Auto Italia is brought to you by a group of journalists and photographers united by a passion for Italian cars. Contributors to this issue include:

ention the word 'restomod' to a gathering of car enthusiasts and you're almost certain to hear a whole range of reactions. The idea of modifying a car, rather than just restoring it, very much splits opinions. For some, it's simply doing it better: a mixture of sensible updates under the skin, improvements inside and out, and some aesthetic personalisation. For others, it's outrageous sacrilege: the desecration of a classic whose originality and purity should never be tampered with.

There have been some pretty striking restomods over the years, many of which have been featured in this magazine. From Thornley Kelham's 'Outlaw' Lancia Aurelia to Alfaholics' Giulia GTA-R to Eugenio Amos's two-door Lancia Delta integrale Futurista, all have aroused strong opinions.

Now we have two more cars to add to the restomod canon in the form of our cover pairing. The two Alfetta GTV 6s that we feature on page 28 are both uprated in a whole variety of ways. Perhaps most notably of all, it's their stances that differ; seemingly de rigueur for restomods, the wheels and suspension have been greatly overhauled. Both cars also represent significant investments in terms of time and/or money on the part of their owners. Personally I think they toe a very successful line between sympathy for an undoubted classic and making understandable improvements – let's not be too puritanical about the Alfetta GTV, it certainly has its quirks and foibles. I'd be very interested to hear your thoughts on these latest restomods.

As you read this, we should be en route to County Durham to welcome a host of cars to the first of Auto Italia's rescheduled 2020 events: the Northern Italian Car Day on 5 September. To say we've been looking forward to this big day out at Raby Castle is a massive understatement. We certainly hope we'll be seeing you out and about during the latter part of this year.

ITALIAN CAR NEWS

aserati has extended its V8powered Trofeo range to three models, as new highperformance versions of the Ghibli and Quattroporte join the existing Levante Trofeo. The 580hp Ferrari-derived twin-turbo 3.8litre petrol V8 engine can now be ordered in Maserati's four-door saloon car ranges. Bearing 'Trofeo' badges, both the Ghibli and Quattroporte are now capable of a top speed in excess of 202mph – which makes these the fastest regular Maserati production models ever made. The Ghibli Trofeo can do o-62mph in just 4.3 seconds, while the Quattroporte Trofeo takes o.2sec more. Power is transmitted via a ZF eight-speed automatic gearbox to the rear wheels, in contrast to the Levante Trofeo, launched in the UK last year, which is four-wheel drive.

A new Corsa driving mode improves throttle and engine response, speeds up gearshifts, opens the exhaust valves fully, stiffens and lowers the suspension and lets the electronic control systems be more playful. Also new for the Trofeo models is a Launch Control function.

Styling upgrades for the Trofeo saloons distinguish them from the rest of the range, as well as improving aerodynamics and cooling. The front lower splitter, blades in the front air intakes and rear diffuser are all made of high-gloss carbonfibre.

The Ghibli features two extra air vents on the bonnet. Larger 21-inch alloy wheels are also new. As part of a MY2021 refresh, there are also new 'boomerang' rear light clusters, new front grilles and additional carbonfibre inserts.

Inside is a sportier trim treatment and leather sports seats featuring the Trofeo name alongside the Trident. Maserati's latest infotainment system is controlled via a larger touchscreen (10.1in versus 8.4in).

The Ghibli and Quattroporte Trofeo can be ordered now, priced at £103,890 and £126,890 respectively. The existing Levante Trofeo costs from £124,940.

FIAT 500 IS FIRST ACROSS NEW GENOA BRIDGE

The new electric Fiat 500 has become the first car to cross the new San Giorgio bridge in Genoa, just before it opened to traffic in August 2020. The 500 Prima convertible flew the flags of Italy and Genoa as it traversed the new 1067-metre bridge, which was designed by architect Renzo Piano.

LAMBORGHINI'S TRACK-ONLY ESSENZA SCV12

Lamborghini has launched its new track-only Essenza SCV12 hypercar. Developed by the Squadra Corse racing team and designed by Lamborghini Centro Stile, the Essenza SCV12 has the most powerful V12 naturally aspirated engine ever seen in a Lamborghini, with 830hp. Other features include a Capristo exhaust, magnesium alloy wheels (19in front, 20in rear) and Brembo Motorsport brakes.

The X-trac sequential six-speed gearbox forms a structural element of the chassis, along with the gearbox-mounted pushrod rear suspension, and power is delivered to the rear wheels only. A mechanical self-locking diff allows the driver to set grip levels for each circuit.

With its carbonfibre monocoque chassis, the Essenza SCV12 is the first GT car developed to meet FIA prototype safety rules. Downforce is claimed to be higher than a GT₃ racer's, thanks to such aerodynamic aids as a front splitter, vertical fins on the side sills, adjustable rear wing, double front air intake and roof air scoop.

The overall design is said to echo 1970s prototypes. Inside, an asymmetrical carbon 'Y' frames the cockpit, while the multifunction steering wheel is inspired by F1 practice. The driver sits in an FIA-spec OMP carbon seat.

Only 40 examples will be built at a price of around £2.7 million each, with customers given access to special race track programmes from 2021.

10,000TH URUS BUILT

Lamborghini has made its 10,000th Urus after only two years on the market. Chassis number 10,000 was destined for Russia, painted matt black with a two-tone black-and-orange interior.

TOURING NAMES 'AERO3'

Carrozzeria Touring Superleggera has announced that its new sports berlinetta model will officially be named the Touring Aero3. "The name finds inspiration from the focus placed on the importance of aerodynamic coachwork by Touring in the 30s, 40s and 50s, which proved to be so successful in racing," says the company. The new car is in the final stages of construction in the Touring workshop, and is due to be launched in mid-September, before being toured around a number of events.

ZAGATO REVIVES ISORIVOLTA WITH NEW GTZ

Zagato has previewed its new IsoRivolta GTZ, marking the next chapter in the rebirth of the Iso brand. Its carbonfibre bodywork is inspired by the Iso Rivolta A3 of 1963, says Zagato, with a simple front end, mirror-image upper and lower grilles, teardrop headlamps and four circular taillights.

The mechanical basis is the Corvette Zo6, whose supercharged V8 engine has been expanded from 6.2 to 6.8 litres. Zagato has not yet disclosed its state of tune, nor the car's performance figures, but says it will reveal more information about the IsoRivolta GTZ in October 2020, when the first example is due to be shipped to its owner. Production is limited to 19 units, nine of which have already been sold.

FERRARI CHALLENGE UK KICKS OFF

The delayed 2020 Ferrari Challenge UK race series started at Brands Hatch in July – one of the first motorsport events to welcome visitors back following the suspension of racing due to Covid.

In the Trofeo Pirelli class, Lucky Khera converted pole position into his first win in a thrilling opening race in the rain. Khera also took the fastest lap en route to finishing ahead of H Sikkens and Paul Hogarth.

In Coppa Shell, Graham de Zille did a remarkable job battling the leaders for the entire race. Not only did he take the fastest lap in class, he also held off Sikkens to finish second overall and first in class. Jamie Thwaites was second and Alex Moss third.

In the Pirelli Ferrari formula classic, Tom Mogridge won the first race in his Ferrari F355 Challenge, ahead of James Cartwright in second with his Ferrari 328 GTB, and Wayne Marrs in third, also driving a F355 Challenge.

In Sunday's races, it was a case of the same again as Khera took his second win of the weekend ahead of de Zille. In the second Ferrari formula classic race, Marrs beat Mogridge this time, with Tristan Simpson third in an F355 Challenge.

SQUADRA ALFA ROMEO PERFORMANCE LOGGER

Squadra Tuning has launched a new Performance Logger for the Alfa Romeo Giulia and Stelvio. It's designed to measure and save acceleration times, as well as display information about the engine, drivetrain and g-forces. In addition, a burnout (line-lock) feature is added. As an option for Quadrifoglio versions, the exhaust valves can be opened in all drive modes, while the Giulia Q's front splitter can be lowered to be cleaned. Operation is via Alfa's existing menu buttons, while the information is displayed between the tachometer and speedometer. Prices start at ξ_{550} within the EU and ξ_{455} outside. More info at squadra-tuning.com

DINO 206 SP SHOWN IN LONDON

A Ferrari Dino 206 SP is set to join a line-up of the world's rarest cars at this year's London's Concours of Elegance. Ferrari's response to Ford's challenge at Le Mans in the mid-1960s was a series of sports prototypes, such as the 1966 330 P3 and the smaller Dino 206 SP. Ferrari intended to build 50 of these smaller V6 cars to homologate as 2.0-litre Group 4 sports cars. For various reasons that never happened and only 17 were ever made. The 206 SP due to be shown in London raced at the 1000km of Nürburgring and the 12 Hours of Sebring.

The 2020 Concours of Elegance will also include unique coachbuilt Alfa Romeos, part of almost 1000 cars being displayed over the course of the weekend of 4 to 6 September at Hampton Court Palace. Find out more at www.concoursofelegance.co.uk

ONLINE SALES RESULTS BUOYANT

Despite auctioneer RM Sotheby's having been forced to go online for much of 2020, some significant sales results have been achieved. Among these was a 1966 Ferrari 275 GTB Alloy by Scaglietti from the Richoz Collection, which reached €1,430,000. An ex-Markku Alén 1985 Lancia Delta S4, which finished second overall at the RAC Rally, went under the hammer at €770,000. Meanwhile a unique 1968 G50 powerboat built for Fiat's boss, Gianni Agnelli, achieved €450,000.

ITALIANS TO STAR AT SALON PRIVÉ

A Le Mans-winning Ferrari 166MM is among three exceptional early Ferraris that are set to star at the 2020 Salon Privé Concours d'Elégance in September.

Described as "perhaps the most significant car in the Italian margue's history", the 166MM on display is chassis 0008M, the works car that won the 1949 Mille Miglia in the hands of Clemente Biondetti and Ettore Salani. The same car also won the Le Mans 24 Hours that year with Lord Selsdon and Luigi Chinetti - the only car to have won both events in the same year.

Another very early Ferrari – a 1948 166 Inter, chassis number 0015S - will also be on show. This Touring-bodied coupe was shown at the 1949 Geneva Salon. Completing the trio is a 1952 Vignalebodied 212/225 Export with competition history.

Ferraris will also feature prominently in the 'Evolution of the Supercar' event and the Concours d'Elégance. Confirmed models include the 308, 328, 355, 599, F40 and F50. The Ferrari Owners'

Club will also participate on Saturday by bringing more than 1000 cars along.

Ferrari will debut its new Roma here as one of many new models available to see and test-drive. Other Ferraris on display will be the SFgo Stradale, 812 GTS and F8 Spider.

Several independent Italian manufacturers such as Ares Design, Aspark, MAT and Puritalia are also confirmed. Several new car debuts are promised, including the latest MAT New Stratos, while Ares Design will be bringing four vehicles making their UK debuts, including the Panther ProgettoUno supercar and Bentley

Mulsanne Coupé. Salon Privé takes place over 23-26 September at Blenheim Palace. For more information, visit salonpriveconcours.com or call 0808 100 2205.

BIA BIALBERO: All the cars powered by the legendary twin cam engine by Phil & Michael Ward

Coming soon! A new book based on all the Fiats, Lancias and Alfa Romeos that are powered by Aurelio Lampredi's superb twin cam engine. While some elements of the book are an expansion of the earlier works by the same author, the early chapters now include extracts from road tests by Auto Italia's writers. Also included in the first part of the book are one-offs and concepts like the Stola Dedica, Lancia Magia and Grama 2 'Puntograle', while modified cars include at 200bhp twin cam-engined Lada '124' and an 'Abarthised' Fiat 850 Saloon.

The second half of the book is dedicated to hands-on maintenance and restoration advice of a selection of popular classic twin cams. There is also the added bonus of invaluable, expert tuning information by the renowned twin cam race engine preparer, Guy Croft.

This quality publication is prolifically illustrated throughout with Michael Ward's photography of real world cars from collections and dynamic images from Auto Italia's archives. Many of the featured cars are owned by the magazine's readers, in addition there is also a gallery of restored twin cams from around the world. Bialbero will be available exclusively via Auto Italia and a dedicated website.

Roma Therapy

Turke

Ferrari's new GT coupe takes aim at Aston Martin, Bentley and Porsche. But is it as good to drive as it is to look at? We're about to find out ulling up after my Ferrari Roma test drive, I really feel like 've arrived in style. The silhouette reflected in the hotel's plate glass window is a picture of elegance. The sound of the V8's rumble echoing off it is equally subtle. I look and feel like I'm not trying too hard. It looks calm but I know I've just come over mountain switchbacks at a pace that has brought beads of sweat to my brow.

In a nutshell, here's the angle that Ferrari is going for with the new Roma: it's utterly capable yet very much not, as the company is keen to state and restate, a "show off" car. It's designed to appeal to anyone who feels put off by the sheer – and increasing – brashness of modern supercars. The Roma isn't being sold as a supercar, but as a grand tourer in the classic sense, albeit with a zesty edge. That's the reason for the name, by the way: to evoke Rome, Europe's capital of culture and cool.

So the Roma makes a pretty darned good first impression. It feels understated and nonthreatening with its smoothly sculpted flanks and flowing rear end, more like a pebble smoothed by natural forces than a cruise missile set to explode on your driveway. Its aesthetic is akin to the reticence promulgated by Aston Martin and Bentley. Indeed, some have remarked on how close to an Aston the new Roma looks. Ferrari instead points to its own classics as the source of inspiration: 250 Europa, 250 GT Lusso, 250 GTE. In this vein, the lack of a rear spoiler – well, not at rest anyway – fits in perfectly. It's only when you hit 62mph that the previously flush black panel behind the rear window (actually part of the bootlid) pops up to boost downforce. Subtle stuff.

