KEEPING FRANKLIN'S PROMISE

In the words of one elegiac tribute, "Great men have two lives: one which occurs while they work on this earth; a second which begins at the day of their death and continues as long as their ideas and conceptions remain powerful."

These words befit the great Benjamin Franklin, whose inventions, innovations, ideas, writings, and public works continue to shape our thinking and renew the Republic he helped to create and the institutions he founded, including the University of Pennsylvania.

Nowhere does Franklin feel more contemporary, more revolutionary, and more alive than at the University of Pennsylvania. His startling vision of a secular, nonsectarian Academy that would foster an "Inclination join'd with an Ability to serve Mankind, one's Country, Friends and Family" has never ceased to challenge Penn to redefine the scope and mission of the modern American university.

When pursued vigorously and simultaneously, the two missions – developing the inclination to do good and the ability to do well – merge to help form a more perfect university that educates more capable citizens for our democracy.

Penn has embodied and advanced Franklin's revolutionary vision for more than 267 years. Throughout its history, Penn has extended the frontiers of higher learning and research to produce graduates and scholars whose work has enriched the nation and all of humanity.

The modern liberal arts curriculum as we know it can trace its roots to Franklin's innovation to have Penn students study international commerce and foreign languages.

The first medical and business schools in the United States were launched here.

And the first general-purpose electronic, digital computer – ENIAC – was invented right here at the University of Pennsylvania.

At Penn, the never-ending quest for innovation and academic distinction has found perfect Franklinian expression in "The Penn Compact," President Amy Gutmann's bold vision for propelling our University from excellence to eminence in all our core endeavors. Fulfilling the goals of the Compact – increasing access for talented students of all backgrounds, integrating knowledge across multiple disciplines, and engaging our knowledge with communities locally and globally – will position Penn to make the greatest possible contribution to our society and our world.

Today, Penn proudly graduates a class of men and women who have shown the intelligence, drive, integrity, and character to become engaged citizens who will serve humanity with distinction. Our Penn graduates are poised to take their place as productive democratic citizens and as just and humane stewards of our world.

In these challenging and perilous times, a world in need of young men and women who are willing to shoulder the moral responsibilities of leadership can look to Penn.

Franklin wrote: "We may make these times better if we bestir ourselves. The noblest question in the world is 'What good may I do in it?'"

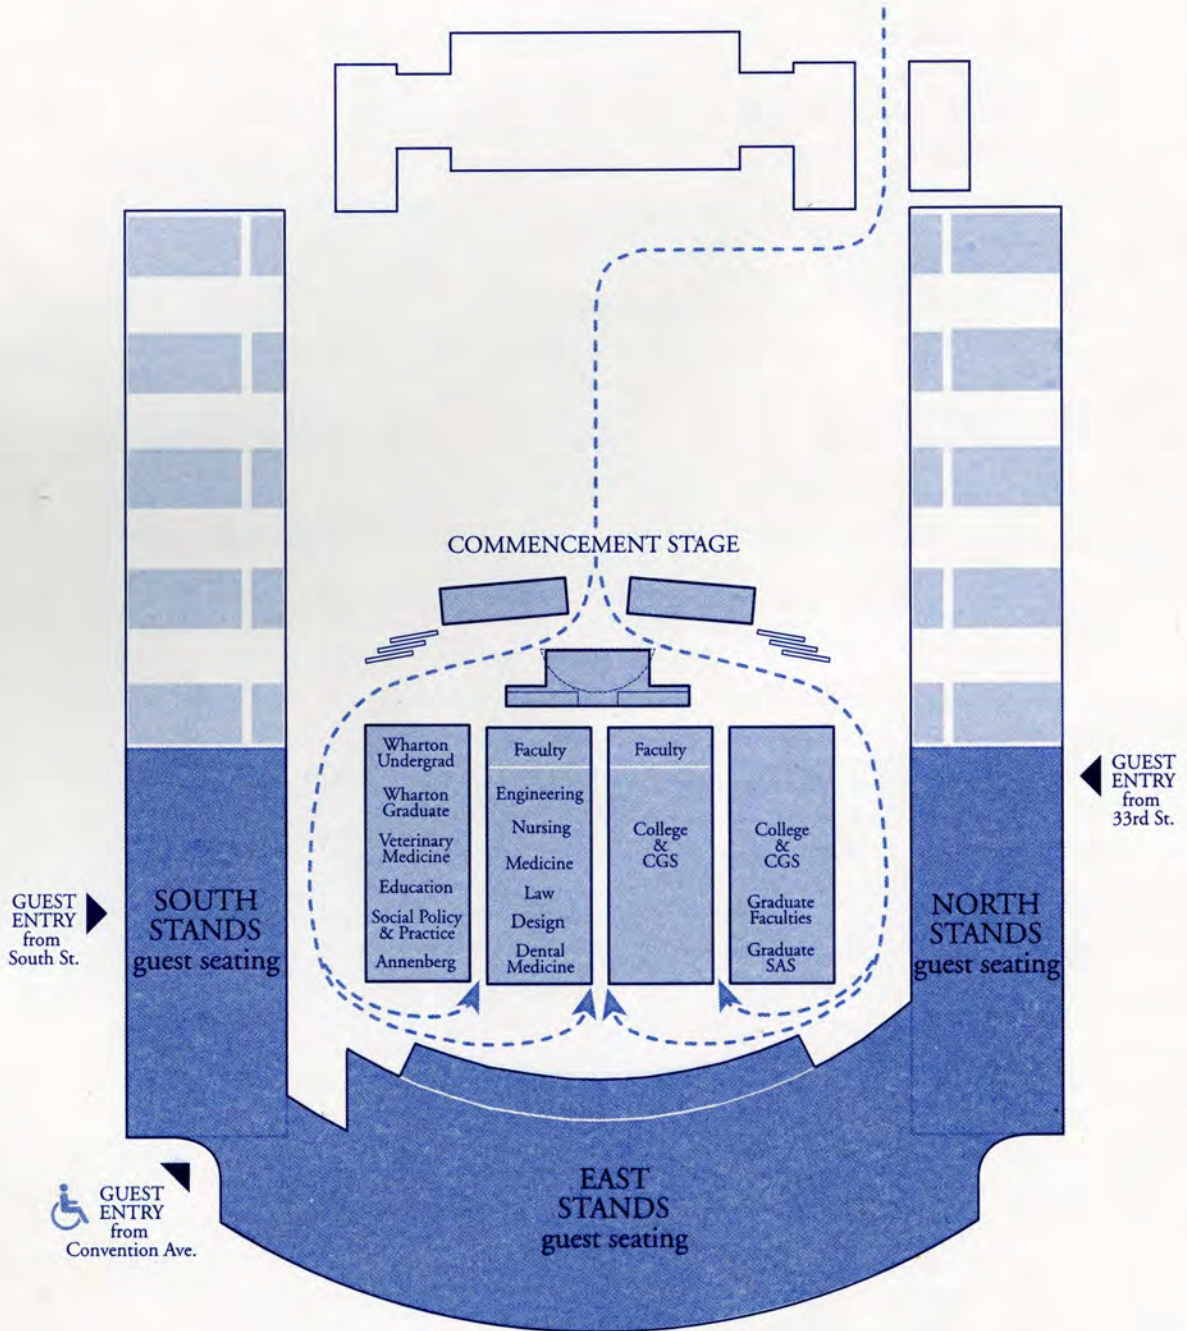

The answer to this question will be furnished by Franklin's newest heirs, the graduates of 2007.

COMMENCEMENT SEATING

Guests will find this diagram helpful in locating the approximate seating of the degree candidates. The sequence in which the candidates are presented for degrees is shown on the next page. The list on page 13, detailing the colors of the candidates' hoods according to their fields of study, may further assist guests in identifying the locations of the various schools.

In case of emergency, evacuation procedures will be announced.

Oh, say, can you see, by the dawn's early light,
What so proudly we hailed at the twilight's last gleaming?
Whose broad stripes and bright stars, thro' the perilous fight
O'er the ramparts we watched, were so gallantly streaming.
And the rockets red glare, the bombs bursting in air,
Gave proof through the night that our flag was still there.
Oh, say, does that star-spangled banner yet wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave?

