team-record 59 wins this year and helped the franchise earn the top seed in the Eastern Conference for the first time.

BUCS

2. Which rookie cornerback will challenge Vernon Hargreaves for playing time?

The Bucs are looking at Hargreaves in two different spots as an every-down player again — at outside corner in the base defense, and inside at nickel when the Bucs are in their nickel sub package, which they end up playing about 65 percent of the time.

The Bucs used two of their second-round picks on cornerbacks M.J. Stewart of North Carolina and Carlton Davis of Auburn, and both will challenge Hargreaves for playing time. Veteran Brent Grimes has one corner job locked up, but Davis (with the best size of any Bucs corner) will compete for the other outside spot, along with Ryan Smith, who started much of last year. At nickel, Stewart will push Hargreaves for playing time, with both rookies potentially rotating in, given how high they were drafted.

Interceptions have been a big part of OTA workouts, and remember that Bucs corners totaled just six last year, in three from Grimes and three from Robert McClain, who remains unsigned. If those rookies can establish themselves as ballhawks, there's plenty of opportunity to get on the field.

3. How does the right side of the offensive line look? Guard J.R. Sweezy remains a major question mark as he works to return from a knee injury, and tackle Demar Dotson isn't expected back until training camp recovering from his own knee surgery.

That has opened up reps at both spots, with Caleb Benenoch stepping in at right guard and Leonard Wester at right tackle. Benenoch is trying to separate himself from third-round pick Alex Cappa, and Wester is working to solidify himself as the swing tackle, which would mean dressing every Sunday.

The injuries have also given younger players a chance to make their case for the last roster spots on the offensive line. Sweezy's status remains a question, but if Evan Smith and Cappa are the top backups, that leaves two spots for Wester and another inexperienced tackle. Is it undrafted rookie Cole Boozer from Temple, or a second-year guy like Cole Gardner or Brad Seaton?

4. Can rookie running back Ronald Jones make a splash?

The second-rounder will go into training camp with every expectation of adding the big-play threat that's been sorely missed in the last two years. He'll share the load with third-year pro Peyton Barber, and Charles Sims will have a chance to keep the third-down role he held last season.

Jones understanding the offense and pass protection and all a running back must do beyond just running the ball is a major prerequisite to him gaining the full trust of his coaches. Establish that now, and he's in line for a larger role earlier in his rookie season, and a reliable run game would do wonders for offensive balance and taking pressure off Jameis Winston.

5. Who wins the backup linebacker jobs? With Kendall Beckwith out recovering from an ankle injury suffered in a car accident, there's a bigger window for backup linebackers to make their case to stick in September.

There are three backup jobs available, with Devante Bond and Adarius Taylor (nee Glanton) as the most experienced options. Rookie Jack Cichy, a sixth-round pick, has to establish himself as better than returning special-teams players like Cameron Lynch, Riley Bullough and Nigel Harris.

Part of winning those jobs is upgrading the Bucs' kick coverage, which struggled at the end of last season.

"I think we're at the level, with where we are and where we're going, that the more experience you have in dealing with donors and dealing with boosters and dealing with the media and social media, and dealing with your own staff ... they'd definitely be given high consideration."

Those statements would seem to bode well for former Buccaneer Derrick Brooks, considered by many as the top local candidate for the job.

Despite no college administrative experience per se, Brooks previously has served as president of the Tampa Bay Storm and co-founded the Brooks-DeBartolo Collegiate High School. He also has worked extensively with Bulls coach Charlie Strong in trying to raise money for the proposed USF Football Center.

"I think fundraising is one thing we're looking for, I wouldn't say it's the only thing," Sutton said. "It's an important thing but not the important thing."

Other committee members in attendance Monday were former Bulls basketball player Andrikk Frazier; USF Foundation CEO Joel Momberg and USF Foundation Board chairman George Morgan.

Tampa Bay Sports Commission executive director Rob Higgins, who said Friday he would not pursue the AD job, also could assist the committee in some capacity, Sutton said.

"Rob and I talked last week and I appreciate his viewpoint," Sutton said.

"He's got a job to do and he's excited about doing it. And at the same time, he wants to make sure he can help USF. So he's probably gonna be involved some way or another in helping us, advising me or giving me some insight."

Morocco jibes at North American cash pledges for 2026 World Cup

By GRAHAM DUNBAR
Associated Press

MOSCOW — In a FIFA election where money could be key, Morocco tried to heap doubt on North American promises of multi-billion dollar 2026 World Cup profits on Monday.

Moroccan jibes at projections from the United States-Canada-Mexico bid came when leaders of the rival campaigns met voters from five of FIFA's six continental groups.

"There is lots of uncertainty," Morocco Football Federation president Fouzi Lekjaa said of the detail in North American pledges of $14.3 billion revenue for FIFA.

"That doesn't correspond either to historical facts or future extrapolation, it's an exercise that goes beyond that," Lekjaa said in French.

Money will not be the only factor on the minds of up to 206 expected FIFA member federations who can vote on Wednesday in Moscow.