The lights break new ground, too: thin lines up front, squarishly flat ones at the rear. Easily the most controversial aspect of the design, though, is the body-coloured front grille, which definitely splits opinions. Ferrari is sticking to its guns on this by not offering customers a non-body-colour option. While I'm at it, two other slight carbuncles that bug me are the ungainly forward-facing square lump under the main grille (it's the camera for the safety systems) and the ugly front parking sensors. But overall, the Roma is an undoubted triumph for Ferrari's Centro Stile.

Press the flush handles to open the doors and yet more subtle design work is evident inside. Each side of the cockpit forms a 'bubble' separated by the sweeping centre tunnel, which all works very nicely. I suspect most buyers will tick the passenger-side info display option box that Ferrari has very much perfected. The quality throughout is superb, too.

This is a 2+2 car but the rear seats are so tiny that only very small children will ever fit here (headroom is the real restriction). The boot is a decent size (272 litres – enough for three suitcases), which you can expand to 345 litres by opting for folding rear seats.

OK, what about this new digital dash? The curved screen in front of you is taken pretty much direct from the SFgo Stradale and it's both big (16 inches across) and superbly clear. You can press buttons on the steering wheel to change the info displayed, including a 'View Max' button that morphs the display to 'full-screen', emphasising the sat nav or rev counter, for instance. The additional 8.4inch central display shows air conditioning, audio and sat nav info but for me its upright shape looks a little bit like an afterthought, like a borrowed iPad. The key fob is a nice touch, though: a chunky case with a Prancing Horse logo on one side and info display and calling up the onboard voice control. One change I very much welcome is the cruise control buttons being resited on to the steering wheel, rather than on the dashboard, so you no longer have to move your hand off the wheel to adjust the system.

purposefulness of a current F1 car, rather than the more redolent sounds of classic F1 racing. Even though there are no silencers in the exhaust, it's pretty relaxing at motorway speeds.

There's certainly no questioning the sheer speed on offer here. In a straight line the Roma can keep pace with almost any current Ferrari, and very much avoids coming across as the junior member of the family. The 3.9-litre twin-turbo V8

Roma script on the other.

The switchgear is pretty much all touchsensitive 'haptic' stuff. It looks great but doesn't always respond instantaneously to your prodding. At other times it proves over-sensitive; for instance, I found my guarter-to-three hand positioning frequently and unintentionally changing the wheel is also required to start the engine. Finally, it's time for some action as Ferrari's familiar V8 turbo rumbles into life. The soundtrack is brawny, in fact positively boomy at lower revs. Raising the needle on the rev counter (digital of course) produces a sound that's urgent without screaming too hard, something like the subdued develops fully 620hp (20hp more than the Portofino) - making this the most powerful front-engined V8 Ferrari ever – thanks to uprated intake and exhaust systems, higherlift cams and a new turbo sensor. The power-to-weight ratio is 421hp per tonne (if you use Ferrari's 'dry' weight measurement of 1472kg – the kerb weight is actually 1570kg). The quoted o-62mph time is 3.4 seconds (0.1 second faster than the Portofino), a performance helped by the 'L' button on the gear gate – launch control – which sees the car scoot off the line with the barest chirrup of the tyres and masses of grip. One other telling figure is the o-124mph time of just 9.3 seconds, fully 1.5sec faster than the Portofino. Another really impressive aspect of the V8 is how flexible it is: you can pull away from as low as 1000rpm with utter ease, something the nonturbo brigade could never do.

The first half of my day behind the wheel is through the vine-growing region of the Langhe. It's extremely pretty here but also pretty treacherous, as the chalky soil has deposited a layer of dust on the roads that might as well be ice, it's that slippery. Still, that's a stern test for a rear-wheel drive GT with 620hp at its disposal. And a tempting new Race mode to play with.

The first sensation is how quick and sharp the steering feels, immediately followed by a raised eyebrow as, on these dusty roads, the front end washes out when entering corners too quickly and the back end comes out if you prod the loud pedal too hard. In these conditions, it's best to try one of the new driving modes in the Roma, one that has never been seen before in a front-engined Ferrari: Wet mode. This dampens the throttle pedal and dials up the stability control intervention, leaving you feeling much more relaxed.

Pressing the manettino to engage 'bumpy road' mode seems to make little difference at first, at least in terms of ride quality; but on surfaces that aren't billiard smooth, you can push a little harder with less circumspection about bumps deflecting your course. Speaking of the ride, it is as you'd want from a grand tourer: very decent, whatever drive mode you're in. The corollary is that the front end can sometimes feel a little soft on bumpy corners but in no way does this affect your confidence to set a cracking pace.

There are now five driving modes: Wet, Comfort, Sport, Race and ESC-Off. Initially, there doesn't feel like there's much difference between the modes, particularly Comfort and Sport, nor could I discern any change in exhaust note between the five. Small surprise, then, that in no time at all I find myself switching to 'Race'. This notably sharpens up the gearshifts, whether you're in automatic or manual, and also gives you a much looser rear end to play with.

The afternoon portion of my test drive is on much less slippery roads, where the Roma comes alive. Really alive. I thought Ferrari had done a good job of giving the Portofino a sporty character but the Roma is on a completely different level. We can thank Ferrari's Side Slip Control (SSC) and Ferrari Dynamic Enhancer (FDE) for that, both fitted for the first time in a GT car from Maranello. This set-up means you can really hurl the car into bends – OK, not with quite as much bite as the F8 can muster – but where the Roma really scores its innate sense of mechanical balance. You can feel with utter clarity what the car is doing underneath you, and the SSC/FDE combo allows you to play with the rear end without ever losing control. FDE works by braking a wheel if it detects slip, but only when you're in Race mode – which setting I'd definitely recommend; the handling feel is notably sharper and more urgent. Overall, and despite softer front damping than the Portofino's, the Roma hardly rolls at all in corners and turns out to be a handling delight: agile, predictable and fun.

How about the eight-speed dual-clutch automatic gearbox, borrowed pretty much direct from the SFgo Stradale (including its retro-look cancelletto gear lever gate)? It's superb, changing gears quickly and with super-smoothness. When left in automatic mode and with a feathered throttle, it does sometime hunt around for the correct gear, so I find myself ineluctably drawn to the manual paddle shifters, which are an absolute joy to use.

VERDICT

I admit I was afraid that the Roma might feel too much like a GT and not enough like a sports car to be a pukka Ferrari. I'm delighted to say my fears have been completely allayed. On the right roads, the Roma is a beautifully accomplished performance tool, with a mustard-sharp keenness that I hadn't dared hope for. Its sporty character means it comes across very much not as simply a Portofino fixed-head but as a truly distinct model in its own right.

Yes, at £170,984 it's pricier than its most obvious rivals from Aston Martin, Bentley and Porsche but it's undeniably a more appealing, higher-performing machine. And yet it retains an everyday usability – 2+2 cabin, good visibility, comfortable ride, big 80-litre fuel tank – that's pretty persuasive. It really is a slice of dolce vita in the metal – sweet!

Alfa has updated its Giulia and Stelvio Quadrifoglio models for 2020. How do they drive?

Story by Chris Rees Images by Andy Morgan

e love Alfa's Qs. We're pretty sure you love Alfa's Qs. In fact, everyone who loves driving should love Alfa's Qs. Snarly, lairy, sharp and pointy, elegant, redolent and resonant – the Quadrifoglios are all these things.

So how on earth do you make them better? Well, Alfa has kind of answered that one already with the fabulous Giulia GTA and GTAm (see separate panel), but since these very special limited editions retail for well north of £150k, most buyers will be looking at what Alfa is doing with the regular Quadrifoglios.

And praise be: for 2020 Alfa has indeed made them better. There's been a bit of a delay for the MY2020 cars – let's face, the whole of 2020 has been one long delay – but finally the Quadrifoglios have followed the regular Giulia and Stelvio (see Auto Italia January 2020) with model year updates.

This belated magic wand applies to both Quadrifoglio sisters, the Giulia Q and Stelvio Q. Before you get too excited about the prospect of GTA-style extra horsepower, chassis tweaks and aerodynamics, let me let you down gently. There is none of that. The MY2020 upgrades are hardly what you'd call earth-shattering.

But let's go back to my opening sentence: everyone loves Alfa's Qs. Big changes really aren't necessary. Facelift? There's no botox makeover here, merely the lightest sheen of moisturiser. Extra equipment? Yes, but very little indeed. Mechanical upgrades? Just the one: a new Akrapovič exhaust option. Dramatic new colours? Three new shades, but not for several months. Plusher interior? Actually, on that front the changes are a bit more significant.

Everyone loves Alfa's Qs so big changes really aren't necessary

\square	Drag Race Time	Current	Last	Best	RESET LAST

	Braking Distance	m km/h	READY	198 70	168 90	18'9

Let's start with the looks. As you approach both cars, there's a subtle difference that it's hard to put your finger on – a modicum of added aggression. It isn't the wheels, they're the same (actually, untrue: you can now order new, bigger 21-inch alloy wheels for the Stelvio Quadrifoglio). Spoilers? Nope, no change. Then your eye gets drawn to the front grille insert and badging, which have all been bright chrome up until now; they're now gloss black, which to my eyes looks far more purposeful. You can even raid the Mopar accessories list and order the grille in carbonfibre, the same magic black weave also being available for the mirror caps. Also new are LED rear light clusters with dark lenses.

But it's in the cabin that the biggest changes occur. The centre console looks very different, dominated by a new gearknob. We've always felt the sharpedged plastic gearknob of the outgoing Giulia and Stelvio felt far too down-market. The new, chunkier one is better shaped and feels so much better thanks to its leather covering. There's even a natty Italian tricolore flag at the base of the lever. Other console updates include a new wireless phone charger, a dedicated slot to put the key in, repositioned switchgear and bigger cupholders.

The rotary dial is also nicer, not that you really need to use it much any more. That's because there's a new central screen operated by finger touch. It's great. You can drag and drop graphic elements around the touchscreen and expand them in size at a touch.

While the letterbox-format screen is no bigger than before (8.8 inches across), the menu bar has moved from the bottom of the screen to the side, freeing up much more on-screen space. Overall it's a massively improved system but it's still far from the best on the market. Since Alfa and Maserati share engineering development teams, I really can't understand why Alfa didn't simply shout across the room to borrow Maserati's excellent new touchscreen system. An opportunity missed.

But here's one thing I really do like. The Quadrifoglio models become the first Alfas to be fitted with 'Performance Pages', giving you a wide choice of displays for the touchscreen. So you can select to see a full panoply of temperatures. Or the torque currently being used by each wheel. Or turbo pressure and power.

Easily the best thing is the screen called 'Drag Race'. Seriously, how un-PC can you get? On-board chronometers measure acceleration and maximum speed in real time, so you get a delicious menu for recording your o-6o and quarter-mile times. I simply couldn't resist it. In effort to get my times low, I found myself experimenting with ways to get the launch Giulia Q remains brilliant to drive. 'Drag Race' screen is a new, very un-PC feature – we love it!

ALFA ROMEO GIULIA & STELVIO QUADRIFOGLIO MY2020

Much nicer centre console has rearranged switchgear, new gear lever and a far better touchscreen right. In the absence of launch control (Alfa does now make such a system but for the new GTA), I found the best method to press my left foot hard on the brake pedal, ease the throttle until there was some movement from the back axle and then smash the accelerator as I lifted my left foot. For the record – and bearing in mind I only tried it three times on each car – I got the Stelvio to 6o in 4.3 seconds and the trickierto-launch Giulia in 4.6 (sadly some way off the official times of 3.8 and 3.9 seconds respectively). I know many people argue that o-6o times are pointless, but as a benchmark of performance no other measurement comes close. I recognise the slightly childish streak in me but I really want to better my times. I demand a rematch...

What else? The new 7-inch TFT screen ahead of the driver works much better. The flat-bottomed steering wheel is new, featuring extra buttons, and you can choose between Alcantara and carbon. The seats have changed but only on the Giulia: there's perforated leather-and-Alcantara upholstery, and while electric operation was previously an option, it's now standard (in retrospect that was a pretty penny-pinching omission). Carbon shell Sparco seats remain optional for both Giulia and Stelvio. There's one more new option, too: instead of black seatbelts, you can tick a box for either red or green belts, which certainly adds a touch of drama to the cabin.

Mechanical upgrades? Nope. The 2.9-litre V6 (510hp and 600Nm) and eight-speed automatic remain untouched. You can order a new Akrapovič titanium exhaust system with carbonfibre tailpipes as an optional extra, which Alfa promises will deliver "an even more sophisticated sound" but sadly I didn't get the chance to hear it. Alfa hasn't taken the opportunity to give us a switch to enjoy the best exhaust sound (that's in Race mode) whenever you want; and while driving a Giulia Q is Race mode is joyful, it can also be a handful because Race switches all your stability and traction control systems off. Whoa! Speaking of sound, I was struck by the lower volume at low speeds – turns out there's extra sound deadening for MY2020.

I did get to play (if that's the right word) with the new active safety gear. Traffic Jam Assist and Highway Assist can take over acceleration, braking and steering to some degree to get you through the boredom of heavy traffic, although personally these systems make me feel uncomfortable, and the first thing I always do is switch off Lane Keeping Assist – yuk. Traffic Sign Recognition is a definite boon, though, and I can see the benefits of Active Blind Spot Assist (which nudges your steering wheel to avoid a collision).

