 Notes: The Millbrook Garden Club facilitated the 2019 submission of this garden's documentation.

Copperheads sits on a 40 acre property in the town of Washington located in Dutchess County, New York. The only evidence of a pre-existing garden was a lone Spirea atop the stone driveway wall and mauve peonies scattered throughout the site. The present owners adapted the old cow paths, building, and barn foundation into their garden.

The present garden began in 2001 when the Greek revival house was moved twelve feet during a major restoration project. The owners adapted sites utilized by the previous farmer owners, prompted by the 150-year old time capsule discovered inside a porch column during the renovation. On the foundation of what was once a storage barn, formal double perennial borders were constructed and enclosed by arborvitae hedges roughly following the outline of the barn. Stone steps lead down into the lower half of the garden, flanked by bronze mastiffs. In the center of the perennial garden is a lily pond. A secondary growth of trees was removed to open the view over the foothills of the Berkshires. To the north of the perennial garden, a pool backed by a Doric column pergola replaces the burnt remnants of an old cow barn. A fountain rests under the pergola smothered in Dutchman's pipe, a reference to the Dutch De Forest family that placed the time capsule in the house column. A cutting garden is located beyond the pool. To the west of the pergola on a steep slope, rubble from another building was uncovered. One side of the stone foundation remains functioning as a wall separating an upper path from a small pinery developed on the slope.

While constructing the house, a deep outhouse pit was uncovered revealing shards of Dutch clay pipes, clay storage jars, animal femurs, flower pots, and hand painted pottery. A boxwood parterre was planted on the outhouse site to be used as a vegetable garden. Before the gate is an iron arch topped with a copperhead snake to support a pair of weeping larch. Beside the carriage house is an apple orchard and fruit cage for growing blueberries. A stone pathway winds through a woods garden, complete with a wooden bench. The allee terminates at an urn and behind it grows a large Hydrangea.

In 2012, a teacup garden, called the "Pan Garden," was installed adjacent to the Daffodil Meadow to the right of the driveway. Boursault rhododendrons form a circle around a single Laburnum tree.

Persons associated with the garden include: William Losee (former owner, pre-1841); Isaac N. and Augusta A. De Forest (former owners, 1841-1856); Lawrence Barrow (former owner, 1856-1859); Robert F. and Caroline Johnson (former owners, 1859-1861); Rufus Fuller (former owner, 1861-1878); John Buckley (former owner, 1878-1917); Daniel Buckley (former owner, 1817-1923); Edgar V. Anderson (former owner, 1923-1945); Margaret Middleton (former owner, 1945-1948); Laurence J. Colwell (former owner, 1948-1959); Alfred F. and Rose Rizzolo (former owners, 1959-1972); Irving Gelman (former owner, 1972-1976); Robert Goodstein and Jeanne Goodwin (former owners, 1976-present); Daryl Corsi (stonemason, 2001-2008); Werner Horst (metal artist, 2008-2012); Amy Pelletier Clark (Horticulturalist, 2010-present).

NY161: East Hampton -- Dubose-Eliel Garden

Former owner: Close, Chuck, 1940-

Provenance: Garden Club of East Hampton

Notes: The folder includes worksheet and site plans.

The property was covered in blacktop from the road to the studio in 1975. The paving was removed and borders around the pool fence were double-dug and planned predominantly as perennial gardens with some shrubs, vines, and annuals. After a trip to Williamsburg, former owners planted boxwood at the front steps and wisteria over the door. A "kitchen garden," and shade garden were also added.

Persons and firms associated with the garden include: Mr. and Mrs. Chuck Close (former owners, late 1970s); Ms. Jill Keefe and John Klos (former owners, ?-mid. 1980s); and Francis Fleetwood (architect, ca. 1985).

