Big Hill Accident Causes Multiple Injuries

A head-on collision early Wednesday morning sent three people to U.K. Hospital, with the debris causing another driver to crash. Randall Callahan, 40, from Richmond was heading east on Big Hill Road when his Ford Focus veered into the opposite lane and crashed head-on into Forrester Isaacs, 78, from McKee. Both Callahan and Isaacs were sent to the hospital, along with the passenger in Callahan's vehicle, Sherry Olson, 43, from Sand Gap. The accident occurred around 8:30 a.m. Megan Riley from McKee was hit by debris from the accident, and it broke her windshield. Traffic was backed up for around an hour on Big Hill, near Indian Fort Theater.

Since around four or five years old, Michael Jefferson has handled a basketball.

"It's always been a part of my life," Michael said. "My dad coached, so I was always around the game."

That early start worked well for Michael, who this year led his Madison Southern basketball team to a 26-6 record, the second best in the region, and the District Championship. For his senior year, he averaged 15 points a game, six assists, and seven rebounds, an unusual statistic for a point guard.

Jewelry Demonstrations at KAC

The Kentucky Artisan Center will feature jewelry demonstrations during the month of May to celebrate the age-old tradition of personal adornment.

On Saturday, May 6, Rachel Savane, of Lexington will demonstrate how she creates jewelry using Kentucky agates from 10:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

A native of Illinois, Rachel Savané studied metals at the University of Illinois and abroad in Denmark. In 2003, she opened Savané Silver Gallery in Lexington on West Main Street. Savané designs a line of jewelry with streamlined settings using Kentucky Agates and semi-precious stones.

On Saturday, May 13, Diana Smith Thomas and James Rich of BeSpoken Designs will create colorful jewelry from polymer clay from 10:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at the Kentucky Artisan Center at Berea.

With design and color as his forte, Rich translates his drawings and pen and ink studies into colorful polymer clay. Using a variety of colors, he constructs intricate polymer clay "canes". A "cane" is a rod made up of two or more colors, layered to make a pattern that when cut in a cross-section, reveals a design.

Smith Thomas, a Berea College graduate, takes the constructed polymer clay "cane" designs made by Rich, and creates unique jewelry and wearable art. She takes sliced sections of the polymer clay and folds, cuts and joins them, to create necklace pendants, earrings and pins.

"My designs are built upon my lifelong love and collection of jewelry," said Thomas. "I am intrigued by repeating patterns and multiple part forms."

On Saturday, May 20, three members of the Berea Welcome Center Carvers will demonstrate a variety of woodcarving styles and techniques from 10:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at the Kentucky Artisan Center at Berea.

On Saturday, May 27, Sharon Major, of Frog Hollow Creations, will demonstrate the textural metal jewelry techniques of repousse' and chasing from 10:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at the center.

Repousse' is a French word for a metalworking technique in which a malleable metal is embellished or shaped by hammering from the reverse side to create a raised design in low relief.

Chasing is the opposite of repousse' - where the metal is pushed from the front side downwards to define the design with depth. The noun "chase" refers to a groove, furrow, channel or indentation.

Highway Fatalities Increasing in Kentucky

Highway fatalities in Kentucky increased last year according to numbers from the Kentucky Office of Highway Safety (KOHS) and Kentucky State Police.

There were 834 fatalities in 2016, 73 more than 2015.

"We are greatly concerned with the number of people who lost their lives on our roadways," said KOHS Executive Director Dr. Noelle Hunter. "These figures are unacceptable to us and they should be unacceptable to every driver - every person - in our state. We all have to be much more vigilant about personal safety and personal responsibility behind the wheel if we are going to reverse this trend."

Of the 834 highway fatalities last year in Kentucky, 50.9 percent were not wearing a seat belt and 16.8 percent involved alcohol. More than 36 percent involved speeding or aggressive drivers and 23 percent involved driver distraction. Motorcyclists accounted for 90 fatalities, with 60 percent not wearing helmets.

"With growing social acceptance of dangerous driving behaviors, such as texting while driving, speeding, driving impaired and not wearing a seat belt, we face a great challenge," said Dr. Hunter.

According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA), more than 90 percent of crashes are due to human error.

"Driving is not a right," said KSP Trooper Josh Brashears. "It is a privilege that may be taken away."

The highway fatality increase is not an issue solely for Kentucky. According to the National Safety Council, preliminary estimates indicate motor vehicle deaths totaled 40,200 last year, up 6 percent from 2015 and the first time fatalities exceeded 40,000 since 2007.

Statistics from the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) indicate that seat belts, when worn correctly, reduce the risk of fatalities by 45 percent for front-seat vehicle occupants and by 60 percent for pickup truck, SUV and minivan occupants. Also according to NHTSA, regular seat belt use is the single most effective way to protect against and reduce fatalities in motor vehicle crashes.

So far in 2017, preliminary numbers indicate there have been 210 roadway fatalities - down from 226 compared to the same time last year.

Kentucky's history of highway fatalities:

2000 - 823; 2001 - 843; 2002 - 915; 2003 - 931; 2004 - 964; 2005 - 985; 2006 - 913; 2007 - 864; 2008 - 826; 2009 - 791; 2010 - 760; 2011 - 721; 2012 - 746; 2013 - 638; 2014

Startzman Speaks to Rotary Club about Native Bagels

Citizens and visitors of Berea looking for breakfast or lunch between 7 a.m. and 2 p.m. can drop by the corner of Boone and Chestnut Streets in Berea at the Native Bagel Company.

The official opening was Thursday, April 13, but members of Berea Rotary learned about the business which is owned by Michael and Katie Startzman at the club's regular meeting. Because of her involvement with the board of the Berea Farmers Market and the Startzmans' combined interest in the successful direction of Native Bagel, they decided to take that "leap of faith" often required of new ventures.

Katie discussed the elements of a family business, the path to starting a business, and her own love of building projects. She shared in detail the process of making bagels and mentioned having certain flavors for special occasions such as a Kentucky cornbread or Brooklyn rainbow colors. Along with special coffee drinks, the "Mexican Coke" is available.

Katie praised the Farmers Market for having 40 percent growth per year for the past three years. She mentioned the Summer Feeding Program and the "Double Dollars," available to those with EBT cards. She also praised the City of Berea for its assistance with parking for the new business.

Member Doug Fritz informed the Rotarians of the Mock Interviews being held at Madison Southern High School in job seeking performance practice for graduating seniors.

Katie Startzman of Native Bagel Company presented to Rotarians.

Turn the Depot into a museum

Dear Editor,

The City of Berea has a long and interesting history of one hundred eighty plus years, yet there is no one place to go to study, research or just learn from photos. Packets of information regarding the history of our town are scattered throughout Berea, whether they are written words, photos, or verbal memories.

The upcoming vacancy of the Depot offers a perfect place for a museum of Berea's history. Not only would information be available for travelers who have little knowledge of how a small, southern, integrated town was founded and developed, but it would give information to children, who as adults like to know about their roots. New residents would also be able to gain historical information.

There are those who believe that the Depot should become a restaurant. I would offer the following for consideration before choosing a restaurant.

1. Placing a kitchen in the Depot would be very expensive, some figures range from $25,000 to $50,000.

2. A kitchen could cause damage (smoke, grease, smells) to the integrity of the building.

3. The tourist season is generally March - December, so that leaves four or more months without tourist financial support.

4. There is a shortage of parking for a full restaurant.

5. Berea has a poor history in restaurant support having four restaurants close within the past seven months.

6. A large sum of money was spent to refurbish the Depot and its rail history.

Yes, it would be convenient for those who live and work in the Old Town area, but if the entire city cannot support several restaurants, how can a small portion of Berea do so?

The Depot is the only remaining one that is open between Lexington and Knoxville, Tennessee. That is a historical point in itself.

If anyone is interested in exploring the establishment of a Berea history museum, I would welcome the opportunity to have a get-together to discuss the challenge. I would welcome a call . . .

Letters from Berea
Beth Myers
Editor

I attended the meeting that was held a couple of weeks ago for organizations interested in bidding for the programming at the Madison County Healing Center, the proposed alternative to incarcerating drug offenders.

I was very impressed by the presentation -- it's obvious that both Judge Executive Reagan Taylor and Deputy Judge Colleen Chaney have done their homework and have thought very carefully about the proposed center. There was excitement at how many nonprofits and others agencies attended, who intended to bid on the project -- by an informal count, over 20.

I have to confess to being cynical about the current state of substance abuse recovery in Kentucky. My husband is a substance abuse counselor, and I have spoken to several people who have been through different programs. Apparently many people involved in the work have an almost religious zealotry for one type of model over another, to the point that research and information on best practices is ignored. The 12-step model, such as AA or NA, is often the only solution looked at, and the Big Book is revered like the Bible in many circles.

That is not to say that the 12-step program is ineffective, or that it hasn't helped numerous people over the years. But for many people it hasn't proved effective, and other therapeutic models have. And in the drug crisis we're facing, it doesn't make sense to cling to one type and ignore what else is out there.

I'll tell you now that the two paragraphs I just wrote would have me villified in some circles. I have been amazed at the passionate dedication that many people have to the 12-step way. It is their religion, and detractors are not looked upon with favor. In an older age, such fervency would give way to stonings.

Chaney gave an excellent presentation about the proposed RFP, and I was relieved that flexibility was emphasized, as well as the need for Madison County and the chosen private partners to work together on a model that works. If county personnel keeps their attention on outcomes, and what has proven statistically successful, then I have no doubt that good partners will be chosen.

I know many people would like only a faith-based model, but it's important to have other options for people. I've learned from talking to different professionals and people who have gone through rehabilitation programs that everyone is different. You can not present one model for people suffering from an addiction, and expect great results. There is no one-size-fits-all when it comes to substance abuse recovery. It will be interesting to see what proposals Madison County receives -- I saw some people flinch when Chaney emphasized the necessity of partnership. She stated that if an organization felt very committed to the one model that worked for them, then this RFP was probably not a good option for them. Which was probably a disappointment for those hoping to expand their current operations into Madison County, with dreams of a government checkbook backing them.

So in an unusual turn of events, I find my hope for the Healing Project coming from the public part of this private/public partnership. Both Chaney and Taylor are very clear that they are embarking on a risky venture, and they are determined to do this thing right. They are not blinded by zealotry, organizational history, or past failures that must be rationalized. Ironically, local government seems to be the visionary body right now in substance abuse recovery, with private agencies bogged down in old ways of thinking and doing.

I look forward to seeing how Madison County moves this forward, and I appreciate both Taylor and Chaney for their courage, and their due diligence in researching for the Healing Center.

and we're shooting for ten times that number." Rained by his grandmother in Beattyville, Arnold graduated from Lee County High School and went on to be the first in his family to receive a college degree, graduating from the University of Kentucky in 1983. While working for the University of Kentucky Parking Department he began work on his Master's Degree and also enrolled in the United States Air Force ROTC program. He was subsequently commissioned a 2nd Lieutenant in the United States Air Force in May of 1986 and spent more than six years in the USAF, reaching the rank of Captain. Arnold went on to finish his Master's Degree at Lesley College, Cambridge Mass. In 1992, Charles and his wife Marilyn moved their family to Berea where he says they worked very hard to start a little known restaurant at the time called Subway. "When we opened in February 1993 we had spent all our savings, exhausted all means of borrowing funds, and found ourselves with only $5 on the night before we opened," he recounts. "We had two young daughters to care for and we were tired, nervous and broke." The Arnolds say God blessed them on that cold day in February as the lines of customers stretched out the door and around the parking lot. Twenty-five years later that little restaurant still serves thousands of Berea customers each week. Charles and Marilyn have grown their business interest over the years and recently added the Dinner Bell Restaurant in Berea to their business endeavors. They now employ over 62 people within the city limits of Berea. Some of their business interests transcend Madison County and the state of Kentucky, but they will always make Berea their home. "I'm running for Mayor of Berea because when our family first visited in the summer of 1991, we truly fell in love with this city. Our city has so much to offer and so much potential. We will not progress to the next level without a new vision. I'm offering a candidacy that is transparent, optimistic and visionary. My glass is always half full. I can no longer sit on the sideline and watch when we have so much to lose. Do we accept more of the same or do we choose something different? I want to be a mayor who represents every citizen in the City of Berea," Arnold said. "My campaign is about moving Berea forward. I have a simple message that focuses on family, community and business. I will not spend energy rehashing the past. I want an open transparent government that represents every citizen of this great community. Not everyone is going to always agree on every issue, but it's the job of our local government to ensure that everyone is heard. It's the job of our local government to reach compromises and put forth agendas based on consensus and not on the personal ideologies of those that govern." He says if he is elected there will be no decisions made that damage city finances or anyone's safety.

He added, "As citizens of Berea, we must demand transparency and accountability. Professional politicians often forget that the office they hold is about serving the interest of those who elected them and not about their own personal interest. I am not a professional politician; I am a family man, a husband, a father and a small business owner with over 25 years of experience. I know what it is like to shoulder the responsibility of having more than 62 Berea employees and their families. I know that I can shoulder the responsibilities of the welfare and safety of all the citizens of Berea." The campaign expects to open a headquarters soon in what Arnold describes as a visible part of town. They have a website www.arnoldforberea.com and both a facebook and Twitter presence.

could get the rebound," Michael said, who admitted that his ball handling skills helped as well. "He's everything you want in a point guard," Madison Southern Coach Shane Buttry said. "He made us better and he made his teammates better. He was an unselfish player who would do whatever was needed to win. If we needed him to score a bunch of points, he would, and if we needed him to feed the ball to his teammates, he would." Michael recently signed with Transylvania University, and received academic scholarships as well. Despite the grueling basketball schedule during high school, he kept his grades up at Southern, and scored 27 on the ACT. "I wasn't sure about playing in college," Michael said. "I've always wanted to play basketball in college, but then I wondered if I wanted to focus just on my education?" But in the end, he couldn't quite imagine a life without a basketball in his hands. Though he wouldn't mind pursuing a basketball career, his goal is to earn a degree in finance or economics, and work on Wall Street. The highlight of his basketball career in high school, Michael said, was beating Madison Central and winning the district championship. It was the first time Madison Southern beat Central in over 20 years, and an incredible victory for his team. "I think we were so good because we all played for the same team since middle school," Michael said, who stated that his favorite thing about high school ball was playing with his teammates. His best friend since middle school, Trey Boggs, even ordered a Transylvania t-shirt and wore it for Michael's signing. Seven of Michael's teammates are graduating with him, though he is the only one pursuing basketball in college. Four of the five starters are graduating, and the top two bench players. At 6'2, Michael was an unusual point guard, but enjoyed the challenge of running Southern's offense. He also led in assists his senior year, and won the James R. Williams Award for Leadership and Excellence on and off the court. "I'll miss my teammates," Michael said, "but it will be fun meeting new people too." "It's going to be hard to replace him," Buttry said, who started Michael for all four years of high school. "He was so vital, and the reason we were so successful. He wanted to win, not make himself look good. He was a great leader."

whose father led the very first delegation to Kentucky. "They would be very honored to have the city council there," Connelly said. Ordinarily, the welcoming party takes place at Delta Natural Gas, but this year the event will be hosted by the City of Berea. The party is on the same night as the Berea City Council's May meeting, so Connelly asked whether they should cancel their meeting, or reschedule it. The council agreed to hold their meeting at 5:30 p.m. on May 16, moving it up an hour so the party could start at the usual time of 6:30 p.m. Reid Connelly, who serves on the committee that oversees the sister-city relationship with Hokuto City, thanked the council for their change in schedule and invited them to attend the May 16 reception. The council approved an ordinance declaring several vehicles as surplus. The list includes a 2006 Ford E450, a 2006 Ford Taurus, a 2002 Toyota Camry, and a 2006 Ford Crown Victoria. These vehicles have been placed on surplus by the Berea Police Department because of high mileage and maintenance issues. Other equipment on the surplus item list are a road grader, a tire balancer, a wood chipper, a brake lathe, a zero turn mower, a tractor, a rotary mower, a finish mower, a dethatcher, a utility vehicle, a dust collector, a farm tractor, a digger truck, and a pickup truck. The surplus sale will take place online. City Administrator Randy Stone announced that the city budget had been delayed, because of negotiations over health insurance. There is going to be an approximate 8 percent increase with Baptist Health. Employees will also receive a two percent raise in the 2017-18 budget. Since the next May meeting will be shortened for the Japanese welcoming party, Stone said, the city may have to call a special meeting to consider the budget. The City of Berea currently has $1,632,142 in the general fund. Net profits were higher this year than in the past, Stone reported, which indicates that business is doing well within the city limits. In other business: On Thursday, May 6, there will be a ceremony for those who completed the ten-week entrepreneurial course in Berea. Economic Development Director Danny Isaacs invited city council members to attend the event at 6 p.m. Council member Jim Davis expressed concern with the number of college students who park their cars at college square. "If I was running a business," Davis said, "I would be concerned with how much parking students are taking up." He said they would need to work on that problem. Council member Bruce Fraley announced that the First Responders Camp would be taking place from July 24-28. The Berea police and fire departments are organizing the camp, which will be free of charge. They are accepted kids from ages 10-13. Parents can get an application at either the police or fire department. Council member Billy Wooten announced that the CASA basketball tournament raised $500 for the organization. His student group has also surveyed 858 people about economic development in Berea, with around half of those surveyed being students from Berea College. The bleachers for the Berea Community School football field are still under discussion. Stone is looking at a topographical map, to consider a field expansion. An animal waste ordinance may be considered in the future, for the proposed dog park. Cheyenne Olson announced that there were 158 volunteers for the Victory Garden Blitz. She thanked the Berea City Council for its support, stating that "without the support of the council, I doubt anyone else would pay attention to the garden blitz." She said the city staff had been very easy to work with. The group installed 109 raised beds around the city, with the majority of them on a sliding scale. They hope to expand for the next year. Tim Taylor from Paint Lick said he was sad that the city council has to pass a resolution against hatred and violence, since that should be obvious. City staff are continuing to visit homeowners on Short Line Pike, who would be affected by the Indian Fort Trail connector that will be built. They are negotiating agreements to purchase the rights-of-way. Stone said they are hoping to start working on the trail connector in the fall, since it's ready to be sent for bid. Public works committee will review the city services bids that were received, for such jobs as electrician and plumber.

Berea 2017 Prom: Under The Big Top

By Constance Wright

A much anticipated event was held at the Russel Acton Folk Center on Saturday, April 29, as Berea Community High School hosted their annual prom.

Juniors and Seniors, along with other guests and faculty members, were welcomed with a variety of red and gold decorations, balloons, giant popcorn containers, and much more to fit perfectly with this year's theme of an "Old World Circus." The junior class prom committee spent countless hours and weeks planning and decorating this year's prom, making sure every detail was perfect and precise for prom night.

The night was filled with great music and good times, with many seniors taking the time to enjoy the night's festivities. Many seniors were excited to soak up the fun of their last high school dance. "My favorite part of prom is all the fantastically undanceable songs that we play," said senior Austin Jennings. Jennings was particularly nostalgic about attending one of Berea's last high school events of the year: "What I'll really miss the most is my friends and having a good time with them at prom."

Later on into the night, the BCHS prom court was announced. Prom Queen was awarded to Eyde Roberts and Prom King was awarded to Jelani McCray. First runners up: Katie Okumu and Kaleb Conley; Second runners up: Bri Goodin and Cody Warford; and Third runners up were Jordan Sandefur and Chandler Goins.

Prom King and Queen Edey Roberts and Jelani McCray. Bottom L: Emy Lovell and Sam House. Bottom M: Sylvia Johnson and Lydia Zaring. Bottom R: Jordan Adams and Josh Centers (photos by authors).

"I thought prom was really fun," explained Crystal Williams, a member of the junior class. "I'm going to miss dancing with [seniors] Ruth, Mallory, Alex and Jordan." After the dance ended, many headed over to Berea United Methodist Church's Parish Home for a free prom breakfast.

Many of the student's parents and faculty and staff provided pancakes, fruit, muffins, a variety of breakfast type foods. The night, as many may agree, was a memorable one. Both juniors and seniors celebrated one last dance with each other as students at Berea Community High School.

SaraCare event embraces motto: "It comes from the heart"

By Virginia Deaver
Pirate Managing Editor

On Thursday, April 21, nearly six hundred members of the Berea community flocked to Union Church to eat, donate, and listen to heartfelt music at the annual 2017 Saracare event.

The event, started 10 years ago in 2007, was created in order to raise money for the Saracare fund and celebrate the life and goodwill of Sara Kennedy. Sara, who attended Berea Community High School in the early 2000s, was a highly involved member of the Berea Community and a dedicated student athlete; after a hard-fought battle with Rhabdomyosarcoma, a rare childhood cancer which develops from connective tissues in the body, Sara passed away on March 23, 2005 - two months before she was scheduled to graduate from Berea Community Independent High School. Although Sara may have lost her battle, her parents, Eddie and Norma Kennedy, have never stopped spreading the compassion and love embodied by Sara's character; for over a decade the Kennedy family and the Saracare fund have raised money to support the work of Sara's former healthcare providers at the Kentucky Children's Hospital and the Pediatric Oncology Clinic, as well as families within the Berea Community struggling with cancer. "People who support SaraCare have embraced our motto 'it comes from the heart', which truly reflects Sara and how she lived her life. Thinking about, caring about, [and loving] other people. We [Norma and I] think that is something easy to embrace," stated Eddie Kennedy.

The basement of the Church became flooded with the mouthwatering scents of warm pasta marinara and bread for the event's $5 spaghetti dinner, during which patrons had the opportunity to browse through the raffle of items donated from various businesses within Berea. Student and Teacher volunteers from Madison Southern and Berea Community High School helped serve dinner and maintain the dining room. As the meal ended, guests and donors were invited upstairs to the Union Church Sanctuary to hear musical performances from local and non-local musicians. "Music is the universal language," said Kennedy, "and each year talented artists express love, hope, and joy through that language of song...Each year we have this incredible free concert which ends with a joyous audience sing-along."

Before a brief intermission during the concert, Eddie and Norma showed a video titled "Sarah's Story in Her Own Words"; before her passing, a New York City Choir made up of 115 voices heard of Sarah's story and wished to dedicate the title song on their "We Have Overcome" Album to the teen.

The video showcased Sara's gratitude towards the choir and the loved ones who had stuck by her side through her fight. At the time of the film's creation, Sara's Rhabdomyosarcoma had gone into remission; every phrase she uttered during her interview was filled with hope, love, gratitude, intelligence, and faith. "It's powerful, our Sara," stated the Kennedys.

Since the Saracare organization began, the fund has raised nearly $175,000. Sara's video and the Saracare Charity Concert and Dinner serve as powerful reminders of how a community can come together to celebrate a beautiful life passed and work towards helping to make better the current lives of others.