So which model to go for – Giulia or Stelvio? The Giulia Q does have a sportier feel, sitting lower to the ground and benefiting from less body roll. It's also by far the more playful handler, with an entertaining rear end, and the steering is better - indeed, it's the best feature of the Giulia: so incisive and feelsome. The Stelvio betters it in some departments, though, Traction and acceleration are better thanks to the 4x4and you can leave safely it in Race mode pretty much all the time. And of course you get a tailgate for moving more luggage extremely quickly.

They're still both the best cars in their class. Prices have gone up a little compared to MY19, though. At £67,195, the Giulia Quadrifoglio is £1640 more than the outgoing model, while the £73,195 Stelvio Q costs £1315 more.

COLOUR BOX

The cars in our photos are both painted in Competizione Red, the superbly lustrous triple-coat shade that seems to chime with enthusiasts (including me - my own Giulia Q is Rosso Competizione). The other colours for the MY2020 Quadrifoglio remain as before, even if the paint ranges have been renamed - Competizione (Trofeo White and Competizione Red), Solid (Alfa Red) and Metal (Silverstone Grey, Vesuvio Grey, Vulcano Black. Montecarlo Blue and Misano Blue). That means you don't get the Visconti Green option that was recently introduced for the regular Giulia/Stelvio.

But if you want something new and a bit different, it might be worth waiting until October, when an additional palette of 'Classic' colours comes on stream. Each of the three new shades is inspired by past Alfas. There's a searing green called Montreal Green, paying homage to the Alfa Montreal (launched 50 years ago) and exclusive to the Quadrifoglios. The other two are not Q-exclusive but are equally arresting. First is Villa d'Este 6C Red, a wonderfully deep crimson colour; second is Junior GT Ochre, trying but not really succeeding in evoking the Giulia GT Tipo 105 - it's actually an eyepoppingly bright yellow-gold.

GIULIA GTAm

Present at the UK MY2020 launch was the Giulia GTAm, Alfa's very special 500-strong limited edition. While it was strictly a static display (boohoo), it was nevertheless great to have a paw around this mighty machine in the flesh, in particular to soak up the two-seat cabin with its rollcage, race seats and harnesses. Weight is down by 100kg thanks to things like Lexan windows and thinner glass. Power is also up by 30hp to 540hp courtesy of mechanical changes and a specific Akrapovič exhaust, which means o-62mph takes 3.6 seconds, 0.3sec less than the Q. Handling should also be improved by a wider track and new 20in centre-lock wheels. Wheelarch extensions form part of a Sauber aero kit including a new front splitter, side skirts and a big adjustable rear spoiler. Carbon-ceramic brakes with gold callipers are standard, too. You'll need to save up though: the price is all of £160,000. The first ones will arrive in the UK in the summer of 2021.

obody really knows how it happens, but there comes a time in the life of certain car models when they're 'discovered' – when they transform from being 'regular' classics to something much more special. One day, a light switches on in people's heads and they say, "Actually, this is a great car, not just a good one."

If you could bottle this formula and predict when it will happen, you'd be a millionaire many times over. It's a journey of 'appreciation' in both senses of the word: enthusiasts appreciate the car more, and the car's value also appreciates.

One of the factors in this equation is someone, somewhere deciding that it's worth spending a lot of cash on a car to make it just how they want. This scenario happened long ago with the Tipo 105 Alfa Giulia GT: people started not just restoring them to original spec, but improving and updating them – a movement called 'restomodding'. Many restomods are true works of art – witness Alfaholics' spectacular Giulia GTA-R, for instance, where pretty much every aspect of the original is reworked. There seems no lack of eager customers prepared to spend significant sums to achieve their dream spec, looks and driving character.

What happened with the Giulia GT is undoubtedly the template for the two cars we see on these pages: the Giulia GT's successor, the Tipo 116 Alfetta GTV. Of course, the Alfetta-based coupe achieved 'everyday classic' status some time ago, and if you want a nice example today you'll be paying a pretty penny. But how well does the more radical restomod approach work with the Alfetta? Here's the full, intriguing story of two superbly modified machines.

Johnny Horsfield designs boats for a living, but his original training was as a car designer, which may explain his predilection for design classics in the automotive world. He's a serial Italian car owner, his stable including a Fiat 130 Coupe, Fiat X1/9, Alfa 75 3.0 V6 Veloce and Alfa 4C. We've seen Johnny before in Auto Italia magazine: he also owns a spectacular Alfetta GTV racer with a rainbow livery that replicates the 1970s 'Telefunken' South African Touring Car look (see our November 2019 issue).

"I used to have an Alfetta GTV when I was 23 years old, having owned Suds and a 33 before that," says Johnny. "I then went German for a long while but around four years ago, my passion for Alfa Romeo was reignited. I always loved the Alfetta GT shape, it's really my era. I saw Alex Jupe's stuff and decided I wanted the best GTV I could have. The idea was to make the ultimate fast road spec version – my dream GTV 6."

Alex Jupe Motorsport was duly tasked with the restoration and modification process. What the team down in Chichester, Sussex has done is nothing short of a marvel. This car represents, by some margin, the most extensive, and expensive, build on an Alfetta GTV yet – a nut-and-bolt job from every angle. As an indication of the work involved, the whole process took fully three years to complete.

Antonio Commission

A large part of the expense came down to the fact that the car started as an old rust bucket. The sheer amount of work required meant that the costs of the shell alone probably exceeded the price of one of the nicest GTs on the market.

"The donor car was a complete but rough GTV that cost £3000," says Johnny. "I could have bought one of nice looking cars out there for £12,000 to £15,000, but underneath they were still rusty. The shell was completely stripped, shot-blasted and power-coated."

The drivetrain comes from an Alfa 75 3.0 V6, not just the 3.0-litre V6 engine but the transaxle too. The engine bay looks like it's brand new. In fact, much of it is: a combination of reconditioned and new parts went into the rebuild, with standards the same as you'd expect of a Ferrari restoration. It's got gas-flowed heads, mild fast road cams and SZ-spec pistons with a 10:1 compression ratio. The radiator is original but recored by Alex Jupe. Some modern bits have been used, mostly in an effort to maximise reliability. New plastic trim parts are very hard to find so have been repainted using Alfa Romeo paint codes.

In its current spec, it's probably producing around 200-210hp. I'd say performance is on a par with my Alfa SZ, and it even sounds a bit like it thanks to the exhaust system consisting of a tubular manifold,

Johnny's rather special GTV6 is currently for sale. Contact Alex Jupe for details on 01243 575760

GTV6 X

ALFA ROMEO GTV 6 TWIN TEST

straight-through centre and Ansa tailpipe – all very beefy. The gearbox comes with a limited slip differential, meaning you can use the full beans quite happily.

The chassis has also been set up to fast road spec using a full RS Racing suspension kit, retaining the torsion bars and coil spring/damper set-up. There's a 30mm anti-roll bar up front and stiffer RS dampers at the rear using height-adjustable platforms.

The wheels are 16-inch split-rim alloys imported from NTM in Italy; they were custom-made with the correct offset for this car. They're shod with Michelin Pilot Sport 3 rubber, 205/45 up front and 215/45 at the rear. Alex Jupe comments: "This tyre combination is something we normally do on 3.5-litre conversions but the set-up seems to suit this car with its particular stance."

They certainly grip very well; at no point does it feel like it's going to come unstuck. The dominant characteristic is how much the steering loads up on fast corners. As you add lock, the heft builds, to the point where your shirt tears and the Incredible Hulk within you comes out; I exaggerate, but you get the point. Johnny recognises this and is contemplating fitting power-assisted steering.

The brakes are AJM using AP Racing four-pot callipers on 295mm discs with separate alloy hubs up front, and standard rears, and they do a very solid job of stopping a car with this level of performance.

Quite possibly this is the tidiest GTV on the planet. The overall look is subtle and pretty much standard, retaining factory bumpers, avoiding fat wheelarches and keeping standard Alfa paint. Alfetta parts are becoming hard to find these days; for instance, you can only buy left-hand drive headlamps. "We looked at doing LED lights," says Johnny, "but we'd have to have butchered the front grille to do that."

The interior has Recaro front seats that have been reupholstered in Italian leather, and look superb in chocolate brown. Why this unusual shade, we asked? Johnny cites Singer's restomod Porsche g11s as the inspiration. The Recaros are not massively bolstered on the base but do provide plenty of support.

You'll notice that the dashboard features air conditioning controls. That's because Johnny has gone for a £5000 air con conversion, using an Italian market dashboard. Other changes include a Momo steering wheel and Momo wooden gearknob.

With the fabulous registration plate GTV 6X, Johnny's Alfa slots in as his current commuter car, as well as a regular day tripper and car for driving to races. Although it's running superbly, Johnny is still thinking about other improvements. "As well as power steering, I'm considering altering the driving position to make it more like my racing GTV. I also have a set of very deep dish alloy wheels with gold centres.

"This car is a great showcase for Alex," says Johnny. "It was built as my lifetime car but I would consider selling it to do another one. In fact, I do have another Alfetta coupe shell with Alex at the moment that I'd like to build up into a wide-body rally style machine with 230hp."

GREEN DEVIL

Richard Melvin's name is very well known in Alfa circles, particularly racing circles. Working alongside Chris Snowden of CS Racing, he is, however, equally adept at

ALFA ROMEO GTV 6 TWIN TEST

Richard manufactures many high quality road and race performance parts for Alfa Romeo transaxle cars. For more info: www.alfettagtv6.co.uk producing parts for road cars as he is for racers. He's a GTV-aholic, owning no fewer than seven of the things, including a wide-arch 1979 Turbodelta.

Here is Richard's splendid GTV 6, a South African 2.5 that now lives in the UK. It's a 1982 car, making it one of the first 250 built in South Africa. "I bought it on eBay advertised as a car with no engine," says Richard. "But it turned out the engine was in fact present, just smoking, and there was even a second 2.5 V6 with the car, plus a load of EB Spares parts. It was a bargain, even though the suspension was knackered.

"There was rust but it was not in the usual places because it's an African car. I had to replace the lower chassis rails, for instance, but the body panels were all good. The interior was superb – there were even plastic covers still on the rear seats!"

Richard admits he did think about fitting a 3.o-litre engine, but in the end he stuck with the original 2.5 V6 and gearbox. After some work, it's working fine and remains all standard. The exhaust is far from standard, though: it's a prototype system built by Kevin Abigail at EB Spares and sits very low. Also low is the exhaust note: a deep, basso profundo that sounds just wonderful. Alfetta gearboxes tend to be awkward things but this one feels fine, even if the clutch pedal bite point is high.

The wheels are highly distinctive Compomotive TH replicas, which are available through CSR. These rallylook classics are available in a range of sizes but Richard chose 7x15s as they work best on a road car and give more suitable gearing than 16-inch wheels. They're shod with Vredestein Giugiaro tyres – very fitting considering the Italdesign maestro styled the Alfetta GT – in a low-profile 195/50 size.

The suspension replicates Group A set-up, which is more supple than a balls-out race spec – effectively a racing spec calmed down for road use. The full CS Racing system uses Quantum Zero adjustable monotube dampers specially valved to CSR's own spec, and 30mm torsion bars with Autodelta adjustment (a copy of the original system). The front anti-roll bar is also made by CSR, inspired by the Luigi Racing adjustable item, which is hollow with aluminium blades to make it very light and very stiff. At the rear is an SZ style ball joint with solid Watts links (making it much tighter) plus stiffer, height-adjustable springs.

The geometry up front makes the car sit very low. It uses a knuckle riser and racing ball joint, resulting in a degree of camber that really makes the front end turn in well. I found this out myself when Richard kindly let me pilot it around our test track. It's very pointy and despite being rear-drive with a lot of weight up front, the set-up gives a very neutral feel, with the back end following the front around corners and the opportunity to 'loosen' it using the throttle. There's far less body roll than a standard GTV and very little understeer to speak of. Like Johnny's car, the steering has no power assistance but it needs a lot less muscle strength to steer. The brakes are standard but will be replaced with a new CSR front set-up (four-pot callipers and larger vented discs).

Cosmetically it's all standard. The green paint is an official, original colour and the bump strips are South African spec. The interior, too, is original and unique to the South African market, with incredible Porsche 928-style chequered brown seat fabric. The dashboard is the early 'split' type with the rev counter ahead of the driver and the speedo offset; an OMP deep-dish steering wheel really sets it off well. Like Johnny's car, there's air con but it's yet to be fitted. One peculiarity of this African car is its driver's footrest, apparently designed to cope better with the bumpy local roads.

TWIN CAN TWINS

We reckon this sporty Fiat 124 twin cam pairing represents the sweet spot in the respective histories of each model. But why exactly?

Story by Phil Ward Photography by Michael Ward

iat's boxy 124 saloon, introduced in 1966, was a huge sales success. Even more than that, it became an icon, an accolade deriving from Turin's genius in selling manufacturing rights across the globe to countries like Russia, India, Spain, Bulgaria, Turkey, Korea and Egypt. The very last Lada VAZ '124' rolled off the line in 2012, by which time the 124 had cemented its place as the second best selling car of all time after the VW Beetle.

But it was the sporty models of 1967 that enthusiasts remember. The 124 Sport Spider and Sport Coupe offered performance driving that was truly affordable. Almost 200,000 Spiders were built, plus around 280,000 Coupes. The Spider was a great success in the USA, some 70 per cent of production crossing the Atlantic. While the Coupe also crossed the pond, it sold better in Europe and was also produced in Spain by Seat.