NY103: East Hampton -- Grey Gardens

Former owner: Hill, Anna Gilman
Hill, Robert Carmer
Beale, Edith Ewing Bouvier, 1895-1977
Beale, Edith Bouvier, 1917-2002

Landscape architect: Dean, Ruth, 1889-1932

Notes: The folder includes worksheets and photocopies of articles, photographs, and other information about the house and garden.

Grey Gardens, which dates to about 1913, was the seaside summer cottage home of Anna P. Gilman Hill and Robert Carmer Hill, who also owned Niederhurst (NY580). The four-acre property featured an enclosed 75-by-40-foot garden as well as other landscape elements. Although Anna Gilman Hill, author of Forty Years of Gardening, was responsible for much of its planning and upkeep, she also worked with landscape architect Ruth Dean. Under the ownership of Edith Ewing Bouvier Beale ("Big Edie") and her daughter Edith Bouvier Beale ("Little Edie") of "Grey Gardens" film and Broadway musical fame, the gardens became overgrown, but the current owners, who acquired the property in 1979, have successfully undertaken a complete restoration of the house and grounds.

Persons associated with the property include: Robert Carmer Hill and Anna P. Gilman Hill (former owners, c. 1913-1930); Ruth Dean (landscape architect, c. 1913-1930); Edith Ewing Bouvier Beale (former owner, c. 1930-1977); and Edith Bouvier Beale (former owner, 1977-1979).

Grey Gardens related holdings consist of 1 folder (5 lantern slides; 8 slides (photographs))

NY518: East Hampton -- Judith and Gerson Leiber Gardens

Garden designer: Leiber, Gerson August, 1921-

Owner: Leiber, Gerson August, 1921-
Leiber, Judith

Notes: The garden file includes a cataloging worksheet, an articleine, and 4 35mm slides.

The original land, purchased circa 1970, was less than two acres with a modest house was meant to be a vacation home. The flat rectangular lot had been used as a dump and took two years to clear; the task of creating order evolved into creating a formal parterre garden with brick walkways, extensive treillage and hedges, a potager, and rose gardens. Primarily French in design the formal garden was laid out on a central axis with asymmetrical radiating paths with a Greek herm placed at one end of the axis. Three more acres were acquired; yew hedges were planted since there were no walls, in addition to the clipped boxwood hedges of the parterres. The property features a woodland modeled on English parks, swimming pool, dovecote and other sculptures placed throughout the garden rooms

Persons associated with the garden include Gerson Leiber (owner and garden designer, 1970s -); Judith Leiber (owner, 1970s -).

 Provenance: Garden Club of East Hampton
 Photographer: Godfrey, Durell
 Holmes, Anita
 Owner: Johnson, Gretchen
 Johnson, James

Garden designer:	Fensterer, Victoria Craig, Socia Warren, Catherine
Architect:	Neuman, Frank Eaton
Notes:	The Garden Club of East Hampton facilitated the 2022 garden documentation. Nid de Papillion is located on the crest of the secondary dune within the Atlantic Double Dunes, a unique natural phenomenon stretching for two miles along East Hampton, New York's seashore. Established in 1918, the 7.79 acre property borders the golf course at the Maidstone Club, and features a historic oceanside garden, specimen trees, and meadows. Today this unique garden is not easily categorized. It is significant as a rare survivor of the Great Estates era, but also for the current owners' having realized visionary design ideas overlaid on to the original 1918 historic garden plan. Over the years they have made new additions to walls, brick paths and trails among other features, let alone elaborate plantings and a series of whimsical, named garden spaces. The main house serves as a backdrop to the historic gardens which are designed to accommodate outdoors family gatherings. The oceanside grass terrace provides a view of an ever-changing panorama of dunescape and ocean. For quiet conversation, the Secret Garden features changing drifts of colorful flowering plants in two deep perennial borders along the brick walls. Historically, the Secret Garden's centerpiece was an Irish medieval church Christening font, now replaced by a swimming pool, in the Classic Roman style. The brick walls offer a sheltered growing environment where elsewhere in the landscape, winds off the ocean and salt air are destructive. In front of the house, a large lawn is interrupted at the East near the long driveway with a balloon shape planting bed of annual and perennial flowering plants and two similar beds at West. At the edges of the property and either side near the front of the house are a few evergreen trees. The house is situated on a grass terrace system with a triple brick steps system leading up from the driveway. On either side of the steps are two pairs of Alberta spruce providing emphasis to the enfilade up to the front door. On the lower terrace at driveway level, rows of Catawba rhododendron bushes make for a pretty display of blooms in early Spring. The large Tudor style house with a false thatched roof was designed by architect Frank Eaton Neuman (1877-1957) in 1917. Robert Appleton and his second wife Katherine (1877-1949) named their house and garden Nid de Papillon, French for Butterflies Nest. Historically the area was known for its annual swarm of Monarch butterflies migrating along the dunescape of Long Island because of the goldenrods that grew all the way to New York city. Persons associated with the garden's design: Carol Margardina (pot designer for Larkspur and Thyme, 1985-), Catherine Warren

