Bottle Sagger Molds

It's fun and easy to create interesting vessels using unique molds and emptied glass bottles. To prepare a bottle for the kiln, soak the bottle in warm water and scrape away any paper labels. A bit of turpentine in a scrubby may be required to completely remove the glue used to apply the label. Clean the bottle with soap and water and dry the mold after the label has been removed.

To avoid any devitrification in the glass upon firing, apply a devitrification product to the front side of the bottle before heating. If the bottle has a decorative finish such as a painted logo, a piece of kiln shelf paper must be placed between the painted area and the mold or kiln shelf. The enamels used on many of the decorative bottles often will stick aggressively to even kiln washed surfaces if there is no kiln shelf paper.

As with all earthenware molds for glass, a quality glass separator should be applied to the mold before use with glass. In most cases, the standard bottle slumping firing schedule below was used to create the pictured bottle samples. However, *Segment 3 was eliminated altogether where it was desirable to have less of a slump and to keep the bottle bottoms from slumping forward:

Segment 1 Rate 350°/hr Temp. 925° F Hold 10 min.
Segment 2 Rate 350°/hr Temp. 1325° F Hold 60 min.
*Segment 3 Rate 450°/hr Temp. 1455° F Hold 15 min.
Segment 4 Rate 999°/hr Temp. 950° F Hold 60 min
Segment 5 Rate 100°/hr Temp. 800° F Hold 10min

(Using a cone 017 firing at low for one hour, medium for an hour and high to maturity will yield reasonable results in a kiln that uses

Ceramic Fusion

Example

Ceramic Fusion

Ceramic Fusion pieces are sculpted earthenware shapes that have been kiln fired to cone 04 (1945 degrees F). The shapes have been crafted to hold glass in special decorative frit cavities incorporated in the design of the piece. Simply prime the Ceramic Fusion piece with glass separator, fill with frit, and fire!

To use Ceramic Fusion with cone 06 ceramic glazes, apply the ceramic glaze to the entire shape and add glass to the frit cavities. The entire project can be fired to 1816 degrees F (cone 06) to mature the glaze on the bisque. The glass will melt significantly at this temperature. Most dichroic and iridized surfaces on glass will fade completely at these high temperatures.

What is the difference between NTCLR and S2000?

The fundamental difference between these two dipping glazes is their co-efficient rates of expansion. NT-CLR's lower co-efficient of expansion (COE) improved its ability to withstand thermal shock and minimize crazing. S-2000 has a higher COE and is more tolerant of high expansion bodies.

Clay Carbon Transfer Paper (MAYCO AC230)

$4.00

10 sheets of specially treated paper for transferring designs or patterns to ceramic greenware and dried glaze or underglaze surfaces.

1. Place a sheet under the design or pattern and outline with a soft lead pencil or stylus tool.
2. The design will then be transferred onto the surface and not leave a grease or oil residue which repels colors.
3. Any uncolored or remaining tracing lines will disappear after firing.
4. Clay carbon transfer paper can be reused!