Danish Students visit Berea Community on annual trip

By Levi Saderholm
Pirate Staff Reporter

On April 15, a group of about fifty Danish student gymnasts arrived in the Seabury lower parking lot from the Cincinnati Airport. After a several hour flight, the students had finally landed in the United States of America. The Danish students were set to travel all around Kentucky, visiting schools and performing for people. Their itinerary was full of cultural experiences, educational opportunities, and dance performances, but on the third day of their visit, they found time to visit the public schools of Berea. One group went to Madison Southern while another came to Berea Community High School.

Several Danish students were assigned to tour guide students at Berea Community, whom they followed around all day. While experiencing the classes of their tour guides, the students got to see how teenagers in America really learn.

Berea has a very long standing relationship with the Danish school that these fifty students came from. The journalism department at Berea Community has, almost every year, partnered with the Danish students to share experiences and learn about cultural differences.

Signe Amalie, a Danish student, said, "I think my favorite part [of America] has been the people, they are so open and warm, and they welcome you in a special way."

These students are Danish gymnasts, but Danish Gymnastics is different from conventional Olympic gymnastics that are familiar to many Americans. Danish Gymnastic performance is set to music, and incorporates elements of modern dance between tumbling exercises. The focus on clean lines and precise movements shows their dedication to practice and perfection.

Students at Berea Community thoroughly enjoyed sharing Berea's culture with the Danish students, and learning more about a popular Danish artform. Berea Community looks forward to strengthening the relationship between the two schools in the future.

Berea Pirates Baseball Overview

By Gabriel Abaunza
Pirate Staff Reporter

In the past few weeks, the BCHS baseball team has competed in multiple nail-biting games.

On April 21, the BCHS baseball team faced off against Bracken county defending home field with an amazing victory of 13-3. After their game against Bracken county the BCHS Baseball team went on to face Model, but would unfortunately lose 19-2. Ben Maynard stated, "While we may not have won tonight, this game does not define the team, we plan on progressing and getting better as this season continues." The Friday, the team went on to play Lynn Camp in a double header, losing the first game and then coming back and winning 8-3.

As the season progressed, the Pirates seemed to pick up speed. On May 2, The Pirates won their game against Frankfort 24-12. Coach Brent Billings seemed hesitant to express great excitement, saying, "...it's not the best season [we've played], but the team is progressing from our past and we only plan to get better." Coach Billings did note his hope for the future, however, adding, "...next season we hope to develop more as a team and come together to win more games."

As the season continues, the Berea Pirates Baseball team looks onwards to winning more matches, and continuing to work on skills essential to the game.

KDE Commissioner visits science class on tour of Madison County

By Lydia Zaring
Pirate Staff Reporter

On April 13, BCS had a very special visitor, Dr. Stephen Pruitt, the Kentucky Department of Education Commissioner. Dr. Pruitt toured several Madison County schools while in the area, and he specifically toured science classrooms as he is a former science teacher.

Dr. Pruitt helped write the standards for Science in Kentucky, so both of our high school Science teachers took this opportunity to discuss these standards with him. Mr. Preece, the high school Chemistry teacher, stated that, "They [the NGES standards] aren't necessarily explicit in what to teach, but if you look close enough, they are concepts that we normally teach, but we just have to think about it a little bit to see how the concepts are folded in." The Commissioner's visit was beneficial, not just because BCS's high school science teachers could learn more about standards, but because Dr. Pruitt was able to see the way that Berea Community interacts with its students. It's important for students and staff to see the face of the testing faculty and not just the resulting tests.

Mr. Woodward was one of the teachers who received a classroom visit from the KDE Commissioner, and he happened to be doing a unit on evolution, which prompted an activity involving multiple live snakes. Mr. Woodward said the activity wasn't planned for the visit; in fact, he said, "I didn't intentionally change anything... my student from Berea had the snakes, and so we did the snakes. I actually thought it seemed too much of a gimmick, but I did it anyways... the point of [the] standards is to use really hands on and interesting things to get at the content, so like being interested comes first and getting the content comes second." This allows students to become more involved in their learning because they're actually interested in the content.

"Walk for Autism" raises awareness and funds for exceptional children

By Malcolm Davis

On the 27 of April, the combined efforts of the Berea Community Differently Abled Club, Wellness Club and Hogg Therapy Associates promoted awareness and acceptance of autism in Madison County. The event, entitled the "Walk for Autism," was organized largely by Wellness Club sponsor Cathy Jones and Susie Harris, sponsor of the Differently Abled Club. The event was held at The Berea City Park during the school day. The event was a forty-five minute half-mile that welcomed all participants.

The walk included many faculty, staff, and students from the Berea Community School District who sported signs and stood up for Autism Awareness on the warm afternoon. The participation fee was two dollars to march and five dollars to receive a bracelet. The bracelets were donated by Cat-Snap Fashion Jewelry, a generous small business. All proceeds from the "Walk for Autism" event went to Berea Community's Exceptional Children Department to benefit students with special needs.

The Differently Abled Club was started by Alumnus Nick Carpenter, an Eagle Scout, and a member of Troop No.74. Earlier this year, Carpenter met with Representative Jonathan Shell at the 874K Coalition Advocacy Day and Rally at the Capitol. He gained recognition from Congressman Andy Barr for his creation of the Differently Abled Club and was most recently inducted into the Berea Community High School Hall of Fame.

Carpenter has previously noted, "We are already past the awareness stage...people know there is autism — now we are working towards acceptance."

This was not the first event spearheaded by Berea Community's Differently Abled Club. During the 2015-2016 school year, Carpenter organized the "Zumba for Autism" fundraiser in partnership with Saint Joseph, which took place on school grounds. The inaugural event raised money and awareness for autism research and acceptance. The event raised nearly $1,000.

In October 2016, The Differently Abled club organized a bake sale to commemorate Down Syndrome Awareness Month. The event was a fundraiser for Berea Elementary student Landon - previously featured as "The Pirate

That Can Do Anything- whose family sought to raise money for the organization "Down Syndrome Awareness of Central Kentucky."

A participant in the most recent "Walk for Autism," seventh-grader Quentin Morgan, had high hopes for the event. "I want it to stop people from making fun of autistic people, and bring awareness to it," said Morgan.

The march has been deemed a success, with over 100 participants registered to the event and a similar number participating. According to Berea Community High School principal Donna Lovell, The Exceptional Children's Department made more than $250, an exceptional amount considering the event's smaller scale.

In the future, the Wellness Club and Differently Abled Club hope to collaborate on a community-wide Spring Festival, where vendors can donate some of their proceeds to the Differently Abled club while making a profit. As noted by Wellness Club sponsor Cathy Jones, "My dream is that the [club] continues to grow as students become more aware."

The Berea Community School District has long been a champion of diversity and acceptance in the student body. The committed involvement of the Differently Abled club while still in its beginning stages is further proof of the student body's commitment to awareness and inclusion.

The school district would like to extend its thanks to Hogg Therapy Associates and Cat-Snap Fashion Jewelry for their support.

BCHS Spanish Club partners with Chilean school

By Emy Lovell
Pirate Staff Reporter

This year, both of Berea Community High School's Spanish II classes, instructed by Candy Worley, are communicating with a sister school in Chile, Deutsche Schule Osorno, for a Diversity and Acceptance Project. The school's Spanish II class started their project at the end of March and has been communicating with the school from Chile ever since.

The project started when the school from Chile got in contact with Ms. Worley. Berea's Spanish classes often reach out to schools in Spanish speaking countries to better each school's knowledge of the difference in their cultures. This year, Deutsche Schule Osorno reached out to Berea Community because they had recently enrolled a lot of refugees from Haiti. The Chilean school needed some help from Berea students to share how they show acceptance throughout our school. According to Maria Murphy, sophomore and student leader on the project, "They're predominantly white because they're a dutch colony, so they speak German and Spanish..."

recently within the school there's Haitian refugees... there's not an understanding of who these people are."

The Spanish students have been making a video representing Berea Community's diversity and acceptance by interviewing fellow students and teachers. "I think something our school really has going for us is our acceptance," stated Cora Livingston, another sophomore and fellow student leader. Maria Murphy added: "We don't [necessarily have] a diverse range of skin colors or cultural backgrounds, but we have social economic differences...we have people here [who are not] afraid to be themselves. You're not going to be friends with everyone, but you'll have mutual respect, and that's something that's really cool and special." With this project, Ms. Worley and the students involved also expect to achieve their goals of practicing Spanish, and hope to help the Chilean school to practice their English. "... we already have diversity in our school and we have training for our students on diversity and acceptance. They [the Chilean students] are just now coming to the point... where they're having some diversity...they were looking to us to share with them how we deal with that. [Our] main thing was to practice our Spanish and let them practice their English and learn about other cultures. Through other cultures, we learn more about ourselves," said Ms. Worley, to explain the purpose of the Diversity and Acceptance Project.

By the end of this project, the students and Ms. Worley hope to strengthen their connection with Deutsche Schule Osorno and give them the help and support they need to spread acceptance throughout their school.

Travel Club Editorial: "A truly memorable experience"

By Sam House
Pirate Managing Editor

On March 30, the Friday before the official start of our spring break, I and a group of nine other students, chaperoned by Mrs. Jody Flara and Mr. Eef Fontanez, flew from Lexington to Atlanta, and then from Atlanta to London's Heathrow Airport. We landed at around 11:00 a.m. the next day. After making our way through customs and finding our checked luggage, we were introduced to our tour guide for the week, Trevor. Trevor works for a company called Education First, or EF, who manages a variety of educational travel programs. These include trips such as our's and the foreign exchange program which brought our school two new students this year.

From Heathrow, we began our initial exploration of one of the most famous cities in the world: London. Within a few hours of being in the city, we had already seen the MI6 building of James Bond fame, the site of Shakespeare's original Globe Theatre, and the famous Tower Bridge. We made our way to the London Bridge where we met with another school group from Juanita High School in Washington. They accompanied us the length of the trip. We ended our first day in London with dinner just across the street from St. Paul's Cathedral. That concluded the first of our three and a half days in England.

My first impression of London was that it had a youthful and energetic vibe. Many students our age and younger were spending their time walking along the river, having interesting discussions on a variety of topics, while a variety of street performers ranging from musicians to magicians attracted crowds. I felt like I heard more languages being spoken in a few minutes than I had heard in my whole life.

In the following days, we took a bus tour of London, stopped off at Buckingham Palace to watch the changing of the guard, visited Windsor Castle (while the Queen was there in her private apartments), and visited Trafalgar Square. On our last day in England, we visited the beautiful Canterbury Cathedral before making our way to Dover. From Dover, we boarded the ferry that would carry us across the English Channel into Calais, France. On the bus in France, one of the girls from the Seattle group and I gave a short French lesson to the other travellers. As we are both currently studying French, it was a great opportunity to share and practice what we have learned.

During our time in France, we had dinner in the lovely small town of Honfleur, visited the D-Day beaches of Normandy and the American Cemetery in Normandy, and toured the beautiful Chartres Cathedral. We spent a great deal of our time wandering the streets of Paris, visiting Notre Dame, the Eiffel Tower, and Sacré-Coeur, a basilica which overlooks the city.

We certainly stayed busy on the trip, seeing as much as we could in the span of a week. While I can't say that we were ever really able to fully submerge ourselves in the culture of the areas we visited, our trip was a truly memorable and valuable experience. I loved it, and I can't wait to go back.

Rep. Lewis led around 600 peaceful protestors at the march, demanding an end to discrimination in voter registration. Despite being brutally attacked at the march and enduring more than 40 arrests, physical attacks and serious injuries over the years, Rep. Lewis remains a dedicated advocate for non-violent, peaceful demonstrations. During his time in Congress, he has used his platform to speak out about the need for accessible education for everyone, health care for all and equal civil rights for all disenfranchised groups.

Patriots have been competing, and only the second based here in Berea. Rob Nickerson, the owner/head coach/quarterback, lives in Berea and stated that it's a good, central location for many of their players. They have 55 players on their roster, and are currently 9-1 for the season.

"We struggled last year," Ozzie Combs, who has played all three years for the Kentucky Patriots, said. "But this past year we pulled in a lot more college talent."

The Patriots were rated the top seed after their win last Saturday, when they faced the Knoxville Knights in Berea and beat them 24-0. The Knights were their only loss for the season, and they shut them out the second time while scoring four touchdowns.

"We didn't score any extra points," Combs confirmed, laughing a little. "We play by NFL rules, so it's really hard to make the extra points."

This Saturday, the Patriots will face the Cleveland Storm at 3 p.m. in Berea. If they win, they will clinch the top spot in the Alliance Football League, and will receive a bye and an automatic slot in the championship game. The Patriots have been using the Berea Expansion Park football field this season, so Saturday will take place there. They are hoping that Madison Southern will agree to let them use their football field for the championship game, so it can be played in Berea.

"Home field advantage is huge in semi-pro football," Nickerson said. "With people working who have other commitments, it can be hard for them to travel for games. If it's at your home field, you'll have a larger roster."

Both Nickerson and Combs played football together at Berea Community High School, and they pulled in some other old teammates from Berea as well. Jacob McKinney, who led the state in rushing when he played, and Michael Scribner from Berea Community are both playing for the Kentucky Patriots. Other Berea Community alumni playing for the Kentucky Patriots are Joe Parker, Andrew Nickerson, and Derrick Castle, who just graduated.

Scribner is the defensive coach, and Combs is the line coach and general manager.

Both Nickerson and Combs state that they love playing with their old teammates, and also meeting new football players who have joined. Tony Dixon, a former U.K. running back, has been a big part of their offense. He also is their offensive coordinator. Nickerson stated that every three times Dixon handles the ball, he scores. They don't play him a lot, however, because they want to save his skills for crucial plays.

"He's a little Sherman tank," Nickerson said. "He makes one cut, and then he's clear for the score."

The Patriots' real strength is defense, however. They racked up five shutouts this season, with a lot of speed on their defense. They constantly pressure the quarterback, with four or five Patriots ganging up on the ball on every play.

The Patriots are counting on that speed this Saturday against Cleveland, who has the biggest team in the league. Their line averages 6'4, and 300 pounds. Nickerson plans to use their speed on the outside to move the ball.

The Alliance Football League has six teams, and the rules state that all teams must play each other twice, one home game and one away. The Kentucky Patriots have never faced the Cleveland Storm before, so they will play them the next two Saturdays. Hopefully they will keep the number one spot with one win, and can then prepare for the championship game in June.

"I really hope people come out and support us," Nickerson said. "It's a really good thing to be involved in, and we enjoy playing in Berea. We've developed our process, and once that gets developed, everything else falls into place."

Splash and Dash, an Aquathlon, to Return This Summer

The City of Berea Parks and Recreation Department in collaboration with the City of Berea Trail Town Committee will bring back the Daniel Boone Splash and Dash.

The event is open to all children ages 6 to 15 years and takes place Saturday, June 24, at 8:30 a.m. at the Berea City pool.

The Daniel Boone Splash and Dash is a US-AT-sanctioned and certified youth aquathlon—a multisport event consisting of a swim and a run. After swimming, participants will exit the pool and walk, run, or jog on Berea's shared use/multi-use trails. The idea emerged from the City of Berea's Trail Town Committee as one way to highlight the multi-use trails. Last year 80 percent of the participants came from outside the city.

Children ages 6 to 8 will swim 50 meters and run 500 yards; ages 9 to 10 will swim 100 meters and run half a mile; ages 11 to 12 will swim 150 meters and run one mile; and ages 13 to 15 will swim 200 meters and run one-and-a-half miles. The Splash and Dash will be followed by an awards ceremony, during which participants will receive an official Splash and Dash shirt and a finisher's medal. Food, music and refreshments will be on hand for participants and guests.

The event began as a special project of the Berea Trail Town Committee and a collaboration with the Entrepreneurship for the Public Good (EPG) program at Berea College. EPG Director Peter Hackbert envisioned the event as a way to highlight Berea's multi-use paths and to combat childhood obesity.

The event will be staffed by EPG's and Eastern Kentucky University student volunteers, well as volunteers from the City of Berea Department of Parks and Recreation.

Four locals received awards at the East Kentucky Leaders Foundation's Conference on Thursday, April 27. Above, Loyal Jones, (l-r), received the top award -- the Tony Turner Award, Bill Best, with his wife sitting next to him, received the Private Industrial Award, Jane Stephenson, standing, received the Organization Award, and Warren Brunner received the Culture and Arts Award.

Bereans Honored at Leadership Conference

By Al Cross
 Director, Institute for Rural Journalism and Community Issues

Now 89, Appalachian scholar and humorist Loyal Jones has seen his native region evolve from a land of coal camps, mine wars and mechanization to one looking for new industry and lots of help. And he still looked ahead Thursday night as he accepted the East Kentucky Leadership Foundation's top award. "We have a viable culture here," the Berea resident told the dinner audience at Eastern Kentucky University. "We have a lot of problems, but we have a lot of people with great values."

Several exemplars of those values received awards. David McFaddin, an EKU vice president, won the Public Individual Award; Chris Hall of Perry County won the Youth Leadership Award for his work on weather and safety; and Bruce Parsons of Hazard won the Media and Technology Award for starting The Holler, a social learning network. Three other winners live in Berea. Jane Stephenson's Berea-based New Opportunity School for Women received the Organization Award for its work to help women face challenges and improve their lives. She said the award "really goes to the 900 women" who have completed the program. Bill Best, who collects, raises and sells heirloom seeds and new varieties of plants at his farm, won the Private Individual Award for service to the region. He recently published, Kentucky Heirloom Seeds.

Best told the crowd, "We may be the only place on Earth where there are more seeds available than there were 100 years ago." Appalachian photographer Warren Brunner of Berea won the Culture and Arts Award. He said of his career, "What got it all started was Loyal Jones," who sent him to Pike County to photograph the first group of Appalachian Volunteers in 1964. Jones won the Tony Turner Award, named for the late news director of Hazard's WYMT-TV and given for major contributions to the betterment of the region, and not every year. Jones recalled a story about an Old Regular Baptist minister whose congregation gave him an award for humility, which it took back when he bragged about it. "I'm going to brag about this award," he said, "modestly, of course." Earl Gohl did a little bragging earlier. The federal co-chair of the Appalachian Regional Commission said "We're on the right track" in Eastern Kentucky, a chronically poor region that has lost more than half the jobs in its major industry, coal. "There are great things happening here," Gohl said, citing new philanthropy, development of entrepreneurs, job training, a better education system, the University of Pikeville, and a regional broadband network, which he called "a tough slog." "Make no mistake, we are in a time of great transition," said Peter Hille, chair of the foundation and head of the Berea-based Mountain Association for Community Economic Development. "We relied too much for too long on a single industry, and we were not prepared for this transition." Hille added, "To have a fair shot at building a new economy requires a level playing field. It's hard to build a new economy in a place where broken markets make it harder to start new businesses; where the natural environment has been compromised; where the infrastructure is sorely lacking; and where long-term economic distress has impacted health, education, demographics. The people of Eastern Kentucky deserve a level playing field." There was also a transitional feel in the entertainment, compared to past annual awards dinners of the foundation. The Local Honeys, a banjo-fiddle duo, performed an anti-coal song, Cigarette Trees.

Word From Berea Streets

"If you had to move from Berea, what neighboring area would you like to live in?"

Delbert Rudolph said, "I'd move to Paint Lick or an area similar to that. I'd like to be close to Berea, in a rural setting. I like the country."

Drew Riley said, "I'd move to Richmond! They have cheaper groceries, packaged beer, and no restaurant tax."

Linda Sheldon said, "I'd probably move back to McKee because that's my hometown!"

Berea Makers Market to Debut on Mother's Day Weekend

A brand new event called Berea Makers Market is set to debut in Berea on Mothers' Day weekend. The event is set for May 13 at Russell Acton Folk Center. The Makers Market will feature fresh, modern craft and design from central Kentucky artists, as well as local food, music, kids' activities and hands-on craft demonstrations. Admission is free and open to the public. Berea is currently known as the Folk Arts and Crafts Capital of Kentucky, but local organizers Laura Wick and Michael Startzman hope to show off the other side of Berea: youthful, adventurous, and full of makers who are expanding Berea's "handcrafted" heritage. Attendees can expect to find an array of home goods, modern art prints and decor, jewelry and accessories, handcrafted toys and other delightful items. Berea Makers Market is a celebration of sustainable small business and aims to inject a dose of new entrepreneurial energy into the local craft economy. Some highlights of the event include opportunities to craft personal event souvenirs, to enjoy lively local music and local food, and to participate in kids' crafts. Additional information is available at www.BereaMakersMarket.com.

Several people participated in the Berea Uncorked event on April 25 at the Churchill Building, an event that the GFWC Berea Woman's Club and Berea Arts Council sponsor together. The next two events are scheduled for May 23 and June 27.

Berea Uncorked Proves a Success

On April 14 at the college triangle, the GFWC Berea Woman's Club planted their annual Pinwheel Garden to support nationwide efforts to prevent child abuse.

At their April meeting, the club was honored to host Melissa Gross of Kentucky River Foothills. She discussed their financial workshop series hosted by Berea Parks and Recreation and the new Eastern Kentucky University Scholar House program. Scholar House is an innovative statewide initiative in Kentucky to develop post-secondary educational opportunities for low income single parents and their children.

On April 25, along with the Berea Arts Council, the club sponsored its sixth session of Berea Uncorked, Canvas and Confections. These events are held at the beautiful Churchill Building as a fund raiser for both organizations. The sessions are taught by local artist Jesse Glenn and have proven to be very entertaining and productive. The next two events are scheduled for May 23 and June 27.

More information can be found on the club's Facebook page, GFWC Berea Woman's Club. To register, or to inquire about these events and/or dates, email bereauncorked@gmail.com.

Club members will also host a silent auction at the annual Hospice Derby Eve Gala on May 6. A May 12 meeting will be held at the home of President Judy Halstead to celebrate a successful spring and to plan for a membership event in August. Two members will represent the club at the 122nd annual convention of GFWC Kentucky to be held in Louisville on May 18-20.

The GFWC Berea Woman's Club is a member of the General Federation of Women's Clubs (GFWC) and GFWC Kentucky, both of which are united by a dedication to community improvement through volunteer service. Email gfwcbereaawc@gmail.com for more information.

Berea College Students Win 1st Place in Business Model Competition

Berea College students won first place at the Idea State U contest and $7,500 for their business model. From the left are Stephanie Purvis, Kentucky Innovation Network coach; Berea College students Tran Nguyen, Ishwar Agarwal, and Amar Zulejhc, and Berea College Professor Peter Hackbert.