 Creator: Garden Club of East Hampton
 Notes: Slide lecture booklet - "Small gardens and terraces" - Slide # 100. Finally, the first prize awarded to the Garden Club of East Hampton, Long Island. Tuberous-rooted begonias (started in the house in flats of peat moss and sand in February or March) are planted in the semi-circular beds in June and bloom profusely until frost. Behind them is a white phlox, constantly clipped honeysuckle growing on a wire fence and a lovely pale pink Rose of Sharon. These flower beds contain the spring bulbs of narcissus, tulips, scilla, etc. and the begonias, which are shallow rooted, are set out right over the bulbs.

Colorful romantic, English-style garden in Derby, New York (near Buffalo), designed by Mrs. Spencer Kellogg in 1904. It is thought that Ellen Shipman planned the color scheme of the perennial gardens. She visited the garden in the 1930s with Mrs. Harold Estey and told Mrs. Estley that it was "the finest, formal garden in America." According to Mrs. Spencer Kellogg II, 'Grandma Kellogg' had a German head gardener to take directions on what to put in or take out of the garden. It took five men to take care of the flower gardens and the yew hedges alone. Garden features included statues from Europe and a tea house. There were many dances and concerts in the garden and for parties, it was lit with Japanese lanterns.

The images were provided to Eleanor Weller by Mary Lou Kellogg (Mrs. Spencer Kellogg, II) of the North Country Garden Club.

NY1183: Fishers Island -- Oakes-Howard Garden on Fishers Island, The

NY118: Fishers Island -- The Oakes-Howard Garden on Fishers Island
Former owner: Oakes, Elinor R.
Architect: Righter, James Volney
Landscape: Race Rock Garden Company
Property maintenance: Z & S Construction
Provenance: Garden Club of Hartford
Notes: The folder includes worksheets, historical information and images of Fishers Island, and photocopies of garden and building plans.
The 5.27 acre island property has been owned by one family since the mid-1960s, the clapboard beach house was finished for occupancy in 1972, and since then the house and garden have been modified and expanded. The original flower garden had four sections of perennials and annuals enclosed by a wire fence to keep out rabbits. Red poppies grew wherever the seeds landed. When a bedroom wing was added to the square house the flower beds were relocated to two large raised beds now planted each year with colorful annuals. Foundation plantings include trimmed boxwood, hydrangeas, butterfly bush, beach rose, day lilies, rose of Sharon, and ornamental grasses that are suited to the island's climate. Garden work is kept to a minimum because the house is rented during the summer and the island has water use restrictions. When a house was built nearby that could have spoiled the view a berm was built and planted, and West Harbor of Long Island Sound can still be seen from the decks and from a cupola on the house that has a 360 degree view.
Persons associated with the garden include Elinor Righter Oakes (former owner, 1965-2001); James Volney Righter (architect, 1971-1999); Race Rock Garden Company (garden design, planting and maintenance, 1971-); Z&S Construction (house and deck maintenance, 1971-).
The Garden Club of Hartford facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