Come all ye loyal classmates now, in hall and campus through,
Lift up your hearts and voices for the royal Red and Blue.
Fair Harvard has her crimson, old Yale her colors too,
But for dear Pennsylvania, we wear the Red and Blue.

(Chorus)

Hurrah! Hurrah! Pennsylvania!
Hurrah for the Red and the Blue;
Hurrah! Hurrah! Hurrah! Hurrah!
Hurrah for the Red and the Blue.

250 YEARS AGO: Model of Penn's First Campus. In January 1751 Penn opened the doors to its 18th century campus at Fourth and Arch Streets in Philadelphia. The campus consisted of two buildings: the University's first College Hall (built in 1740; altered for educational purposes in 1750) and its first dormitory (1764). In 1907 Penn commissioned the campus model pictured here for exhibition at the tercentenary of the founding of Jamestown, Virginia. Collections of the University Archives and Records Center.

1757: Penn's First Commencement

The Commencement for giving Degrees to the senior Class of Students in the College of this City, formerly put off on Account of the Small-Pox, is now fixed to be on Tuesday the 17th Day of May next; which will be the first Commencement that has ever been had in this Seminary.

7 April 1757

A PLAN OF THE COMMENCEMENT, to be held here on Tuesday next, in the College and Academy Hall.

Prayers by the Rev. Mr. PETERS.
A sermon adapted to the Occasion, by the PROVOST.
A salutatory Oration by Mr. JACKSON. And,
A Thesis to be defended – This closes the Forenoon.

In the Afternoon,

Three other Theses are to be defended.

Then the Degrees are to be conferred.

Some Orations are to be spoken by some of the Students who have been admitted to Degrees; and a valedictory Oration to be spoken by Mr. JACOB DUCHÉ.

N.B. To avoid Confusion, the Gallery Door will be opened at Half an Hour past Nine, and the Business of the Day will begin precisely at Ten in the Forenoon, and at Three in the Afternoon.

12 May 1757

Penn's first Commencement, two hundred and fifty years ago, was cause for great anticipation and celebration. Seven and one-half years after Benjamin Franklin organized the Academy of Philadelphia, his leadership and tireless work had brought about the first institution of higher education in William Penn's Province of Pennsylvania, one of just six colleges then established in British North America. Franklin had purchased and developed Penn's first campus, located on the southwest corner of Fourth and Arch Streets in Philadelphia proper. He had recruited the first faculty, collected the first tuition, and gotten the Academy out of its initial debt. Then, in 1754 and 1755, he hired a brilliant young Scotsman, Rev. William Smith, as the first Provost and worked closely with Smith in transforming the Academy into the College of Philadelphia. Franklin retired from his presidency of the Board of Trustees in 1756 and turned the leadership of the College over to Smith. Smith proved very capable indeed, guiding Penn for a full quarter century, still today the longest provostial tenure in University history.

The first class of graduates, though just six in number, honored their Alma Mater with lives of professional success and distinguished public service. Jacob Duché, valedictorian of the class, became a clergyman in the Church of England. He served the colonial Philadelphia parishes of Christ Church and St. Peters and was chaplain to the Continental Congress. He was also part time Professor of Oratory at the College. Francis Hopkinson entered the profession of law, served as a delegate to the Continental Congress, and signed the Declaration

250 YEARS AGO: The Provost's "Charge" to the Graduating Students. For the first half of Penn's history, the Provost concluded Commencement exercises with an address to the graduating students known as the "Charge." Pictured here is the title page of the very first charge, that of 1757, spoken by Provost William Smith. On the facing page are the handwritten names of those in the first graduating class. of Independence. Following the Revolutionary War, he accepted George Washington's appointment as the first Judge of the U.S. District Court of Pennsylvania. James Latta became a clergyman of the Presbyterian church and rose to be the third Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in America. In 1940, his descendant, also named James Latta, returned the 1757 diploma to Penn, where, from time to time, it has been proudly and prominently exhibited. Samuel Magaw became a clergyman in and a missionary of the Church of England. For more than twenty years he was rector of St. Paul's Church, Philadelphia. In 1782 he returned to Penn as Vice Provost and Professor of Moral Philosophy. In 1785 he was one of the founders of the Episcopal Academy of Philadelphia.

John Morgan may have been the most historically significant member of the first class of graduates. Two years after earning Penn's degree, he traveled to England and Scotland, where, in 1763, he earned his second degree, the Doctor of Medicine at the University of Edinburgh. He returned to Philadelphia and proposed the establishment of the first medical school in the British colonies. He was persuasive. In 1765, under the auspices of the Trustees of the College, he and others founded Penn's School of Medicine. The Trustees named him Professor of the Theory and Practice of Physick and soon thereafter added William Shippen to the faculty, conferring upon him the professorship of Anatomy and Surgery. Three years later, in 1768, the School of Medicine graduated its first class of students and Penn became the first and oldest university in what is now the United States (though the title, University, was not taken until 1779). Hugh Williamson, like Morgan, studied medicine, earning his M.D. from the University of Utrecht in 1772. His fame, however, came in public service. Williamson was a delegate to the Continental Congress, a signer of the U.S. Constitution, and a member of the first U.S. Congress. Taken as a group, the Class of 1757 was as accomplished and famous as any graduating class in Penn's history.

200 YEARS AGO: Penn's first purpose-built Medical Hall. In the first decade of the 19th century, as the School of Medicine enjoyed rapidly growing enrollments, the Medical faculty proposed a major building project, one that would add an impressive wing to the south of the "President's House." In 1807 the University completed its first purpose-built structure for research and clinical practice. In this steel engraving, the new Medical School addition is on the left, while the College is in the "President's House," on the right. Collections of the University Archives and Records Center.

200 YEARS AGO: The "President's House." In the 1790s, when the nation's capital was Philadelphia, the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania built an extraordinary mansion as a residence for the President of the United States. John Adams, however, refused to live in it and in 1800, when the federal government moved to Washington, D.C., Pennsylvania was left with a magnificent, but empty public building. The University of Pennsylvania purchased the house and its grounds in 1802 and that same year the College and School of Medicine moved from Fourth and Arch Streets to the new campus on the west side of Ninth Street, between Market and Chestnut Streets. Collections of the University Archives and Records Center.

1807: College and School of Medicine

On Thursday the 23d [of July] the TRUSTEES, the FACULTY, the GRADUATES, and STUDENTS, met at the University at nine o'clock, A.M. and walked in procession to the Rev. Dr. Hey's Church, the Independence Tabernacle, in Fourth Street, where a Commencement was held before a numerous, splendid, and respectable audience; after prayer, by the PROVOST, the following exercises were performed.

MUSICK

The Salutatory Oration, by Mr. JOSEPH HALL

A Forensic Dispute, on this question, "Whether it is more difficult to arrive at excellence in Eloquence at the Bar or the Pulpit?" by Mr. JOHN SOMMER.

MUSICK

An Oration on the good effects of Education, by Mr. SAMUEL H. TURNER.

An Oration on the alternation of action and repose, by Mr. THOMAS I. WHARTON.

An Oration on Classical literature, by Mr. D. SCHAEFFER.

MUSICK

An Oration on Liberty, by Mr. JOSEPH HALL.

An Oration on General Hamilton, by Mr. BENJAMIN J. BOSTOCK.

History of a Graduate, an ironical Oration, by Mr. J. SOMMER.

An Oration of Patriotism, by Mr. JACOB GRATZ.

The degree of Bachelor of Arts was then conferred on Messrs. BENJAMIN J. BOSTOCK, JACOB GRATZ, JACOB GREEN, JOSEPH HALL, DAVID F. SCHAEFFER, JOHN SOMMER, SAMUEL H. TURNER, and THOMAS I. WHARTON.

The degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred on the Rev. HENRY WADDELL of Trenton, New Jersey, the Rev. JAMES P. WILSON, and the Rev. JOSEPH PILMORE, of Philadelphia.