The 124 Spider was based on a shortened version of the saloon floorpan, the wheelbase shrinking from 2420mm to 2280mm (124 Coupes, on the other hand, retained the longer wheelbase). Aurelio Lampredi's legendary twin cam engine was used throughout the life of both the Spider and Coupe, shared with a variety of other Fiats, including the 124, 125 and 132. The 124 Coupe lasted until 1977, its DNA then passing on to the Lancia Beta. The Spider, however, was updated with a 2.0-litre engine and remained in production until 1985.

The two cars in this feature are both examples representing what we reckon are the ideal specifications among the wide choice of derivatives on the market. While it is a fact that the majority of Spiders currently available are imported US versions, they are all compromised to some degree, both in terms of performance and aesthetics. European Spiders and Coupes are the most desirable on both counts but are harder to find. The saving grace for both versions is the current availability of Europeanspecification original and aftermarket performance parts, so that any US import can be readily uprated.

CLASSY COUPE

Alex Jupe's 1971 second series (BC1) 1608cc Coupe is a superb example, one of quite a few low-mileage, excellent condition examples being imported from Italy in recent times. All three series of 124 Coupes (AC, BC and CC) remain highly underrated as classic car choices. While the 124 Spider was never officially sold in the UK, the Coupe was. Sadly the vast majority of UK cars succumbed to corrosion, exacerbated by salted winter roads. Many were scrapped or reduced to a source of spares because the cost of restoration far exceeded the value of the car. Now that more Italianmarket cars are becoming available, prospective owners can buy excellent, unmolested examples for half the price of an average Alfa Romeo 1750 GTV.

The BC Coupe was available in two versions, one with the gohp 1438cc twin cam and a single carb, the other a 110hp 1608cc with twin carbs. The Spider (BS) equivalent had the same choices, although the bespoilered US version had only a single carb. Twin cam tuning guru Guy Croft regards the 1608 engine as the ideal production specification. The all-square bore and stroke of 80mm x 80mm offers both strong torque and a free-revving nature, while the twin carbs and longoverlap cams provide top-end sparkle. Guy reckons that this set-up has only been bettered in Fiat twin cam history by the 1585cc Strada 105TC.

Alex Jupe's car hails from the sunny Sicilian capital of Palermo. It has had its original paint refreshed and the interior is original. Italian owners are renowned for keeping their cars in original condition (including colour); indeed modified cars – except for competition use – are illegal in Italy. Quite why such a wonderful car as this has seen such little use in over 40 years is a mystery, but Alex's find is showing just 35,000km, which, when looking at the superb interior, seems genuine (although it must be noted that 124 odometers only display five figures).

One departure from originality is Alex's replacement of the 4.5J x 13 magnesium wheels with wider 7J x 13 reproduction Cromodora alloys. 124 Coupes have always looked under-wheeled and the 7Js fill the wheel arches nicely without looking 'boy racer'. This is sensible because old magnesium wheels do corrode and are not repairable safely.

On the road, the BC feels lighter on the steering than expected, given the big wheels and 185/70 boots. Unlike many restored Coupes and Spiders, Alex's car retains the original steering wheel. The rim is thin by any standards and I found it quite uncomfortable. The gearbox works well enough, although having owned many 124s (I lost count after 10), I still don't understand why the fifth gear ratio is so close to fourth. However, changing up at gomph is always a thrill.

Starting the BC from rest during the test was troublesome because the carbs 'went off' during the drive to the shoot. Alex reckons it's a rebuild issue using suspect parts that have created an air vacuum. According to renowned Fiat/Abarth specialist Tony

SPORTY SPIDER

Michael Cobelli owns one of the nicest and rarest 124 Spiders in the UK: a 1973 European-spec, chrome bumper 1800 (CS1). Build numbers of this model are disputed but the most popular opinion is that just 778 were built. From 1974 to 1978, every CS1 (over 16,000 of them) was built to US spec, fitted with front and rear wing indicator repeaters, impact bumpers and down-rated engines.

I still don't understand why fifth gear is so close to fourth but changing up at 90mph is always a thrill **!!

Castle-Miller of Middle Barton Garage, there is an issue with poor parts coming from Far Eastern sources. Starting can be an issue with early twin cams that have a mechanical fuel pump. It can take a good prod on the accelerator and a few engine rotations to get the fuel into the carbs. While downdraught Weber 40IDF carbs (or the less favoured Solex option) are the norm for left-hand drive 124s, they can be quite needy in the adjustment and balance department. Side-draught DCOEs are much more reliable. They are an easy retrofit on right-hand drive 124s, which have better engine bay access. Depending on the distributor location (the topmounted version is best for clearance), a rear offset inlet manifold may be necessary. The third series Spiders were an evolution of the previous AS and BS models in that the engines were further developed. The 1438cc unit derived from the original OHV 124 and the 125-sourced 1608cc engine were replaced by 1592cc and 1756cc 132 series engines. Rationality of parts meant that both of the new engines were identical mechanically save for an 80mm bore on the 1592cc and 84mm for the 1756cc. The blocks were longer than the earlier engines, intended to improve cylinder head sealing. While this would suggest that the AS and BS series are undesirable due to potential head gasket failures, this is no longer the case as modern replacement gaskets are of superior quality. To avoid any issues, make sure your engine doesn't run out of water and overheat!

FIAT 124 SPIDER & COUPE

In terms of desirability, Michael Cobelli's Spider is a fine example of what a restorer and US-spec uprater should be looking at. Not only that but Michael's car has also been enhanced with twin carbs and a 4-2-1 exhaust manifold. From the basic 118hp the engine is now nearer, if not the same as, the 124 Abarth's 128hp.

This Spider originally hailed from the Veneto region of Italy and was painted black from the factory, the former body colour being evident in the engine compartment. Somewhere along the line it has acquired Lancia seats, which don't look at all out of place. It also has a smaller, thicker steering wheel than standard, which is certainly more confidence-inspiring than the thin-rimmed OE item.

Starting the car is more determined than the 124 Coupe, mainly due to later models having an electric fuel pump to prime the carbs on start-up. The steering feels slightly stiffer than I remember and I suspect that the steering box might have been over-adjusted. In any event, this didn't affect my enjoyment of the car. The shorter wheelbase makes the Spider more nimble than the Coupe. The whole car feels taut and the suspension is well damped. Pininfarina's build quality is such that scuttle shake is barely noticeable, even after 47 years of driving. The engine is well sorted with a smooth power delivery and no flat spots or hesitation. Clearly this engine wants to go and has plenty of revs in reserve beyond the mid range.

BUYING A 124 SPIDER & COUPE

Most mechanical issues on any 124 are within the capability of a competent enthusiast, including changing the cambelt, which makes both the Spider and Coupe an attractive choice among Italian classics.

Built at a time when Fiat was indifferent to corrosion protection, most early 124 Coupes were not undersealed from new and those that were treated by aftermarket products were not that well implemented – these were the days before Waxoyl. The very last CCs had the benefit of having some protection from the factory, with wheelarch liners doing wonders for preserving the front wings.

The Coupe has suffered more than most 1970s cars mainly because of its roof construction. While the slender pillars are great for allowing light into the passenger compartment, they carry plenty of stress, which creates cracks at the attachment points. Movement in the roof affects the integrity of the windscreen sealing, which is 'hot' bonded. While this system is common today, it was unusual in the 1970s and the correct seals were hard to come by. As a result, some replacement screens simply received a coat of mastic on top of the old bonding, and if poorly applied the screen could actually become detached.

The rear side window attachments can cause issues. The AC and BC have a rear opening latch that, when worn, can allow the window to open of its own accord. The CC has a different arrangement, the base of the rear pillar being redesigned to incorporate an air vent. Unlike the positive mounting on the AC and BC, the latch is bonded to the glass and if the sealing breaks then the window cannot be secured. Re-attaching the metal latch support to the glass will require some patience and a very efficient sealant. Both versions have delicate hinges on the B-pillars that weaken with use and will be very difficult to repair. The best option is never to open the windows...

The critical areas when inspecting any 124 Coupe are the front and rear screen scuttles. Effective repair requires the removal of both the screen and even the dashboard. The scuttles were never available as separate parts and so need to be fabricated. Many otherwise excellent coupes have been scrapped because of the cost of professional repairs in this area.

Given these circumstances, it would be an advantage for the prospective buyer to locate a car that has had these repairs properly undertaken or, better still, a lowmileage imported car in original condition.

The 124 Spider has fewer corrosion issues than the Coupe, in particular imports from dry US states. Affected areas are likely to be the chassis area around the front jacking points and the inner sills. Spiders have detachable outer sills which may well hide the issues within.

Purchasing a US-spec 1800 CS1 and running it without uprating it to European specification may well be something of a disappointment to the owner. The low-compression engine with its lowly power output, combined with heavy bumpers and a high ride height, are certainly not attractive sports car attributes. However, using a solid US-spec car as basis, it is perfectly possible to recreate a Spider to the same quality as Michael Cobelli's superb example.

In theory buying a US import for £5000 and spending £15,000 on a DIY upgrade could equate to spending £20k on a good, restored example. If the prospective owner is not prepared to get the spanners out then perhaps a readily available post-1980 fuel-injected Spider 2000 or Spidereuropa would be a better bet. Current values for good, lowmileage cars vary between £15,000 and £25,000.

Spider is clearly a sportier drive than the Coupe but both have their allures. Fully and properly restored cars make the best buys

SWEET SHORT

This short wheelbase 250 GT stormed Le Mans, the Nürburgring and many other great European circuits. We tell the remarkable story of chassis 2689GT ver time, certain words lose their potency through misuse or overuse. The words 'legend' and 'icon' are among their number in the modern age. However, the Ferrari 250 GT Berlinetta (aka the Short Wheelbase or SWB) was – and remains – a legend in motor racing lore and an icon in the marque's compelling backstory. Its status as one of the greatest GT cars ever to turn a wheel was cemented while it was still winning in the FIA's Grand Touring World Championship and elsewhere.

Nothing has changed in the meantime. If anything, its standing has been amplified.

The car pictured here, chassis 2689GT, is a SEFAC 'Hot Rod' edition (SEFAC standing for Società Esercizio Fabbriche Automobili e Corse, the name under which the Ferrari company was publicly incorporated in 1960). Only a handful of SWBs were built to 'Comp/61' specification, complete with Rizla-thin aluminium coachwork and assorted engine mods. Some sources claim as few as eight were made. It enjoyed a relatively slender competition career in period, but it was a stellar one nonetheless. Acquired new by textile magnate and gentleman driver, Pierre Noblet, and also steered by industrialist (and future works Ferrari star) Jean Guichet, its third place finish in the 1961 Le Mans 24 Hours – its maiden race – was merely the opening salvo.

That Ferrari scorched to victory in the 29th running of Les Vingt-Quatre Heures Du Mans came as a surprise to nobody. Eleven cars bearing the prancing Noblet/Guichard [sic] with 4258.009 kilometres [2645.804 miles]." Such was their pace, they averaged 110.245mph and completed 317 laps. That was three more than overall victors Olivier Gendebien and Paul Frère had managed a year earlier aboard their works Ferrari TR59/60.

The car's second outing was at Monza for the September 1961 InterEuropa Cup races that supported the Italian Grand Prix. In the event for largerdisplacement GT cars, it soon boiled down to a battle horse logo featured among the 55-strong entry. For Noblet and Guichet, however, the race was a voyage of discovery. They had been obliged to participate in the April Le Mans time trials aboard a different Ferrari, since 2689GT was still in the throes of creation. Noblet took delivery on 30 May 1961, a mere 11 days before its maiden outing, and 48 hours after the car's intended circuit debut in the Nürburgring 1000km. Accordingly, they had spent little time behind the wheel prior to the start of the race at 4pm on 10 June 1961.

As was his privilege as the car's owner, Noblet took the wheel for the opening two-and-a-half-hour stint before handing over to Guichet. It had rained for 38 days in a row during the run up to the start, and precipitation early on resulted in poor conditions that caught out several drivers. By 11pm, Noblet and Guichet were circulating in ninth place. As dawn approached, they had moved up to fifth amid further attrition. By 4pm on the Sunday afternoon, they ended the race in third place overall and first in class. Gregor Grant reported in Autosport: "No Grand Touring records are, as yet, officially recognised, but the greatest distance ever covered in this category was by between the SWBs of Carlo Maria Abate and Noblet. The former held a slender lead early on, only to lose precious minutes during a botched tyre change. In the closing stages, Noblet was comfortably clear of his pursuers. However, Abate charged back into contention, guiding his car on its lockstops as he made up places. According to Autosport: "Abate eventually overtook all but Noblet who was driving faster than he has ever done before. Closer and closer he came, but he just could not take the Frenchman." Despite a late coming together, Noblet held on to take the win.

A month later, Guichet was entered in 2689GT for the Coupe du Salon meeting at the Autodrome de Linas-Montlhéry. He led comfortably during the first half of the race, only to retire amid a fug of white smoke. A fortnight later, 2689GT returned to the circuit near the French capital for round nine of the International Championship for Manufacturers – the Paris 1000km. The organising body, the Automobile Club de l'Isle de France, attracted a bumper crop of privateer and works teams, the heavily promoted event playing out before more than 30,000 spectators. For Guichet and Noblet, however, the Monthléry bid proved underwhelming. They ran as high as fifth amid the pitstops and driver changes, but were never in contention for a podium finish. They placed eighth overall (and in class).