NY871: Glen Cove -- Matinecock

Architect: Innocenti & Webel
 Provenance: North Country Garden Club of Long Island
 Notes: The folders include a work sheet and site plan.
 This half acre garden was established in 1986. The owners wanted to incorporate shrubs and plants that they propagated from a previous residence. Climbing roses were located near the front entrance and were selected for fragrance and continuous bloom. A small parterre garden is located beside the entrance path and beneath the kitchen window. A tiered boxwood topiary is located in the center. The owners chose many of the plants for year round interest.
 Persons and organizations associated with the garden include: Alice R. Ireys (landscape architect, 1986); and Innocenti and Webel (architect).
 Matinecock related holdings consist of 1 folder (9 35 mm. slides)
 Garden featured in Alice R. Ireys, Burpee Designs for American Gardens, 1991.

NY083: Glen Cove -- The Braes

Landscape architect: Pendleton, Isabella

Greenleaf, James L., 1857-1933

Former owner: Pratt, Herbert Lee, 1871-1945

Architect: Brite, James

Notes: 1 glass lantern slide and 3 35mm slides (2 reproductions from Nassau County Museum and 1 35mm copy of a lantern slide). 1 folder includes copies of excerpts from many publications.

See the Nassau County Museum Reference Library for images of The Braes taken by Mattie Edwards Hewitt in 1925 and the Library of Congress for an image (LC-J717-X110-222 [P&P]) taken by Frances Benjamin Johnston. See also the Lewis and Valentine Company Records.

The approach to The Braes (Scottish for hillside) was lined with rows of large maple trees with under plantings of pachysandra and thickly interspersed with blue bells of scilla campanulata. Other plantings included Douglas firs clipped flat on the top and sides, a wisteria that climbed to the roof of the house, azaleas and pink dogwood on either side of brick steps leading down to an iris garden, superb boxwood, and an allee of hemlock. The garden featured several examples of sculpture by Paul Manship and bronze by A. Philminster Proctor. The formal terraced gardens were originally designed by James Greenleaf. Later, Isabella Pendelton made changes and designed the iris garden.

Persons associated with the garden include Herbert Pratt (former owner), Webb Institute for Naval Architecture (owner), James L. Greenleaf (landscape architect, 1912), James Brite (architect, 1912), Paul Manship (sculptor), A. Philminster Proctor (sculptor).

Garden featured in "American Landscape Architecture" edited by P.H. Elwood, Jr. (1924); "The Architectural Record," vol.XLVII, no.V, May 1920; "American Society of Landscape Architects: Illustrations of Work of Members" (The House of J. NY361: Harriman -- Arden House
 Former owner: Harriman, Edward Henry, 1848-1909
 Harriman, W. Averell (William Averell), 1891-1986

Landscape architect: Wadley & Smythe
 Architect: Carrère & Hastings
 Notes: The folder includes a worksheet and part of a brochure describing the conference center.
 Arden House sits on land in Orange County, New York, originally purchased by Edward Henry (E.H.) Harriman in 1885, atop a ridge with the valley of the Ramapo River on one side and the Forest and Cranberry lakes on the other. The house was designed by architects Carrere & Hastings, with landscape architecture by Wadley & Smythe. Harriman's son, W. Averell Harriman, was given the house by his widowed mother in 1915. Following use by the Navy in World War II, the house was given to Columbia University in 1950. It became a National Historic Landmark in 1966 and is now used as a conference center.
 Persons and firms associated with the property include: Edward Henry (E.H.) Harriman (former owner, 1885-1909); W. Averell (William Averell) Harriman (former owner, 1915-1950); Wadley & Smythe (landscape architects); and Carrere & Hastings (architects).