The Valedictory Oration, by Mr. JACOB GREEN.

MUSICK

The charge by the PROVOST.

MUSICK

An appropriate prayer by the Rev. Dr. ROGERS, Professor in the University, concluded the exercises of the day.

The Rev. Dr. Hey, and the Trustees of the Independent Church, are justly entitled to the thanks of the Trustees and Faculty of the University for the obliging manner in which they accommodated them with their elegant and convenient Building, and for a very agreeable concert of sacred music, which was given in the evening in honour of Commencement.

Poulson's American Daily Advertiser
25 July 1807

By 1807 the College of Philadelphia had become the University of Pennsylvania and the University had moved to a larger campus, located on the west side of Ninth Street, between Market and Chestnut Streets. Commencements had moved out of the old College Hall and into newer, more impressive facilities. In 1807 the Commencement procession made its way south on Ninth Street to Chestnut Street, then five blocks east on Chestnut to Fourth Street and lastly, north a short distance on Fourth Street to Ranstead Court. There stood the Independent Tabernacle, constructed in 1805-06 and immediately praised as perhaps the finest venue in Philadelphia for worship services and public ceremonies alike. The Commencement "exercises," described above, featured the graduating seniors, who displayed for Trustees, faculty, family, and friend alike the learning they had acquired at Penn.

While the College held its own in the early years of the American republic, the School of Medicine soared into national prominence. By 1807, in addition to medicine, anatomy and surgery, the School of Medicine had professorships in chemistry, midwifery, pharmacology, and physiology. The faculty was busy not only in teaching and practice, but also in overseeing the construction of the first Medical Hall on the Ninth Street campus, which was purpose-built for medical lectures and research. The School attracted students from all over North America, including, in 1807, seniors from Delaware, Kentucky, Maryland, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Virginia, and the Caribbean island of St. Croix. Thirty-one medical students graduated in 1807, nearly four times as many as the College graduates. The School of Medicine continued as Penn's largest school throughout the 19th century.

1857: College, School of Medicine, Law School and a School of Engineering

150 YEARS AGO: Commencement in 1857. For many years in the mid 19th century, the University held its annual Commencement on the day before the national holiday, the Fourth of July. Imagine the heat under the traditional black gowns! The rare handbill pictured here shows that in 1857 the program featured no fewer than seven student speakers, beginning with a "Greek Salutatory Oration" and concluding with the "Valedictory Oration." For some reason, unexplained, the Provost did not give a charge. The festivities included the processional, the recessional, and six musical interludes, given by an "orchestra under the direction of Carl Bergman." Collections of the University Archives and Records Center.

In 1857 the Trustees held Penn's Commencement in Musical Fund Hall, at the southwest corner of 8th and Locust Streets in Philadelphia. The academic Procession, accompanied by a professional orchestra, marched three blocks south and one east. The program, like its predecessors in 1757 and 1807, was given over to the graduating students, who spoke to the audience on learned topics, in Greek, in Latin, and in English. It is unfortunate, indeed, that these essays have not survived to the present day. The Provost conferred twenty-two degrees of Bachelor of Arts, twelve Bachelors of Law, and 151 Doctors of Medicine. He also awarded the Henry Reed Prize to the class valedictorian, the first Commencement honor in Penn's history.

The College had matured in several ways in the half century since 1807. The course in liberal arts was no longer directed by clergymen, but by a Provost who was a political economist and a Vice Provost who was a physical scientist. The Industrial Revolution and the advance of applied science had led the way to the establishment of a School of Engineering and the degree of Bachelor of Science. Student organizations had formed, including the Philomathean Society, crew and cricket teams, and four fraternities. The Law School was established in 1850, as the legal profession gradually pulled away from the apprenticeship system. The School of Medicine continued as Penn's flagship, with enrollments and graduating classes numbering more than twice the total of the other three schools combined. Before the Civil War split the country in half, Philadelphia was the national center for medical education.

150 YEARS AGO: Penn's Campus in 1857. In 1829 the Trustees built twin buildings on the 9th Street campus, replacing the "President's House" and the 1807 Medical wing. The campus pictured here – College Hall on the right and Medical Hall on the left – represented the University until its move to West Philadelphia in 1872. Collections of the University Archives and Records Center.

1907: The Professions at Penn

100 YEARS AGO: 1907 Commencement Program. In 1899 the Trustees adopted 1740 as the founding date of the University and a year later, they adopted a new design for the seal of the University. In 1907 both were featured on the cover of the Commencement program. The program had become a pamphlet, with the printed names of the graduates extending to twelve pages and the lists of certificates, honors and prizes extending to still another eight. The audience was "requested to stand and join in the singing of [three] Hymns," one of which was the school song, "Hail! Pennsylvania." The University conferred honorary degrees, heard from the "Orator of the Day," and then conferred earned degrees "in Arts, Music, Science, Philosophy, Laws, Medicine, Dental Surgery, and Veterinary Medicine." All of which took place in Philadelphia's grandest public hall, the Academy of Music, at Broad and Locust Streets in center city Philadelphia. Collections of the University Archives and Records Center.

One hundred years ago the University held its annual Commencement at the Academy of Music, at the southwest corner of Broad and Locust Streets in center city Philadelphia. The Procession began at College Hall and the graduating students walked all the way down Walnut Street, from 34th to Broad, and then one block south to Locust. The faculty, Trustees, and honorary degree recipients followed behind in horse-drawn carriages. The program of 1907 is familiar to us today. It aimed more at the advancement of the University's reputation than a celebration of the graduates' accomplishments. The Provost had dropped student speakers from the ceremony after 1895; a Commencement speaker or "Orator of The Day" replaced them. The award of honorary degrees was moved forward, to a much more prominent place in the proceedings; the conferring of earned degrees was moved to the last. Nevertheless the new format was extraordinarily successful. Crowds clamored to hear the guest speaker and the print media gave great prominence to the entire event.

In 1907 the Orator of The Day was the Honorable John A. Johnson, three-term Governor of Minnesota and in the words of the Provost, "the first western man invited to take the foremost part in our annual Commencement." Johnson exhorted the graduates to "look forward to success," which depended, he said, "upon your ideal of life, upon the life-work you have chosen, upon the life standards you hold before you, upon the heart, character, purpose and inspiration which guide your career and govern your destiny." His speech was reminiscent of the charge given to the graduates of 1757, in which the Provost spoke of the "principles of virtue and goodness." A challenge – "responsibility" – and an inspiration – "success" – were the continuing themes of Commencement.

100 YEARS AGO: 1907 Commencement's "Orator of the Day." In the last quarter of the 19th century the traditional Commencement program underwent fundamental change, as student speakers gave way to distinguished guests. By 1907 the modern form of Commencement had emerged. In that year the Commencement speaker was the Hon. John A. Johnson, Governor of Minnesota. The recipients of honorary degrees included Johnson; Hideyo Noguchi, of Japan, a research physician at what is now Rockefeller University; Leonard Pearson, veterinary surgeon and Dean of the School of Veterinary Medicine; Rudolph Hering, a clean water pioneer;

Horace L. Wells, chemist and Professor of Chemistry at Yale University; Oliver Huckel, clergyman, poet, and teacher; and George Wharton Pepper, prominent Philadelphia lawyer and Professor of Law in the Law School. Collections of the University Archives and Records Center.

The Commencement of 1907 also demonstrated the extent to which Penn's professional schools had eclipsed the College in the University's public profile. The Provost conferred a total of 558 degrees, only sixty of which were in the College. The College faculty still required proficiency in both Latin and Greek for the traditional Bachelor of Arts, with the result being that only twenty students earned this degree. There was one Bachelor of Music and thirty-nine Bachelors of Science (that is, College students who did not take the courses in Latin and Greek). By comparison, there were 112 Bachelors in the School of Engineering and Applied Science and twenty-six in the Wharton School. The Master of Arts was conferred upon twenty-four students and the Doctor of Philosophy on twenty-six. The schools of Medicine, Law, Dental Medicine, and Veterinary Medicine granted 113, seventy-three, ninety-six, and twenty-seven degrees, respectively. In terms of market share, seventy-eight percent of degrees were in the professions, while just twenty-one percent of degrees were in the arts and sciences. The dominance of the professional schools was to continue throughout the first half of the 20th century.