Still, a FIFA-appointed panel assessing the two candidates already noted the "significantly higher" number than Morocco's projected income of $7.2 billion for football's governing body from a 48-team tournament.

FIFA President Gianni Infantino speaks with participants of the Asian Football Confederation (AFC) meeting Monday in Moscow, Russia.

Morocco's counterattack is that $5 billion pure profit for FIFA would be a World Cup record.

"We do not blush when we propose that," Morocco tourism minister Lamia Boutaleb said in an impassioned speech to 53 African voters in a Moscow hotel conference center.

The Moroccan bid team took to the stage at a Confederation for African Football (CAF) meeting minutes after the North Americans presented their plan to what shaped as its most hostile audience of the day.

"We have shown the best we have to offer to all the FIFA members," Decio de Maria, the Mexico federation president, said.

Though the American team was met with just polite applause, and no follow-up questions, it still hopes for African votes on Wednesday.

Liberia, Namibia, and Zimbabwe pledged support before arriving in Russia, and the North Americans have targeted voters in the southern African group known as COSAFA.

It was perhaps telling that CAF President Ahmad stressed the need to "show cohesion within our continent" in a contest where FIFA will publish each member's choice soon after the ballot.

"There is an obligation to remain within our family," the Madagascar official said "But of course it is an individual choice."

The African meeting began with Ahmad announcing his first vice president, Kwesi Nyantakyi, resigned from CAF and FIFA's ruling council while facing a corruption investigation in his native Ghana.

A television documentary last week showed Nyantakyi taking $65,000 in cash from undercover reporters posing as businessmen to secure favor with Ghana President Nana Akufo-Addo and other government officials.

Ghana can vote on Wednesday, though Moroccan attempts to pressure FIFA into acting against four American territories seem sure to fail.

FIFA election rules suggested American Samoa, Guam, Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands could be barred from voting by a potential conflict of interest.

"Our voting delegate has a New Zealand passport," American Samoan official Sandra Fruean, a FIFA Council member, told The Associated Press.

The last-minute lobbying continues on Tuesday morning at another central Moscow hotel, where the rival bid teams make presentations to 54 European voters.

GOLF: US OPEN

NHL ref makes US Open debut

By TERRIN WAACK
Associated Press

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y. — Garrett Rank is trading skates for spikes on a stage far larger than anything he has experienced.

No one plays Shinnecock Hills on ice.

This week is not about blue lines and high-sticking. It's about green fairways and lag putting.

Rank's day job ended two months ago when he finished working the first round of the Stanley Cup playoffs. That left Rank, an NHL referee for the last three years, enough time to qualify for his first U.S. Open.

"The reaction from the hockey community has been huge," Rank said Monday. "I think every official on our staff sent me a text and congratulated me and said they'd be following along and are really proud of me. I even had a few phone calls asking if it was me, like if that was the same Garrett Rank. I don't know too many other people with the same name. But yeah, that's me. I'm going to the U.S. Open."

The fairway isn't really an escape for the 30-year-old Canadian. Sure, it's quieter. There is less surrounding chaos. There are no whistles — any penalties typically are called by the players themselves.

Rank is simply here to play. The intensity is no different.

"You have to deal with the pressure of making a call — or I guess the pressure of making a wrong call — (and) you deal with the pressure of making a bad shot in golf," he said. "And you have to be really decisive as well. Decisive in the decisions you make about what shot you want to hit, and then obviously you have to make a decision in about a split second if you're going to call a penalty or not."

Rank made it to Shinnecock with a pair of 71s at Ansley Golf Club in Georgia, with fellow NHL referee Dan O'Rourke as his caddie. He earned one of three spots.

"What a dream come true," Rank said.

Salah meeting with Kadyrov raises red flags

By HAMZA HENDAWI
Associated Press

GROZNY, Russia — Mohamed Salah was relaxing in his hotel room in Grozny when he was informed an important guest dropped in unexpectedly and was waiting for him in the lobby.

When the Egypt star forward went down, he found Chechen leader Ramzan Kadyrov.

The Moscow-backed former rebel had a favor to ask of Salah: Could he accompany him for the short drive to the stadium where the rest of Egypt's World Cup squad was training and several thousand local fans were in attendance?

Salah obliged, and the two showed up at the stadium named after Kadyrov's assassinated father to a standing ovation and loud cheers by the fans. Salah wore a white Egypt jersey, and his host was in a green-and-white tracksuit.

The Sunday evening episode sparked uproar on social media given the poor human rights record of the leader of Chechnya, and what was perceived as Kadyrov's use of Salah to score a public relations boon.

Additionally, the episode may be well remembered for a long time as a textbook PR blunder on the part of the Egyptians.

"This is Kadyrov trying to capitalize on Chechnya being a team base to boost his own profile ... it was 100 percent predictable," said Rachel Denber, the Human Rights Watch deputy director for Europe and central Asia.

"He revels in the spotlight. He also has a ruthless grip on Chechnya. He has sought to obliterate any kind of political advocacy or human rights work."