Berea College students Ishwar Agarwal, Tran Nguyen and Amar Zulejhc won first place and $7,500 in the Idea State U contest recently within the business model category in Lexington.

Idea State U, is a statewide business plan and model competition that encourages entrepreneurship among Kentucky's college and university students. The Berea College team proposed Axle, an online two-sided marketplace, similar to Airbnb, Uber and Nomad, where shadetree mechanics offer high-quality personalized auto repair and auto maintenance services to advance independent business ownership at an affordable cost for car users at their convenient hours and location.

Amar had uncovered the problem faced by motorists who experienced the "upselling" techniques of auto repairers and maintenance providers.

Eli Conley to Perform at Spotlight

West-coast national touring singer-songwriter Eli Conley is on tour in support of his new release, Strong and Tender, and is playing a show at The Spotlight Playhouse in Berea on Thursday, May 11.

Also on the bill is Berea's own Appalachian folksinger and instrumentalist Sam Gleaves.

Conley's music has been described as "akin to the classic era of the singer-songwriter genre - think Jackson Browne, early Elton John, Stephen Stills, and the more recent work of Melissa Etheridge". As a contemporary folk artist, Conley combines the themes of both traditional and socio-political folk with the issues and trends of today.

A classically trained singer growing up, he was also heavily influenced by his Appalachian roots, having grown up in rural Virginia. Folk music is "in my musical DNA," says Conley.

The new record Strong and Tender follows both traditional and contemporary folk traditions, telling rich stories ranging from the highs and lows of love to political themes. The title track Strong and Tender urges the listener to "love yourself strong and tender, let the people that you love hold tight to you" during times of disappointment and misunderstanding.

Since releasing his debut album At the Seams in 2013, Conley has been featured in The Huffington Post and The Advocate. He has opened for Grammy winner Kimya Dawson and The Reverend Peyton's Big Damn Band.

The Spotlight Playhouse is located at 100 Churchill Court in Berea. Tickets are $10 and can be purchased at the door or online at www.thespotlight-playhouse.com Box office telephone is 859-756-0011. The show starts on 7 p.m. on Thursday, May 11. For more about the artists see www.eliconley.com and www.samgleaves.com

Books: Part of the Stories of Our Lives

Shelf Notes

Ruthie Maslin, Madison Co. Library

Every year around this time I decide I need to downsize my personal possessions. And as I navigate around stacks of books in my house everywhere I look, naturally I decide I need to get rid of some of those books.

After all, I can donate them to the Madison County Public Library. They will find a new good home either at the library or in a Friends of the Library book sale. It's not like I'm putting them out in the cold.

And every year around this time, I start making the rounds of all my bookshelves and book piles and "to be read" stacks canting crazily beside chairs and under tables.

And every year, I fall back in love with all my books. And you know how many I get rid of? Most years, the answer is zero. I get rid of zero books. Each book has its own story - where I got it, what my life was like when I first read it, what it meant to me at the time.

Even the way the books are grouped together on my shelves tells me a story. One of my favorite little shelves holds this group: The Metamorphoses by Ovid; 4 books by John Gardner - The Wreckage of Agathon, Grendel, The Sunlight Diaries, and Nickel Mountain; The Souls of Black Folk, by W.E.B. DuBois; Soul on Ice, by Eldridge Cleaver; Point Counter Point, by Aldous Huxley; How to Solve It, by G. Polya; and The Hobbit, by J.R.R. Tolkien.

That little group has been there forever - some of my favorite books from my youth. Most of them have a lot of wear and tear on them. They are a bit dusty, and the covers are faded from years of sunshine. I will probably never re-read them. I know I should pass them on to someone else. But I cannot bear to let them go. They are a part of my own life story.

I recently attended a talk by author Azar Nafisi at the Kentucky Public Library Association Conference in Lexington. She is a brilliant, amazing and powerful speaker, and if you ever get a chance to hear her, jump on it. She's the author of Reading Lolita in Tehran: A Memoir in Books, her account of the secret book group she assembled while living in Iran in which women gathered to read and discuss forbidden Western literature -- books by Jane Austen and F. Scott Fitzgerald, for example.

After hearing her talk, I bought her newest book, The Republic of Imagination: A Life in Books. I have just started reading it, and I'm captivated. It is Nafisi's story of becoming an American citizen, both through the official channels and through her journey through American literature, and you can check it out at the Madison County Public Library, along with several of her other books.

"Stories are not mere flights of fantasy or instruments of political power and control," she writes. "They link us to our past, provide us with critical insight into the present and enable us to envision our lives not just as they are but as they should be or might become."

I wish I could have expressed my feelings about my little bookshelf as eloquently as Nafisi did about the world of letters. She got it exactly right.

I think of one of my most beloved books on that shelf, and although I first read it several decades ago, John Gardner's version of the ancient epic poem Beowulf, has never left me.

"Time is the mind, the hand that makes (fingers on harpstrings, heroes-swords, the acts, the eyes of queens). By that I kill you," says Beowulf to Grendel. Beowulf is the hero and Grendel the feared monster, but in that moment, Grendel cries out for his mother, and in that moment, Grendel captured my heart - I still tear up thinking about it. And that forever impacted my perception of "the other." Are monsters really monsters? Or are they lost souls crying out for their mothers?

These books on my little shelf are part of who I am - how could I possibly get rid of them?

I suppose that is part of why I am so passionate about libraries and what they mean to a community. Libraries hold so much of the story of who we are, a story that changes and grows every day. Sometimes it seems to me that the library is a living thing - I swear I feel it breathing in and out, shifting and murmuring, pulsing and purring.

I hope you will take a few moments this spring to look over the bookshelves of your own lives. What titles line up there? What is the story of your stories? And I hope you will stop by the Madison County Public Library and discover the next story in your journey. I'll see you here soon!

Post Office Food Drive Saturday

By Beth Myers
Citizen Editor

This Saturday, local mail carriers from all over the country, including Berea, will be gathering non-perishable food for local community food banks from all the residents that they serve.

Residents of Berea are asked to leave out bags or boxes of food next to the mailbox before their letter carrier comes to deliver the mail. The carrier will then take care of picking up the food, sorting it, and delivering it to such organizations as the Berea Food Bank and the Berea Baptist Church food closet.

The Stamp Out Hunger food drive occurs every second Saturday in May. In the past 24 years, the drive has collected more than one billion pounds of food. Nearly 1,500 branches of the National Association of Letter Carriers in all 50 states, Puerto Rico, Guam and the Virgin Islands are involved. The food drive occurs in more than 10,000 cities and towns across America.

The United States Postal Service, National Association of Letter Carriers, National Rural Letter Carriers' Association, AFL-CIO, Feeding America, United Way, Valassis and Valpak Direct Marketing Systems are all supporting this year's Stamp Out Hunger food drive.

County Discusses Charging Daily Rate at Detention Center

By Beth Myers
Citizen Editor

Earning some revenue to offset the cost of the Madison County jail was the topic of discussion at Tuesday's fiscal court meeting, as court members considered whether to charge a daily rate.

Judge Executive Reagan Taylor brought up the question of charging a fee, reporting that when he called nine different counties, six of them were charging a daily fee ranging from $10 to $30. Currently, the Madison County Detention Center only charges a $20 booking fee.

"I wanted to open this up for discussion, because it would help us with our jail budget," Taylor said. "We're reimbursing the detention center $1.7 million right now."

Many counties that did charge the daily rate did not have great results when it came to collection, Taylor reported. Clark County had the best collection rate with 60 percent, and they charged the lowest daily rate at $10. Taylor said if the detention center did charge a daily rate, it should probably be on the low end since that increased the collection percentage.

County Attorney Marc Robbins stated that it was authorized by state statute for counties to charge a per diem, and it could be a good way to earn some additional revenue. He warned, however, that many people wouldn't be able to afford it.

"We wouldn't want to further punish them if they can't pay by adding on time," Robbins said. "The statute does allow civil lawsuits if someone doesn't pay, but then you have to count the court cost versus how much you can actually collect."

Robbins also pointed out that Madison County could have more trouble collecting since many of their inmates came from out of town.

First Responders to Hold Summer Camp in July

By Beth Myers
Citizen Editor

The fire department and police department of Berea will be partnering this summer to offer a camp for middle-school aged kids, free of charge.

The summer camp will take place from July 24-28, with events starting around 8 a.m. So far the first responders have around 40 kids signed up, and they can accept up to 48.

Brent Bradley from the Berea Police Department and Will Rodgers from the Berea Fire Department have been working with a few city council members and city staff on the programming for the camp. They want it to be fun for the kids, as well as teaching them a bit about their jobs.

"I think in the line of work we are in," Bradley said, "with young children, they often think we're bad, and we're the ones to take people to jail. We want to show kids that we want to help them, get

Young Berea Musician to Attend Brevard Summer Institute

By Beth Myers
Citizen Editor

This year, 15-year-old Nathan Richey will give up his summer to participate in a rigorous, six-week musical institute at Brevard Music Center.

And for Nathan, this is no sacrifice.

The rising junior from Berea, who attends Model Laboratory School, has been playing clarinet since 5th grade, and it has become one of his great passions, though it didn't quite start out that way. Nathan first discovered the clarinet when he tried different instruments at a music store.

"I tried the trumpet, saxophone, and clarinet, but I couldn't get any sound out of the trumpet and saxophone. I got some kind of sound out of the clarinet so I decided to play that one," Nathan said with a slight shrug.

Nathan first start-

In the back row are Aiden Nail, Gabriella Uzzle, Chaden Lovins, Nate Fairchild, Samuel Stefan, John Vela, and Nate Roberts. Berea Students with Perfect Attendance Receive Free Bicycles

Berea Community Elementary School celebrated a year of achievement on April 28 with a "Rock It Out" assembly.

Teachers dressed as rock stars and performed in skits to encourage students to work their hardest for the remaining month of the school year. Principal Paula Gordon and Student Assistance Manager Mary Pat Nixon-Azbill also honored 15 students who had perfect attendance up to this point in the school year.

"Last year, we had four students with perfect attendance," reports Gordon. "This year broke the record."

Each student with perfect attendance was awarded a new bicycle. Three students, who had a second year in a row of perfect attendance, received a gift card to Walmart.

"Thanks to the generous donations of our Compass Team (PTO), Walmart, the Berea Masonic Lodge, BCES staff, and Berea alumni, we were able to help students see that 90 percent of success is showing up," says Ms. Nixon-Azbill.

When students are in school on a daily basis, research shows that they are much more likely to read on grade level and eventually graduate. BCES congratulates these students and thanks community sponsors for helping reward them.

"We plan to give away even more bikes next year. It's a great day to be a Pirate," says Principal Gordon.

I love you always Ma

We laid my precious mom to rest a week ago today, on what would have been her 54th birthday. Words can't describe how absolutely heartbroken we are at this immeasurable loss.

My mom was amazing; her love was genuine and ran deep. She always stayed by Kelsey's and my side, taking the absolute best care of us. She was one of a kind, irreplaceable, beautiful inside and out, smart, funny, direct, sweet, caring, selfless, genuine, and so much more.

She loved God and His son, our Savior, Jesus. She loved her family, music, good food, soaking up the sunshine, iris flowers, and all things 70s.

I urge everyone to spend as much time as possible with those you love and cherish. It's quite easy to take this life for granted and think we have plenty of time left with people when in reality none of us knows what tomorrow will bring. We aren't promised tomorrow and our lives truly are but vapors.

Moreover I desire for everyone to know God's saving grace. God has given me hope, peace, comfort, and strength that only He can provide. I know my mom followed Jesus so I have no doubt when it's my time to be called home I will see her again. She'll be waiting with open arms.

Such peace comes from knowing right now she is happy, healed, and has no worries or pain. What a reunion she's had with her dearly missed brother Jack and all those that have gone on before her.

I can not thank everyone enough for their support during this time. To each person that prayed for us I thank you. Thank you for sending flowers, cards, letters, food, gifts, and money. Thank you for visiting, calling, texting, and sending messages to check in. We are so appreciative of the wonderful care given by Dr. Scott Pierce, Dr. Kelleher, and Hospice. Mom appreciated it so much and we did as well. Thank you to everyone who supported us at the visitation and funeral. Thank you to the staff of Reppert Funeral Home and Kenny Davis.

I ask that you please continue to lift my family up in prayer as we will miss our beloved mom, daughter, sibling, wife, aunt, cousin, and friend each day we are on this earth.

I love you always Ma.

So What Is Berea?

Letters from Berea
Beth Myers
Editor

In Berea, many people are very aware of tourism, and have opinions on how effective city efforts are in bringing people into town. When I've lived in other towns, I was never that aware of the tourism department, or even had a clue of what their strategies were for outreach or their budget amount.

Of course, small towns are different in that people are able to keep up with city happenings, and people in Berea have always been much more involved with the runnings of the town than the average bear. That makes my job easier, in that I get several calls a week about story ideas, but not so easy for city staff who have to field the complaints and questions of the involved populace.

The Tourism Department has always had a harder than average job with marketing Berea, because the first question of "What is Berea," can have twenty different answers depending on who you ask. I think our diversity of opinion can be a strength in many ways, but not when trying to come up with a tag line for our town.

Many people, and I include myself in that number, are not crazy about the slogan, "Where Art's Alive" that has been adopted. For one thing, the art community in Berea is not extremely visible in our town -- one has to live here before they are able to uncover the many layers of the town's relationship with the arts. Secondly, "Art's Alive," just doesn't capture me -- it doesn't give me a tone or premise of our town that resonates. "Alive" is not a word that paints a picture for me, it's not an adjective that works when paired with "art." Okay, so art is happening, it's not dead, but other than not needing resuscitation, what's going on?

The advertising term Berea Proud, which has been printed on buttons and bumper stickers, has a much stronger feel, but I know that two words don't a tag line make. But it does capture a very important aspect of our town -- we love it. We want to be here, we want to claim Berea as our home, and we have no shame in shouting out to the world that we're from here.

It's been hard for me to think of a good tag line. I tried to think of what ideas of Berea we all hold in common -- what is that marketable idea of our town that you could sell? Something other than picking out one aspect such as art? The advertising agency that Berea Tourism is using right now has a series of Destination Awesome that I liked, but that is an advertising term, and not a phrase to capture a specific community identity.

So what do we agree on? We all love the town, and I think for the most part we do appreciate the mix of natives and people who have moved here, like myself. But there's also a Berea mystique, right? Something about our unique history, our early roots in equality, our connection to Appalachia that includes the arts, our dedication to service and hospitality. People don't just want to visit, they want to live here.

Some people have called it Mayberry, but that doesn't work for me either. Mayberry symbolizes a different time, a very homogenous vision that isn't Berea. (And seriously, didn't Mayberry remind you of an emmeshed dysfunctional family where members spent all their time deceiving each other?) Our community has much more of an edge to it, as we challenge each other and demand to be heard. So the Americana utopia isn't Berea either.

I'd love if readers sent possible tag lines for Berea -- it's a great way to really think about the values that we hold in common, and the ties that hold us together as a town. To focus on the commonalities instead of the differences that get so much attention. Send to editor@thebereacitizen.com or call 859-986-0959. I'd love to hear from you and publish ideas in a future column.

ed with the fifth grade band, but in the following years improved his playing to the point of performing with the Kentucky All-State Band, the Honor Band of America, and Boston University's Tanglewood Institute Young Artists Wind Ensemble. He also participates with the Central Kentucky Youth Orchestra. This year, he was accepted for both the Kentucky Center Governor's School for the Arts and the Brevard Music Center Summer Institute, but he chose to participate in the more prestigious Brevard program.

Nathan will be joining more than 400 other students from all over the world to learn from Keith Lockhart, the music director of the Boston Pops and BBC Orchestra, as well as other acclaimed classical musicians. The Summer Institute starts on June 22, and continues until August. Students and faculty will present over 80 concerts during the summer.

On the website of the Brevard Music Center, it is noted that a powerful sense of community emerges in June as students and faculty work together on the music. Nathan, a soft-spoken teenager, states that this is one of his favorite parts, getting to know other student musicians and performing with them.

"I went to Foster Music Camp at ECU, and I loved the community of it all," Nathan said.

"I made great friends that I'm still in touch with today."

Nathan credits his success with clarinet to Adria Sutherland, a Berea College instructor who has tutored Nathan since the sixth grade. She brought his playing to a whole new level, Nathan said, and showed him what he could accomplish on the clarinet.

"I like that the clarinet has the main part of the melody, and I love the range of tones. It's beautiful, but also lively and energetic," Nathan said.

To apply for Brevard, Nathan had to send in a video of himself performing two solos.

Nathan's dream is to perform full-time in an orchestra. He would love to attend Oberlin College and Conservatory in Ohio, and concentrate on his music.

Patriots Secure Top Spot in League

The Kentucky Patriots shut out the Cleveland Storm this past Saturday 27-0, securing their number one spot and home field advantage for the championship game.

The Patriots, the semi-pro football team based in Berea, scored four touchdowns. Quarterback and owner Rob Nickerson passed for all four touchdowns to Skylar Rose for nine yards, Justin Lewis for 12 yards and six yard, and Joseph Parker for 37 yards.

This is the sixth shut-out for the Patriots' season.

All the points for the Patriots were scored in the first half. During the second half, the team heavily rotated and moved players around to positions they weren't used to.

"We wanted to help make them more well-rounded players," Ozzie Combs, the line coach and general manager, said.

The championship game will take place in Berea at the Madison Southern field, an achievement that Combs and others advocated for. Originally, the Alliance Football League, planned to hold the final game in Clintwood Virginia.

"They were no longer going to be able to hold the venue," Combs said, "so we were able to make a deal with the league to move the championship to Berea, thanks to Madison Southern. It's a really big deal for us to be able to play the championship at home in Berea instead of traveling three hours to Virginia."

The Kentucky Patriots will be facing the Knoxville Knights for the championship game, a team who beat them once, and whom they beat.

"They're one of the older teams around, being established back in 1997," Combs said.

The Patriots are in their third year, and currently have a 10-1 record. The championship game is scheduled for June 10 at 6 p.m. at Southern. The game will be $10 at the gate.

them on a good path."

The fire and police departments first considered some kind of event when former city council member Chester Powell mentioned a possible first responders day at his last meeting. Fire Chief Shawn Sandlin and Police Chief David Gregory left that council meeting already considering what they could offer to the community.

While details are still to be worked out, Bradley stated that they planned to have first responders come in on different days to talk to the kids about relevant issues. In the mornings, the campers would hear from first responders from the fire, police, or EMS, and then in the afternoon games would be played along with team building exercises.

The First Responders will take place at Russel Acton Folk Center, and city personnel has already assured the two departments that they will be given the run of both the Berea Memorial Park and the Expansion Park.

The EMS will teach such topics as first aid, Bradley said, since many kids are home alone for a certain part of the day, either by themselves or caring for a younger sibling. The fire department would teach such topics as fire safety, and the police department could discuss drugs or bullying.

Bradley already had a packet put together for a camp, since he had the idea the year before for the police department camp.

Gregory approached him after the meeting with Powell, and Bradley was instantly on board.

"I had talked with Lieutenant Boyle, and she told me to go for it, but it was hard to get it started," Bradley said. "But this year we're pulling it together."

On Thursday, Sandlin said, the campers will attend a Legends ballgame in the afternoon, and then will camp out at the Expansion Park overnight. For Friday, the last day, games will be played, an obstacle course will be set up, and awards will be handed out. Berea College will be providing food for both the breakfasts and lunches.

Parents and guardians interested in the camp can get an application at the city's website, or stop by the police or fire department. The camp is for children from ages 10 - 13.

Heckman said. "This just feels like a perfect fit."

Berea Home Village is a part of the Village to Village Network, a national organization whose mission is to enable communities to "create a village" to care for the aging in their community. The movement is a member and volunteer-driven organization that works to provide programs, education, and services to residents aged 50 and older.

The Berea Home Village, with an 11-member board, is planning to implement the Berea Village this fall. Heckman will be the sole employee and responsible for setting up the volunteer and business network to support members who wish to stay in their own homes. For now, services will only be given to people who live in the Berea city limits.

Heckman served on the Berea Home Village board this past year, and helped the organization gain office space in the St. Joseph Berea Hospital. She also helped connect them to available funds. When the Home Village discovered that Heckman would be leaving hospital employment, they moved quickly to secure her.

"It felt like divine intervention," Carol Baumann, a board member of Berea Home Village, said. "She's such a perfect fit with her experience managing volunteers, in health care, and marketing and social work."

The Berea Home Village has already received private donations for the organization, as well as some grants. Once they open for business, their members will pay an annual fee to participate in the network.

"I'm so grateful for the hospital donating space and also funding, such as the $5,000 through the St. Joseph Hospital Auxiliary," Heckman said, who stated that she is grateful that she'll continue working at the hospital location.

"Of course, the hardest thing to communicate is that Berea Home Village is not a place or location, but a concept and network where services are provided."

Heckman herself cared for her elderly mother, who passed away a few years ago. She commented that her mother would have benefitted from the services of a Village. Such services can include electricians, dog walkers, house cleaners, or even people to change a light bulb. The nonprofit will rely on volunteers, and Heckman will be responsible to recruit from all areas of the community.

"I was thinking about the high school students, and their needing to do community service for the schools," Heckman said. "I would love to have them volunteer for the program. The great thing about Berea is that people love to volunteer."

Heckman is taking these next two months to travel before starting on her new position. However, she will be present at the fundraiser for Berea Home Village on Monday, May 22 at Churchill's. It will be an English country folk dance for mature beginners with no charge, with Mary Harrell as the caller and Knackered & Number as the band. Some information will be given about the Berea Home Village at the event.

"I feel like Berea is a place just right for the Village to Village network," Heckman said. "We're already doing so many of these things already."

COUNTY

The Madison County Magistrates expressed support of the program, but expressed the desire to keep the daily rate low and to also offer a work program to pay off the amount. Taylor said he would put together a proposal for the next fiscal court meeting on May 23 in Richmond.

Magistrates John Tudor and Larry Combs did not approve the hire of four additional firefighters for Madison County, since they all lived out of county in locations such as East Bernstadt and Manchester. Fire Department Chief Marvin Hereford proposed hiring Robert Harrison, Thomas Bailey, Landon Weaver, and Lincoln Arnold, who were approved with Taylor and Magistrates Roger Barger and Tom Botkin voting affirmatively for the proposal.

Tudor asked if they received applications from Madison County, and Hereford reported that they received 14. He stated that they didn't have the training hours or experience of the four that were chosen.

"We're getting ready to lose experienced firefighters to retirement," Hereford said. "We'll be a very young department and we need some experience. Once we get ahead of this curve, we can hire in advance and get people ready with training."

The Madison County Fire Department received 40 applications in total, and interviewed seven.