100 YEARS AGO: 1907: The "Old Quadrangle" Veterinary Building under construction. In January 2007 the School of Veterinary Medicine opened its acclaimed new Hill Pavilion at 380 South University Avenue. Exactly one century earlier, as shown here, the School was nearing completion of what is now known as the "Old Quadrangle" at 3800 Spruce Street. Collections of the University Archives and Records Center.

1957: A Renewed Emphasis on the Arts and Sciences

Beginning in 1920 and continuing through 1961, the University held two annual Commencements. The traditional Commencement, held at the end of the academic year, remained the chief event, but during these years it partnered with a mid-year "Convocation of University Council," held at the close of the first semester. In 1957 the University also celebrated the Seventy-fifth Anniversary of the founding of the Wharton School with a second Convocation of University Council, held in late April. The President and Trustees conducted all three in like manner.

George M. Leader, a Penn alumnus and Governor of Pennsylvania, delivered the mid-year convocation address to 504 graduates at Irvine Auditorium. In his address, the Governor stressed the importance of increased cooperation between higher education and government:

Higher education's role in achieving an adequate public service has three elements: education, research, and service. Not only should our colleges and universities raise the standards of preparation for public service, they should also, I believe, lead the way in persuading public authorities to broaden the opportunities for educated people within the government service.

Government, he said, must learn to recruit superior, broadly-educated young people, supplementing their general knowledge through in-service training, rather than interesting itself only in specialists. The Governor also exhorted the graduates to keep informed about the activities and problems of local, state and federal governments.

How would you decide the major issues of your times if you were in the positions of immediate responsibility? You are in the position of ultimate responsibility.

At the special convocation honoring the Wharton School, the keynote speaker was William McChesney Martin, Jr., chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System from 1951 to 1970. He discussed the policies of the Federal Reserve, defining its purpose as ... endeavoring, at all times, to assure monetary and credit conditions that will foster high levels of business and employment, maintain the stability of the currency, and promote sustainable growth in the economy. It is a policy of combating, with equal vigor, the excesses of inflation and deflation alike.

The University conferred eight honorary doctorates on the occasion, but no earned degrees.

The Two Hundred and First Commencement took place on Wednesday, June 12, 1957, in the Municipal Auditorium on 34th Street, south of Spruce. The Procession gathered in Irvine Auditorium and at 10:30 a.m., began to move south on 34th Street. 2,096 candidates for degrees filled the center section of the great hall; family and friends were seated on the sides, at the rear, and in the balconies. The University Chaplain, the Rev. Edward G. Harris, gave the invocation and the assembly joined in singing the National Anthem. President Gaylord P. Harnwell introduced the guest speaker, Frank Cyril James, an alumnus of the University and Principal and Vice-Chancellor of McGill University. He spoke on the need for breadth of vision in the world, saying,

We confront a world that is tense with fear, a world divided by the aftermath of the cold war and, it would seem, irritably split by spasmodic frictions on both sides of the iron curtain. We have no clear aims for the world as a whole, and we are unwilling to cooperate with other nations, because we distrust them. We want to be left alone to enjoy our own way of life, and our prosperity, but this stasis is the one thing that is impossible. ... You have the chance to bequeath to your children a heritage such as no generation of young people has ever enjoyed since civilization first began ... You can use that opportunity in any way you like: only if you close your minds and ignore it are you in danger.

50 YEARS AGO: Commencement at the Municipal Auditorium.

The President and Provost sat on raised chairs, facing the audience; the Trustees and honorary degree recipients were seated on stage; and the several graduating classes on the floor of the great hall. With a few notable exceptions, the University held its annual Commencement at the Municipal Auditorium on South 34th Street from 1932 until 1986. The Municipal Auditorium was demolished in 2005 and on its site is rising the University's new Perelman Center for Advanced Medicine, scheduled to open in 2008. Collections of the University Archives and Records Center.

50 YEARS AGO: Honorary degree recipients at the 1957 Commencement.

From left to right, F. Cyril James, the Commencement speaker; William J. Brennan, Jr., Associate Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court; C. Mahlon Kline, chairman of the pharmaceutical company, Smith, Kline and French, Inc.; Mabel Newcomer, economist and Professor of Economics at Vassar College; Bernard F. Gimbel, chairman of the department store, Gimbel Brothers, Inc.; Lewis L. Strauss, chairman of the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission; Gaylord P. Harnwell, President of the University; and Sydney E. Martin, Philadelphia architect and Trustee of the University. Dr. James, Justice Brennan, Mr. Gimbel, and Mr. Martin were distinguished alumni of the University. Collections of the University Archives and Records Center.

The President and the academic officers of the University then conferred the degrees in course. Fifty-three different degrees from twenty-one different schools and divisions of the University were awarded to recipients representing forty-one U.S. states and thirty foreign countries. The total number of graduates was four times the number of fifty years earlier and more than ten times the number of a century before. The great difference in student population between 1907 and 1957 was the rise of the Wharton School. Wharton's undergraduate school was Penn's largest and its M.B.A program Penn's third largest. More than twenty-eight percent of the 1957 graduates took Wharton degrees, substantially greater than the College's eighteen and one-half percent. The Law School, School of Medicine, and School of Dental Medicine each contributed about six percent of the total, with the other professional schools trailing behind. More than fifty percent of all degrees were in the professional schools, both undergraduate and graduate, and in this sense Penn retained its 20th century identity as primarily an institution for training in the pragmatic disciplines. Nevertheless, the College's share of the whole had nearly doubled since 1907 and its growth signaled the movement of the future.

2007: Franklin's University Today

Whereas, the well-being of a society depends on the education of their youth, as well as, in great measure, the eternal welfare of every individual, by impressing on their tender minds principles of morality and religion, instructing them in the several duties they owe to the society in which they live, and one towards another, giving them the knowledge of languages, and other parts of useful learning necessary thereto, in order to render them serviceable in the several public stations to which they may be called. . . .

Benjamin Franklin
Charter of the Academy and Charitable School
13 July 1753

I propose a compact, a Penn Compact, that expresses our boldest aspirations for higher education – a compact based on our shared understanding that “Divided we fail. United we flourish.” By honoring this Penn Compact, we will make the greatest possible difference in our university, our city, our country, and our world. The Penn Compact that I propose encompasses three principles. The first is increased access. . . . The second is to integrate knowledge. . . . The third is to engage locally and globally. By putting our principles into ever better practice, our Penn family will rise from excellence to eminence in teaching and research as we become ever more accessible. I ask that you join me in uniting behind our Penn Compact. Let us make this new beginning at Penn worthy of our boldest aspirations. Together we shall rise, as together we serve.

Amy Gutmann
President of the University
Inaugural Address
15 October 2004

At today's Commencement the University will graduate approximately 8,000 students, nearly four times more than it did in 1957. Befitting a major research institution, the School of Arts and Sciences and the Graduate Faculties lead the way. The Bachelor of Arts degree has emerged in modern times as the University's most popular.

Approximately twenty-seven percent of today's recipients will be taking that degree. The Doctor of Philosophy degree is now the fourth most awarded. Approximately seven percent of the total will be the Ph.D. The second and third most awarded are Wharton's Master of Business Administration and Bachelor of Science in Economics, representing sixteen percent and eight percent respectively. These four degrees account for more than fifty percent of all Penn degrees. The other professional schools, once Penn's most populous, remain very prestigious, but much smaller in proportion to the rest of the University than a century ago. The professional degrees of the schools of Law, Medicine, Dental Medicine, and Veterinary Medicine combined will make up only nine percent of all the degrees the University will confer. In the 21st century, Penn is first an institution of teaching and research and second, a consortium of schools of professional practice.