Kadyrov, who sports the hallmark beard of the ultraconservative Muslims known as Salafis, is a former rebel who switched his loyalties to Moscow. He has been the dominant figure in Chechnya since the 2004 assassination of his father, President Akhmad Kadyrov.

He has enforced strict Islamic rules in Chechnya, relying on his feared security forces to stifle any dissent. Moreover, his rule has been marred by numerous reports of extrajudicial killings and torture in the republic which saw two devastating separatist wars in the 1990s.

maybe in one month, Federer will win again Wimbledon."

Federer, of course, sat out the French Open to rest and prepare for the grass-court season. He did the same a year ago, and then went on to claim his record eighth championship at the All England Club, where play begins July 2.

The only man with more titles at a single major is Nadal in Paris. He is now 86-2 at the French Open — and, by the looks of things, as good as ever at the place.

Here are other things we learned at the 2018 French Open:

HALEP CAN WIN THE BIG ONE

After losing her first three Grand Slam finals, Simona Halep added major championship No. 1 to her No. 1 ranking by coming back to defeat Sloane Stephens in three sets. Halep kept insisting she needed to do it, and could do it — and she was correct. "Now she can relax, go out there, let her game go," said her coach, Darren Cahill.

SERENA STILL SUPERB

At her first major in 16 months, and first as a mother, Serena Williams showed with three victories that she still has the game and the grit to go far and — even at age 36 — could be a threat to add to her 23 major titles. She withdrew from the field before her much-anticipated fourth-rounder against Maria Sharapova, citing a chest muscle injury, so it's not clear whether Williams will be someone to watch at Wimbledon.

NOT THEIR TIME YET

Runner-up Thiem, a 24-year-old from Austria, might very well be the second-best player on clay in the world, but there's still a large gap, at least at Roland Garros, where he is 0-3 against Nadal.

Nadal, Federer fight 'the watch,' keep winning Grand Slams

By HOWARD FENDRICH
Associated Press

PARIS — Rafael Nadal was trying to make the point that time stops for no man.

"You can't fight against the age," he said, "and you can't fight against the watch. The watch keeps going, always."

No arguing against that sentiment.

Still, it is rather remarkable how Nadal, a French Open champion yet again a week past his 32nd birthday, and Federer, who turns 37 in less than two months, seem to stay forever young. Nadal's 6-4, 6-3, 6-2 victory over Dominic Thiem, who's 24, in Sunday's final gave the Spaniard an 11th title — yes, 11th — at Roland Garros and 17th Grand Slam trophy overall.

At the previous major tournament, the Australian Open in January, Federer won his record 20th such championship.

At the Slam before that, the U.S. Open last September, Nadal was the last man standing.

And so on. Federer or Nadal has won each of the past six major tournaments, equaling their second-longest stretch of dual dominance. Their other six-Slam streak came from 2008-09. Their best run was combining to win 11 consecutive majors starting at the 2005 French Open, when Nadal collected No. 1.

"Sometimes, I see many, many players — even good players, top players — they go on the court against Rafa on clay, or Roger on hard court or any other surface, and you can almost see that they don't really believe 100 percent that they can win," said Robin Soderling, who pulled off French Open upsets of Nadal in 2009, and Federer in 2010. "They hope that they will win, but they don't really believe in it."

TENNIS

No, you can't be frustrated always if somebody has more money than you, if somebody have a bigger house than you, if somebody have more Grand Slams than you. You can't live with that feeling, no?"

Nadal's uncle, Toni, who used to also be his coach, attended Sunday's match and was asked afterward whether Rafael can pull even with Federer.

"I want to think that is possible," Toni said. "But I know (that) sufficed. A year after he won the 2004 Masters, he added a PGA Championship. And then in 2013 at Muirfield, he captured even himself by capturing the British Open.

One to go for the career Grand Slam, the one that has vexed him the most.

He has more runner-up finishes in the U.S.

Open than the other three majors combined. So when Mickelson was asked if he had unfinished business at Shinnecock Hills, he paused briefly before delivering an obvious answer.

"I can say that a few times in this tournament," he said.

It helps that Mickelson has a strong history at Shinnecock Hills, which he refers to as one of his favorite courses.

He had a one-shot lead with two holes to play in 2004 when Retief Goosen made a 12-foot birdie putt in the group behind him on the par-5 16th, and then Mickelson put his tee shot in the bunker on the par-3 17th, blasted out to 5 feet and took all the air out of the Hamptons when he three-putted for double bogey.

In his first U.S. Open at Shinnecock Hills in 1995, he was one shot out of the lead going into the final round, closed with a 74 and finished four shots behind. More than a tough final round was playing the par-5 16th hole in 6 over for the week.

"If I played that hole even, I could have won," Mickelson said.

This is not a time for Mickelson, who turns 48 on Saturday, to be looking behind.

The desire hasn't changed, only the emphasis.

Mickelson didn't win a major until he was 33 and in his 12th full year on the PGA Tour. Back then, any major would have