In other business:

- Taylor scheduled a work session for May 15 in Richmond to discuss the 2017-18 budget.
- The fiscal court approved the change to the administrative code.

• Jimmy Parsons was re-appointed at the road commissioner for the southern end of Madison County. He just finished another person's term.

• Melinda Jones was approved for the Valley View Authority Board. She will be replacing long-serving member Dr. Murphy. Magistrate Roger Barger announced that they were still looking for another member for the board.

• The city/county blood drive will take place on May 17.

Ten Local Entrepreneurs Graduate from New Venture Program

Last week 10 local entrepreneurs were recognized for completing the Kauffman FastTrac NewVenture program, a 10-week study course that helps prospective business owners turn their ideas into viable commercial enterprises.

a strong local economy because it keeps money circulating locally, and it can create opportunities for younger Bereans to stay and work in town. In concluding his remarks, Connelly encouraged FastTrac graduates in their next big step forward. "This is not the end of your journey. This is just the beginning," Connelly said.

The series was co-sponsored by the City of Berea, Mountain Association for Community Economic Development (MACED), the Small Business Development Center at ECU, and the U.S. Small Business Administration.

Now in its fourth year, the FastTrac series mentored participants in developing several different business models, ranging from operating craft businesses, to sewing, technology services, healing through hiking and outdoor activities, and quilting.

Meanwhile, another would-be entrepreneur in the Ramsay household is Michelle Ramsay, who has had some early success with her quilting business.

Connelly said nurturing entrepreneurs and new businesses in Berea is an important facet of building step forward.

At another point in the event, City of Berea Business Development Director Danny Isaacs also pledged his continuing support for the new businesses.

MACED President Peter Hille and Mayor Steve Connelly addressed the graduates during a brief ceremony, highlighting the important role entrepreneurs play in the economy.

Brian Ramsay has developed a business model for making technology available to customers, allowing them to benefit and learn that technology without having to make a large personal investment in equipment. The business would provide access to technology such as a 3-D printer, laser engraver, and

"It's for anybody that has memories they want to preserve," said Ramsay, who recalled when her mother sent her a bunch of school T-Shirts. "I realized then what value there is in having a quilt with all of those memories on it, and this is for anybody that has memories they want to preserve."

One of the businesses honored last Tuesday, That's Sew You, actually made a sale when Mayor Connelly bought a $5 pil-

Testing for Radon Necessary Step for Purchase of Homes

By Kim Kobersmith
 Citizen Reporter

Doug and Laurie King moved to Berea last November and purchased a home in the Burnamwood neighborhood.

One of the things their realtor suggested was a radon test. Discovering that the radon level in the home was high, they were able to negotiate with the seller to split the cost of the radon mitigation work, and now their home is at a level considered acceptable by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

"My brother-in-law is a doctor, and he emphasized that it is a good thing to check," shares Doug.

According to the Centers for Disease Control, radon is the second leading cause of lung cancer after smoking. The EPA estimates that it causes 20,000 lung cancer deaths a year, and there is no truly harmless threshold of exposure to radon. In addition, smoking and radon form a synergistic relationship and cause lung cancer in some smokers who would not otherwise develop it.

But what exactly is it? Radon is a naturally occurring radioactive gas formed when radioactive metals in the soil and groundwater break down, according to the Centers for Disease Control. People are always exposed to it in the environment, but some buildings accumulate a higher concentration from the soil underneath through cracks and gaps in construction. The lower pressure in homes creates a suction and draws in the gas.

As people breathe in the radon gas, the radioactive particles can get lodged in their lungs. Over time, these particles increase the risk of lung cancer.

Radon is tasteless, clear, and odor free. The only way to determine if a structure has a high concentration of it is through a test. The US Surgeon General recommends that all homes be tested.

Radon levels are measured in picocuries (a standard measurement of radioactivity) per liter of air. In the US, outdoor radon levels average .4 pCi/L. The EPA recommends taking action if the indoor level is above 4 pCi/L. The Kings had a reading of 9 pCi/L, and after remediation lowered it to 1.8 pCi/L.

There is no easy way to predict whether a home will have a high radon level.

"There is no pattern of high levels. Houses right next door can have very different results," says Marvin Dixon, environmental health program manager at the Madison County Health Department.

The EPA reports that nearly 1 in 15 homes has an elevated radon level. Madison County rates as a level 2 zone by the EPA, medium risk, as they predict the average test will reveal a level from 2 to 4 pCi/L. Air Chek, Inc., a national radon testing site, reports that 36 percent of the buildings tested in the county had a radon level above 4 pCi/L.

Residents of Madison County are eligible for free testing kits through the Madison County Health Department.

"While there was funding for radon education and testing in the past, there isn't any more, but we continue to support the program in the interest of public health," said Dixon.

Approximately 54 residents have taken advantage of this service in the last 12 months. There are also companies that provide testing.

Demonstration of an elevated level usually requires a follow-up test, then possibly the recommendation to seek remediation. Often, people seek out a radon remediation contractor. The American Association of Radon Scientists and Technologists has a listing of mitigation specialists. Another resource for information is the Kentucky Radon Program under the Department for Health and Family Services. While there is not statewide certification for contractors, the AARST and the EPA both have standards for mitigation.

One common remediation technique is soil suction, which vents the radon through a pipe system from below the home to above the home, keeping it out of the structure all together.

Those building a home should consider radon resistant construction, as it is easier to incorporate these techniques during construction than after the home is complete.

More homebuyers and renters, like the Kings, are checking radon levels before deciding to purchase a home, according to the EPA.

Word From Berea Streets

"How do you show your Mom you appreciate her?"

Alyssa Goins said, "I buy her gifts and give her plenty of love! I hug her a lot, tell her I love her a lot, and make sure she's got what she needs."

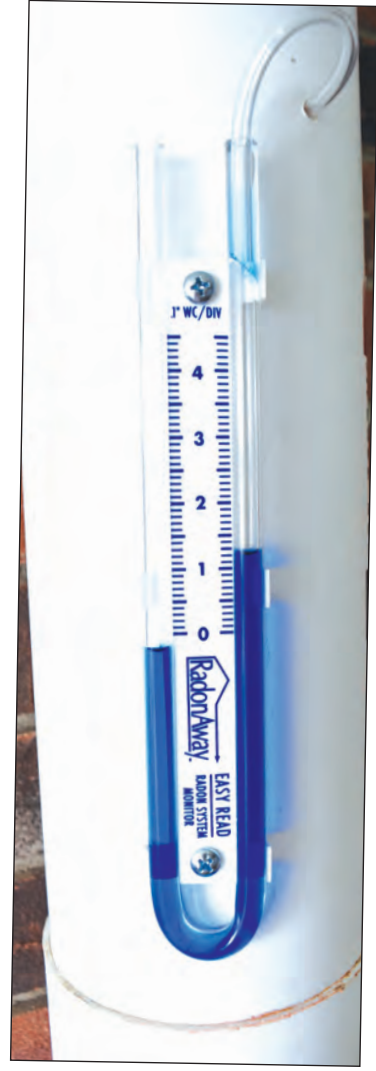

Connie Bowles said, "Even though I lost my Mom in 2015, I still miss her and think about her every day."

Nicole Dugan said, "My siblings and I joke with my Mom for laughs. That's how we show our appreciation!"

The radon system monitor, above, measures pressure in the mitigation system, which helps to lower the radon levels in a building. Below, Doug and Laurie King's home in Burnamwood, has radon mitigation piping, a tell-tale white PVC pipe with a fan and an outlet above the home.

Bill to Decrease Medicaid Expansion That Covers 444,000 in Kentucky

By Al Cross
 Kentucky Health News

The health-care bill passed Thursday by House Republicans would end the expansion of Medicaid in 2020, limit the program's funding after that to a fixed amount per person, and let states allow insurance companies to charge higher premiums to people with pre-existing conditions.

On a 217-212 vote, the bill went to the Senate, which undoubtedly will change it.

About 440,000 Kentuckians get free health care through the 2014 expansion of Medicaid to people with incomes up to 138 percent of the federal poverty line. They would be allowed to stay on the program, which covers a total of 1.4 million people, but has a monthly turnover of about 30,000 people going on or off as they qualify or don't qualify. New enrollees wouldn't be allowed.

In debate about the bill, coverage of pre-existing conditions got more attention. An estimated 1.8 million Kentuckians, out of a population of 4.4 million, have some sort of pre-existing medical condition, according to the Center for American Progress, a liberal advocacy group cited by Kentucky supporters of Obamacare.

Insurance companies and other health lobbies objected to the bill, and its prospects in the Senate are guarded.

Silver Creek Homemakers Meet

This month there were 27 people present for the Silver Creek Homemakers meeting.

Women gathered at Celeste Carter McAfee's home. She had the tables decorated in "Kentucky Derby Theme." Virginia Farmer gave a devotion for Mother's Day, and Mary-Ann McCollum read a poem.

The group is raffling a quilt. Tickets are $1 each. For more information, contact Nancy Kaylor at (859) 582-8343.

The Leader Lesson was given by Leveta McClellan with the subject of "Brain Games." A healthy brain is crucial to survival, growth and everyday successes. Similar to the rest of the body, the brain needs exercise and maintenance in order to optimize and protect its current and future health. In particular, the brain needs socialization, mental stimulation, physical activity, nutrition and sleep.

Here are a few pointers to ponder -- keep in touch with friends and family; stay engaged or involved in the community, church or clubs; know neighbors; get to know the Internet to tune in with the times; manage stress and money; and sleep and eat smart and healthy. All these are key factors in having a healthy brain. Work puzzles, play charades, read and write, and engage the hippocampus -- the memory component of the brain.

Hobbies can challenge the brain, and can also create rich environments and provide a sense of purpose. Maintain a healthy brain and establish other healthy lifestyle behaviors throughout life -- that will influence optimal aging.

This concludes our monthly spotlight until September. Have a great, safe, and happy summer. For more information on this subject, contact the Extension office at (859) 623-4072. The group would love to have people join in the fall.

Tourism Approves Budget, Contract with Jackson

By Beth Myers
Citizen Editor

The Berea Tourism Commission spent almost two hours discussing the budget last Wednesday, May 10, and unanimously approved it during their regular business session.

The budget will now be sent to the Berea City Council for approval.

Commission member Cheryl Stone reported that this budget was a bit different than other years, because so much capital will be tied up in facilities.

"With the anticipated move this coming fall into the Tolle building, and the renovations that need to happen there, the budget is tighter than usual," Stone said.

The renovations for the former Tolle building will cost around $200,000 to $400,000, according to City Administrator Randy Stone. Tourism is relocating there, for it to become the new Welcome

East Meets West, When Hokuto City Comes to Berea

The Japanese delegation greets Berea leaders on Tuesday evening, in the former College Bookstore building. The group arrived in Berea earlier and walked from Boone Tavern for their welcome reception which the City of Berea hosted. Several city council members, including Bruce Fraley, above, were on-hand to welcome their Japanese counterparts. The two cities were scheduled to do a "reaffirmation" of their almost 30 years partnership on Wednesday night at the ECU Blanton House, with both Mayor Steve Connelly and Mayor Jim Barnes, and Madison County Judge Executive Reagan Taylor present to sign the new documentation.

Council Holds Short Meeting Before Japanese Welcome Reception

By Beth Myers
Citizen Editor

Berea City Council approved expenditures at their meeting on Tuesday, which was completed in less than an hour because of the Japanese delegation they were hosting at 6:30 p.m.

A third change order for the new city hall was approved for $21,392.31, and City Administrator Randy Stone reported that there should only be one more. The city budgeted $700,000 for change orders, and is in-line to spend only $400,000. The change orders include the installation of a new elevator, and minor changes such as double doors in the back.

Council member Jerry Little asked why they didn't approve them all at once, and Stone replied that they didn't want to bring a change order until they received the exact amount from the architect and contractor.

There were change orders for the Walnut Meadow Sewer rehabilitation project as well. Berea Municipal Director Ed Fortner reported on several increases and decreases to the project, which equaled Blake Harold and Cameron Cochran on the Madison Southern Fishing team placed 2nd at the KHSAA (Kentucky High School Athletic Association) competition at Kentucky Dam Marina. The two juniors, who have been "fishing longer than they can remember," usually place high in fishing tournaments.

Southern Fishermen Place Second in State

By Beth Myers
Citizen Editor

Madison Southern fishing finished second at the KHSAA (Kentucky High School Athletic Association) State competition recently because of the talents of two of their top fishermen, Blake Harold and Cameron Cochran.

The two juniors at Madison Southern competed against 156 other boats for the state title at the Kentucky Dam Marina at Kentucky Lake near Gilbertsville. They picked their five biggest fish to weigh in, after eight hours of fishing from 7 a.m. – 3 p.m.

"That last day of the tournament we went four hours without a bite," Cameron said. "Then bang, it started to happen. You have to be ready at any time, because you never know when it's going to happen."

Both Blake and Cameron have been fishing as long as they can remember, when their fathers and/or their grandfathers took them out on a boat. Now each of them own their own boat, and plan to spend a great deal of the summer fishing.

To qualify for the KHSAA state competition, students had to be in the top 16 in their region, according to Southern's fishing coach, Duane Cress. Jason Harold was the boat captain for Blake and Cameron.

"You can have only six teams from each school compete in the region," Cress said. "The top 16 will qualify for the state. We had two tournaments to decide the top six at our school."

Berea School Approves Several Expenditures

By Beth Myers
Citizen Editor

The Berea School board approved two payments at their Monday meeting for the construction project of three new classrooms in the amounts of $129,220.79 and $47,421.18.

Berea Superintendent Mike Hogg stated that they would receive some more expensive payables in the future for the project. They also approved a change order of $2,650, because of needing to move the emergency overflow piping extension. The piping would have been at a lower enough elevation for students to reach and grab, so they rerouted it to the wall.

"I don't want students doing chin-ups on the piping," Hogg said dryly.

A few other expenditures that were approved included the bus maintenance and repair bid, which once again went to Cope's Welding Shop and Garage. It was the only bid the school

Residents Plan for Boone Trace Development

Sixty Madison County community residents, civic elected leaders, and city staff from Berea and Richmond met early in May to plan how the vision of one community organization, the Friends of the Boone Trace, could become a reality.

The National Park Service is helping the Friends of the Boone Trace work with state and local officials to develop a shared-use recreation trail and driving tour along the route Daniel Boone blazed in 1775 into the Kentucky wilderness. The Trace is now becoming the newest trail system.

The National Park Service is facilitating four public meetings over the next three months to brainstorm ideas and gather comments to help develop a master plan for the proposed 200-mile Boone Trace trail between Cumberland Gap near Middlesboro and Fort Boonesborough State Park. Other meetings will be May 25 in Livingston; June 12 in Barbourville; June 13 in Pineville; and July 13 in London.

"The planning process pieces that are coming together are absolutely amazing," said Russell Clark, the National Park Service officer assisting the project. "There's a huge opportunity for Kentucky with the Trace's historic aspects, economic and residential health impacts to this project."

Clark will use information from the meetings to create an initial master plan for the project. He also will assist Friends of Boone Trace identify sources of government money and develop fundraising strategies.

"It's been all talk for eight years up until now," said John Fox, president of Friends of Boone Trace.

Country Dancers Travel to China

Young dancers from both the Berea College Country Dancers and the Berea Festival Dancers, with adult leaders and musicians, are touring China on the cultural exchange.

The group left on May 9, and will return on May 24. Performances and master classes are scheduled in Kunming and Dali, in the Yunnan Province in southern China. The group will have the opportunity to participate in a guided tour of Beijing and the surrounding area, including a visit to the Great Wall.

The trip is supported by a $50,000 grant from the U.S. Department of State. Fourteen students, staff, and musicians will offer performances as well as lectures, workshops, music jams, and community dances during their trip.

Special Memorial Day Services Scheduled

Community members who have suffered a loss will have two opportunities to join others in a time of remembrance to honor Memorial Day. Both Davis and Powell Funeral Home and Hospice Care Plus are having special events.

This is the first such service for Davis and Powell.

"We wanted to do something that might bring an extra measure of comfort to the families we've served," said Greg Powell.

Their remembrance service will be held at the Russel Acton Folk Center at 3 p.m. on Saturday, May 20. For more details call the funeral home at 859-986-3115.

The annual Hospice Care Plus May Memorial Service takes place at 6 p.m. on May 23 at First Baptist Church in Richmond. A reception will follow with refreshments provided by hospice volunteers.

The service gives the community a chance to pause to remember loved ones in the week leading up to Memorial Day. Guests may submit names of loved ones they wish to have included in the ceremony anytime up to and on the day of the service. To submit a name in advance of the service, contact Nikki Stuart at 859-756-4755 or hospice@hospicecp.org through May 22. The day of the service, names may be submitted on site at First Baptist Church.

The May Memorial Service is led by Hospice Care

Plus chaplains and includes ecumenical prayer and readings, music, and the reading of names. Guests are given a personalized memorial candle that will be lit when their loved one's name is read.

Memorial donations are appreciated when a candle is requested, but they are not required. Donations are used to fund all Hospice Care Plus programs: bereavement support, hospice home care, palliative care and the Compassionate Care Center. All programs are provided regardless of insurance status or ability to pay.

To learn more about the event, visit hospicecareplus.org or call 859-986-1500.

Hospice Care Plus is a non-profit organization serving Estill, Jackson, Lee, Madison, Owsley and Rockcastle counties.

Hospice Care Plus staff light candles in memory of loved ones at a past May Memorial Service. This year's service is May 23 at 6 p.m. at First Baptist Church in Richmond. All are welcome to participate and remember loved ones.

Five Berea poets will read and discuss the poems from their recently-published poetry collection, Balance of Five, on Monday, May 22, from 6:30 - 7:30 p.m.

The program, titled Balance of Five: Finding Balance, will take place at Madison County Public Library in Berea.

The five poets, Vicky Hayes, Libby Falk Jones, Tina Parker, Dorothy Hopkins Schnare and Barbara Wade, range in age across four decades. They mine inner and outer landscapes in their work, singing of family, place, loving life, and living with loss.

"Elegantly exploring the tension between the mystical and practical, the imaginative space between contradictions, the poems in this collection Balance of Five are a collective meditation," writes author bell hooks in the book's foreword.

For the May reading, each poet will present two of her poems from the book, selected because they balance one another in subject, style, tone. Poets will also comment on their creative processes.

Books will be available for purchase and signing by the poets. The reading is open to the public.

Considering Parenthood

Letters from Berea

Beth Myers
Editor

I went to pick up my son from school the other day for an appointment, and when he walked into my line of sight in the foyer, it took me a minute to recognize him.

This has been happening more often, where it takes me a minute to register who he is. At 14, and preparing for high school, he's resembling much more the man he is becoming than the child I have been raising.

It's more than just his looks. It's his demeanor, his stance, the way he walks. I am relating now to an adult whose thoughts and ideas are often mysteries to me, just like other adults I deal with every day. Ruffling his hair is no longer an appropriate response, though I couldn't do it anyway since the kids now towers over me.

I'm sure this experience is nothing new to parents, but just as when I was first pregnant, it feels wholly unique. I now have a young adult in my house, and it feels more profound than all the transitions I have experienced before in his childhood.

Becoming a parent is like having your skin ripped off. You become so sensitive to the reality around you, and so afraid when you realize your whole world is revolving around the survival and nurturing of this tiny baby. And so you throw all your resources into that, until one day you look up and don't immediately recognize the face that you have been looking at for 14 years.

No one told me that becoming a parent could be so heartbreaking. So many moments of fear and insecurity, so much despair facing situations I couldn't fix. I never felt more incompetent and unprepared for a job than I did for parenthood. I thought I'd never survive their early childhood, and now I can't believe how fast it went.

There is so much pride as well, looking at my child and seeing this young man. A lot of wonder too -- "that tall guy is my son!" The mysteries of the universe are so real to me, watching him grow up, and the awe and fear that rides parallel can be exhausting. But once a parent, could I ever wish for any other reality?

So many times when the children were young, my husband and I would look at each other and wonder what we ever did with our time before we became parents. Were we sleeping twice as much (probably at first), or wasting time? Who knew there was always this big block of unnecessary time in our day that would get commandeered by this very little person? Even if parents tragically lose their child, they probably spend just as much time thinking of them, remembering their important dates, even communicating to them in some way. It's a life-time relationship, period.

I have friends facing the empty nest, with their last child graduating from high school this week. Some are facing it with more excitement, others with sadness. I wonder how I could get back to that time before I had kids, when my time was free of carrying them around, then driving them around, then following them around. Is it possible to go back, after decades of their being my center?

I have friends who have never had children, and while some are a bit sad about it, others are relieved to not be facing all the angst of parenting. I don't know that they could ever understand this bittersweet reality, where you spend so much of your life teaching someone to leave you. And if you do your job right, they'll do it with no thought or worry for you.

The Merry Month of May is About to Wear Gramma Out

In a span of three weeks in May our family will have celebrated Mother's Day, a kindergarten graduation, an eighth grade ending ceremony and three birthdays. All in the middle of baseball season.

Work's a little hectic too, with the special section honoring all the area high school graduates requiring a little more work than usual. But it's all good. It's a joy to have these happy occasions.

Reading Beth's column makes me grateful to be the grandparent of a young man about to enter high school rather than the parents. Parenthood, when it's done right, is not easy. Tex and I are blessed, our sons are both wonderful men and we couldn't be prouder of who they are by God's grace more than anything we did.

Grandparenting is entirely different, all the love without the responsibility.

The years since I've been a Gramma have been the most joy filled of my life.

I love sharing anecdotes on the subject, like this one.

The grandparents were baby-sitting with their infant grandson for an afternoon when the grandmother discovered they were short of diapers. Grandpa went to the nearby store to buy some additional ones. He located a clerk about 20 years old at the store and asked in which aisle he could find diapers. She responded, "adult or baby?"

Then there was the sweet little boy who surprised his grandmother one morning and brought her a cup of coffee. He made it himself and was so proud. He anxiously waited to hear the verdict on the quality of the coffee. The grandmother had never in her life had such a bad cup of coffee, and as she forced down the last sip she noticed three of those little green army guys in the bottom of the cup. She asked, "Honey, why would three little green army guys be in the bottom of my cup?" Her grandson replied, "You know grandpa, it's like on TV, 'The best part of waking up is soldiers in your cup.'"

I can just picture the look on Tex's face if Carly or Jenna were come off with something like this.

A grandpa and granddaughter were sitting by a pond talking when she asked, "Did God make you, Grandpa?" "Yes, God made me," the grandfather answered. A few minutes later, the little girl asked him, "Did God make me too?" "Yes, He did," the grandpa answered. For a few minutes, the little girl seemed to be studying her grandpa, as well as her own reflection in the water. Her grandfather wondered what was running through her mind. At last she spoke up. "You know, Grandpa," she said, "God's doing a lot better job lately."