In 2007, the Penn Compact “embodies Penn's vision for making our University both a global leader in teaching, research, and professional practice, as well as a dynamic agent of social, economic, and civic progress.” Over the past fifty years, the University of Pennsylvania has certainly grown sufficiently large and influential to achieve these impressive goals. Penn's faculty of 4,200 leads more than 23,000 students through the apprenticeship of higher education and on to lives of public and private service. The faculty also generates more than $789 million a year in sponsored awards and projects. Penn's staff of 13,000 supports the academic enterprise; the University's Health System has a work force of an additional 11,000. Penn is thereby the largest private employer in the City of Philadelphia and the second-largest in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. Benjamin Franklin would be astonished . . . and very pleased.

Academic Ceremony and Regalia

Today, May 14, 2007, is the University of Pennsylvania's 251st Commencement. Penn traces its origins to a deed of trust executed in 1740 and is celebrating its 267th birthday this year. President Amy Gutmann will confer bachelors, masters, and doctoral degrees upon some 6,000 graduates of the University's 12 schools. Honorary degrees will be awarded to seven individuals of distinction in varied fields, as you will note on pages 16 and 17 in this program.

The practice of sporting signs on caps and gowns as a form of public proclamation at Commencement dates to the early 1760s and recalls an even more ancient tradition, originating in the practice of medieval universities. Penn's archives contain several 18th century broadsides, printed in Latin, which were distributed to Commencement guests along with the regular programs. The broadsides contain a series of propositions classified under various academic headings. Presumably, the graduating students were willing to defend these theses against any assertions to the contrary. On the eve of the Revolution, however, statements such as "the rights of the people are as divine as the rights of their rulers" must have met with widespread sympathy.

Academic Ceremony and Regalia

Commencement exercises at American universities and colleges traditionally are composed of three essential elements: the Academic Procession, the conferring of degrees, and the Commencement address. This practice has been codified since 1895, when a national conference on academic costume and ceremony was proposed and a plan known initially as the "Intercollegiate System" was formally adopted. The Trustees of the University of Pennsylvania incorporated this code in the Statutes of the University in November 1896. Now under the aegis of the American Council on Education, the "Academic Costume Code and Academic Ceremony Guide" was revised in 1932 and 1960.* Throughout the 20th century, Commencement at Penn has, with minor modifications, followed the dictates of the code and its revisions.

By 1896, however, Penn had been granting degrees for nearly 140 years. Like other American colonial colleges, Penn borrowed its 18th century Commencement rituals directly from the English universities. In England the history of academic dress reaches back to the early days of the oldest schools. As early as the second half of the 14th century, the statutes of certain colleges prohibited "excess in apparel" and required the wearing of a long gown. It is still an open question as to whether academic dress finds its sources chiefly in ecclesiastical or in civilian dress. It is often suggested that gowns and hoods were the simplest, most effective method of staying warm in the unheated, stone buildings which housed medieval scholars. In any case, academic regalia had evolved to contemporary familiarity by the time Benjamin Franklin was awarded an honorary Doctor of Laws by the University of St. Andrews in 1759.

Traditions and Current Practice at Penn

In April 1887, on the recommendation of a committee of the faculty, the Trustees adopted the "'Pennsylvania' System of Academic Costume." The colors and trimmings of hoods and caps were regularized according to faculty and degree. Beginning with the Commencement of 1887, the "'Pennsylvania' System" was published in each year's program and adherence to its rules was expected of trustees, faculty, and students alike. Beginning in 1896, the "'Pennsylvania' System" was superseded by the "Intercollegiate System," which has continued in effect to the present time.

The gowns used in American academic ceremonies vary according to the highest degree awarded to the wearer. The gown for the bachelor's degree has pointed sleeves; it is designed to be worn closed. The gown for the masters degree has an oblong sleeve, open at the wrist. The sleeve base hangs down in the traditional manner. The rear part of its oblong shape is square cut and the front has an arc cut away. The masters gown may be worn open or closed. The doctoral gown is a more elaborate costume faced down the front with black velvet and across the sleeves with three bars of the same; these facings and crossbars may be of velvet of the color distinctive to the field of study to which the degree pertains. The doctoral gown has bell-shaped sleeves and may be worn open or closed. Some institutions have authorized doctoral gowns in colors other than the customary black; holders of the University of Pennsylvania Ph.D. may wear red and blue gowns.

The hoods are lined in silk with the official color or colors of the college or university which granted the highest degree held by the wearer; more than one color is shown by division of the field color in a variety of ways, such as by chevron or chevrons. The binding or edging of the hood is in velvet, with widths of two inches, three inches, and five inches for the bachelors, masters, and doctoral degrees, respectively. The color of the border indicates the field of study to which the degree pertains. University of Pennsylvania graduates wear a hood lined in red with a blue chevron. The mortarboard cap is standard, though soft square-topped caps are permissible. Recipients of doctorates may wear a gold tassel fastened to the middle point of the top of the cap; all others wear black.

*This and additional material which follows is taken from "An Academic Costume Code and Academic Ceremony Guide" in American Council on Education, American Universities and Colleges, 14th ed. (New York: Walter de Gruyter, 1992).

Degrees shall be conferred today according to the following order:

Arts & Letters, white
 Science, golden yellow
 Business Administration, mustard
 Nursing, apricot
 Medicine, green
 Law, purple
 Fine Arts, brown
 Dental Medicine, lilac
 Veterinary Medicine, gray
 Education, light blue
 Social Work, citron
 Philosophy, dark blue

The Academic Procession

The order for today's Academic Procession is as follows:

Mace Bearer
 President and Provost
 Chairman of the Board of Trustees
 Commencement Speaker
 Candidates for Honorary Degrees
 Deans

Trustees
 Officers of the University
 Faculty
 Overseers
 Visiting Dignitaries

The Secretary of the University carries the University mace, the symbol of authority of the University, at the head of the Academic Procession. It was a gift of the family of William Murray Gordon, M.D. 1910. It is adorned with the seal and arms of the University, the Penn and Franklin coats-of-arms, a depiction of the Rittenhouse orrery, and a thistle symbolizing the early ties of the University with Scotland.

The President's Badge of Office

The President wears as a badge of office a silver medallion of which one face is engraved, like the mace, with the University seal. The obverse of the President's medal bears the "orrery seal," designed in 1782 by Francis Hopkinson, A.B. 1757, a Signer of the Declaration of Independence. The medal, suspended on a chain composed of silver links, was given by the late Trustee Thomas Sovereign Gates, Jr., A.B. 1928, LL.D. 1956, on the occasion of Sheldon Hackney's inauguration as President in October 1981.

University Seal and Symbols

The Seal of the Corporation

The Trustees of the University have an official seal that is, in effect, the signature of the corporation. It had its origin at a meeting of the Board of Trustees in 1755 with Benjamin Franklin as Chairman. Though the seal underwent changes over the years, the most recent design, approved in 1932 and adopted in 1933, returned it to virtually its original form.

The seal is composed of seven books stacked on a slanted desk top with the books bearing the following titles, representing the curricula of the day: Theolog, Astronom, Philosoph, Mathemat, Logica, Rhetorica, Grammatica. On the periphery of the stack of books appears the University motto, Leges Sine Moribus Vanæ, and the whole is encircled with the inscription Universitatis Pennsylvaniaensis.

Penn Coat-of-Arms

The Penn coat-of-arms was derived by combining the coat-of-arms of Benjamin Franklin and that of William Penn's family. The dolphin on the red chief was part of Franklin's coat-of-arms and the three silver plates on a blue chevron were a part of Penn's. The two were combined on a white shield along with two open volumes representing Pennsylvania's educational purpose.

Motto: Leges Sine Moribus Vanæ

The motto of the University, Leges Sine Moribus Vanæ, means "Laws without morals are useless." It comes from the longer quotation from Horace, "Quid leges sine moribus vanæ proficiunt?" the sense of which is "of what avail are empty laws without (good) mores?"

School Colors

Eighteenth century American academic institutions did not have colors. The earliest known representation of the combined Penn colors, red and blue, is on the incised lid of the 1871 College Hall cornerstone.