NY100: Huntington -- Fort Hill House

Notes: According to the Bulletin of The Garden Club of America (July 1931), the grounds of Fort Hill were designed by the Olmsted Brothers landscape architectural firm in 1885 [sic]. (The Olmsted Brothers firm was a successor to landscape architect Frederick Law Olmsted and was established in 1898.) The Olmsted Brothers firm is credited with the design of Fort Hill's landscape c. 1938 in 'Ellen Shipman and the American Garden' by Judith B. Tankard (University of Georgia Press, 2018, pg. 249). The Master List of Design Projects of the Olmsted Firm 1857–1979 (National Association for Olmsted Parks and the National Park Service), however, does not indicate a listing for Fort Hill under the names of the estate's first three owners, Anne Coleman Alden, William J. Matheson, or Willis Delano Wood.

The rose garden was designed by Ellen Shipman according to 'Ellen Shipman and the American Garden' by Judith B. Tankard (University of Georgia Press, 2018).

The pair of gingko trees planted by the Olmsted firm are the parents of all gingko trees on Long Island (the source for this citation is unidentified).

Landscape designer: Farrand, Beatrix, 1872-1959

Olmsted Brothers

Former owner: Kahn, Otto Hermann, 1867-1934

Provenance: Blue, Frances

Nurserymen: Lewis & Valentine Company

Architect: Delano & Aldrich

Notes: The folder includes worksheets and photocopies of articles.

Oheka was the grandest estate of its time in Cold Spring Harbor on Long Island's North Shore, styled after French farmhouses but with 126 rooms. The house was designed by architects William Adams Delano and Chester Holmes Aldrich in circa 1921. In 1917 the Olmsted Brothers planned the grounds of the 443-acre estate, which included the entrance drive bordered by red cedars, the golf course, and extensive bridle paths. It took two years to move the earth and build up a rise on which the house was sited. A distinctive parterre in front of the house was comprised of eight reflecting pools to show the changing sky and surrounding mountains, with grass borders. In 1919 Adele Wolff Kahn commissioned Beatrix Farrand to design more intimate spaces, including a Dutch garden, an octagonal garden, a rose garden and a water garden. The formal Dutch garden enclosed by vine-covered brick walls displayed tulips and flowering trees in the spring, in parterre beds separated by brick walks laid out in a herringbone pattern. The octagonal fragrance garden featured yellow and purple pansies followed in summer by lavender, nepeta and pink carnations. Farrand's designs were formal and highly detailed to the extent that each week's blooms could be anticipated.

Garden features included greenhouses, an orangery, a croquet lawn, stables, pools and tennis courts. Courtyards at the house featured single mature trees supplied by the Long Island nursery, Lewis & Valentine. The estate was too costly to maintain and the gardens were destroyed in 1948. A partial restoration and conversion to a hotel in the 1980s reinstalled the Olmsted Brothers landscape designs but not Farrand's.

Persons associated with the garden include Otto H. Kahn and Adele Wolff Kahn (former owners, 1914-circa 1934); Eastern military Academy (former owner), Gary Melius (former owner), Olmsted Brothers (landscape architects, circa 1917); Beatrix Farrand (landscape designer, 1919-1928); Lewis & Valentine (nurserymen, circa 1928); William Adams Delano & Chester Holmes Aldrich (architects).

Owners: United States. National Park Service

Roosevelt-Vanderbilt National Historic Site

Provenance: Garden Club of Orange and Dutchess Counties

Notes: The folder includes plant lists, plan views of historic plant material, a plan view for garden border restoration with plant lists and locations, the Winter 1998 newsletter of The Garden Conservancy; a copy of Hudson Valley magazine featuring an article about the garden, a description of proposed renovations, a brochure and an Archives of American Gardens worksheet.