Isn't that what we parents and grandparents all pray for? That each generation be successively better.

lege, he states he almost quit during his junior year when his roommate and close friend was killed in an automobile accident. It was during this time that he learned the value of a student life support team which has shaped his career as a guidance counselor.

After graduating from Berea College with a teaching degree, Fontanez wanted to remain in Berea, having fallen in love with the community. Unable to find work, he chose to move his career forward by taking a position in Baltimore, Md., teaching fifth grade.

Three years later, friends alerted him to an opening at the Berea Independent School, and Fontanez moved back to Berea to teach. After earning his master's degree in education in secondary school counseling from EKU, Fontanez became a high school guidance counselor. He has held that position at Berea Independent School for 13 years.

Fontanez spends his days working to reduce barriers for his students in order for them to achieve their personal, social, academic, and career goals. This often involves mediation with peers, family, and teachers. Providing a safe space for 300 or more high school students to experiment with freedoms and responsibilities presents unique challenges. Fontanez enjoys guiding students through the process of advocating for themselves and expressing their ideas, but agrees it can be overwhelming sometimes.

His first year teaching in Berea was one of the most challenging of his career when he needed to guide students through several difficult changes, including discontinuing off-campus lunch and helping students with their grief when a fellow classmate died.

When asked what keeps him going, Fontanez replies that he is motivated by the resiliency of the students. Since the school houses kindergarten through twelfth grade, the staff gets to know the students well and they tackle challenges together throughout their young lives. Students and staff develop relationships and connections which last a lifetime. "Watching them grow in a nonjudgmental environment to become people who make the world a better place is what keeps me going," he says.

He states that his involvement with the Upward Bound program as a high school student has prepared him for the challenges of guidance counseling and leadership. He has continued his participation in the Upward Bound program to this day as a leader. Additionally, he was on loan to the Kentucky Department of Education for a year during his sabbatical in 2003. Working with several school systems across the state, he gained information he has applied to his work in Berea. He continues his education as a doctoral student in counseling and educational psychology at Eastern Kentucky University and teaches college classes two evenings a week.

When asked how he takes care of himself, Fontanez just laughs. "I teach others how to, but I'm not very good at taking my own advice." His list of self-care practices includes setting boundaries so he doesn't take work home, hiking, hanging out with his pets, reading, retail therapy and he adds he is a news junkie and reads several newspapers.

received. They also renewed the legal contract with Fowler Bell PLLC, and specifically Guy R. Colson, the board attorney. The school pays $170 per hour for member of the firm, and a flat rate of $350 for a board meeting.

The school board also approved continuing to use Linville Insurance Agency for their general liability, workers compensation, and vehicle insurance. The amount for coverage decreased by almost $10,000 because of the drop in workers compensation rates. Berea Community had a high claim four years before, Hogg reported, that kept the rates higher until the upcoming fiscal year. Student accident insurance coverage was also purchased through Linville again, with a slight increase of $1,200. Hogg stated that many parents and doctors were confused by this coverage, and thought it was a primary insurance. But the student accident coverage is secondary to the health insurance of a student, and it can be used to reimburse parents for their deductible cost.

Several Berea Community students were recognized at the school board meeting, which will be the last one for the present school year. Students involved in FBLA brought home several award, including Jordan Adams winning first place in regional and fifth place in state for insurance and risk management, Emy Lovell winning regional 6 parliamentarian, Ty Robinson winning first place at regionals for securities and investments, Taiza Alexander, Mik aela Morgan, and Emily Traw winning third place in regionals for business ethics, Dante Clavere winning second place at regionals for most talents, Izzy Whatley, Candace Elam, and Carissa Coy winning third place in regionals for global business, Sam House winning third place at regionals for networking concepts, Tori Williams and Suraya Smith winning first place at state for partnership with business project, Jared Kilgore winning second place at regionals for marketing, Mackenzie Perry winning second place at regionals for marketing, Ruth Ramos, Elvia Rojas, and Alex Horn winning second place at regionals for public service announcement, and Ben West, David Gadd, and Elliot Sandberg winning third place at regionals in sports and entertainment management.

Tori Williams and Suraya Smith will be going to FBLA Nationals in Anaheim, Ca., because of their first place win at state competition.

Participants in the Student Technology Leadership Program (STLP) did well at state competition.

Isaac Uzzle and Coleman Reed were state qualifiers for the STLP showcase, Ismaila Ceesay and Reed won first place at state for the bench challenge, Reed also won second place at state for extreme networking, and Conner Bondurant won first place at state in the coding challenge.

The high school newspaper did well at the KHSJA (Kentucky High School Journalism Association) competition. Emily Nigro won first place in both newswriting and sports writing, Karmadri Santiago won third place for newswriting, Chloe Skeese won second and third place in feature writing, and third place in sports writing, Suraya Smith won second place for feature writing and first place in review, Constance Wright won third place for editorial writing, second place for photography, and third place for review, Sam House won third place for review, and Katie Okumu won first place for both single page layout and page one design, second place for overall design, and third place for two-page layout.

The Pirate placed second in the state in their category.

Fifth grade teacher Robin Burr was recognized for her selection as the Hope Street Fellow. Around 400 teachers applied, but only 20 were selected. Hope Street Fellows work politically, and Burr's issue will be children in poverty.

Blake said that Lake Cumberland is his favorite place to fish, for small mouth bass. His largest catch was a large mouth bass at 8.5 pounds.

Cameron, whose grandfather was the president of a tobacco company, would go fishing in the ponds set up for irrigation. He fishes four or five times a week, and like any dedicated fisherman, says there are no bad days of fishing.

"It's always a good day on the water," Cameron said.

While Blake said he was surprised by their second place win at KHSAA, Cameron said he expected they would do pretty well. They have placed very high in all their tournaments, and placed second in another state league competition.

When asked what separated great fisherman, Cameron said it was important to be consistent.

"You always have to be ready for it," Cameron said. "It can be hard waiting, especially when it's hot, but you have to be patient."

Blake and Cameron will be heading to national competition in June, and they are looking for business sponsors so they can afford the trip. They will attend one competition at Kentucky Lake, and one in Alabama.

The two of them have already attracted attention from some college scouts. They were approached by Georgetown at the KHSAA competition.

Cress has around 20-22 students on his fishing team. Team members are Hunter Burdine, Terrin Burdette, Cameron Cochran, Chase Collins, Brendan Devasher, Ben Ferguson, Larry Freeman, Blake Harold, Seth Hembree, Alexandria Lamb, Aaron Miller, Logan Mullins, Austin Premo, Ryan Reed, Tyler Sandlin, Billy Satterfield, Ethan Shackleford, Landen Stacy, Tanner Taylor, Brandon Turner, and Josh Williams.

CITY

$33,037.58 net increase. The biggest surprise was having to replace a clay pipe that was leaking badly, though still functional.

"Replacing that pipe was a borderline emergency," Fortner said.

The total cost of the project was $487,689.58, which was below the budgeted amount.

The city approved a road salt bid of $64 a ton. The salt bin is currently full with 700 tons, and their approved bid will give the City of Berea an extra 1,000 tons if needed next winter. The milder winter used around half of the bin of salt this past year.

The finance and audit committee will meet on May 25 at 3 p.m. at the Berea Municipal Building to discuss the budget, and council member Steve Caudill invited members to attend.

In other business:

- The new city hall building construction is going very well, Stone reported. They plan to turn over the keys to the city on Sept. 5.

- All landowner signatures but one have been received for the Short Line Pike portion of the Indian Fort Trail. The state has given the City of Berea a $65,000 grant to purchase the rights-of way for the trail.

Center for Berea. Commission member Charles Arnold said he was very pleased about one item in the budget, for a $12,000 impact study.

"We've talked about how sports tourism is growing," Arnold said, "and you just can't arbitrarily say that without a plan."

The amount of $1,000 expenditure for the Swing for the Cure event is a reflection of the commission's growing attention on sports tourism.

The budget also included $50,000 for the shared use path, a project where Berea Tourism is partnering with the City of Berea.

Another increased expenditure involved part-time, seasonal workers. They will now be making $10 an hour, an increase of $1.26.

"With our revenues, we are anticipating that there will be additional growth beyond what we have budgeted," Stone said.

The commission discussed entering into a contract with the former tourism director, Belle Jackson, to manage their trolley service. Current tourism director Kerri Hensley said they only received three applications for the position of tour guides on the trolley. She stated that she was panicking, since the trolley had started the first Saturday in May, and would run until October.

"We had a trolley tour without a narration for the first Saturday," Hensley said.

Jackson said she would not be interested in being an employee for Berea Tourism, but she was interested in contracting to handle the entire service. She put together a package for around $3,000, offering to provide the trolley narratives from May to October, to drum up extra business, and hire the necessary employees for the tours.

When Commissioner Donna Robertson asked how Jackson would "drum up business," Hensley replied that Jackson had a plan to invest in signs, t-shirts, and umbrellas advertising the tour.

The commission members expressed enthusiasm for Jackson's contract, stating that she was familiar with the work from her tour business years ago.

Arnold said he told Belle he would approve it as long as she brought her banjo.

In other business:

- Much of April was spent promoting outdoor events on social media sites. Papoleno's, Berea Arts Council, and Homegrown Hideaways were filmed for the video series, and Gastineau Studio went live on May 5. They are setting dates to film Owsley Fork and Kentucky Guild.

- In Madison County, tourism accounted for $137,841,000 in direct spending for 2016. This has increased $17 million from the previous year. There has been $216 million in total spending, up from $189 million last year. Tourism is the third largest industry in Kentucky - behind automobile and health care, according to state figures.

- Several articles have been published about Berea Tourism. It was named a top ten destination for craft lovers, and Kentucky.com wrote a piece about the food district on Chestnut Street.

- There have been 17,125 video views on YouTube for 11 public videos. Instagram has increased followers by 900. Hensley stated that it was exciting to see their numbers climb on the social media sites every month.

- The Hands-On Workshops in April sold 101 tickets for $8,000. That brings the total of HOW proceeds to $16,000. Except for ten percent that tourism takes for credit card fees, the revenue is given to the instructors.

- Festival of Learnshops will take place from July 7 - 23. Tourism has sold 382 tickets so far, totaling $33,000 in ticket sales. This number is a bit less than last year.

- The Arts Accelerator program took in $2,511 in March.

- Louisa Summers, co-chair of Trail Town Committee, gave a report. They had good registration for the Red Bud Recovery Ride, but only five cyclists because of the terrible weather that day. The Splash and Dash event will once again take place this summer on Saturday, June 24. Youth from 7-14 years of age will swim in the city pool, and then run on the shared use path. An Oberst Memorial plaque has been purchased, and will be unveiled during a bicycle or trail town event in the fall.

Members of the trail town committee interviewed bicyclists in town this week, to find out how Berea could better serve that community. They recorded that they liked Berea, but the assets were not easy to find, or easily accessed.

- The Berea Trail Town will be hosting and sponsoring an outdoor retreat from June 30 to July 2 at Homegrown Hideaways. It will be a week of hiking, kayaking, and camping.

- The next Berea Tourism Commission meeting was scheduled for June 21.

Berea Governor's Scholars Program attendees announced

By Emily Nigro
Pirate Senior Sports Editor

Berea Community juniors Shyann Brock, Elliot Sandberg, and Hannah Wallhausser have been accepted into the 2017 Kentucky Governor's Scholars Program (GSP). Junior Emily Traw was selected as an alternate.

GSP is a tuition-free summer residential program for rising high school seniors that lasts five weeks. It is held on three college campuses and accepts approximately 1060 students. This summer, GSP will be hosted by Morehead State University, Murray State University, and Northern Kentucky University. With a mission of enhancing Kentucky's next generation of civic and economic leaders, selection for GSP is highly competitive; students must first submit their applications through their school and participate in district competition before competing on the statewide level.

The GSP curriculum is made up of three components: students choose an in-depth focus area course, take a general studies class, and participate in a seminar focused on personal development. Additionally, students have the opportunity to see a variety of speakers and performers, and attend field trips and special event. Sandberg, who expressed excitement for his selection to the program, stated, "[I think the most important aspect of GSP is] the focus on learning over just taking tests."

Wallhausser applied to the prestigious program with an end-goal in mind. The junior noted, "It was a really good opportunity to grow as a student and as a person, and I wanted to prepare myself for college by putting myself into that kind of environment." According to Brock, "After coming back from GSP I'm hoping I'll be more confident in how I lead." Both juniors are excited about meeting new people. "I've heard from several people that everyone's really friendly and I'm excited to make new friends," stated Wallhausser. If enough accepted students choose not to take their seat in the program, alternate Emily Traw may be selected to attend.

The first GSP session will begin on June 18 at Morehead State University; the second and third sessions begin on June 24 and June 25 at Murray State University and Northern Kentucky University. Berea Community High School can take pride in knowing it will be represented by bright, hardworking students this summer.

Folk Art Exhibit at Berea Arts Council

The exhibit, Folk Art from Kentucky and the South – from the collection of Larry Hackley is currently at the Berea Arts Council.

The exhibit features folk art by over 40 artists, including several of the top folk artists of the country such as Howard Finster from Georgia, and Minnie Atkins and carver Earnest Patton from Kentucky.

Hackley will be speaking at the Berea Arts Council's Conversation Café on Tuesday, May 23 at 6:30 p.m. at the BAC gallery. Hackley's collection will continue on exhibit there until May 27.

"Every now and then the art world 'discovers' the art of the common man," collector Larry Hackley said, when explaining the world of folk art. "It happened during the centennial celebration in the late 19th century, and again with the crafts revival in the 1920s and 30s. Most recently in the 1970s, artists creating work outside the established fine art world were labeled as self-taught, folk, intuitive, outsider, primitive, grassroots, and a dozen other monikers. These artists have come to be enthusiastically collected and championed by serious collectors and museums. The exhibit Folk Art from Kentucky and the South:

Selections from the Hackley Collection is an overview of this most recent interest in this extraordinary art by ordinary people."

In the collection are two pieces of artwork by Howard Finster, considered to be the most famous of folk artists. Finster passed away in 2001, but not before he completed over 48,000 pieces. Finster was a preacher and all of his work was centered on religion. He believed that people would forget his sermons, but would always remember his message of God seen in his art.

Visit the BAC website to see photos of some of the artwork on display – www.BereaArtsCouncil.org. The gallery is open Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m., and on Saturdays from 10 a.m. until 4.

Hospice Recruiting Teen Volunteers This Summer

On Saturday, May 20, Hospice Care Plus will train a new class of volunteers.

All are welcome and needed but as summer approaches, teens are especially encouraged to attend. To sign-up for the training, contact Stefanie Manes, volunteer coordinator, at 859-626-9292 or hospice@hospicecp.org.

"We started our teen volunteer program a few years ago, but weren't very vocal about it," said Manes. "We wanted to try it out quietly first and just make sure it would be a good fit for the teens and for our programs."

After training and working with about ten teenagers age 14 and up, Manes says it's clearly a success.

"We work with them to place them in roles that play to their strengths," said Manes. "Some are really confident working with the public, so they're a perfect fit for the Compassionate Care Center's hospitality desk. Others like more behind-the-scenes work, so they've helped with office tasks at our Berea office or at the Center or even done outdoor work."

Madison Miller, a junior at Berea Community High School, belongs to the former group. She's comfortable interacting with patients, family members, visitors and the range of people who call the Compassionate Care Center. And she feels she gets something out of it, too.

"I want to attend UK and study immunology, so volunteering with Hospice Care Plus seemed like the perfect opportunity," said Miller. "I was motivated to do it for that reason and because I love helping others in any way I can."

Miller works at the Compassionate Care Center's front desk every Sunday and appreciates the chance to interact with patients and their families.

"You never know what one little gesture can do," said Miller. "You feel like you're doing something good and making a difference."

"Madison is one of several incredible teens we've had the honor to work with," said Manes. "I'm so proud of them for making the decision to give back. And I know it helps them build confidence, gain experience, and hone their social skills as they prepare for college and career. In that sense, it really is a good thing all the way around."

Hospice Care Plus is a non-profit organization serving Estill, Jackson, Lee, Madison, Owsley and Rockcastle counties.

Shannon Johnson Sponsors 1st Science Fair

By Beth Myers
Citizen Editor

Fourth grade students could barely hold still in front of their science fair projects last Friday, May 12, at Shannon Johnson Elementary.

This was the first science fair held at the school, and first-year teacher Rachel Ballard created a lot of buzz around the event. Since Christmas break, the students have been working on the science topic of their choice.

"It has been so much fun," Ballard said. "Each student's job was to find something they were really interested in."

Parents were invited to the official Science Fair showing on Friday from 1-4 p.m. to see the work of all the students. Taylor Williams ended up winning the top prize for her project on hoverboards.

Kate Mullins, who won second place for her project on mouth bacteria, decided on the topic because of a personal dilemma.

"I would want cookies at night after I brushed my teeth," Kate said. "And I didn't want to brush them again. So I wanted to find out if it was really necessary to brush the second time."

Unfortunately, Kate said, she discovered that she did need to brush her teeth again.

Carlie Hechemy won third place for her yummy project on cupcakes.

"I love to bake," Carlie said. "So it was a good topic."

Three 4th graders hold up their certificates proudly for winning the first three places in the science fair at Shannon Johnson Elementary. This was the first science fair held at SJE, the brainstorm of first-year teacher Rachel Ballard. The fourth graders have worked on their projects since Christmas break. Steve Davis-Rosenbaum, the program coordinator for Berea College Craft Education and Outreach Program (CEOP), works with future art camp staff Delilah Gibbins and Jada Jones. The college is partnering with the Berea Arts Council to hold a Clay Intensive camp for 14-18 year olds from June 25-29.

Openings for Teenage Artists in Clay Intensive Art Camp

This summer, for the first time, high school students will be served by the Art Camps program held every year by Berea Arts Council (BAC).

BAC, in conjunction with the Berea College Craft Education and Outreach Program (CEOP), is holding a Clay Intensive Camp for 14-18 year olds. The students will spend the week of June 25-29 sculpting and experiencing all phases of pottery, including intensive work on the wheel. No experience is necessary, but students will have individual assessments from Art Camp staff to enhance their skills.

The camp will be held at the Berea College Craft Education Center from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. each day, and lunch will be provided. Cost for the weeklong camp is $100. Scholarships from the Berea Arts Council are available.

The camp will be limited to ten high school students. These spots will be filled on a first come basis, and are available to all area students. For application and registration forms, contact the Berea Arts Council at 859-985-9317 or www.bereaartscouncil.org.

Steve Davis-Rosenbaum, the CEOP coordinator, said "The Clay Intensive Camp provides an opportunity for students to develop and grow as ceramicists. From beginners to novice, we will work one-on-one with campers to set and meet their goals."

County Discusses Jail Revenue, Expenses

By Beth Myers
Citizen Editor

Raising revenue and cutting expenses for the Madison County Jail was discussed on Tuesday, when both Meena Mahonty from the county attorney's office and Jailer Doug Thomas addressed the fiscal court.

Mahonty has been involved with the Community Service Work Program, where inmates are allowed to work off their fines instead of serving time. The program is organized from the county attorney's office.

Mahonty reported on the program, stating that from July 1 of last year to the present, "55 people participated, with 308 days of jail saved." They also have worked to secure early release for some of the inmates to decrease the population in the detention center, a facility that serves an average of 400 inmates despite having a capacity for less than 200. Mahonty reported that they

Over 60 people attended the open house for the new EMS building on Glades Road in Berea on Tuesday. Several staff members from both Madison County and the City of Berea attended including Judge Executive Reagan Taylor and Magistrate Larry Combs, above. EMS Director Carlos Coyle addressed the crowd, thanking them for their support. Coyle stated that they outgrew the former EMS building on Highway 1016 several years ago, and they were "landlocked and building locked." Carlos announced that it was up for sale, and they were taking sealed bids for it.

State of the County Addresses Healing Center, Finances, City/County Merger

By Beth Myers
Citizen Editor

The proposed Healing Center for Madison County, and related questions about the drug epidemic were the focus of the State of the County address last Friday, May 19 at the Performing Arts Center in Richmond.

Judge Executive Reagan Taylor started off that part of the speech with a reminder of the year before, when he stated that the county must be bold when addressing the drug epidemic.

"There are two important things that we as citizens must come to terms with - arresting and incarceration are not working," Taylor said.

Taylor reviewed the Healing Center proposal, which would be a substance abuse, life skills, and vocational center. He stated that there has been support for the idea across the county as a model for not only the public/private partnership, but also as a comprehensive and flexible

So People Would Know His Father Passed By

By Beth Myers
Citizen Editor

The idea of writing a book came to Glyn Green after his father died in 1994.

"People kept coming up to me, telling me stories about my dad," Glyn said, reflecting on his reasons for picking up a pen a few years ago. "In the first 25 years of his life, he lived more than most people did their entire lives."

After giving this perfect set-up, Green grinned and delivered the punch line, "Then Dad came and settled down in Garrard County and became the most boring person that ever lived."

A born storyteller from a family of Appalachian raconteurs, Glyn decided to document these family stories in his book, How They Make Angels. He plans to write two more books in this series, which will follow his father's life from birth until the birth of his father's own child with Glyn's mother, Ella Mae.

"My dad put up a marker for his relatives in Garrard County, and I asked him why he did that. He said he wanted people to know they passed by. That's why I wrote this book, so people

Ribbons Placed on County Historic Markers to Celebrate 225th Anniversary

Kentucky will be celebrating its 225th anniversary of being admitted into the United States this year, and Madison County is taking a rather unique approach to commemorate the event.

Volunteers, under the direction of the Division of Historic Properties, are fanning out across the county to decorate the over 30 Kentucky Historical Marker in Madison County. The poles on which the markers are placed will be adorned with a red, white, and blue ribbon to denote Kentucky's 225th birthday.

"Our hope is that when someone driving around sees the ribbon on the marker, it will remind them of Kentucky's 225th birthday," said Phillip Seyfrit, historic properties director for Madison County.

The Kentucky Historical Marker program began in 1949, and now features over 2,400 markers across the commonwealth. Jefferson County leads the state with 116 markers, while Jackson and Carlisle Counties have two each.

Kentucky was the 15th state to join the United States on June 1, 1792. Madison County was established on December 15, 1785, by an act of the Virginia legislatures, and is one of Kentucky's original counties. It is named for early U.S. statesman James Madison.

Roger M. Oliver

Roger M. Oliver, 76, passed away on May 23, 2017, at his beloved home surrounded by his family after a brief but hard-fought illness.

He was born on January 13, 1941, in Berea. He was the son of L. Marion and Mildred Young Oliver, and was a member of Berea Baptist Church.