One legend traces their origins to an early track meet at Saratoga, New York, between Penn, Harvard, and Yale. When asked by the officials what colors would be representing the Penn team, the Pennsylvania captain reportedly replied, "We're going to be wearing the colors of the teams we beat," i.e. Harvard Crimson and Yale Blue. We shall assume that Penn was victorious and thus remained loyal to the Red and Blue.

The Schools of the University

The School of Arts and Sciences (1755)

The School of Arts and Sciences (SAS) is the direct descendant of the College of Philadelphia, where Benjamin Franklin established the first modern arts and sciences curriculum in the English colonies.

Undergraduate programs for men date to the chartering of the College in 1755; the College of Liberal Arts for Women was founded in 1933. The Graduate School was established in 1882 with the appointment of a Faculty of Philosophy. The College of General Studies (lifelong learning) traces its roots to 1892. The School of Arts and Sciences was born in 1974 with the merger of the College of Arts and Sciences, the College for Women, the Graduate School, and four social science departments from Wharton. Today SAS is the largest of the University's 12 schools, providing a liberal arts education for all Penn undergraduates and supporting graduate studies, basic research, and continuing education across the full range of the humanities, natural sciences, and social sciences. The School has 26 departments with 498 standing faculty, 26 research centers, six interschool institutes, and 10,000 students.

The School of Medicine (1765)

The first medical school in the English colonies was established at Penn in 1765, and it has set the academic tone and direction of American medical education since that time. Today the School of Medicine, a leader among the nation's medical schools, is committed to the highest standards in education, research, and patient care and is continuously engaged in long-range strategic planning and implementation focusing on programs and facilities that will take it well into the 21st century. In the current academic year, the School has 28 departments, 16 interdepartmental centers and institutes, and 1546 full-time faculty. It educates 556 M.D. students, 164 M.D./Ph.D. students and 546 Ph.D. students, and trains over a thousand residents and fellows. The School ranks third in the nation in research monies granted by the National Institutes of Health.

The Law School (1790)

Legal education at Penn began in 1790 with a series of lectures on law by its first law professor, James Wilson, a signer of the Declaration of Independence and one of the original six justices of the Supreme Court of the United States. After a long hiatus, instruction in law was reinstated in 1850 by George Sharswood; in 1852 the Bachelor of Laws degree was conferred for the first time, and in 1888 the course of study was extended from two to three years. Today Penn Law's pervasive cross-disciplinary program sets the standard in legal education with an unparalleled program that starts at the Law School and extends throughout the University. A majority of our faculty hold advanced degrees beyond law and many have joint appointments, adding a broader perspective to the classroom. Our students augment their legal education with classes throughout the University, and earn certificates and joint degrees from many of the graduate and professional programs. In the 2006-2007 academic year the Law School has 848 students; 55 standing faculty including nine associated faculty and clinicians, one senior fellow, and one senior lecturer; and 78 practitioners/lecturers. The School awards four degrees: Juris Doctor; Master of Laws; Master of Comparative Laws; and Doctor of the Science of Law.

The School of Engineering and Applied Science (1852)

The School of Engineering and Applied Science (SEAS) is one of the oldest in the United States, tracing its beginnings to the establishment of the School of Mines, Arts and Manufactures in 1852. The first graduate of the School received a Bachelor of Science degree in 1854. Since that time, the School has grown into a center of excellence in the creation of technology and in technology education. Its spirit of innovation led to the creation in 1946 of ENIAC, the first all-electronic, large-scale, general-purpose digital computer, making SEAS the birthplace of the computer age. Today, Penn Engineering offers a wide range of undergraduate and graduate programs, including the first alternative liberal arts program based in an engineering school. SEAS is particularly distinguished by its interdisciplinary, cross-school programs such as Management and Technology, Digital Media Design, Biotechnology, and the Executive Masters in Technology Management. Penn Engineering currently has 104 standing faculty, approximately 1,500 undergraduate students, 1,000 graduate students, four research institutes, seven research centers, and one regional institute.

The School of Design (1869)

Although the School of Design dates its founding from 1890, architecture courses were first offered at the University of Pennsylvania in 1869, making Penn's architecture program the second oldest in the United States. In 1921, the Department of Architecture joined with the Department of Music and Fine Arts to create an independent undergraduate School of Fine Arts modeled on the French École des Beaux Arts. In 1958, the School was renamed the Graduate School of Fine Arts, reflecting the shift to graduate degree offerings in architecture, city and regional planning, landscape architecture and fine arts. The triumvirate of architecture, landscape architecture and city planning shaped the core of the School in the 1950s and 1960s. In the 1980s, a program in historic preservation was added. Today, the School provides a rich environment for the study of the arts, architecture, landscapes and urbanism. Its opportunities now include undergraduate study in fine arts, architecture and digital media design. As a more accurate description of the School's major concerns and advancements made across a variety of fields, the School was renamed, in 2003, the School of Design. The School has a standing faculty of 30, approximately 130 lecturers and associated faculty, and more than 500 students.

The School of Dental Medicine (1878)

The Trustees of the University of Pennsylvania established a faculty of dentistry in March 1878 making Penn Dental the third oldest university-affiliated dental school in the nation. The School's first decades were remarkable for the diversity of its students, for even in the 1880s, nearly every state in the Union and many foreign countries were well represented. The School was endowed by Thomas W. Evans, a native Philadelphian and an extraordinary dentist, whose legacy made possible the construction of the School's Evans Institute in 1915, which remains the site of much of the School's clinical and classroom instruction. Penn Dental's educational, research and patient care facilities reached a new level of excellence with the recent construction of the state-of-the-art Robert Schattner Center. As a major provider of dental care to the West Philadelphia neighborhood, the School has also established innovative community outreach programs servicing the area. In the 2006-2007 academic year there were 455 faculty, including 50 standing faculty and 516 students.

The Wharton School (1881)

The Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania – founded in 1881 as the first collegiate business school – is recognized globally for intellectual leadership and ongoing innovation across every major discipline of business education. The most comprehensive source of business knowledge in the world, Wharton bridges research and practice through its broad engagement with the global business community. The school has more than 4600 undergraduate, MBA, executive MBA, and doctoral students; more than 8,000 annual participants in executive education programs; and an alumni network of more than 81,000 graduates.

The School of Veterinary Medicine (1884)

Penn's School of Veterinary Medicine is one of the world's premier veterinary schools. Founded in 1884, the School was built on the concept of Many Species, One Medicine™. A pioneer since its inception, the School has led the way in such areas as infectious disease research, germ cell biology, animal transgenesis, comparative oncology, and comparative medical genetics. It has also successfully integrated scholarship and research with all aspects of veterinary medical education. The School's strength in basic sciences, immunology, and mathematical modeling are valuable assets for developing strategies to rapidly detect and control the spread of new infections, and improving and developing vaccines that effectively protect animals. The School has two campuses. In Philadelphia, on Penn's campus, are the Matthew J. Ryan Veterinary Hospital for companion animals, as well as classrooms, research laboratories and the School's administrative offices. The Vernon and Shirley Hill Pavilion is home to state-of-the-art classrooms and research facilities for the School. The large-animal facility at New Bolton Center, in Kennett Square, Pa., encompasses hospital facilities for the care of horses and food animals, diagnostic laboratories serving the agriculture industry and research facilities to determine new treatment and diagnostic measures for large animal diseases. The School has 132 standing faculty and accepts approximately 110 students per year for the four-year program.

The Graduate School of Education (1914)

The Graduate School of Education (GSE) is nationally distinguished as a leader in the production of education research and in the preparation of education practitioners. GSE is unique among schools of education in its emphasis on the interactive relationships of education theory, research, and practice. The School is organized into four divisions, has 38 standing faculty, various research centers, and approximately 1,000 students. Originally an undergraduate education school and, for many years, a five-year professional school, GSE now provides advanced professional qualifications for educators across the lifespan and offers courses that lead to practice- and research-focused masters and doctoral degrees. The School also offers executive doctoral degree programs and a broad schedule of continuing education courses.