Noblet's 1962 race card kicked off in April and the poorly supported Coupe de Bruxelles meeting. Staged in Heysel Park in northern Brussels, home to the famous Heysel Stadium and the Atomium, the event comprised Grand Touring races for a variety of classes, with Noblet competing in the 2.5-litre and above category aboard 2689GT. His was one of five 250 GT SWBs entered in the headline race. He blasted into an early lead, which he maintained throughout the 10-lap encounter.

Following on from its success in Brussels, 2689GT was dispatched to Jacques Swaters' Garage Francorchamps for fettling ahead of the Grand Prix de Spa meeting. On Sunday, May 5, Noblet picked up from where he had left off five weeks earlier and qualified on pole for the large-capacity GT thrash. However, he wasn't able to mount a sustained challenge to fellow SWB driver Edgar Berney come the race, the Swiss holding on to win after one hour and 12 minutes of racing; Noblet had to settle for second place. Later that month, Noblet and Guichet teamed up once again to contest the Nürburgring 1000km. A persistent oil leak blunted their challenge, but they finished in seventh place overall, and second in class. This was the car's sixth finish in seven races.

However, the partners would not share 2689GT for the following month's Le Mans 24 Hours. Despite Guichet and stand-in Willy Mairesse having been fastest of all 22 runners during April's test weekend (albeit with some works teams conspicuous by their absence), the former would be armed with his new 250 GTO for the round-the-clock race in June. He and Noblet finished a brilliant second overall and first in class. Mairesse, incidentally, had been first, second and third fastest during the test weekend, having alternated between 2689GT, the UDT Laystall 250 GTO and the factory-entered 330 TRI/LM.

Following the Nürburgring run, 2689GT was dispatched to Jacques Swaters' workshop in Brussels before returning to France ahead of its final frontline outing. Noblet was about to race the silver-and-Gordiniblue Short Wheelbase on home soil. During the July 1962 Trophée d'Auvergne meeting at Clermont-Ferrand, Noblet came home in sixth place. For Noblet, whom Sport Auto praised for his "performance splendide", this outing was perhaps not the swansong he had hoped for, but it was a strong showing nonetheless.

In November 1962, ownership passed to Natalia Morabito of Rome, who didn't keep the car long; it was acquired a year later by gentleman driver, Federico Martignone. He reputedly bought it for his son to race, but there is no record of Martignone Jr ever campaigning the car. In 1965, 2689GT was offered for sale via Rome-based airline pilot and sometime car dealer, Roberto Goldini. Around this time, the colour was changed from silver with a blue stripe to 'resale red'. That same year, the SWB was dispatched to California, having been acquired by American, Edwin K 'Ed' Niles. He didn't keep the car long, either. 2689GT was sold to Anthony Tersigni in 1965. It remained in California, but was little used during his ownership.

In 1974, Michael Pokorni acquired the car, purportedly for $4500, by which time it was in decidedly careworn condition. His ownership lasted only a few months as it was sold to Bob Solomon via well-known dealer/race entrant, Harley Cluxton. Pokorni clearly knew a thing or two about flipping cars because it changed hands for long since hung up his helmet, but he came out of retirement to have one last dalliance with an old flame. Using only second and third gears while he learned the track, he guided car 14 to a respectable ninth place in his first race since the late 1960s.

Upton showed the Ferrari from time to time thereafter, and also campaigned it as a driver/entrant during the 1987 Historic Automobile Races at Today chassis 2689GT has earned its retirement, being used as a tool for occasional blasts in the US

$10,000. Solomon, in turn, moved it on a year later, John Upon of Hillsborough, California purchasing what was effectively a wreck. He then initiated a restoration that would last the better part of a decade.

Upton wasted little time enjoying the car on its completion. He arranged for Pierre Noblet to travel from his home in Coix, France to the Monterey Peninsula for the 1984 Historic Automobile Races at Laguna Seca. Noblet, by now of pensionable age, had Monterey, before offering the car for sale in 1993 via UK dealer, Adrian Hamilton. "John called me one day out of the blue," Hamilton recalls. "I brokered the sale between John and Bob Baker." 2689GT changed hands for an eye-watering £1.3m, then a commanding figure for a 250 GT SWB. In February 1996, the car was sold to Australian Kerry Manolas for $1.6m in a deal once again brokered by Hamilton.

Manolas arranged to take delivery of 2689GT at the

August 1996 Pre-Historic races at Laguna Seca, a week before the Historic Automobile Races meeting. The car was entered for Matthew Martin, son of former Ferrari 250 LM pilot, Spencer Martin, who was down to drive Manolas' Jaguar C-Type. The SWB performed well, but Spencer Jr tangled with an errant Chevrolet Corvette driver which resulted in a damaged left flank and a bent wing. The next few days were spent patching the car up prior to a repeat run at Laguna Seca seven days later. While it may have appeared a little battle-scarred, the SWB placed third behind a pair of 250 GTOs. The Ferrari's next outing was the Colorado Grand, with Manolas and Spencer Martin sharing the driving during the 1000-mile event, before it was shipped to Australia. Christchurch's Auto Restorations then set about returning the car to pristine condition ahead of its next race meeting, the July 1997 Historic Festival at Silverstone where Martin Jr claimed a brace of class wins.

Shortly after this successful showing, 2689GT was sold to Lord Cowdray (Michael Pearson) in a deal brokered – yet again – by Hamilton, which involved a partial trade against an aluminium-bodied, non-SEFAC- spec 250 GT SWB. The aristocrat drove it in the Régularité class of the April 1988 Tour Auto alongside Roger Middleton. By this time, it was wearing the registration number '100 SWB'. In January 2000, the car was transported to West Palm Beach for the 11th Cavallino Classic concours d'elegance. It was displayed by Hamilton who that same month brokered a third sale to American collector Greg Whitten for $2.375m. 268gGT remained in his keep until 2003 when it was acquired by Bruce Meyer. The Californian spotted an advertisement in a car magazine while on holiday in France (Adrian Hamilton was again brokering the sale – quelle surprise!). The Californian cut short his trip and hotfooted it over to Hampshire to buy the Ferrari, a car he had coveted since his youth.

268gGT nowadays enjoys a pampered existence, but Meyer appreciates the SWB's worth as opposed to its value. This old warhorse gets used, its current custodian driving it to his favourite California hangouts as and when the mood takes him. This may be a world away from the car being guided with gusto at Le Mans, Monza and the Nürburgring, but this most feted of Ferraris has certainly earned its retirement. No two examples of the 250 GT SWB were exactly alike. Top speed of 160mph possible with right gearing

ENZO'S Q-CAR

In an effort to remain incognito, Enzo Ferrari would usually travel around in ordinary Fiats. His personal Ritmo 85 S, a gift from Fiat, looked pretty much standard but it had a hidden secret: it was 'Abarthised' by the Fiat factory ang on, this doesn't look right at all: a Fiat Ritmo five-door with Abarth wheels and little Prancing Horse badges. Abarth never made a five-door Ritmo. Nor did Abarth invent its 'Tributo Ferrari' badge until the Abarth 695 special edition of 2010, long after the Ritmo was retired. So what on earth is this Fiat/Abarth/Ferrari hybrid?

It all stems from the fact that, when he was out and about, Enzo Ferrari liked to remain incognito. He was happy to accept, as gifts from Fiat in Turin, ordinary models in which to be chauffeured around. This Ritmo 85 S is one such gift, a car that would become his favoured personal car for fully three years. But although it looked pretty much like a regular Ritmo on the outside, the car delivered to Modena was far from being ordinary under the skin. It had the heart of an Abarth 130 TC beating inside it.

We got the chance to catch up with this unique car at the Officine Classiche Abarth workshops in Turin. Fiat's classic car department has been restoring and tuning Scorpion brand cars for several years now, and has even taken a leaf out of Ferrari's book by offering official certification for classics. And it's not just Abarth-badged cars cosseted here, either: as well as road and race Scorpions, also welcomed are all the Fiat, Lancia and Alfa Romeo models that ever had any connection to the House of the Scorpion. For instance, most of Fiat's competition models up until the 1990s, including the last Alfa Romeo Touring Cars, were manufactured in Corso Marche, the legendary address of Abarth up until 1994.

The Officine Classiche team occasionally comes across unique cars. One such car to cause great excitement recently is this apparently anonymous Fiat Ritmo. It's a second series, five-door 85 S in metallic silver. On the face of it, nothing special – perhaps slightly rarer than the Ritmo 60s that populated the garages of Italian families in the 1980s, but hardly collectable. However, many small clues give away the fact that it's no ordinary Fiat.

For instance, the Pirelli alloy wheels are the same as you'd find on the Abarth 125 TC and 130 TC. Then there's the fat exhaust tailpipe. Looking inside reveals a nice wood-rim Nardi three-spoke steering wheel and three extra Veglia gauges housed where the radio should be – one for the battery charge, one for oil pressure and one for oil temperature.

It's clear that this unusual Ritmo has a whole story to tell, and that story begins with a particular pair of badges under the front wing indicators: Ferrari Prancing Horses on a yellow background. Although discreet, they don't go unnoticed and betray the fact that this car's story concerns Maranello.

Yes, this silver Ritmo belonged to Enzo Ferrari. It rolled off the production line in 1982 (just after the launch of the second series Ritmo). It was registered by Fiat Auto SpA with the numberplate TO Y48401 on 22 November 1982, quite possibly as a demonstrator or press car (interestingly, Quattroruote magazine published a the road test of a 'twin sister' car registered TO Y37066 in December 1982).

Then, in early 1985, our Ritmo underwent a major organ transplant. The engine, exhaust and suspension were all replaced with those of the 130 TC Abarth. Its 2.0-litre twin-cam engine, complete with two big 40 Weber carburettors, replaced the original 1.5, increasing the power output from 82hp to 130hp. The brakes also came from the Abarth 130 TC, as well as the uprated exhaust system and dampers. An update of the registration certificate and numberplate legalised all the modifications.

The modified Ritmo was delivered to Modena (hence the new numberplate - MO 647734 – with MO standing for Modena) as a gift for Enzo Ferrari on 9 March 1985. According to his trusted driver, Dino Tagliazucchi, who served from 1969 to 1988 and passed away on 9 April 2016 at 73 years of age, il commendatore did not like to attract attention when travelling. For his frequent trips, he preferred anonymous, inconspicuous cars, but they did have to be both comfortable and fast, if possible. Not that the original 1978 Ritmo impressed Enzo. When he was first given an early example on trial, he was reportedly baffled by the interior design, asking "What is all this cardboard packaging?"

The list of 'ordinary' cars used by Enzo Ferrari is very long indeed. Most of them were Fiats (including the 128, 124, 125, 130, 131, 132 and Croma), as well as a few Peugeots and Renaults. He also famously used a Lancia

RAUCOUS RITMOS: THE ABARTH STORY

The first Ritmo with an Abarth badge was the 125 TC launched in Italy in September 1981. Available only in three-door hatchback form, it received the same 2.0-litre twin camshaft engine (hence 'TC') as in the 131 Rally Abarth, with Marelli Digiplex electronic ignition. The maximum power output of 125hp was boldly emblazoned on the car's badge. It had a ZF five-speed gearbox, while its suspension was derived from the Group 2 racing Ritmo. This was indeed a true hot hatchback, capable of a top speed of 118mph and 0-62mph in 8.7 seconds, and represented a real challenge on the road to the Volkswagen Golf GTI, even if the VW proved much more popular in the marketplace. Which sadly did not include the UK – the 125 TC was never imported here.

The launch of the second series Fiat Ritmo in October 1982 led to an upgrade of the Abarth, whose power duly increased to 130hp. The engine now featured two twin-choke carburettors (Weber 40 DCOE 145/146 or Solex ADDHE). Top speed and acceleration times both improved and a longer final drive ratio (15/51 instead of 14/50) allowed slightly better fuel consumption. Both on the outside and inside, the 130 TC looked sportier and more purposeful. The new Abarth 130 TC appeared in price lists in Italy in May 1983, and in the UK (as the Strada 130 TC) in 1984, lasting until 1987.

Thema 8.32 which, since it had a Ferrari engine fitted, was perfect for him. This Abarthised Ritmo was reputedly the very last car which Enzo used before his death in 1988.

Even after Signor Ferrari's demise, the Ritmo remained at Maranello – in fact, it wasn't retired until the end of 1995, Then a collector from Tuscany rediscovered the car and decided to restore it. He took it to the FCA Heritage workshop for official certification, since the car's relatively high-profile tyres, it rolls quite a lot. And while grip is good, you always feel like it's on the edge. There's mild understeer and it's possible to lift a front wheel but the thing you really take away is just how nervously alive the front wheels feel: all

130 horses

This Abarthised Ritmo was reputedly the very last car just how nervously the Enzo used before his death in 1988 end of 1995, after a full decade in service, latterly as a corporate pool car. The silver Fiat was eventually purchased for a mere 250,000 lire by a Vicenza-based scrapyard owner, ready to be crushed. Fortunately, though, it escaped the crusher's jaws. It was deregistered, however, and lost its nice Modena number plate.

Abarth 130 TC parts were fitted in period by the Fiat factory. Under the skin, it had all the parts necessary to obtain Abarth certification. The car was duly re-registered, although not with a Modena plate.

As befits an engine that, with 130hp, surpassed all other hot hatches in its day, this is a real wild horse to drive. On snort away wildly, seemingly desperate to break free of their reins.

One thing's for sure. Should you ever find yourself next to an anonymous-looking silver Fiat, think twice before you press the accelerator as the traffic light turns green. Hidden prancing horses, all too eager to gallop away, may be hiding under its bonnet. You can now have that car you once dreamed of. An iconic classic Alfa Romeo or Lancia from the 1970s, 80s or 90s, but re-imagined.