In addition to his parents, he was preceded in death by an older brother who died in childhood, Noal, and by his adored wife of 47 years, Gladys Jennings (Muff) Oliver, although her precious memory continued to live and reside with him until his death.

He is survived by his loving family consisting of his children, Brigette (Steven Buda) Oliver Ryalls, Brandy (Ben Robinson, III) Oliver Brown, and Anthony (Claire FitzSimmonds) Jennings Oliver, each of whom was his favorite. He is also survived by the children of Brandy, Anthony Sebastian and Alexander Payne "Zane" Brown; and the children of Brigette, Anne Lorraine and Jackson Kenneth Ryalls, each of his grandchildren also being his favorite. Also surviving are his brother, Douglas Y. Oliver and his wife Deanee, and a dear niece and nephew, Brinkley Oliver Brown and Noal Oliver.

Roger graduated from Berea High School in 1958, U.K. with a Bachelor of Science degree in commerce in 1963, and U.K. Law School with a Juris Doctor degree in December 1963. While in law school, he was on the Moot Court Board as well as the Kentucky Law Journal.

Roger, for the better part of his legal career, was a general practitioner in his firm, Oliver &

Oliver Law Offices with an emphasis on litigation. In 1986, he established a jury money verdict record in Garrard County. He is a member of the Million Dollar Advocates Forum and qualified for membership in the Multi-Million Dollar Advocates Forum. He was also Berea City Attorney from 1968-1978 and Master Commissioner for the Madison Circuit Court from 1970-1980.

Roger was a member of the Madison County Bar Association, Kentucky Bar Association, American Justice Association [formerly the American Trial Lawyers Association] and the Kentucky Justice Association [formerly the Kentucky Academy of Trial Attorneys]. He was admitted to practice in all Kentucky courts, as well as the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Kentucky, the United States Courts of Appeals for the Fourth and Sixth Circuits, and the Supreme Court of the United States of America. In 2015, he was honored by the Kentucky Bar Association as a Senior Counselor.

Roger also had many varied interests outside of his family and the practice of law. He formerly was a co-owner of WKXO Radio Station in Berea. He opened the Irongate Restaurant and Lounge in Richmond, as well as restaurants in Lexington and Winchester. He taught accounting at EKU. He was a past president and board member of the Berea Country Club. He was past vice-chairman and a board member of the Madison County International Committee, having made seven trips to Japan in that capacity. He was a licensed pilot; an amateur musician (piano, bass guitar, trumpet, and nationally renowned gut-bucket player); an amateur photographer; a golfer; a basketball player (until his body wouldn't cooperate); an above-average ping pong player; the winner of the 1960 ACU Region 4 Pocket Billiards Tournament in Lexington; an intermediate singles and advanced doubles tournament backgammon player, having placed second in doubles division at an Ohio State Backgammon Tournament; and formerly the color analyst for the Eastern Kentucky University Sports Network and play-by-play broadcaster for the Berea College Basketball Radio Network. He was also the writer and broadcaster of a daily radio program entitled Law Talk, a legal commentary on areas of general and current legal interest. Later in life, after the death of his wife, Muff, he also became an accomplished cook, dishwasher, laundry person, and an all-around home-maker.

Roger's life will be celebrated on Wednesday, May 31, 2017, beginning at 5 p.m. at 1008 Richmond Road at the home he and Muff designed early in their marriage after seeing a photograph in a magazine of double doors looking out at a swimming pool. They were able to break ground in 1978 and both deeply loved their dream home throughout their lives.

Roger and Muff loved to host family, friends, and colleagues at parties at their home, filling it with laughter and joy. It was his wish that tales of his life and his many adventures be shared among those who loved him in a celebration of the same manner.

There will be a memorial service at Davis and Powell Funeral Home on Thursday, June 1, 2017, at 2 p.m. The family will be receiving visitors prior to the service from 12-2 p.m. It was Roger's request that he be cremated.

Roger and Muff's ashes will be combined and interred at a later date at the Berea Cemetery, where they will remain together for eternity. The family requests that gestures of remembrance be made through donations in honor of Roger M. Oliver to the Hospice Compassionate Care Center, 350 Isaacs Lane, Richmond, Kentucky.

Federal Reserve Governor Visits Berea

Earlier this month, Berea had a distinguished guest visit to learn more about the models of innovation and change happening in town.

Federal Reserve Governor Leal Brainard requested a tour stop in Berea to learn more about Appalachian Kentucky and the public-private partnerships for community economic development that are exported throughout the region. The Mountain Association for Community Economic Development (MACED) hosted the group.

Governor Brainard toured new start-up business Native Bagel and listened to Katie Startzman's story of how the Berea community supported her café. Katie told how she was encouraged by the community's support of her crowdfunding campaign and MACED's CrowdMatch microloan and business advisory services that gave her the confidence and ability to launch her storefront business.

"We really took a leap a faith when we moved from the Berea Farmer's Market bagel cart to the brick-and-mortar location, but I realized how much pleasure I got from serving customers fresh bagels," Katie said.

Katie's passion for serving Berea's bagels has helped spur more interest in local entrepreneurship beyond food businesses.

Governor Brainard was welcomed by Mayor Connelly at the Gallery 123 tour stop to see Arts Accelerator Fellows in action. Mayor Connelly reported that this model is a holistic approach for economic development. The city hopes to grow local businesses through programs and partnerships like Gallery 123. The artists shared their motivations and commitment to being a working artist, and stated that they were delighted to have an opportunity to start their careers in Berea after graduating from the college.

In 2015, the Federal Reserve of Cleveland produced a report called Region in Transition: A Look at Eastern Kentucky in Four Parts. It identified the loss of coal industries jobs as a driver for migration from coal producing counties to counties closer to jobs, such as Madison County. It also outlined how some counties were finding new ways to retain and attract small businesses, such as creative placemaking that leverages the cultural assets of a community to spur tourism and economic development. An example would be the Berea Arts Accelerator.

Governor Brainard was curious to see this and hear other stories of how innovation and best practice models of this new economy are being forged in Berea.

City of Berea Tourism Director Kerri Lee Hensley said, "The Art Accelerator Program was developed with the help of many community partners. MACED has been a strong supporter providing business and technical training to the program as well as low interest loans that assist in building credit for these young businesses. Berea College has also provided strong support for this initiative. What Do You Know?

We received several calls about the photo that was printed last week. It was identified as the Science Club at Madison Central in the year 1970-71. The officers were sitting in the front row, and they were Diane Morris, Kay Nantz, Daryl Woodson, Marsha Rhodus, and Margaret King.

Emerald Ash Borer Mortality Here

The emerald ash borer is making its presence known on the Berea College Forest this year with some significant ash mortality beginning to show up.

A couple years ago, some of the more visible ash trees along the main trail up to Indian Fort Lookout were treated with imidicloprid insecticide to try to save them, but even most of these trees -- which are very large and difficult to save with this treatment -- are dying this season. The chemical has to be used repeatedly, and is only feasible for a few trees, and it is less effective the larger the trees are.

Last year, I had the ash trees harvested in an area where large numbers of ash were growing in a concentrated area to salvage them before the borer got them. These ash trees will live on as beautiful interior panels that will be incorporated into the new science building that is being erected on campus. Perhaps, someday, it will be as unusual to see ash wood in such abundance in a building as it is now to see American chestnut wood.

Several years ago, when I was still a forester in Illinois, that state was one of the first to be invaded by the emerald ash borer. Huge numbers of ash trees were killed in over just a couple of years time in the Chicago area. A relatively new insect pest to America, it was introduced into the Detroit, Mich. area 15 to 20 years ago on wood packing material from China. Ironically, it has just now began to kill ash trees in southern Illinois, where I lived, at the same time it has reached Berea, where I live now.

Emerald Ash Borer beetles will normally kill an ash tree within three years of the initial infestation. Adults are dark green, and only one-half inch long. They look a lot like our harmless green native ash beetles. Their larvae spend their life beneath the bark of ash trees, where they do their damage. When the insects emerge as adults, they leave D-shaped holes in the bark about one-eighth inch wide. This distinctive D-shaped hole is the key to identifying if you have EAB, as other beetles leave a round hole.

Emerald ash borer, like Dutch elm disease, chestnut blight, and butternut canker, has the potential to virtually wipe out an important tree species from North America. The same situation is occurring with woolly hemlock adelgid as it marches across the Appalachians, killing off our majestic hemlock forests.

Our Forestry Department is currently treating these trees on our forest to try to save them as well. So far, the insecticide has been working well for these trees, many of which are around Anglin Falls. If you notice trees with a paint spot at the base of their trunk, they have been treated to try to save them.

If you would like to read more about Emerald Ash Borer, the UK Extension site is a good place to go: <http://pest.ca.uky.edu/EXT/EAB/welcommeeab.html>

Gardening, Here We Come

Letters from Berea
Beth Myers
Editor

Our flower garden is exploding. If anyone cares to pay attention to the house that is right beside Foley's Florist, they will see what I'm talking about.

So far, we still are waiting for the bulk of the flowers to bloom, but once the butterfly milkweeds and echinechea start going, we might as well call it a jungle. My cats love it; one of their favorite things is to hide among the echinechea and leap out at us as we're walking along the sidewalk. No doubt fantasizing as their primal predatory selves, taking down the fatted pale elks they live with.

Every year something is added, and this year we have the flowers now on the strip between the road and sidewalk. This is all my husband's doing by the way, in case you've missed reading my prior annual columns discussing the obsessed gardener that takes over my husband in the early spring. This year should be quite the growing season, as many of you have probably experienced already.

As we've been weeding, and weeding, and well, weeding again, I thought about the supervillain from Batman, Poison Ivy. There really is something to the dominating power of plants. We've got corn flowers springing up in our driveway -- how is that possible with layers of gravel? Some kind of rattlesnake stuff is pollinating everywhere, and don't even get me started on the common milkweed that has taken over the side of my yard. Butterfly milkweed keeps springing up in various places. Poison Ivy, hands-down, should be the most powerful villain ever, impossible to kill or control.

Due to the work of Sustainable Berea, I also have a little project going on behind the flowers. Three raised beds now have corn, snow peas, and green beans growing. I have given up on the broccoli, which is the favorite food of a certain caterpillar that my husband will not allow me to kill. I do enjoy growing vegetables, but I have to admit that it doesn't compare to the growth of perennials. Every year, you get to watch and observe to see what comes up where and when. You surrender to nature, instead of controlling it with the planting of rows.

Recently my husband was on the phone, and excitedly told someone that he sent them photos of his babies. I was touched, thinking he had sent some baby photos of our sons. When I asked to see the photos, I was surprised to see only leafy common milkweeds. Confused, I looked at my son, who rolled his eyes. "Mom, he's talking about the Monarch caterpillars on the plant."

Dear Editor,

Recently, I was asked if I supported hazard duty retirement for the Berea City Police and Fire Departments. The answer was easy, I said, "Absolutely!" Then I learned that our police and fire departments are classified as non-hazardous. I was dumbfounded.

Berea's first responders are the only first responders in Madison County that are considered non-hazardous. According to Merriam-Webster's Dictionary, the word hazardous is defined as "involving or exposing one to risk (as of loss or harm)". Solely by putting on the uniform each day to report to work, the men and women of our police and fire departments are exposing themselves to risk. So how can we, the citizens of this community, look them in the eye with a straight face and say, "Your job is low risk and therefore, non-hazardous."

Hazard duty retirement pay means that we are providing our first responders with the protection that they and their families deserve. The number one priority for my campaign was over the top transparency and accountability. In order to do this, I have to be both transparent and accountable for the men and women who risk their lives each day to protect the citizens of Berea. I am now making this issue the number one priority for my campaign.

As mayor, I will not rest until we offer these men and women hazard duty retirement. I pray that we do not suffer a loss of life in the line of duty before we can accomplish this endeavor. However, this issue cannot wait for 2018. This is an issue that needs to be immediately addressed and corrected. I fully understand that reclassifying the retirement from non-hazardous to hazardous will cost the taxpayers of our community. How can we afford to not provide this benefit?

I am told that this issue was addressed years ago.

I do not recall any recent discussion concerning hazard duty retirement. Furthermore, we constantly talk about adding a new dog park, new ball fields and how tourism spends tax dollars. We spend large sums of money to advertise the city. We build new buildings and we buy old buildings. When we want to do a project, we find the money. Why are we burying such an important issue? It cannot be because of the money.

I am challenging the Berea City Council and administration to immediately bring this issue to the table. The budget has not been passed. Set aside funds to pay for hazard duty retirement. Let's do what is right. Let's give the men and women who protect our families and our property the respect and protection that they deserve.

Charles Arnold
2018 Candidate for Mayor

Honor Guard will provide the Firing Party for the 21-Gun Salute. The Madison Southern Air Force Junior ROTC Program will provide the Color Guard.

The community is invited to attend and pay tribute to those who have died in the service of our country.

Flags will be placed on all veteran's graves on Thursday, May 25 at 10 a.m. by Post 50 members, with the help of Madison Southern's AFJROTC cadets. The flags will be removed on Tuesday, May 30, at 10 a.m. Anyone wishing to help with flags is welcome.

Another group has been busy placing flags on the graves of veterans in the rural cemeteries all over Madison County.

"Over the weekend we have just about completed our push for this Memorial Day," Spencer Guiley said.

"Once again, we have put out more flags and visited more cemeteries than before."

Guiley reported that so far, his group has over 850 flags, and visited around 90 cemeteries.

"By the time Memorial Day arrives, we expect to expand that number even more," Guiley said.

Guiley said they visited many cemeteries in Berea including Silver Creek, Johnson, Cow Bell, Pilot Knob, Red Lick Wallace, and others.

"I have to give credit to the Berea Rotary Club, Lakes Funeral Home and Davis & Powell Funeral Home," Guiley said. "Without their donations

"Think about this. A success rate of even 30 percent would have a major domino effect on our community," Taylor said. "It would not only decrease the overcrowding in our jail, but also give companies a more stable work force, create stronger family units, reduce the presence of drugs, and more."

Taylor encouraged people in the audience to become involved in the project by employing graduates, lending expertise during the RFP review and selection process, or working as a mentor for recovering addicts.

Taylor gave a special thank you to the City of Berea for coming out with such strong support for the project.

"The council and the mayor could not have been more gracious in offering their willingness to answer the call to help our people," Taylor said.

During the question and answer period, Craig Williams from Berea stood up to offer his appreciation for the idea of the Healing Center.

"Speaking for myself, I applaud it and support it completely," Williams said.

Other audience members asked about the possible support from the federal government, and why such a problem exists in the first place. Taylor replied that Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell had expressed support for the project, and met with them at an earlier time.

One student from Berea College asked if causes for the drug epidemic had been traced, since in Washington, D.C. they had linked problems to lack of economic opportunity.

Taylor said they needed to introduce inmates back to society, and part of that introduction would be putting them to work for such county departments as solid waste, roads, and the animal shelter.

Revenues for county services were another concern that Taylor brought up in the State of the County. He stated that when looking at this year's budget, it was clear that they were signifi-

"Funds previously supplied by the state have diminished, expenditures in every area increased and the tax base remained stagnant," Taylor said. "And the monies we had been able to save over the past two years had to be reinvested into two areas - long deferred maintenance on infrastructure, equipment, and facilities, as well as shoring up the budgets from the sheriff's department, jail, and road fund."

He mentioned at this point that they would be fixing the columns in front of the courthouse.

Taylor warned that the county would have to divert funds from worthwhile projects and programs to areas required by law to be funded. Last year, he reported, they brought in $4.1 million in county property taxes, and this budget year they had to fund the jail, sheriff and road budgets for $3.5 million.

"It doesn't take a genius to figure out that before long we will have less revenue coming in to cover the mandatory expenditures in the budget," Taylor said.

In other business

- Herb Lovitt was promoted to lieutenant at the Madison County Fire Department.

- Taylor signed a proclamation, making May 21-27 EMS week. EMS Director Carlos Coyle expressed his appreciation for the support of the fiscal court, and the recognition of the value and accomplishments of his staff. He reported that EMS gets 17,000 calls per year. "It's an absolute, vital service. Can't be put on hold," Coyle said.

- The Madison County Sheriff's 2017 tax settlement was between $47 and $48 million

- The first reading of the 2017-18 budget was approved. Raises for staff will be discussed at the next meeting.

- The fiscal court approved an agreement with the Red Cross, allowing the county to get

Taylor didn't offer solutions, but did state that Madison County would need to be realistic about the services that could be provided, and consider whether some services could be better provided by the private sector.

When discussing the financial crisis of the county, Taylor brought up the possibility of a city/county merger, stating that he was interested in investigating the idea.

"Why do we have three of everything," Taylor asked. "Just think of what we duplicate: road, fire, GIS, IT, Economic Development, building and planning and zoning, HR. . . with exception of a few things, everything we do is in 3s, costing taxpayers and governments more. But even more important, we are not unified in our approach to development, coordination, and economic recruitment to our community."

Taylor also pointed out highlights from the previous year, including the acceptance of credit cards by county offices, the new website, the new county logo, Eforms for constituent requests, two strategic free smoke detectors. Red Cross will provide some training, and the Madison County Fire Department will install the smoke detectors in people's homes. This partnership was important, Coyle reported, because grants have dried up that used to pay for smoke detectors. Firefighters will install them during their shift, so it won't cost the county for personnel time. There will be a fuel cost, but they can combine trips to homes with driving and/or equipment training.

have saved 478 days with the early release program.

County Attorney Marc Robbins and Mahonty met with Thomas about the jail, and it was agreed that Mahonty would look through the citations of every person booked in the detention center, to see if there's any way to come up with savings.

"The jail has so many different avenues where people come in, but now that we're looking at each one we can save more money," Mahonty said.

Thomas reported on the revenues that the Madison County Detention Center generates through booking fees, and also medical. From January 2016 to January 2017, the jail should have generated $104,130 in booking fees, but they were only able to collect $45,490, for a 43 percent collection rate. Inmates are also charged for medical, with flat fees for some procedures and co-pays for doctor visits. However, of the $68,466 billed for medical expenses, the detention center only collected $22,216.

"We're not going to get a lot of money here. We'll get some. Whatever the per diem is, $5 a day, $10 a day, you'll get very little of that," Thomas said.

Judge Executive Reagan Taylor brought up the question of charging inmates a per diem at the last fiscal court meeting, as a way of bringing in extra revenue to offset the costs of the detention center. Taylor asked Thomas to put together a proposal of what to charge inmates, whether to increase the

... would know my dad passed by," Glyn said. How They Make Angels follows the early childhood adventures and tribulations of Glyn's father, Bradley "Snooky" Green. There is a particularly tragic event in this book, Glyn said, but he wouldn't give details, declaring that you had to read the book. He would only say that this particular event led to his father keeping an obituary in his pocket until the day he died. The second book, Glyn said, would follow his father through the Great Depression, and the third would start when his father was drafted into the Army to fight in WWII. Relatives have been very irritated at him since reading How They Make Angels, Glyn said, because he has yet to write the next book in the series. "It's harder than I thought it would be," Glyn said. "The books are based on a lot of family history and family stories, and then there's that other part..." Other part, the reporter asks? "That other part that comes from my runaway imagination," Glyn said with a grin. The title How They Make Angels comes from an old saying of his family, Glyn said, but he's never been able to trace where it came from. He remembers clearly the first time he heard it, when he was a child. "I was jumping off the roof of our house, because I decided to train to be a paratrooper," Glyn said. "Dad was driving up right then, and when I was laying down in the dirt, bruised up, he told me, 'son, that's how they make angels.'" Glyn's great grandfather, Henderson Green, who moved to Central Kentucky in the 1850s, also shows up in flashbacks in the book. Henderson was a staunch abolitionist, and his views were not welcome in North Carolina, Glyn wrote. Glyn himself grew up in Berea, on Walnut Street next to Brushy Fork. His best friend to this day, Dennis Pope, grew up across the street. Glyn graduated from Berea High in 1968, the last year the school existed, and eventually graduated from ECU with a degree in education. He taught at Berea Community for one year, and 13 years at Madison Southern was built in Berea, Glyn transferred there to teach and coach the first football team. "I then discovered I could make more money on real estate appraisal," Glyn said, who retired from the school system in 1997. Glyn intended to keep the book How They Make Angels secret from his family, but his sister discovered it and told his mother. "She was pretty irritated at me for not telling her," Glyn said. "After she read it, she told me the book was really, really good, but that she wished I hadn't used some of the words that I did." Glyn still has breakfast with his mother, who will soon turn 90, every Sunday. She tells him new stories and facts about his family every week, Glyn said, and many of the photos in the book were collected by her. People can purchase a copy of How They Make Angels at the Dinner Bell gift shop, or on Amazon. Around 500 people have downloaded the book from the Amazon website, free with Kindle Unlimited or $2.99 to buy. When asked why he didn't charge, Glyn said he wasn't in this for the money, but to honor his father's story. "It breaks my heart that we're losing these WWII vets," Glyn said. "They would take care of things. My dad and his brother could make anything, like their first car. They really were the greatest generation." And perhaps that, for Glyn, is how they make angels.

Kentucky Apiarist Visits Berea Urban Farm Thursday

It is estimated that 30 percent of the honey bee population in Kentucky was lost last year and a group of people in Berea are dedicated to doing something about that very sad statistic. Bee Friendly Berea is in its fourth year of operation, and thanks to financial support from businesses and individuals, has assisted 20 families to become backyard beekeepers. Project coordinator Richard Olson said he is encouraged by the numbers of people in Berea who are supporting honey bees by taking up beekeeping. "Bees are critical to the production of much of our food," Olson said. "Bees provide honey for their beekeepers, but more importantly, they provide pollination for many of the crops that make up our local food supply." Bee Friendly Berea is bringing Kentucky State Apiarist Tammy Horn

Potter to Berea this Thursday for a public reception on the Berea Urban Farm. Potter has authored several books on beekeeping, is a longtime beekeeper and a founder of Coal Country Beeworks, an effort to link restoration of eastern Kentucky mining sites with development of a local beekeeping economy. Potter became the Kentucky State Apiarist in 2014 with her primary goals to document hive health, promote economic development, and provide education and outreach. People attending the reception can see top bar and Langstroth hives on the Berea Urban Farm on Adams Street, where Potter will be speaking at 6 p.m. Snacks and drinks will be served and people are encouraged to bring their questions about bees and beekeeping. For information call 859-985-1689 or visit the Berea Urban Farm facebook page.

Tammy Horn Potter, state apiarist, examines her honey bees. She will be speaking in Berea on Thursday at the Berea Urban Farm at 6 p.m.