School of Nursing (1935)

Nursing Education at Penn began in 1886 when the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania started a nurse training program. In 1935, the Trustees of the University of Pennsylvania established a nursing degree program within the School of Education, and in 1950 the School of Nursing was established. The Master of Science in Nursing program was instituted in 1961, the Doctor of Nursing Science program in 1978, and the Doctor of Philosophy program in 1984. These innovations and a curriculum which progressively reflects changing health care delivery patterns have advanced the School into the first rank of American schools of nursing. The School is widely recognized for its leadership in nursing research and its innovations in nurse-managed clinical practice. It is a World Health Organization Collaborating Center for Nursing and Midwifery Leadership. The School of Nursing has 53 standing faculty and 954 students.

School of Social Policy & Practice (1948)

The School of Social Policy & Practice began in 1908 as a private school that opened its doors to five students in the field of child welfare. The School affiliated itself with the University in 1935 and became a formal school in 1948. In 2005, it changed its name from the School of Social Work to the School of Social Policy & Practice. The School offers the Master of Social Work, Master of Science in Non-profit/Non-Governmental Leadership, and Doctor of Philosophy in Social Welfare degrees. This year, for the first time, the School also offered a Master of Science in Social Policy degree, and it will launch a Doctor of Social Work degree program in Fall 2007. The School is devoted to advancing human welfare, promoting social justice, and developing effective societal responses to global human need. Building on the School's near century-long commitment to social work and social change, the School educates clinicians, policymakers, scholars, researchers, and leaders who work to advance the human welfare of local, national, and global communities. The School houses a number of research centers and programs, including: the Field Center for Children's Policy, Practice, and Research; the Center for Research on Youth and Social Policy; the Cartographic Modeling Lab; the Social Work Mental Health Research Center; the Social Impact of the Arts Project; the Program for Religion and Social Policy Research; and the Ortner-Unity Program on Family Violence. The School has 19 standing faculty and 350 students.

The Annenberg School for Communication (1959)

Founded in 1958 through the generosity and vision of diplomat and philanthropist Walter Annenberg, the Annenberg School for Communication at the University of Pennsylvania is devoted to furthering our understanding of the role of communication in public life through research, education and service. At the School's founding, Ambassador Annenberg identified its unique mission. "Every human advancement or reversal can be understood through communication," he said. "The right to free communication carries with it responsibility to respect the dignity of others – and this must be recognized as irreversible. Educating students to effectively communicate this message and to be of service to all people is the enduring mission of this school." Nationally ranked as the best graduate program in mass communication, health communication, political communication, and culture, society and communication, the Annenberg School has 17 standing faculty, 5 secondary faculty, over 80 graduate students and more than 200 undergraduate students. The school offers the degree of Doctor of Philosophy, and runs an undergraduate program through the College of Arts and Sciences. The School is home to the Annenberg Public Policy Center, the Center of Excellence in Cancer Communication Research, the Center for Global Communication Studies, the Scholars Program in Culture & Communication, and the Institute for Public Service, among many additional projects pursuing innovative communication research and services.

James A. Baker, III

It has been said that history is longer than any one administration. Serving at the right hand of three American presidents, you built an historic legacy of excellence.

As Under Secretary of Commerce, White House Chief of Staff, Secretary of Treasury, and Secretary of State you shaped domestic and foreign policy. You also influenced the course of political history by managing five consecutive presidential campaigns.

As Secretary of State, you advanced the values of freedom, equality, and open dialogue. Your diplomatic efforts helped achieve what many considered impossible: liberty in Eastern Europe, racial reconciliation and majority rule in South Africa, peace in Central America, and negotiated agreements in the Middle East.

In 1991 you were awarded the Presidential Medal of Freedom, the country's highest civilian honor, for your work as a "distinguished servant of our Nation, a clear voice for American principles, and a champion of peace and liberty around the world." Rice University's James A. Baker III Institute for Public Policy, which you launched in 1993, fuses theory and practice in the tradition of your fellow diplomat and Penn's founder, Benjamin Franklin.

You have not rested on your laurels. You have continued to serve your country and your world as a Special Envoy of the President of the United States on Iraqi debt relief and as a Special Envoy of the Secretary-General of the United Nations on the sovereignty of Western Sahara.

You co-chaired two blue-ribbon Congressional panels: the 2005 Commission on Federal Election Reform, which made recommendations to strengthen the administration of elections and improve access to voting; and the 2006 Iraq Study Group, which recommended diplomatic alternatives to the Iraq conflict for stabilizing Iraq and the Middle East.

For your fierce dedication to public service for more than 30 years, for advocating diplomatic power over fire power, and for advancing freedom and democracy at home and abroad, the Trustees of the University of Pennsylvania are honored and pleased to confer upon you, James A. Baker, III, the degree of Doctor of Laws, honoris causa.

Aaron Temkin Beck

Your groundbreaking work as scientist, educator, and physician has saved countless lives and directly touched many thousands of people. You have been recognized as possibly the most influential and revolutionary figure in psychiatry since Freud and Jung.

After earning a bachelor's degree from Brown University, you graduated from Yale Medical School in 1946. In 1954 you launched a career at Penn that has spanned five decades. In the psychiatry department at Penn's School of Medicine you broke away from the Freudian psychoanalytical approach to depression and developed an innovative but radical theoretical-clinical method, which you named cognitive therapy.

Through this treatment, therapists help clients overcome their difficulties by changing their thinking, behavior, and emotional responses. Cognitive therapy has become one of the most popular and effective treatments of depression, anxiety and personality disorders, and drug abuse.

You have built the Beck Institute for Cognitive Therapy and Research into an international center for training, research and clinical care. Researchers and practitioners around the world use your Beck Scales to accurately identify and address suicidal tendencies and other disorders. Your book Prisoners of Hate has been used to ameliorate conflict in Northern Ireland, in Lebanon, and among members of the European Union.

You have been named one of the five most influential psychotherapists of all time and listed among the 10 individuals who have shaped the face of American psychiatry. Your numerous honors include the 2006 Albert Lasker Award for Clinical Medical Research, the nation's most distinguished honor for outstanding contributions to basic and clinical medical research. You are the only psychiatrist to have received research awards from both the American Psychiatric Association and the American Psychological Association.

For exhibiting the genius and courage to pioneer a new approach to mental illness and treatment, for straddling disciplines to transform multiple fields, and for improving the lives of untold millions, the Trustees of the University of Pennsylvania are honored and pleased to confer upon you, Aaron Temkin Beck, the degree of Doctor of Science, honoris causa.

Caroline W. Bynum

You have said that "scholars work out at the boundaries of knowledge." As America's pre-eminent scholar of the European Middle Ages, you have made stunning discoveries that have retraced the boundaries of Western cultural history.

You were the first to reveal how early Europeans used female images for the divine. You illuminated medieval Europe's fascinating belief in the interchangeability between the physical and spiritual worlds. As the first historian to explore gender in medieval Christianity, you disclosed the astonishing ways in which women derived and expressed their piety and identities. Your writings have opened new avenues not just for historians, but also for scholars in fields from literature and religion, to sociology and anthropology, to art history and gender studies.

It has been said that one cannot write about medieval women, medieval religious practices, or about Western ideas of the body and self without citing your work. Your influence is evidenced by your election as president of both the Medieval Academy of America and the American Historical Association. Your long list of awards includes a MacArthur Fellowship and the Jefferson Lectureship in the Humanities, which is the greatest honor the United States government presents to scholars of the humanities.

A 1962 graduate of the University of Michigan, you earned a Ph.D. from Harvard University in 1969. Your distinguished teaching career has included positions at Harvard University, the University of Washington, and at Columbia University, where you were the first woman to earn the prestigious title of University Professor. Now, as a faculty member at the Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton, you continue to break new ground while mentoring the next generation of scholars.

For outstanding scholarly achievement that sparked new approaches to medieval studies and profoundly expanded our understanding of the Middle Ages and its influence on contemporary western culture, the Trustees of the University of Pennsylvania are honored and pleased to confer upon you, Caroline W. Bynum, the degree of Doctor of Humane Letters, honoris causa.