DEALING IN DREAMS

A fascinating new book by John Collins A must read for Ferrari enthusiasts

TALACRET TAL

This is a beautifully printed coffee table book measuring 310 mm x 250mm and tells the inside story about John Collins and Talacrest, from its beginning to present day and is also a wonderful catalogue of the world's most fabulous cars that Talacrest and John have been involved in. With over 350 pages the book is prolifically illustrated with stunning archive pictures from Auto Italia magazine and Marcel Massini amongst others and includes many important Ferrari road and racing cars. many are accompanied with histories, track tests and how the deals were done. The book has been published to commemorate Talacrest's 30th Anniversary and documents the start of the business with borrowed capital from mates in the local pub, to the development of an enterprise which became the first Classic Car dealer to win the Queen's Award for Export. Apart from the cars there are fascinating chapters about John's personal life and other achievements. John's connections with the Sport of Kings and his love for horsepower is close to his heart and profits from the sale of this book will be shared between two charities - The Thames Valley Air Ambulance and the Racehorse Sanctuary

MC MDSHIPS

The launch of a new Maserati is always a celebration – and with the new MC20 supercar due imminently on both road and track, we take a look at Maserati's illustrious line of mid-engined racers from 1961 onwards

> Story by Peter Collins Images by Michael Ward & Peter Collins

n just a few short weeks' time, we'll know everything there is to know about Maserati's allnew MC20 mid-engined supercar. While it's obviously going to set Trident showrooms alight, the meaning of its name – it stands for 'Maserati Corse 2020' – clearly indicates that the brand will soon return to racing.

This is entirely fitting. Maserati not only has a long history of racing but also an illustrious line of midengined racers that stretches back decades. As a taster for the arrival of the new MC20, here we're going to celebrate those forebears, from the Tipo 63 of 1961 through the 64 and 65 to the Barchetta and the MC12 of the modern era.

The reason for the appearance of the very first midengined Maserati, the Tipo 63, was purely down to racing expediency. Maserati had gained an undying reputation for success and innovation with its great little Tipo 60 and 61 sports racers, colloquially known as 'Birdcages' due to their highly complex but effective multi-tubular chassis. These legendary racers carried their power units in front of the driver and, whilst in the hands of the likes of Stirling Moss and Masten Gregory this proved to be a winning combo, time and science was moving on.

The late 1960 Nassau sportscar event was the first in which a Tipo 61 had not led a race it had entered. Earlier in the year, Lotus had introduced its Type 19 and Cooper its Monaco, both with the power unit placed behind the driver, while Porsches had always been rearengined. And when conservative Ferrari ran a rearengined car at the Grand Prix in Monaco 1960 for the first time, the direction of design was clear.

Giulio Alfieri started work on what was to become a mid-engined Birdcage successor in 1960, duly given the title Tipo 63 (Tipo 62 had been allocated to a stillborn V8-engined drawing-board design and powerboat engine).

The familiar steel tube Birdcage structure was used, clothed in aluminium bodywork, with double wishbones up front and a de Dion tube at the back. Most 63s used the trusty, lusty big four-cylinder engine, but Maserati's 3.0-litre V12 screamer was also fitted.

The best race results achieved by Tipo 63s were during 1961 when, in April at the Targa Florio, two cars finished fourth and fifth, while in June 1961, one car completed the 24-hour grind at Le Mans to take fourth place overall.

Further developed versions of the 63 – the 64 and 65 – followed in 1962 and 1965, but problems including budget restraints, reliability and a tragic fatal accident finally put a stop to these activities. As Maserati racing expert, Willem Oosthoek, put it: "By the end of 1962 the rear-engined Birdcage programme was dead".

During the 1970s and 1980s, Maserati got busy building and developing mid-engined road cars in the shapes of the V8 Bora and V6 Merak. Of the former, two chassis (3000 and 3001) were constructed in 1973 on the instigation of Maserati's French agent, Jean Thépenier, to the then-current Group 4 GT racing regulations with the intention of running at Le Mans. Sadly this never happened due to the FIA being unprepared to grant the cars homologation. One of the cars raced successfully in the Ferrari/Maserati Historic race series around the turn of the century.

Moving on, at Maserati's press presentation in December 1990, an exciting concept of what the company could be building in the future was displayed in the form of the Marcello Gandinidesigned mid-engined Chubasco. The wedge-shaped profile of the newcomer was similar to Gandini's Lamborghini Diablo. It featured a backbone chassis, which had been one of Alessandro de Tomaso's pet design principles, twin wishbone rear suspension with pull-rods and power was to have come from a 3.2-litre V8 (as used in the Shamal) developing 430hp. However, it never proceeded beyond the concept stage and the mock-up ended in the superb Panini collection near Modena.

Certain features of the Chubasco prototype were carried over to the next 'middie' bearing the Trident badge: the Barchetta of 1991. This was created by the design team of Carlo Gaino and ABOVE & BELOW: Tipo 63 was first Maserati 'middie' NEXT PAGE: Group 4 Bora at Vallelunga; Chubasco; yellow Barchetta at Zandvoort MC12s raced extensively with great success. Farina's Birdcage 75 (bottom right) was also MC12-based Sergio Beccio of Synthesis Design in Turin. Gaino was ex-Italdesign and Beccio's background had been in aerodynamics at Pininfarina, Lancia Corsa and Osella. Between them, they had the Lancia ECV2 from 1988 on their CV (see Auto Italia September 2020) and were later to follow up with the racing Alfa Romeo 155 GTA in 1992. Also theirs was the De Tomaso Guara, which borrowed its backbone chassis from the Barchetta.

The Barchetta was one of the last ideas to come from Alessandro himself before his untimely death. It was conceived as the basis for a one-make race series entitled the Grantrofeo Monomarca Barchetta Maserati which, it was planned, would revive the margue's waning fortunes.

During 1992, on circuits throughout Italy and Europe, six rounds were held; the series was then expanded to 10 events for 1993, but there were not enough takers and it folded after that. A number of famous drivers took part, including Le Mans winner Jan Lammers, Carlo Facetti and Sandro Munari, as well as privateer Thomas Bscher who was an avid collector of Maseratis. The first series champion was John Nielsen.

The Barchetta's innovative aluminium and composite central chassis had racing-style suspension attached via subframes and used pushrods at the front and pull-rods at the rear, as in thencurrent Formula 1 practice. The bodywork was of moulded carbon composite. The power unit was the 2.0-litre turbocharged go-degree V6 as fitted to the Ghibli Open Cup car, tuned to provide 315hp at 7200rpm, which provided strong performance in a car weighing just 775kg. The transmission was a sixspeed ZF manual gearbox.

It's thought that 17 cars were built in total. One Stradale prototype was proposed, but never fully realised. One Barchetta was purchased by Drummond Bone and campaigned successfully in the UK in the Auto Italia Intermarque race series at circuits

DRIVING THE TIPO 63

We were lucky enough to drive chassis number 63.008. This car uses a V12 producing 300hp at 8000rpm – a lot in a car weighing just 730kg – and its 24 spark plugs, 12 open trumpets for six twin-choke carbs and four 'anti-aircraft gun' tailpipes look, and sound, quite something. Firing it up brings a massive mechanical thrash.

These were early days for rear-engined racing cars and Maserati was on a steep learning curve. This Birdcage may look effective but it's not an easy car to drive. The V12 engine is placed so far forwards that it pushes the driver too close to the pedals. Distortion through the Plexiglas screen is truly horrendous, forcing you to look over the top of it.

Clunk the five-speed lever left and back for first gear, do the usual balancing act with the racing clutch and away you go. With 2.2 turns between locks, the big wood-rim wheel responds quickly, although there is little grip at the tyres. With plenty of torque, the V12 is quickly into its power band.

Top speed is a frightening 190mph and 0-60mph takes 5.5 seconds. But braking and handling are of the 1961 variety, worse still with a full fuel load. Relax for a second and you'll be in the soup. Failing to plan a long way ahead is something you only do once. This may be a difficult car to master but the lasting positive memory is just how fabulous the Tipo 63 looks close up. Beautiful things, like beautiful people, are always forgiven. – Roberto Giordanelli

DRIVING THE BARCHETTA

The Barchetta looks a simple and neat machine as you drop down into it: two tartan race seats, two Sabelts, conventional instrument pod, tiny suede Momo wheel, Tilton pedal box and token windscreen. Starting up the 2.0-litre twin-turbo V6, it idles like a road car. Setting off, 1.2bar of boost is already available at 3500rpm and by 4250rpm maximum torque (373Nm) really flings the Barchetta along. 315bhp arrives at 6250rpm and as for top speed, that depends on which of the three final drives available you chose – between 170mph and 190mph.

The clutch is easy and the gear linkage works very positively in operating the six straight-cut gears. In motion, though, all you hear is deafening wind noise.

The rear wing is set to maxiumum downforce and the fully adjustable suspension is set up to understeer. Maintaining long sideways action for the photographers proves easy, though. The Barchetta's rear weight bias never turns mild power-induced oversteer into terminal oversteer and the quick (2.5 turns) steering is a delight, as are the huge Brembo brakes. – Roberto Giordanelli throughout the country, as well as hillclimbs abroad.

The launch of Ferrari's hypercar, the Enzo, was not initially expected to produce a competition version, but Maserati had other ideas. Some 13 years after the introduction of the Barchetta, the 2004 debut of the MC12 road car led rapidly to the development of a racing version, the Versione Competizione. Initially 25 Stradales were constructed in 2004, followed by a further 25 in 2005. In addition to these, 12 racing cars were made to compete in the FIA GT Championship, making a total of 62 MC12s in all.

Ferrari's Enzo provided the chassis but the MC12 was a whole lot more than just a different body mounted on a chassis from the Trident's erstwhile competitor down the road in Modena. For a start, it was a bigger machine than the Enzo in terms of height, width and length. It had been designed by Frank Stephenson, then director of Ferrari/Maserati Concept and Design, who had also been responsible for the 599 GTO amongst others.

The original thinking for the shape had been presented by Giorgetto Giugiaro, and both the Corsa and Stradale versions were subsequently developed side-by-side by Stephenson and Giorgio Ascanelli. The most noticeable difference between the two models was that the Corsa carried a prominent rear on-thedeck aerofoil, compared to the Stradale's which was mounted around the tail.

Power was supplied by the Enzo's 5998cc V12 F140 engine, which developed 621hp at 7500rpm in Stradale form and was fitted longitudinally. This was coupled to a six-speed automated manual gearbox that was very similar to the Enzo's but renamed Maserati Cambiocorsa. The bodywork was entirely in carbonfibre while the chassis was carbonfibre and Nomex with aluminium subframes at the front and rear to carry the suspension, which employed push-rods.

Debuting at Imola in 2004, the Corsa cars enjoyed a very long career at the top of FIA GT racing, winning the FIA GT Manufacturers Cup from 2005 to 2009 and topping that with the Drivers' and Teams' World Championships in 2010.

A spin-off project using the MC12 chassis was the Birdcage concept car produced by Pininfarina that debuted at the 2005 Geneva Show. This was built to celebrate the carrozzeria's 75th anniversary and carried over retro inspiration from the 1960 Birdcage racers, in particular the very long and flat windscreen.

The MC20 will be unveiled very soon, seemingly set to continue Maserati's epic mid-engined story, both on road and track. Look out for our full report in next month's issue.

DRIVING THE MC12

I pull open the driver's door, upwards and outwards on its intricate hinge, thread myself over the sill into the semi-racing, fully-harnessed seat. Here I am, strapped into a missile able to better 205mph, sprint to 62mph in 3.8 seconds and double that speed in 9.9.

Button pressed, engine idling impatiently like a dog clawing at the door, I pull the right-hand paddle for first gear. Accelerator down, 1335kg is seemingly converted to anti-matter as we achieve blast-off. Change up as the needle passes 7000rpm. Now I'm doing 150mph approaching a chicane. I brake, way too early, then flick-flick through the kink in second gear. Next time I brake later, and later, and still the enormous discs and callipers haul me down.

Do you know something? This is almost too easy; the steering is ultra-precise but also light, as are the brakes, despite their road-shredding bite. Although the long, banked curves feel as if they might nudge the MC12 into oversteer, it never happens. There's no sense of momentum with which to battle, no need to 'set the car up' for the corner; every tiny movement of steering and accelerator have an instant, proportional effect.

Then Andrea Bertolini, MC12 racer and Ferrari F1 tester, shows me how it should be done. We power-slide through the chicanes (very neatly, this is not a pendulous car) and Bertolini is in the groove, like a slot-racer. The nose follows its invisible groove and masses seem suspended, such is the bite and agility and eagerness to change direction. The MC12 screams louder than any DJ's sound system, the sandpapery shriek echoing back as if a Ferrari F1 car is on my tail, even though it's just us. – John Simister

Stella Alpina 2020

Mountain event marks the welcome return of classic rallying to Italy

Images: Canossa Events

ith a huge sigh of relief, the very first regularity rally for cars in Italy took place after the lockdown towards the end of June. The 35th Stella Alpina saw 70 teams – 23 in classic cars and 47 in moderns – get back behind the wheel again, in both a competitive event and a tourism category. Highly impressive was the number of Ferraris present: no fewer than 43.

The smiling faces and enthusiastic responses made it clear that everyone was delighted to be back on the road. Organised by Scuderia Trentina and Canossa Events, the safety of the participants was clearly evident.