Novelis Provides Funding for Free Berea STEM Camp

Novelis Aluminum Corporation in Berea is partnering with Berea College's Partners for Education at Berea Community Elementary School with a summer camp experience focusing on Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics, or STEM. Through Novelis' donation, students will be able to participate in the camp free of charge. The camp will engage K-8th grade students in activities ranging from designing and programming robots and rockets to observing and measuring the natural wonders found outside of the classroom. AmeriCorps volunteers that spend the school year serving with Partners for Education as STEM tutors and mentors at Berea Community will lead the summer camp. The STEM activities kicked-off in early May as AmeriCorps members demonstrated the programming capabilities of one of the robots students will work with this summer, the Sphero Sprk+. Students then piloted the Spheros across the classroom and programmed commands that changed the robots' color and speed.

Reliability Engineer Eric Bigarel then talked to the students about his role at Novelis Aluminum Corporation. Bigarel described the similarities between programming commands for the Sphero robots to programming commands for the large scale machines he works with at Novelis to recycle and transform used aluminum cans into 57,000 lbs. aluminum ingots used in global applications ranging from automobiles, architecture, electronics and new beverage cans. Bigarel encouraged students that enjoyed piloting the Spheros to continue to seek out STEM opportunities in high school and higher education. The partnership between Novelis and Partners for Education at Berea College is made possible by the Novelis Neighbor program. Novelis' Health and Safety Administrator Tammy Peyton serves as the Novelis Neighbor Site Champion for Berea. Peyton, an integral architect of the partnership, presented a check to Partners for Education Executive Director Dreama Gentry and Berea Independent Superintendent Mike Hogg at the kick-off event.

Young Broom Maker Works to Revitalize His Art

By Kim Kobersmith
Citizen Reporter

Young broom maker Justin Burton is on an artistic mission -- to revitalize what he calls, "a lost art."

As far as he knows, he is the youngest full-time broom maker in the country. There are also no companies currently manufacturing equipment to make handmade brooms. That is why walking into his workshop at Gallery 123 is a little like walking back into craft history.

One of his prize possessions is his circa 1890s foot-pedal operated broom winder acquired from the estate of renowned Kentucky broom maker, Richard Henson.

"I am carrying on a Kentucky tradition," says Burton.

Adjacent to it are two broom cutters from the early 1900s. All of the pieces are in working order.

Burton discovered his love for all things broom while a Berea College student. Seeking a hands-on labor position, he was assigned to the broom department in Student Crafts. He stayed through his college career, rising to student manager of the department by graduation.

Burton estimates he helped create over 5,000 brooms for the college. He also had the opportunity to research the history of broom making at the Appalachian Center.

One highlight of his college career was traveling with a sister city delegation to Japan as the Berea College broom maker. The Japanese in that area have a love for handmade brooms; he made 56 at their community festival. One of his brooms was left on display at the local museum.

After graduation, he applied for the Arts Accelerator program through Berea Tourism. He credits the program with helping him secure the capital to get started in his business, The Broom House. His brooms are in at least 45 states and four other countries.

Gallery 123 showcases a number of Burton's standard brooms, as well as some of his more unusual creations. He has originated a hand broom with an authentic Kentucky thoroughbred horseshoe handle, proven popular with visitors to the state. In collaboration with Arts Accelerator woodworker Tim Wade, Burton crafts a whisk broom with a rectangular wooden handle. A standard broom costs $35, with kids' brooms priced at $30 and those

Broom corn provides the bristles for handmade brooms, a plant related to sorghum that reaches 10-15 feet tall. While it resembles corn, the top 3' of the plant is utilized to make brooms. Burton is attempting to grow a small patch of broom corn outside of Gallery 123.

Burton is intentional about the source of materials for his brooms. The broom corn is grown in South Carolina. All of the wood is from the US, with much of it sustainably-harvested eucalyptus and pine. The leather is from Kentucky, and while the nylon twine is from Tennessee, he hopes to source Kentucky hemp twine as it becomes available.

As well as making brooms, Burton wants to teach others.

"It would be great if more people were making their own brooms," Burton says.

He points out that people can grow all the components of a broom in their own backyard, so the results would be very local and a functional tool through which creators can express their own individuality.

In this first year of his business, Burton organized a Sweep In for broom makers from around the country. Through an on-line forum for broom makers and 200+ personal e-mails, he gathered 27 participants from 13 different states including Texas, Minnesota, and Colorado. They networked, had presentations from broom corn and dye suppliers, and led workshops in the community. Plans are already underway for a 2017 event, also in Berea.

"Berea is a good location, in the middle of the country and on the I-75 corridor," states Burton.

Burton doesn't foresee any sweeping changes in his life that will take him away from making brooms. While he might pursue graduate school after his Arts Accelerator commitment, he knows he wants to continue creating in Berea.

"It is a good place to make brooms," he states.

Word From Berea Streets

"After visiting our Artisan Center, do you plan a trip into Berea?"

James Boykin said, "No, we're on our way home from Dayton to Gatlinburg."

Jay'ron Smith said, "We are on our way to Ohio--but since you mentioned it--I think we'll go!"

Steven Boykin and Makari McIntosh said, "We had not planned on a trip into Berea today, but since you have spoken to us, we think we just might do that."

Jordan Signs to Play Basketball at Union

Senior Jordan Sandefur of Berea Community signed her letter of intent to play basketball at Union College on May 12.

Sandefur, 18, will be working with Coach Tim Curry in Barbourville. Jordan is the daughter of Amy and Jeff Sandefur. She intends on majoring in nursing.

Jordan has played varsity basketball at Berea Community for seven years, and served as team captain. She was selected to the All 11th Region team, All District team, All Bluegrass Conference team, and All "A" Regional team. Jordan is the all-time leading scorer at Berea and the all time leader in scorer in Madison County with 2471 career points. During the 2016-2017 season she averaged 18.7 points, 3.6 rebounds and led the team in assists, steals and 3 pointers made.

Jordan was involved in National Honors Society and Unite Club at BCHS.

White Station Homemakers Meet in May

The White Station Homemakers Club met at Middletown Baptist Church on May 10 with 16 members present.

The meeting proceeded with a potluck lunch and social time. President Marge Cummings called the meeting to order, and Terri Griffen read My Grandmother's Hands that was written by a homemaker member.

Club members brought ideas for the June meeting, which is a trip to a Kentucky sight to learn and enjoy cultural arts. Members agreed to go to Favia's in Georgetown. After lunch, there is a quilt shop and other stores to visit. This will take place on June 14, with a car pool leaving the church at 10:30 a.m. The Toyota Plant tour was discussed, but members decided to postpone because of the time element. People need to allow approximately four hours per tour. This is a future consideration.

Motions were made and seconded to donate $25 for a 4-H camp scholarship. The members also agreed to donate $25 to the Madison County Fair Cultural Arts awards. The treasurer will write the checks and deliver them to the Extension Office.

New officers for 2017-2018 are President Alina Strand and Vice President Betty Schiederma. Secretary and treasurer shall continue positions. Leaders for the Lessons for the upcoming year were planned. Members signed to be hostess each month.

The rummage sale is planned for the Route 25 weekend on June 3 from 8-3 p.m. It will be located in front of the St. Joseph Hospital. Alina has the sign and her sons have offered to put it up.

Several husbands have been drafted to bring tables and return them. It was requested that all items to be sold be marked prior to day of sale. These monies are to be used to provide new clothes and Christmas gifts for students in our local middle schools.

Becky Knauer gave the lesson on Embracing Aging. Charades was a fun part of the class. Everyone used their brain to solve Up & Down Words Game and Name the Condiment.

Rotary Addresses Fitness Issues, Grant Funding

In an effort to address fitness and health topics for Rotary, Sandy Skapura of New Energy Fitness presented some of the simple moves at a recent meeting of Berea Rotary.

Many of the demonstrated moves can be done while sitting, and all assist people in maintaining fitness. Improvement of flexibility, range of motion, balance, and breathing occur with practice. Paulette Edster, a student of yoga, demonstrated several of the "warrior postures".

Skapura also noted the importance of social interaction in classes for those in the Silver Sneakers age range of 55 and up. Silver Sneakers, a program covered by many insurance policies, is offered at various locations such as fitness centers and area YMCAs. Even when a person is traveling, the Silver Sneakers card is recognized so that exercise can continue.

Skapura is a licensed Silver Sneakers instructor and teaches both the Yoga and the Silver Sneakers Classic fitness which incorporates the use of weights and cardio movements. Her classes are Monday and Wednesday with start times of 9, 10, and 11 a.m. Berea Rotary will not meet the Tuesday after Memorial Day, but will resume regular meetings in June. Brandon Sears, county agent, will address the club June 20.

The importance and impact of external funding such as grants for communities has been the topic of various speakers in the past month to Berea Rotary. The members have heard the upside, the downside, and the inside of such funding.

A project such as Liberty Place for Women in Recovery depends on outside financial support in order to allow its clients services free of charge. Gwen Holder, director, stated that operating costs come from the Kentucky Department of Corrections and the Kentucky Housing Corporation Project Based Section 8. However, the facility could not function fully without community support. More information can be found at <http://www.foothillscap.org/Liberty.htm>.

Noted is the need for host families for Rotary Exchange Students. In particular, a host is needed for a Finnish student for Berea Community High School for the upcoming year. Interested parties are asked to contact Charles Hoffman at Charles.hoffman.law@gmail.com.

Registration Open for Splash & Dash

One of his favorite memories was before the race. One of the race directors of the Inaugural event, Brandon Pollock, allowed Sawyer to introduce himself on the mic to all the people present.

"I got to speak on the speaker and that was fun," remarked Sawyer.

Sawyer was very happy and excited to participate with young and serious competitors. It was good for him because he got to see the fun and positive side of a competition and was able to participate in his first ever youth aquathlon, says Peggy Wilson, Sawyer's mom. She goes on to say "it was a fun and positive experience, and we need more of these events in Berea."

The event is open to all children ages 6 to 15 who seek to begin living a healthy lifestyle. Children ages 6 to 8 will swim 50 meters and run 500 yards like Sawyer did last summer and will do so again this year. Children ages 9 to 10 will swim 100 meters and run half a mile; ages 11 to 12 will swim 150 meters and run one mile; and ages 13 to 15 will swim 200 meters and run one-and-a-half miles.

At the conclusion of the Splash and Dash, an awards ceremony will be held and each participant will receive an official Splash and Dash shirt and a finisher's medal, which will signify their accomplishment of competing in and completing the Splash and Dash.

The Splash and Dash will take place this year on June 24 at 8:30 a.m. at the Berea City Pool. The event will be $25. Register today for an opportunity to compete with Sawyer and other young yet serious athletes in the 2nd Annual Daniel Boone Splash and Dash.

For more information or to register for the event to <http://www.bereatrails.com/> or the event. Facebook Page - <https://www.facebook.com/bereasplashanddash/>.

Last Tuesday, 8-year-old Sawyer Wilson registered for the Daniel Boone Splash and Dash.

Sawyer, a veteran of the Daniel Boone Splash and Dash, is the first registered participant of the second event. This is a title he also held during the inaugural Splash and Dash event.

Last year Sawyer, who was only 7 years old, competed with kids in his age group and was able to complete both sections of the race. He swam 50 meters and ran 500 yards. Sawyer, like the other 38 participants, received a USA Triathlon (USAT) medal of completion, which signified that he competed in and completed a nationally sanctioned race.

Sawyer had fun with the event and was very happy he was able to participate.

Southern Cheerleaders Sign with Morehead, ECU

Several cheerleaders from Madison Southern signed with Morehead State University or ECU where they will be participating with the cheer teams. From left to right are Mark Coleman, the cheer head coach at Morehead State University, Mikaela Sadler, Ijahnai Johnson, Amber Abney, Caitlyn Russell, Poem Lee, and Beth Bruner, ECU cheer head coach.

Five cheerleaders who recently graduated from Madison Southern have signed with either Morehead State University or ECU to participate with their cheer teams.

Mikaela Sadler signed with Morehead, and Amber Abney, Ijahnai Johnson, Poem Lee and Caitlyn Russell signed with ECU. In the four years that these five students cheered for Madison Southern, the team placed in the top 10 at UCA High School Nationals every year, and won the KHSAA Region 11 this past year. They placed 2nd at Nationals in 2016, and 2nd at state this season.

"Both 2nd at Nationals and State was the highest placement in the history of the Madison Southern Varsity Cheer Team," Teresa Jefferson, the head coach at Madison Southern Cheer since 2013, said.

Jefferson stated that Mikaela would fit in well at the competitive program at Morehead.

"She makes those around her better cheerleaders, not to mention she will make you smile," Teresa said.

Regarding the four other cheerleaders, Teresa said that "Ijahnai would get the most determined vote . . . strong game skills as well as being an awesome base," and Amber was, "by far the most improved from her freshman to senior year . . . she is a great flier and looks great in the air." Poem "has a consistent attitude and work ethic . . . she pushes her group to keep working on their technique," and Caitlyn is the "most versatile cheerleader in this group, she can main base, secondary or back spot."

"Dedicated, loyal and hard working -- these are words that describe all five of these young ladies," Jefferson said. "This is going to be an exciting and awesome opportunity for each of them."

The four assistant coaches for Madison Southern Cheer are Beth Wilson, Andi Cochran, Amanda Childers and Mary Jefferson.

Tourism Budget Under The Gun

By Beth Myers
Citizen Editor

It was a crowded house at the budget work session last Thursday, May 25, when the city council's audit and finance committee met to review the proposed 2017-18 budget for the City of Berea.

The entire Berea City Council attended, along with several community members, in a meeting that lasted almost five hours. Audit and Finance Committee chair Steve Caudill facilitated the session, and led the council through each piece of the proposed budget. Except for tourism, the council agreed with the proposed budget after cutting the budget for the Berea Human Rights Commission (HRC), and decreasing funding for the renovation of the historic L & N Depot so it could someday house a restaurant.

The council spent around an hour discussing the tourism budget, without coming to a consensus or agreement to approve. Council member Bruce Fraley read from the city official's handbook, however, to show other members that they were more limited when it came

Berea Gets Ready for 25 Yard Sale

Kim Saderholm, above, organizes items for a yard sale Wednesday on Chestnut Street, as part of the 25 Yard Sale event this weekend from June 1-3. Saderholm said she likes to start a day early, to capture more customers. Saderholm organizes a yard sale for the 25 Yard Sale every year to raise money for the Quaker teen program. Organizer Randy Coffey estimates that there will be about 80 yard sales along Highway 25 in Berea, at 20 different locations. Dozens of other yard sales in Berea, at locations other than Highway 25, will also be held this weekend. Check the classified section.

Some Surprises Show Up in Survey of Berea Shoppers

By Beth Myers
Citizen Editor

The local arts and crafts sector is not a big draw for Berea shoppers, according to a recent economic development survey, and local-owned restaurants are much more popular for locals than chains.

These two findings were listed in the survey report that council member Dr. Billy Wooten recently disseminated to city staff and administration. The surveys were compiled in an organizational communication course by students and faculty from Berea College public relations, marketing, and business classes.

The survey was sent out electronically through personal Facebook pages, and the Berea College email list, with the only requirement that someone live within the Berea city limits. Wooten also reached out to groups not affiliated with the college, such as the Berea Moderates, to disseminate the survey so as to reach a diverse population.

Wooten was amazed with the results -- 424 Berea College students and 457 non-college residents responded to the survey.

"I was just hoping for around 150 students, and I couldn't believe the response," Wooten said. "Many students said that no one had ever asked them what they wanted to see in the town of Berea."

In the survey, 91 percent of college students report only shopping once per month, if at all, at arts and crafts businesses. Fifty percent of non-college participants reported not shopping at

Dog Park Proposal "Happy Tails" Completed

By Beth Myers
Citizen Editor

A proposal for a dog park in Berea has been completed, and the City of Berea's parks and recreation committee will consider it next week.

The proposal was prepared by a relations and marketing class at Berea College, as part of their service learning. Dr. Billy Wooten had announced a few months ago that one of his classes would be working on the dog park proposal, which could then be considered by city staff and city council members.

"People really want a dog park in Berea," Wooten, who has two dogs of his own, said. "When I was campaigning, it seemed like every door I knocked on, there was a dog that would greet me."

The proposal suggests building the dog park on Harrison Drive, alongside the Indian Fort Trail that starts across from the Berea Municipal Utilities. It would be placed between the back of the golf course and the trail.

The proposal uses the name, "Happy Tails Dog Park" as a placeholder, and includes a covered pavilion, fencing and gates, three different sections for large, medium

Sand Sculpture to Commemorate 225th Anniversary

The Kentucky Artisan Center at Berea celebrates Kentucky's 225th Anniversary with the creation of an original sand sculpture by internationally known artist Damon Farmer.

Farmer has been charged with bringing Kentucky history to life in sand.

Directly in front of the Center on a circle of pavement, Farmer will sculpt 10 tons of compacted wet sand over three days, into a montage of portraits and scenes from Kentucky's rich history. Some of the artist's design includes Abraham Lincoln, bourbon, horses, Daniel Boone and even Natural Bridge.

Todd Finley, executive director of the Center states, "We are excited to invite travelers and people throughout the region to come and see art and history join forces -- to watch sand turn into an amazing three dimensional sculpture of Kentucky history!"

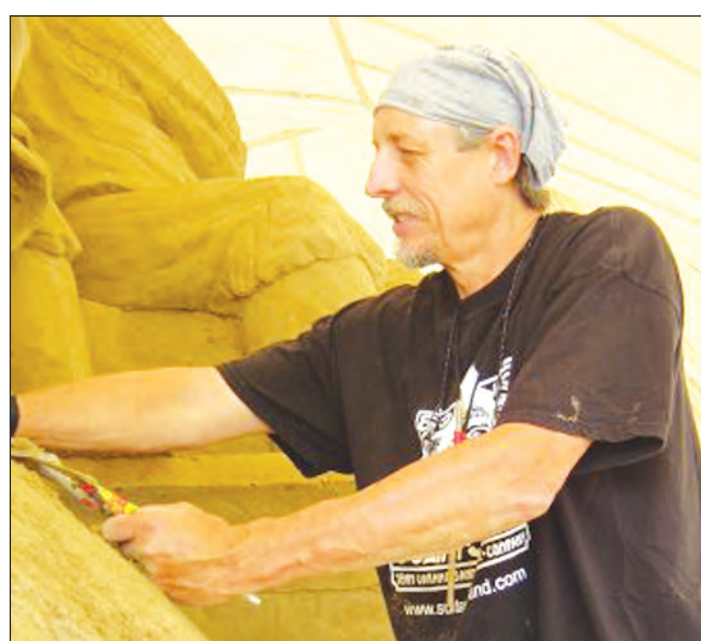

Starting on Sunday, June 4, and continuing, through Monday, June 5 and Tuesday, June 6, Farmer will sculpt a huge pile of compacted sand into intricate imagery. From 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. on these three days, visitors can watch Farmer carve and shape sand using only the simplest of tools. Carving from top to bottom, he will carefully

Heart Healing Center Opening

New Heart Healing Center is opening this summer in downtown Berea.

The center offers training and healing in treating oneself and others with respect and healthy boundaries. It is an expansion of director Joanna Juzwik's ten years of private practice in Berea.

New Heart is kicking off with a summer program tailored for teens, ages 12-17. It focuses on teaching teens to claim their power fully, to take responsibility for their choices and actions, and to set good boundaries with other people. Participants will learn physical, emotional, energetic, and mental self-care practices; see consequences of their own and others' actions more clearly; notice when they lose control of themselves, and how to regain it; to get smart about who and what is influencing them; and to treat themselves and people they encounter with greater respect.

The summer program operates June 5 through July 28. Participants commit to coming three days a week: Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, from 3 - 5 p.m., and may stay after group time until 7 p.m., for self-directed skill-practicing time. The program is a mixture of teaching, discussion, and skill practicing.

For teens with social anxiety, talking is not necessarily required. This summer's program will be run by Juzwik.

Cost for the summer program is $200/month. Participants commit to one month at a time, although participation is encouraged for both months. The center prefers that participant expenses are covered by someone other than the participant, so that they have a tangible support link in their existing community. This could be a parent, other relative, church, neighbor, or friend. General community scholarship donations are also accepted.

To register, contact Joanna Juzwik at (859) 986-8686. The June session (June 5 - 30) registration deadline is June 2 and the July session (July 3 - 28) registration deadline is June 23. The number of participants may be capped if necessary. If this happens, priority for July session will be given to June session participants.

New Heart Healing Center is an independent community healing and support organization. It is not affiliated with any government, educational, non-profit, religious, or other organizations.

Reflections, Taglines, & Tourism

Okay, got some news about our regular Reflections feature, where we report on the happenings in Berea as reported in the Berea Citizen 50, 40, 30, and 20 years ago.

The Berea College Hutchins Library is renovating their downstairs and have put all archival films in storage for the summer. As with many organizations in Berea, they neglected to check with me so that I would not be inconvenienced. That was a joke by the way, for those of you in town who compulsively post such statements on social media to enact public crucifixions.

So, because of said archives being in said storage, I'm not able to access old Citizen copies in order to write the Reflections section for the next few months. That being the case, I will instead look at the bound volumes we have in our office for the 1990s. So be prepared to have more recent history covered -- such as 20 years ago -- in Reflections until the microfilm once again becomes available.

A few columns ago, I talked about my dislike for the tag line, "Where Arts Alive," for the City of Berea, and invited people to come up with alternatives. Someone took me up on my request, and turned in the following phrases:

Berea, Where People Care
Berea, It Feels Like Home
Berea, Come on in!
Berea, Share the Fun
Berea, Where the past guides the future

Berea, There's something here for everyone

Berea, So much to take in Berea, Belle of the Bluegrass and Gem of the Mountains

Experience Berea

You Belong in Berea.

I enjoyed reading these, and they spurred my own thinking. I started to consider the whole idea of "gem" and also the past guiding the future. So now I'm playing with the tag lines, "Berea, Gem of Appalachia," "Berea, A Progressive Step Ahead," or "Berea, Where Vision & Tradition Meet."

So I invite anyone else to join in the discussion. We might have 50 possible tag lines by the time this is through.

Tourism continues to be a huge discussion in our city. I sat for almost five hours last week, hearing the city council speak about the budget, and tourism funding was a major topic. At the heart of this conflict, I believe, is the feeling of residents that they are not benefiting from tourism. And that's not something you can solve by arguing or debating your position.

It's time, I believe, for the Tourism Commission to consider ways they could financially support local interests, such as the splash pad at the city pool or beautification efforts within the city. Something tangible that residents can point to as a benefit they are enjoying from the restaurant tax.