Mildred Dresselhaus

As a young woman during the 1940s, you made the daring decision to study physics. Since then, your brilliant mind and your passion for your field have propelled you to the forefront of the scientific community as one of the world's premier solid-state physicists.

After graduating from Hunter College in 1951, you became one of the first women to receive a Fulbright Fellowship. You began your 40-year career at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology when you joined the faculty in the Department of Electrical Engineering & Computer Science in 1967. In 1968, you became the first woman to receive tenure in MIT's School of Engineering. You joined the Department of Physics in 1983 and became an Institute Professor in 1985.

Your early work yielded breakthroughs in superconductivity, semimetals, and thermoelectrics. Today, you are expanding the world's understanding of the electronic, structural, and optical properties of carbon nanotubes. As director of the Office of Science at the U.S. Department of Energy during the Clinton administration you chaired a national study on making hydrogen a more viable fuel source. Today, you advise the Energy department on hydrogen and fuel cell technology.

You have been a leader of the nation's learned societies in science and have received their highest awards. In 1990, President Bush bestowed upon you the National Medal of Science.

Your stature as a scientist is matched by your achievements as an educator. A beloved teacher, you have championed - and won - a more prominent role for women in science. In 1970 you co-founded the MIT Women's Forum and received a Carnegie Foundation grant to encourage women's study of traditionally male-dominated fields. Despite the demands of your research, you have found time to supervise more than 60 doctoral theses and have been a mentor for countless young scientists.

For your pioneering contributions to carbon physics, your path-breaking inspiration to female scientists the world over, and your unrelenting commitment to young scholars like those before you today, the Trustees of the University of Pennsylvania are honored and pleased to confer upon you, Mildred Dresselhaus, the degree of Doctor of Science, honoris causa.

Aretha Franklin

Your voice has been called "a force of nature." The daughter of a preacher, you have conveyed the value of love and human dignity through music that has resonated across five decades of musical and social change.

You learned to harness the power of song at your father's Detroit church and recorded your first album at age 14. As a singer, pianist and composer you transcended musical and societal boundaries with more than 50 hit recordings.

You could raise the temperature singing gospel, jazz, blues, pop and rock and roll. But you raised the roof when you sang soul. Your spine-tingling rendition of "Respect" became an anthem for the civil rights and women's rights movements of the 1960s and 70s. The song's triumphant success, and that of other beloved classics like "Chain of Fools," "I Never Loved a Man" and "I Say a Little Prayer," earned you the title "The Queen of Soul."

Your successes inspired pride in all who struggled for justice and equality. You often gave of your talents to support the work of your friend, Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

You stand before us today as one of the most celebrated musicians of all time. You have received 18 Grammy Awards including a Lifetime Achievement Award and an unprecedented 11 awards for Best Female R&B Vocal Performance. You have received the National Medal of Arts and the National Medal of Freedom from Presidents Bill Clinton and George W. Bush.

Time magazine recognized your genius by naming you one of the most influential people of the 20th century, VH1 has called you the greatest woman in rock and roll, and you have been inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame and the UK Music Hall of Fame.

For enriching the world with an incomparable body of musical work and for giving soaring voice to those whose dreams previously went unheard, the Trustees of the University of Pennsylvania are honored and pleased to confer upon you, Aretha Franklin, the degree of Doctor of Music, honoris causa.

Shirley Franklin

You ran for mayor of Atlanta on the slogan "You make me mayor, and I'll make you proud." As the city's first female mayor and the first African-American woman to lead any major Southern U.S. city, you have returned to Atlanta not only pride, but also trust.

You dreamed of using your education and your talents to help others. As a student at Philadelphia's Girls' High School and at Howard University you were inspired by John F. Kennedy, Martin Luther King, Jr., and Coretta Scott King. After earning a graduate degree in sociology from our University, you put your gifts to work for the city of Atlanta.

In the 1970s, as a member of the city's committee on cultural affairs, you helped make the city a leader in supporting the arts. In 1981, you became Atlanta's - and America's - first woman chief administrative officer and city manager. You built new housing, developed an airport, and created several public buildings. In the 1990s, as a member of the Atlanta Committee for the Olympic Games, you helped to transform your city into a world-class athletic venue and international tourism destination.

Your tenure as Atlanta's mayor furnishes a textbook case of excellent government. In a remarkably brief time, you restored the city's fiscal integrity, improved schools, and led sweeping ethics reforms. You launched a massive redevelopment plan, battled crime, and supplied health-care and job training for the homeless. You also have sheltered tens of thousands of families displaced by Hurricane Katrina.

These accomplishments placed you among US News and World Report's Best Leaders of 2005 and as one of the five best big-city American mayors named by Time magazine. You received the 2005 John F. Kennedy Profile in Courage Award.

Daughter of Penn, for profoundly improving the lives of the people of Atlanta, for demonstrating deft, pragmatic leadership that produces good will and results, and for serving as a model for civic leaders all over the world, the Trustees of the University of Pennsylvania are honored and pleased to confer upon you, Shirley Franklin, the degree of Doctor of Laws, honoris causa.

Ruth Bader Ginsburg

Daughter of immigrants, you overcame prejudice and discrimination to reach the summit of our legal system, the Supreme Court of the United States. As the nation's pre-eminent jurist of gender law, you have profoundly advanced the legal status of women and the cause of justice throughout our nation.

You fulfilled your mother's dream by attending college and graduating first in your class at Cornell University in 1954. You enrolled at Harvard Law School, then transferred as a young wife and mother to Columbia Law School where you graduated first in your class. You served as a law clerk for Edmund L. Palmieri, Judge of the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York. In 1963 you were among the first women to join the law faculty at Rutgers University and later became the first female tenured law professor at Columbia.

You were denied prestigious clerkships and law firm positions extended to your male counterparts. Rather than be deterred, let alone defeated, you dedicated yourself to ending this affront to justice. You co-authored the first law school casebook on sex discrimination. You co-founded the Women's Rights Project of the American Civil Liberties Union and you argued six cases before the Supreme Court. You convinced the justices that sex-based legal distinctions warranted heightened judicial scrutiny.

In 1980, President Carter named you to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit, where you distinguished yourself as one of the nation's most brilliant judges. In 1993, President Clinton named you to the Supreme Court, where you have continued your fight against gender discrimination, advocated for applying the logic of foreign courts to American legal issues, and built consensus among your fellow justices.

For your lifetime of achievement in profoundly improving the legal and social landscape for women, and thereby for all individuals, for holding our nation to its own highest standards of justice, and for serving as a shining symbol of the American dream fulfilled, the Trustees of the University of Pennsylvania are honored and pleased to confer upon you, Ruth Bader Ginsburg, the degree of Doctor of Laws, honoris causa.

As final action cannot always be taken by the time this program goes to press, these lists of degree and prize recipients are tentative only. The appearance of a name in this program should not be construed as an indication that the person has received a degree from the University of Pennsylvania. Conversely, the absence of a student's name herein does not necessarily mean that the person has not been awarded a Penn degree. The student's transcript is the official record of the University.

As final action cannot always be taken by the time this program goes to press, these lists of degree and prize recipients are tentative only. The appearance of a name in this program should not be construed as an indication that the person has received a degree from the University of Pennsylvania. Conversely, the absence of a student's name herein does not necessarily mean that the person has not been awarded a Penn degree. The student's transcript is the official record of the University.

As final action cannot always be taken by the time this program goes to press, these lists of degree and prize recipients are tentative only. The appearance of a name in this program should not be construed as an indication that the person has received a degree from the University of Pennsylvania. Conversely, the absence of a student's name herein does not necessarily mean that the person has not been awarded a Penn degree. The student's transcript is the official record of the University.

Candidates for the degrees of Master of Arts, Master of Science or Doctor of Philosophy can be found under the Graduate Faculties listing.

As final action cannot always be taken by the time this program goes to press, these lists of degree and prize recipients are tentative only. The appearance of a name in this program should not be construed as an indication that the person has received a degree from the University of Pennsylvania. Conversely, the absence of a student's name herein does not necessarily mean that the person has not been awarded a Penn degree. The student's transcript is the official record of the University.