Over three days through some of the most scenic routes and spectacular mountain passes in the Dolomites, drivers and passengers enjoyed some very challenging roads – even if there were fewer mountains than usual. There was plenty of hospitality to enjoy, too, notably at the Madonna di Campiglio, the 'Pearl of the Dolomites' high up in the Italian Alps.

Competitors faced time trials and average speed trials over a route covering around 300 miles. The first leg on Friday saw teams line up at Trento's airport before dashing off along the legendary Trento-Bondone road with its famous hairpin bends and 'endless' climb, then heading towards Lake Toblino, Terme di Comano, Tione, Valle Rendena and finishing the day at Madonna di Campiglio, a total of 115km.

Saturday's second leg was undoubtedly the most demanding, climbing up into the Dolomites on a complex route with many lesser-known mountain passes. The cars drove up to Campo Carlo Magno and Folgarida, dropping down into Val di Sole and Val di Non, before crossing Piana Rotaliana and climbing up again towards Cavalese and back down again into the Adige Valley. After crossing Passo Mendola, through Val di Non and Val di Sole, the teams returned to Madonna di Campiglio after 250km.

The final leg on Sunday saw crews head off towards Carisolo, through the Passo Duron, Val Lomasona, Passo Ballino and Lake Tenno, before finishing back at Trento after about 130km.

The winners were celebrated at an awards ceremony held in the spectacular setting of Villa Bortolazzi in Trento. Crew 31 (Mario and Roberto Crugnola) took the top place on the podium for classic cars in their 1971 Lancia Fulvia HF. Riccardo Roversi and Michele Bellini came second in their 1954 Fiat 1100/103 and also won the Trofeo Stella Alpina for pre-1957 cars. Michele Lafortezza and Ilaria Carturan secured third in their 1976 Lancia Fulvia Coupe. The award for the under-30 crew went to Ciro Agostini and Diletta Montagni in a 1963 Alfa Romeo Giulia 1600.

Giovanni Carretti and Antonella Furlan dominated the crews taking part, some in classic cars but most driving modern Ferraris.

Scuderia Trentina and Canossa Events decided to donate a large chunk of its budget to a foundation dedicated to autism. Luigi Orlandini of Canossa Events said: "We are very satisfied and even proud that we were the ones to get the ball rolling again for motoring events. I would like to thank everyone from the bottom of my heart who made the success of the event possible."

Fiorenzo Dalmeri of Scuderia Trentina, added: "This post-lockdown edition of the Stella Alpina was a rankings for modern Ferraris in their Ferrari 488 Spider, ahead of Enrico Zobele and Ivana Trentinaglia in their Ferrari 812 GTS and Fabio Vergamini and Maurizia Bertolucci in their Ferrari 488 GTB.

In the Average Speed Trials contest for classic cars, Andrea Giacoppo and Daniela Grillone Teciou came first in a 1965 Mercedes 230SL, while Enrico Zobele and Ivana Trentinaglia in their Ferrari 812 GTS won the modern cars class. The tourism formula was also judged to be a great success, with around 40 challenge for us and demanded a great deal of effort and courage, but we're so glad we did."

British participants Adrian and Ali Martin, who tackled the event in an Abarth 595, said: "For us as competitors it was a perfect way to celebrate the easing of the Covid lockdown and we enjoyed every moment of it. The route was very well planned with the dramatic scenery of the Dolomites and a nice balance between some challenging passes and some relaxing stretches."

Poltu Quatu Classic

Italy's Costa Smeralda hosted one of the first concours events of 2020

Images: DeglerStudio & Instaemotion

he fifth edition of the Poltu Quatu Concours d'Elegance took place in July 2020, with the spectacle of dozens of classic cars parading through the streets of the Costa Smeralda in Sardinia. The slogan of the event was "Make life sweet again" – an especially poignant phrase following this year's lockdown.

The concours jury was chaired by well-known car historian Paolo Tumminelli, who was joined by Giorgetto Giugiaro's son, the designer Fabrizio Giugiaro, who designed and manufactured the Best in Show trophy. Other jurors included Valentino Balboni, the legendary Lamborghini test driver, plus Ferrari expert Luciano Bertolero, Emmanuel Bacquet, Alberto Vassallo, J Philip Rathgen, Carlo Di Giusto, Alberto Scuro, Enrico Renaldini, Augustin Sebatié-Garat and Ted Gushue.

Friday saw the world premiere of the new Dora Bandini electric sports car prototype, designed by Giorgetto Giugiaro for Hyper 3 (pic right). This marks the rebirth of the historic Bandini marque, and is said to be merely the first in "an ambitious programme of historic brand revivals aimed at the collector market".

GFG Style (the design company set up by Giorgetto and Fabrizio Giugiaro) also brought along another prototype that was to have been shown at the cancelled Geneva Motor Show: the GFG Vision 2030.

The whole of Saturday saw a lengthy tour of the Costa Smeralda with its spectacular scenery. The cars ended up at the Vesper beach of Capriccioli, made famous by the movie The Spy Who Loved Me, where Roger Moore emerges in his Lotus Esprit from the crystal clear waters in the company of Barbara Bach. A drive-past of cars then took place in front of the jury at the Grand Hotel Poltu Quatu. On Sunday, participants enjoyed visits to historic towns in Sardinia, with a finale at the Li Neuli Country Club.

There were six concours classes in all. The winner of the 'Racing Legend' class was Edoardo Schon's Lancia Delta Martini Safari, as raced in the African Rally by two-time world champion Miki Biasion. It beat another Delta Martini driven by Miki Biasion, as well as Colin McRae's 2001 Ford Focus WRC racer (owned by former sailing Olympian Carlo Falcone).

The 'Mille Miglia' class was won by a 1947 Alfa

Romeo 6C 2500 Cabriolet Pininfarina that competed in the 1949 Mille Miglia. Brought to the concours by Mattia Colpani, it represented the height of elegance with its cabin decked out with a mother-of-pearl steering wheel and switchgear. The 'Spirit of 1000 Miglia' was awarded to the car that best represented the essence of the Freccia Rossa, the jury plumping for Enrico Bertone's Lancia Lambda Casaro which competed in the very first Mille Miglia race in 1927. Meanwhile Enzo Moroni's 1954 Osca MT4 Morelli won the Jury Prize.

A 1953 Lancia Aurelia B52 Roadster Vignale was voted the most glamorous car at the event, winning the 'Dolce Vita' class. Winning the Fiat Register prize was another 'dolce vita' era car: a Fiat 600 Jolly Multipla with Ghia bodywork, of which only 30 were made in 1961. Also present was a legendary Fiat 500 Spiaggina, redolent of summers spent in Sardinia by the international jet set such as Gianni Agnelli and Aristotele Onassis.

The 'Wonderful Coupes' class was won by a Ferrari 365 BB Pininfarina, while the ASI prize went to Mauro Milano's Lancia Flaminia Sport Zagato. The modern classics category, called 'Forever Young', went to the Porsche Carrera GT of Raul Marchisio.

Ferrari having won last year's Best of Show award, it was a close-run thing this year with a Ferrari, too, in the form of Scaglietti's masterpiece, the Ferrari 857 S, one of only three such racing cars produced in 1955. However the overall winner of the concours this year was the 1970 Porsche 917 LH – nicknamed 'psychedelic' because of its livery – driven by Gérard Larrousse and Willi Kauhsen in the 1970 Le Mans 24 Hours.

The organisers have said they are planning on a much bigger event in 2021 that will involve the entire Costa Smeralda, modelled on the Monterey Car Week idea. That means that Poltu Quatu Classic will become the concluding pinnacle of a whole series of events in Sardinia. It's set to take place in the first week of June 2021, following the Villa d'Este Concours d'Elegance.

FIAT X1/9

CHRIS FELL

Words by Steve Edwards Images by Autoholic Photography

hris Fell had always been interested in how things worked, he studied electronics in college, loved to tinker with stuff and built a couple of radio transmitters before going to work in a garage, doing welding and repairs for MOT failures. He then started his own auto electrics business. One of his customers had this 1987 1500cc X1/9 on his drive that wasn't running. Chris diagnosed the issues but also said that if he decided to sell, he would be interested.

A year passed before that call came. Chris went along armed with suitable parts and started the car right up and drove it away. He took it straight to an MOT station and it passed without issue, having covered only 33,000 miles. Chris drove it in standard trim for a while before deciding to add more power. He first added a K&N air filter, a pair of twin Weber 40 DCNF carbs, a sport cam and a performance head which he had gas flowed. This produced 150hp, some 65hp above standard.

Chris then got it resprayed in a gloss black, similar to the standard colour, before he uprated the brakes by adding the discs from a Fiat 500 and installing some Wilwood callipers. The engine and gearbox had to be removed for various reasons at least five times and it was after the last one that Chris wondered if there was a better way to increase both performance and reliability.

He discovered a company called Midwest Bayless Italian Auto, a family-run business in Ohio, which had developed a conversion kit for a Honda K20 engine. Chris saw a video of an X1/9 chasing a Ferrari down a mountain road, and a kit was duly ordered. Chris found a suitable engine and gearbox, complete with the loom and Kpro Hondata ECU on eBay.

The kit includes a wishbone subframe, engine and transmission mounts and a custom helm-jointed direction reversing shifter head complete with cabling. Some modification is required to the chassis, fuel pump location and engine bay cooling lines, so it's by no means one for the beginner.

The project was undertaken outside under a large plastic tarpaulin on a gravel surface. Chris Sutton at 1320werks was asked to fabricate, amongst other things, a bespoke three-inch exhaust from 316 stainless steel including silencer, a Screamer pipe and a manifold for the Owen Developments GBT turbocharger, which is currently running at 13psi.

The converted car was taken to Ricky at Racetech in Sheffield to have it mapped, this achieving 400hp at the flywheel. The stock Japanese internals were switched out for forged rods and pistons, the valve springs were uprated and matched for strength so that the engine could be meticulously balanced and the whole thing reassembled with ARP bolts. Ricky then had to fabricate a custom rig for the car as the Screamer pipe was at just the wrong spot for the webbing straps that hold it in place on the rolling road; they were melting from the heat.

Two aluminium radiators have been added up front, one to cool the air from the turbo and the second for engine coolant, which is transported to the rear of the car with a little help from a pump and metal tubing. The rear boot space has been taken over by the new engine and exhaust and the front storage area now houses the 35-litre, fully baffled fuel tank (but the removable hardtop can still be securely stowed here).

The original suspension has been replaced by a fully adjustable set-up from AVO that has been supplemented front and back with the addition of anti-roll bars and a strut bar. 15-inch Junk Rejekts wheels sit at each corner, 7.5J up front and 8J at the rear.

The Fiat seats have been replaced with a pair of Cobra items, the gauges have been swapped for a set from Speedhut, including a handy GPS speedo. Chris's one of a kind X1/g now has 4gohp at the flywheel and 430hp at the wheels.

FIAT PANDA

NIGEL COX

When company cars stopped being a thing in 2008 and an allowance was doled out instead (I know, lucky me), it seemed sensible (and profitable) to avoid the obvious temptation of a flash, high-depreciation car, and instead look for a low-cost replacement from my favourite car maker - Fiat.

So I traded my Merc (three years old and 127,000 miles) for a one-lady-owner 2006 Fiat Panda in Teseo Blue, with only 20,094 miles on the clock. We bashed up and down the motorways to work together (100-mile round trip) every day, with longer journeys as and when.

As it's a Multijet diesel, it often surprised other cars with its spirited acceleration in the mid-range. She would often manage 500 miles on a full tank (only 35 litres), despite proper motorway cruising speeds, so I was well happy.

I did sometimes hanker for a change, and after 18 months she was traded in for a sexy red Panda 100HP. The original Panda was always popular with the oldies (due to easy access), but the beautiful 100HP with rocksolid suspension definitely got a thumbsdown so I traced the blue Panda to a dealership in Wiltshire and the cars were swapped back over – and my second entry on the ownership documents was added.

Another six months saw me trade-in again for a nice grey Grande Punto (a little more comfy plus a lovely shape – a hint of Maserati around the grill). But gosh, we were down into mid-40s mpg – our fuel bill jumped by 50%! What to do? We swapped back to the blue Panda of course – and created the third entry on the V5.

Miles continued to clock up, with fab reliability, helped by excellent TLC (from Gareth at Northern Alfa Performance). After another year or so, the itch for a change came back again, prompted by hot weather and no air con, so in came a higher-spec Punto Eleganza, but not for long. A design fault with the wiring stopped the air con from reliably delivering the goodies, so back to the dealer and I slipped back into my familiar blue baby.

By now my four stints of ownership had become the running family joke but I really couldn't live without it – until my son Robert needed transport urgently and I volunteered my venerable blue Panda, now with 160,000 miles on the clock. My daily driver became – guess what – a mint condition yellow Panda (petrol). All was well, or so I thought.

Six months passed and the steadfast blue

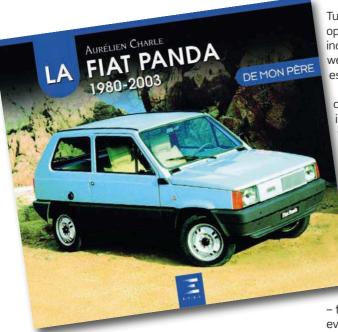

Panda was accidentally driven into deep water during exceptional rain and drowned. It was dried out, came back to life and carried on, albeit a bit smelly. This was soon followed by a problem with second gear (exuberant driving by my lad) so it needed a new gearbox. The potential cost dissuaded Rob from investing more money, so a trip to the scrapyard was discussed. This was breaking my heart, so I bought it back and became the proud owner for the fifth time!