From our readers

The circus is not dead

Dear Editor,

Just when we thought the "Circus" had folded its last tent, "The Draft Circus" was back in town at the Budget Meeting on May 25th at the BMU Building. Sorry advertising wasn't up to par. Steve Caudill was ringmaster at the first performance. There were only two rings but boy it was entertaining.

In the first ring were the "City Budget" performers. Pretty much the same acts I had seen before. Mr. Davis rode around on his bike, an act he did in his younger days, with such a smile on his face, until he found there were no connecting trails.

Mr. Little came out with his "Electric Light Show" which lit up the entire tent at the cost of $1000 a month to perform. The Ringmaster pulled the switch on that voltage. We were left in the dark again, defused by the "Little Person," Mr. Stone.

The audience became restless after two hours, so the (HR Commission) was introduced. HR is the High Rope act, trying to balance themselves on a rope that is not straight. One performer couldn't take the height any longer and threw herself to the ground. The audience thought this was part of the act and applauded loudly.

By this time we all needed a drink but that would have solved nothing. Everyone was getting bored.

Intermission
Finally, the "Main Attraction" appeared in Ring II, the tourism budget. Wow, what a show. As acts were announced they were met, not with applause but with silent boos.

The featured act rode in, Kerri Hensley (Bareback Rider) with her handler Randy Stone, not on the expected White Stallion (Berea) but a mule. That was as stubborn a mule as I've ever seen, bucking and throwing its mane at every command. It appears the bareback rider has no experience riding a mule.

Mr. Schultz was reluctant to carry the billboard because they can't be seen, the bareback rider said carry them anyway.

Mr. Wooten, "how will we feed the hungry children at the circus?" One member said plant seeds and if all else fails we'll "spray" the animals.

Mrs. Wilson said the circus should be for ALL audiences the people want new attractions and we should give it to them.

Mr. Terrill said if we can't provide more shows for less money we must reduce the ticket costs (tax.)

The next act was Mr. Stone, building the Tolle building with Legos, 400,000 of them. It was a nice visual but could take years. Do you have Legos to donate or are all your Legos gone?

Mr. Fraley read from the "Circus Law Book" about running the circus. We can't ask them to cut acts, but can suggest they refresh them and work together to put on a bigger and better show for less money. Our tent could hold many more acts.

After 4 1/2 hours the audience was restless. Ringmaster Caudill cracked the whip, the performance was over. The "Circus" will return, if you haven't been lately you should plan to attend. It's free, the acts may be the same but the grand finale might be different. It's a once-a-year event, if you miss it's probably due to lack of advertising.

all in the arts and crafts stores, with only 39 percent reporting shopping there once per month.

"I was really surprised that local people didn't shop more for arts and crafts in Berea," Wooten said. "Both college students and local residents said they were too expensive, and there wasn't enough diversity of stock. One person wrote, 'I can only buy so many bowls.'"

Soon after getting elected to Berea City Council last November, Wooten stated that he was interested in pursuing a few different projects for the city. One of those projects was to survey local residents on their shopping habits, and find out what retail options they would like to see in town.

Wooten, an associate professor of communications at Berea College, utilized his students to write the survey questions, and administer it with the monitoring of Berea College faculty. Danny Isaacs, the economic development director at the City of Berea, approved the survey questions before they were sent out.

"The college students have really not been included in prior surveys," Wooten said. "But they do spend money here, so we thought it was important to find out their opinions and shopping behavior."

Most who read the survey results were surprised at the amount of discretionary cash that Berea College students spend. They reported spending approximately $40-$50 on food or entertainment when traveling off campus.

In the major conclusions section of the survey report, it was stated that, "the Berea College student population is often mischaracterized as not having enough discretionary income to matter to the Berea economy, but this is a fallacy that is losing the city a significant portion of potential income."

Slightly over 50 percent of Berea College students reported shopping and eating off campus more than six times per week, with that same percentage reporting they shop and eat outside the City of Berea.

Wooten was concerned with how many Bereans shop in Richmond or Lexington instead of locally. The majority of Berea students and non-college residents reported traveling outside the city for groceries, clothing, and entertainment. Both groups reported that a movie theater was the biggest lack in Berea, with 301 non-college students stating they wanted a theater, and 398 college students with the same request. Several mentioned that a dollar theater would be a good alternative to the offerings of Richmond. Bowling was also an option with a large numbers of supporters.

The two groups had remarkably similar choices for specific stores they would like to see come to Berea, with Marshalls as the first choice, Starbucks as the second, and Publix as the third. Both groups also put a grocery store and clothing store as the two highest needs for Berea in terms of businesses.

Both college and non-college respondents also selected the same three local restaurants as their favorites when eating out, with Noodle Nirvana as the top choice, followed by Clementine's and Native Bagel.

Another big takeaway

from the survey, Wooten said, is that all survey respondents felt that local businesses didn't do enough to market or advertise their services and goods to local residents. Many wrote that they would like to see more coupons offered, and discounts for local residents. There was also a discontent with the lack of evening dining options.

Wooten has already shown the survey results to city council members, and Isaacs plans to use the information with the economic development committee. Already there has been some interest generated because of the survey, with a clothing retail business in Richmond inquiring about opening a store in Berea.

sculpt the wet sand to illustrate moments in Kentucky's history.

Farmer, who is currently in Italy creating a sand sculpture states, "My long-time avocation of sculpting sand gradually blossomed into a major aspect of my commercial work, and it now provides me opportunities to share my favorite art form worldwide."

The Kentucky Artisan Center will celebrate the completion of this historic sculpture with an open to the public event held on Friday, June 9, beginning at 10:30 a.m. Present will be sculptor Damon Farmer and guest speakers including Travel and Tourism Commissioner Kristen Branscum and newly designated poet laureate Frederick Smock, of Louisville, reading selected poems.

and small dogs, waste stations, and play areas where dogs can be off-leash. The budget for the proposal was $171,753.25, but Wooten admits that it is the "Cadillac" version.

"There are different pieces that could be implemented, or perhaps the whole thing could be implemented over a period of years," Wooten said.

Wooten and his students visited different dog parks in Richmond, Lexington, and Moorehead for research. They talked to park managers as well as people who used the dog parks to find out what worked well and what didn't. Most of the dog parks had been funded by their city, Wooten said, with some private money used as well.

"I would see the city funding the initial building of the park," Wooten said, "and then private funding and sponsorships used for upkeep and maintenance."

The proposal also suggested a "memorial board" to honor pets that died. Wooten and his students did not see any examples of that, but they had the idea as another way to raise funds for the park.

Splash & Dash Uses Part of Boone Trace Trail

Last Year's Daniel Boone Splash and Dash was a resounding success.

This social intervention, designed to encourage a healthy lifestyle among the children in Madison County and the surrounding counties, reached close to 40 participants and is back for its second iteration. The second Splash and Dash will be on June 24 at 8:30 a.m. at the Berea City pool.

The Splash and Dash incorporates the use of part of the Daniel Boone Trace Trail. The Daniel Boone Trace Trail was blazed by the famed woodsman, hunter, and explorer Daniel Boone in 1775. Boone was hired by Colonel Richard Henderson, the owner of the Transylvania Land Company, and was tasked with exploring the land southeast of the Ohio River and north of the Cumberland River. Before Daniel Boone's exploration and creation of the trail, there were no roads big enough for foot or horse travel which led directly into what is now Kentucky.

The Daniel Boone Splash and Dash, in addition to promoting a healthy and active lifestyle among the children of Madison and surrounding counties, also seeks to highlight the Daniel Boone Trace Trail and encourage its use. The Splash and Dash will do so by incorporating the trail into the running portion of the youth aquathlon. The Splash and Dash did this last year and will do so again this year. After the participants complete the swim they will then run along the trail to get to the finish line and complete the race. Kids ages 6 to 8 will run 500 yards; ages 9 to 10 will run half a mile; ages 11 to 12 will run one mile, and ages 13 to 15 will run one-and-a-half miles on this historical trail.

to the Berea Tourism Department.

"The city may choose to enact or repeal the restaurant tax," Fraley said, "but it may not dictate how the tourism commission spends it. We cannot change line items in the tourism budget. . . We have to treat this one [tourism] a little different. If the council would like to see changes, in my opinion, then we need to make recommendations to the tourism commission."

If the city council does not approve the proposed tourism budget for 2017-18, however, the department would revert to the budget from the previous fiscal year.

Council member Ronnie Terrill asked that a certain amount of money be set aside for a convention center. In response, Berea City Administrator Randy Stone showed plans to renovate the former Tolle and Ford building with tourism money, where a meeting space would be built for 150-175 people. There was $300,000 budgeted in tourism for that renovation.

There was also conversation about the money spent on advertising from the tourism budget, and whether that was effective.

"The citizens of Berea are demanding that we do something, and if we don't do it, we may reduce the restaurant tax," Terrill said.

Other council members pointed out that the City of Richmond had fewer staff and less money spent on advertising. Both council members Jim Davis and Cora Jane Wilson encouraged tourism to fund items that would directly benefit the residents of Berea, such as the trail system or the new splash pad for the Berea Pool.

Caudill asked the Berea Tourism Commission to schedule a meeting to consider the concerns and requests of city council. He stated that the finance committee would meet after that, to work on a tourism budget that they could all agree on.

During the discussion, council member Billy Wooten asked where the $5,000 for the Spoonbread Festival was listed.

"We don't want to have to revisit this all over again," Wooten said.

Tourism Director Kerri Hensley said the Spoonbread Festival would need to apply for grant funding, and the money would then come out of that line item. However, Fraley read from the agreement, which committed Berea Tourism to giving $5,000 for the Spoonbread Festival.

The council decreased the Berea HRC's budget to $5,000. They will be able to keep their part-time clerical position, however, since that is being paid from the general fund. Some council members also questioned continually giving funding to the Garden Blitz, since it was intended as start-up money.

The parking lot that the City of Berea leases on N. Broadway was discussed, with some members questioning whether it was utilized. It was decided that signs should be posted clearly stating the lot was free city parking. There were also questions about the large trucks always parked in the back.

Wooten asked about the feasibility of offering hazard retirement for the police and firefighters. A mayoral candidate recently wrote a letter to the editor, advocating for hazard retirement. Stone reported that it would increase costs to the city by half a million, and future costs would be unpredictable.

"We've talked about this for years and years," Stone said. "Remember that once you start on hazard retirement, you can't quit."

Other budget items:

- Employees will receive a two percent cost of living raise next year.

- A part-time program manager is budgeted for the economic development department.

- Wooten asked that a placeholder be put in the budget for the summer food program, in case it was needed next year.

- The budget for renovating the L & N Depot was cut by $50,000, a decrease in the building of a commercial kitchen. There are different entities interested in putting a restaurant in the current Welcome Center, and a few council members emphasized that higher rent should be charged since the space was being fixed up. Otherwise, it would be unfair to other Berea restaurants that did not get their spaces renovated by the City.

- Funding was budgeted for land improvements such as the building of a dog park and a stadium at Berea Community.

- Three new positions have been budgeted for the fire department, partly because the Berea volunteer firefighters have not been responding to fires. If the volunteer situation gets better, Stone said, they may not fill all three positions.

- A splash pad will be installed for the 2018 summer, replacing the infant/toddler pool.

Saderholm Speaks to Rotary Club

Rotary membership.

Saderholm, who is "shepherding" the new Cargill building, agreed to share diagrams, floor layouts, plans for modernization, descriptions of ecologically sound ventilation systems, types of construction materials, classroom equipment plans, and the "Neogeorgian" style of architecture.

When questioned about the fate of the Geology Museum, Saderholm stated that even though it is currently underutilized, it will be moved "in parts" to avoid duplication. Features that will encourage interactive learning are the locations of classrooms for related science topics, as well as "gathering places" where students and faculty can

Much of the structure will be walled with glass to invite openness in space and philosophy. The technology will be state of the art, even to the level of a "birthing" manikin in the nursing classroom. Every effort is being made to create an environment that will heighten student interest in science disciplines. In particular, the building will enhance the college's commitment to STEM education. In Saderholm's words, "just because a subject is hard—you don't have to give up."

On June 6, the speaker will be Sharon Blair of the nursing department of St. Joseph Berea Hospital. Acting President will be Bob Shaffer.

Shelf Notes

Ruthie Maslin, Madison Co. Library

That's kind of how I feel when Summer Reading rolls around each year at the Madison County Public Library. A certain wild excitement comes over me, and I am ready for adventure.

The 2017 Summer Reading Program officially kicked off May 20, and in that first week last week, we had more than 8,800 visits to both library locations and the Bookmobile. Honestly, it was like old home week at the library – I got to see so many wonderful Madison County friends and library lovers.

This year, the library is once again participating in the Summer Food program, and in our first full week of free lunches, we served 613, thanks to our wonderful sponsor sites – Grow Appalachia/Berea College, and Madison County Schools. Those 18 and younger can eat for free seven days a week, and on the weekends, we provide a free sack lunch for all ages.

Ever since Summer Reading started, the energy level at the library has totally ramped up. Everyone is excited about what they are going to read over the summer. There is a lot of chat about books, and everyone is eager to share their favorite books or authors. That excitement is contagious – all of a sudden, I can't stop thinking about what book I want to read next.

Do I want to revisit an old favorite (like Frank Herbert's Dune that I was discussing with a friend just last week), or do I want to catch the latest David Baldacci thriller – that would be The Fix, released last month? Maybe I can try out a new author or genre. I have been quite intrigued lately with Tartan Noir – suspense/thriller/mysteries set in Scotland.

Some of the most popular writers in this genre include Ian Rankin (Inspector Rebus), Denise Mina (Alex Morrow), Stuart MacBride (Logan McRae), Val McDermid (Tony Hill & Carol Jordan), and Ann

Cleaves (Shetland Island). Since we have plenty of titles by all these authors in a variety of formats available from the Madison County Public Library, I may just start with exploring that genre.

It's easy to sign up for the Summer Reading Program – you can do it on the Bookmobile, on our website – www.madisonlibrary.org – or at either library location. Then you just start reading. Kids get a free book each time they complete a card, and adults get a nifty prize for completing their first card. Plus each completed card is an entry for the big prize drawings at the end of summer. We even offer fine forgiveness when you sign up to participate.

June and July at the library are also chock full of fun and educational activities. Thanks to the Friends of the Madison County Public Library, there are amazing family performances and shows in both libraries, from magic, stunts, and science, to live animals, dance, and Shakespeare. The Tuesday shows are at 10:30 AM in Berea and 2 PM in Richmond. On Thursdays, the times flip flop – 10:30 AM in Richmond and 2 PM in Berea. Plus, there are special activities including crafts, movies, story times, book clubs, gardening programs, technology programs, and fitness activities throughout the week for all ages – something cool at the library every day!

The library is one of several Berea locations participating in the Summer Food program. See graphic below

Artists to Set Up Shop in Shifflet Cabin

Photos Submitted
 Broom artisan Justin Burton, left, and woodturner Tim Wade will be opening a new storefront in the historic Shifflet Cabin next month.

Special to the Citizen

The cabin in Berea that has served as a scenic backdrop for many concerts and “jammin’s” over the years will soon house a new business.

Woodturner Tim Wade and broom artisan Justin Dean Burton will be opening their new storefront next month in the historic Shifflet Cabin in Old Town Artisan Village. Both Wade and Burton are currently participating in the Arts Accelerator program sponsored by the City of Berea and Berea Tourism.

When Wade was looking to lease a storefront for his craft business, the Shifflet Cabin was being used as storage space and not drawing any income for the city. Wade approached city officials about cleaning out the structure and converting it to a gallery/retail space. He ended up securing a nine-month lease for $200 a month.

The downside for the artists, however, is the cabin has no air conditioning, no heating, and no restroom facilities. Despite this lack of comforts, Wade still convinced city leaders to give visitors access to the inside of the structure.

“A lot of people have never seen a real historic cabin of this type except maybe on TV. This is a great opportunity, and if we can sell some stuff, that’s okay, too,” Wade said.

Some upgrades have been made to the electrical system, but Wade emphasized that nothing will be done that will change the historic or financial value of the cabin.

“I gave my word that when we do vacate it, we’ll leave it better than we found it,” Wade said.

Both Wade and Burton will graduate from the Arts Accelerator program in October. In the meantime, the two artists will divide their time between the 123 Gallery and the Shifflet Cabin.

Though opening a new storefront is a challenge, Burton believes he and Wade are ready.

“I’m excited. This building has been sitting here for years, and it’s a good opportunity not only to establish a storefront in Old Town, but to share this building with many more people,” Burton said.

The porch of the cabin is a familiar venue for the Jammin’ On the Porch Thursday concert series, and it will be a stage for performances for the concert series beginning in July. Yet Wade and Burton assured officials their storefront will not interfere with those events.

“Everything everyone is doing here will still happen,” Wade said.

Both Wade and Burton have been enjoying success as artists since enrolling in the Arts Accelerator program. Burton recently hosted a national seminar for broom artisans, while Wade landed two large wholesale contracts with major retailers.

Mayor Steve Connelly said the creation of the new craft storefront is an important demonstration of the way in which the Arts Accelerator can help launch small businesses.

“We celebrate the location of those artists in that cabin because one of the goals of the Arts Accelerator program is to renew and expand our working artist cohort in Berea,” Connelly said.

Connelly added that the additional storefront can lead to more visitors who will potentially boost local commerce.

“The more we can actively have going on down there [Artisan Village], the more reason there will be for people to come,” Connelly said.

According to a plaque on the side of the structure, the Shifflet Cabin was built around 1813 by Thomas Shifflet in Madison County’s Drowning Creek. It was used as both a home and a country school house. Around 1980, a descendent of Thomas Shifflet, Raymond Layne, moved the structure to Adams Street, where it remained until it was donated to the City of Berea in 2003. It was subsequently moved to its current location in front of the Welcome Center.

Barb Anspach said, “This isn’t the best I’ve ever bought, but I’m excited today about this new bike I found at a yard sale.”

Jennifer Bellando said, “Two weeks ago I needed a new clothes washing machine--and got one for $20 at a yard sale.”

Susan Reyes said, “I once bought a set of Pyrex bowls for $5. That was a great deal!”

Local Residents Encouraged to Check Decks for Safety Issues

Deck safety is often overlooked in home maintenance, and failure to build a deck correctly or to keep it in good working order can result in property damage, injury and even death.

For that reason, the City of Berea Codes and Planning Department has been educating local residents and contractors by emphasizing deck safety during May, designated Building Safety Month by the International Code Council.

Within the last year in Madison County Circuit Court, there have been two lawsuits filed involving deck accidents. One complaint was filed against a property owner after a tenant fell as the result of a deck in disrepair. The other case was filed against a general contractor who built a deck in Richmond where an infant drowned. In both cases, owners were accused of building or maintaining unsafe decks.

Codes and Planning Administrator Dale VanWinkle suggests decks should be regularly inspected and properly repaired before family and guests are allowed to use them. VanWinkle recalled a case where a student was killed after a deck rail gave way. With some basic inspection, that tragedy might have been averted.

To give residents an idea of how to inspect an outdoor deck, Codes and Planning suggests considering the following issues:

1. Are the boards of your deck splintering, mildewed or warped?
2. Check every connection to house, stairs and rails.
3. Assess the deck’s structure for sagging, tilting or other structural problems.
4. Ensure that the method used to connect the deck to the house is still doing its job.
5. Check deck’s foundation for areas that may be sinking.
6. Check all exit points to insure they are safe and clear.
7. Check to insure guards are installed no more than 4” apart.

The City of Berea Planning and Codes Department is encouraging residents and contractors to be aware of deck safety during the month of May, Building Safety Month. Residents have several ways to check if their deck is safe.

Deputy Sheriff Reports on Scams to Berea Lions Club

Deputy Sheriff Michael Stotts spoke to the Lions Club about scams at their May 22 meeting.

The Berea Lions Club heard from Madison County Deputy Sheriff Michael Stotts at their regular meeting on May 22 at the Smokehouse Grill in Berea.

Stotts, who serves as the public information officer for the Madison Sheriff's Department, spoke on avoiding scams and protecting property. Stotts pointed out that the act of making a scam call is not necessarily a crime - until the recipient gives the caller money. He mentioned that many of the scam are directed at seniors.

"People that were born in the 20s, 30s, 40s, 50s trust people. A lot of seniors have nest eggs and good credit . . . especially when it comes to credit card scams. People growing up then were generally raised to be polite and trusting and cons exploit these traits, making it impossible for these people to say no. I can think of my grandparents, that's the way they were," Stotts said.

According to Stotts, scam victims sometimes don't know how to report scams or were too ashamed.

"People when they're scammed like this . . . they're embarrassed and they don't report it." Telephone scams include:

- Jury Duty Scam - caller never use the city police, the state police, always the sheriff's office). "We do not take gift cards, iTunes cards . . ."
- Computer Virus Scam - "Your computer has a virus, we need to get into it - Microsoft doesn't do that."
- IRS/Treasury Scam - caller uses threat of arrest for back taxes owed. "Sheriff's office is going to come out and get you if you don't send us money! -- IRS won't call you if you owe them back taxes."
- Grandparent Scam - caller claims to be a grandchild in trouble and asks for money.
- Government Grant Scam - "They tell you that you are a good citizen, you've never been arrested, so therefore the government is going to give you money. In order to get this money you have to give them money."

• Pay Day Loan Lender Scam - claims you have an unpaid debt and uses threats of arrest. Stotts said Kentucky doesn't have these, they're illegal . . . on-line payday lenders are also illegal in Kentucky.

• Sweepstates/Lottery Scam - claims that someone won money or prizes but they must pay first. The guy said, "well, if you bring X amount of dollars and meet me in Paint Lick to pick up your car and cash." The caller told the scammer to meet him at the McDonalds at Paint Lick, there's only a bridge in Paint Lick. Stotts suggested that people report suspicious calls to the sheriff's department so that alerts could be posted on social media.

• Fake Employment Scam - "You see a job in the newspaper, send money to get a job, you get there - no job."

• Check Scam - A large check arrives in the mail from, say, a lender followed by a phone call asking you to cash the check. Then send the money somewhere and keep back a certain amount for yourself. "The bad thing about that is that you're going to wind up responsible for that money," Stotts said.

• Card Member Services Scam - "That's a robo-call called 'Card Member Services.'" This scam promises to lower your credit card interest. These callers often have the last 4 digits of Social Security numbers to make them sound legitimate. These callers try to get credit card numbers from victims.

• "Spoofing" - Special

App allows callers to make phone calls appear coming from different phone numbers. If caller number appears to be recipient's home phone - not to answer. Never call suspicious number back.

• Identity theft - Stotts pointed out thefts from unlocked vehicles provided frequent opportunities for identity theft.

• Home security - make it a practice to keep garage doors closed when doing yard work. Thieves can see contents of garage when hom owners are mowing.