The yellow Panda was quickly sold back to the dealer (he did enjoy seeing me every six months or so!), and my friendly expert Gareth installed a recon gearbox, and we both vowed to see her through 200,000 miles.

All has been well ever since, and my stalwart blue Panda sailed through 200k and is now past 206,000 miles. As I hope you can see, my brand loyalty is pretty robust. Dad ran a Fiat dealership during my childhood and I was always hooked. There have been other Fiats in the family (126, 128 and 3P Coupe), plus a continuing dalliance with a Fiat Coupe 16v Turbo and its famous Lampredi engine – rescued from becoming a parts car – but that's another story. I can't be separated from my blue Panda – here's to 250,000 miles!

BOOKSHELF

La Fiat Panda de Mon Père By Aurelien Charle ETAI £25

This is yet another tome from that prolific French publisher ETAI which has carved guite a niche with the 'de Mon Père' series of single-model books. It does not stick solely to French cars but also strays into foreign makes, for instance just reprinting its Fiat 500 book and have already having covered the Fiat 850, featuring some wonderful specials such as the Abarth OT2000 2.0litre 850 Coupe (but that is another story).

This latest French-text publication features the series one Fiat Panda, arguably the most characterful of three series of delightful models. Launched in March 1980 at the Geneva Motor Show, the little Giugiaro-designed car caused quite a stir with its utterly functional features and rustic charms, and despite being what one could hardly call pretty, the little gem took off, launched as it was with the tried 903cc pushrod engine from the Fiat 127 plus the vertical air-cooled twin from the 126, simply turned round for front-wheel drive.

This hardback is superb in its detail over 119 wellprinted pages and it covers the numerous, almost bewildering, variations that were available over the 23-year life of the model. Logically, in the main it's from the French market's point of view, with many adverts but also the special editions in various markets, including the UK. Many of the photographs are previously unseen and the author has obviously done an enormous amount of research over a long period. He has also looked at overseas production, such as the Seat Marbella along with its van variants, the Trans and Terra.

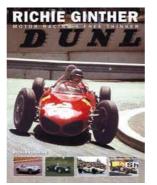

Special variations are also covered and, apart from well-known coachbuilders such as Moretti and Maggiora, the author has uncovered other hilarious 'specials', particularly from Germany, including a sixwheeled version. However, nothing eclipses the original Panda Strip developed by Giugiaro as one of two 4WD prototypes shown at the Turin Show in 1980. This open model is, incidentally, alive and well, living on Giugiaro's estate on Sardinia.

The various developments and improvements are dealt with in some detail, such as the greatly improved 'Omega' rear suspension of 1985. The author also covers the Elettra, the electric version of 1990, a brave and well-developed idea but which suffered from the perennial issue of battery life

- these needed changing every 22,000 miles! The other small problem was that the initial cost of the Elettra was three times that of a Panda 750. The author also gives credit to the Panda as the overlooked progenitor of the Lancia/Autobianchi Y10, the floorpan of which was developed post-1986 Panda.

Only the most eagleeyed will notice that on two of the six ghost drawings of the Panda superimposed on its competitors, the model names have been reversed. But this is totally trivial and it has to be said that this eagerly awaited book is nothing short of excellent. – Stefano Coprimozzo

Richie Ginther: Motor Racing's Free Thinker By Richard Jenkins Performance Publishing £27

We have been greatly looking forward to reading this book about a racing driver who has been poorly served by history. Richie Ginther was a well-known fixture on the West Coast road racing scene long before he headed to Europe. He often shone driving for Scuderia Ferrari, and his epic battle with Lotusmounted Stirling Moss during the 1961 Monaco Grand Prix aboard a 156 'Sharknose' is the stuff of legend. The future knight may have won, but Ginther pushed him to the flag.

However, what we loved about this book were the sections dedicated to what the Californian did after he hung up his helmet. Much has been written about Ginther since his death in 1989, and most of it is erroneous; not least that he eked out a meagre existence living out of a camper in Mexico. Far from being a bitter and pauperised dropout, he enjoyed a fruitful life. He did so away from the glare of publicity, and in arenas far removed from motor racing.

First-time author Jenkins deserves a pat on the back for this deeply personal – and revealing – biography. It's good value, too. – Richard Heseltine

Jochen Rindt: Uncrowned King of Formula 1 By David Tremayne Evro Publishing £14.99

Motorsport biographies are usually lush hardback affairs with plenty of colour photography. That's exactly what David Tremayne's original biography of Jochen Rindt was like when it was first published by Haynes in 2010. So it's something of a surprise to see it in reduced format as an A5sized paperback with only a handful of images in a centre colour section. The reason is that, on the 50th anniversary of the Austrian driver's death in 1970, Evro is making the book more accessible in paperback form.

Rindt was usually described as the fastest man on the race track. from scorching early form in Formula 2 to late dominance in Formula 1. His successes in Italian cars included a surprise win at the 1965 Le Mans 24 Hours in a NARTentered Ferrari 250 LM with Masten Gregory. and Formula 1 seasons with Cooper-Maserati from 1966. At the peak of his career in 1970, he tragically lost his life at Monza, four races before the end of the F1 season. Even so. his points tally was so high that became F1's one and only posthumous World Champion.

With a foreword by Rindt's close friend, Jackie Stewart, this is an entertaining, wellwritten book, even if we'd like to have seen more illustrations.

Alfa Romeo 2 pick up. 1960, 4800 miles, grey. Running classic truck, very rare, wonderful patina, complete and very original (better rear lights included), £18,000. Tel: 07973 711948. Email: edseymour@outlook.com (can be viewed in Shropshire). A296/031

Alfa Romeo 147 GTA 3.2 V6. 2004, 107,214 miles, red. Owned for 5 years, full service history, lots of receipts, belts changed 88,430 miles. Black leather interior immaculate, some minor blemishes to bodywork, good for age. Reluctant sale of real modern classic but need space for Spider project, MOT to 24/0g/20, will renew prior to sale, £7000 ono. Tel: Keith, 07540 170798. Email: kpchandler@gmail.com (Yorkshire). A296/029

2003 Alfa 916 Spider 3.2 V6 Phase 3. 1 of 38 UK RHD sold. 250bhp Busso V6, 6 spd manual box. Q2 diff, 68K miles, full MOT, Grigio Chiaro with excellent black leather, all original spec, excellent electric hood. New full belt service at Autolusso, new ECU, previous engine rebuild at 6oK. New brake discs and pads all round, suspension overhaul including new springs, spring pans, polybushed rear arms and more. Body braces, stainless steel OEM sound exhaust with sports cats and single outlet. Recent paint refresh so excellent all round, powder coated OEM Speedline Enzo 17" alloys with premium tyres, a sure investment that can be enjoyed, £14,950. Tel: 07966 913388 (Hants). A296/39

Much loved 2005 Alfa Romeo 147JTD 16v M-Jet 1.9 Turbo. 125K miles, we have owned the car for the last 13 years, it has good service history and a history file. Fast, economical, great handling and eminently practical, a future classic in good all round condition, original spec, never abused or molested. Great engine and perfect 6speed gearbox, unmarked interior, all panels are straight and rust free, original paint, everything works. The bad bits: the clutch does not slip but needs replacing as it does not release properly making the car very difficult to drive; the air con needs a new condenser (£100): the MOT expires on 20 August but has a 6 month extension after that date; a year ago another vehicle lightly bumped into the back of it at slower than walking speed, it slightly damaged the rear bumper so the insurance classed it as category N, does not affect anything so left as is. Too good to break for spares although there is a good profit to do so as everything is saleable (apart from the clutch and condenser), the car is located in Sunbury-on-Thames, 7 mins from M25 J12, £500, cash on collection, call Roberto Giordanelli to discuss. Tel: 07973 508132. A296/001

Alfa Romeo 939 Spider 2.2 JTS. 2010, silver, selling on behalf of my late husband, AROC member. 2.2 JTS semiautomatic Selespeed box, 19" Prodrive Brera S wheels. We bought it from Veloces in North London, but it was originally registered in March 2010 in County Kildare in Ireland, at some point it seems to have moved north of the border and acquired a Northern Ireland registration and then moved to the mainland. The current mileage is just under 49,000 and that seems to be in line with old MOT certificates, but those are in kilometres and the speedometer is now in mph, and Veloces have confirmed that it was when they took ownership. MOT to October, comes with a speed camera alert system, dash cam and Alfa car cover as well as Alfa mats and umbrella, £13,000. Email: woofers25@btinternet.com (Kent) A296/037

Alfa Romeo 159 Sportwagon TBi Lusso. 2012, red, one owner, FSH by Alfa dealers and specialist and 70K just carried out, new windscreen. A rare opportunity to purchase a fine example of one of the last 159s, £8000 ono. Tel: Peter Lloyd, 01264 860686 (Hampshire). A296/028

Alfa Romeo 166 3.0 Ti Sportronic. 2005, 190,000 miles, Nuvola Blue. 4 enthusiast owners, very good condition for age/miles, 18-inch Ti alloys (recently refurbished), black Momo leather and DSP audio. MOT January 2021, serviced (engine oil and all filters) less than 1K miles ago, front upper arms replaced @ 174K, cambelt kit Sept 2014 (@164K) incl spark plugs and aux belt kit. Air con not working (cabin fan does work), history on request, exhaust flexis March 2020. Reluctant sale, £2990 ono. Tel: Mike Basketter, 07739 974011. Email: mike@purple-jellyfish.co.uk (Peterborough). A296/032

Alfa Romeo GTV 3.0 V6. 2000, 54,000 miles, blue, lovely car, very reliable, drives and feels new to drive, very low miles. I don't drive it in the wet, I do around 1K or just over a year, it's totally standard, put 4 new springs on around 1.5 years back by Alfa specialist, just had recon alternator and wheels balanced and air con recharge, cambelt water pump was done 50K with major service. Everything works as it should, bodywork excellent, if you had a detail done would look even better, this car has got to be one of the top 10 standard Alfa V6s around, £9500 ono. Tel: Brian, 07414 803134. A296/023

Alfa Romeo GTV 3.0 V6. Year 2000, mileage 103K, extensive service history and original manual, colour AR659A Grigio Eclisse. 3 keys incl master, GTA clutch, flywheel and Q2 LSD, suspension: Koni Sport and Eibach springs, 17" teledial wheels refurbished with Pirelli P7 tyres, brakes 330mm Brembos, exhaust: Alfaholics sports cat with Wizard quad, Alfaholics sports shifter adapter, top mount brace and BMC CDA air filter, £6500 ono. Email: richardmorrill@ymail.com. A296/025

Alfa Romeo GTV Cup V6. 2001, 40,515 miles, red. I have decided to sell my GTV Cup no.73, she is a beautiful example of a modern classic and has been lovingly restored by AutoLusso with original parts where possible. There is lots of history which came when I bought her in 2016 (£16,000) as well as a pile of receipts from the recent mechanical restoration work (£10,000). She wants for nothing, is in excellent health, garaged during winter and the interior is immaculate, please contact me for details and photos, £15,995, offers. Tel: Darren Clement, 07839 180000. OBSCURATI CURIOSITIES FROM THE AMAZING WORLD OF ITALIAN CARS

Pininfarina MGB EX234

PININFARINA DESIGNED THIS GRACEFUL MGB REPLACEMENT IN 1964 BUT INSTEAD THE OLD 'B' LASTED FOR ALMOST TWO MORE DECADES

Story by Chris Rees Images by Bonhams

ininfarina was once the darling of the British Motor Corporation. As part of a general rush by the British car industry to Italian designers in the late 1950s and early 1960s, Austin had signed a lucrative contract with Battista Farina to create a whole string of new cars, from the A40 to the A55, and the 1100/1300 to the 1800/2200.

MG even got on board when Pininfarina got the contract to sort out the MGB GT, the fastback sister to the MGB roadster, which was universally liked. The Italian couturier was then courted when MG in Abingdon thought about its nextgeneration sports car, codenamed EX234, a car that had the potential to replace both the MG Midget and the MGB.

A new chassis was duly designed by MG, using double wishbone suspension all round, an Austin Champ rear axle, Hydrolastic damping and disc brakes on all four wheels. The 1275cc A-Series engine and gearbox were used but the idea was that the B-series engine could also fit just as well.

A rolling chassis was duly despatched to Pininfarina in Turin in 1964. Pininfarina was at the time in the throes of designing both the Fiat 124 Sport Spider and the Alfa Romeo Duetto. What it came up with for MG was something between the two: a delicate roadster with a low nose, cowled headlamps, small MG grille, very clean body sides and a sharp-edged Kamm tail.

Despite being shorter than the MGB, room inside was superior; there was even space for a couple of small rear seats. The dashboard used a clever symmetrical design so it would have been easy to make lefthand and right-hand drive versions (the prototype was RHD). Pininfarina's working car had not only a folding soft-top but also a hardtop, since a GT version was planned, too, while the exterior trim on either side was different (one style being for the GT, the other for the roadster).

EX234 was returned to the UK where the car was well received: it looked good, had a nice cabin, had excellent visibility and drove well. When it was tested by journalist John Sprinzel, he said it was, "beautifully flat and smooth through the corners, with none of the usual lurch".

However, no production future awaited the project. MG's existing sports cars were doing well in the marketplace, so the need for a replacement was not deemed pressing. The merger of BMC with Leyland in 1968 did the EX234 no favours, either. The sole car built was acquired in 1977 by the MG dealer, Syd Beer. Eventually the car was sold at auction by Bonham's in 2016 for £63,100.