"Bellefield is an enclosed formal garden designed by Beatrix Farrand in 1912. An example of the Arts and Crafts style, the garden links the adjacent house to the surrounding landscape with a highly architectural form which shifts from detailed built forms to simple living forms as one moves away from the house. Field stone walls and a grouping of Black Locust trees reference the areas of early Dutch settlements, while forced perspective and Beaux Arts poché allude to the highest European design traditions."

"House and structure layout of enclosed garden largely unchanged since 1911."

"The National Park Service executed a Historic Structure Report which includes a great deal of information on the site and its owners, but little on the Beatrix Farrand Garden. A small collection of reference materials relating to the garden (including historic photographs) is held by the National Park Service at Roosevelt-Vanderbilt National Historic Site."

Persons and organizations associated with the property include: Thomas and Sarah Newbold (former owners); Gerald and Mary (Newbold) Morgan (former owners); Gerald Morgan (former owner); the National Park Service, Roosevelt-Vanderbilt National Historic Site (present owners); Beatrix Farrand (landscape architect, 1912); and McKim, Mead and White (architects that remodeled the 18th century house, 1909-1911).

Former owner: Thorne, Landon K.

Notes: [Thorneham]

The Admiralty holdings consist of 1 file with 8 35 mm. slides (photographs), work sheets, copies of contemporary (ca. 2007) aerial photos of the property, correspondence, and other information.

The estate is composed of a series of gardens over 99 acres, ranging from a woodland setting with ponds to formal gardens and marshlands. It incorporates a series of ponds and waterfalls, lawns, and both walled and terraced gardens. There is also a Japanese garden. The original design of the estate, known as Thorneham, was planned by Vitale and Geiffert ca. 1925. Umberto Innocenti of Innocenti & Webel completed the plantings ca. 1930. After the death of Julia Stimpson Thorne in 1974, the estate was turned into a residential community of 159 town homes and one free-standing home from the original estate. The central "core" gardens and landscaping were retained and are extant as of 2007.

Persons and organizations associated with the garden include: Landon K. Thorne and Julia Stimpson Thorne (former owners, 1924-1974); the Jerry Kramer Company (former owner, 1976); the Homeowners Association at The Admiralty (owners, 1977-present);

William F. Dominick (architect, 1926); Ferruccio Vitale (landscape architect, 1926-1932); Alfred Geiffert, Jr. (landscape architect, 1926-1932); Umberto Innocenti (landscape architect, 1933-?); and Hermann F. Schulz (landscape architect, 2006).

Images are also located in the Samuel H. Gottscho Collection, Avery Architectural and Fine Arts Library, Columbia University; and in the Frances Loeb Library, Harvard University School of Design. Four images from the latter collection are included in the Library of Congress's online American Memory Collection.

NY299: Islip -- Twyford
 Former owner: Webster, Charles D., d. 1998,
 Webster, Natalie Peters
 Landscape architect: Weber, Nelva M.
 Notes: The folders include work sheets, a 1963 description of the garden by Charles D. Webster, a garden plan, a map of the area, and a copy of an article about the property.

Twyford was the home of Charles D. and Natalie Peters Webster on the south shore of Long Island. Although the entire property encompassed nearly 200 acres, the gardens, house, and outbuildings were confined to 10 acres, which in turn was part of a 30-acre tract of open fields, marshland, and woods. The Websters began gardening in 1936, when they moved to the late 19th-century house. Formal beds and paths and other designs were complemented by a greenhouse, potting house and tool shed, and an octagonal lathhouse. Other features included a swimming pool, extensive borders and planting of broad-leaved evergreens, lawns, a waterfowl pool, and a farmyard. The property was given by the Websters to the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in 1968 (with life tenancy). The house and other buildings were demolished in 2002 despite the efforts of several preservation groups to save them.

Persons and organizations associated with the property include: Charles D. Webster (former owner, d. 1998); Natalie Peters Webster (former owner); and Nelva M. Weber (landscape architect, c. 1960-1973).

Twyford related holdings consist of 2 folders (18 35 mm. slides; 2 120 mm. slides; 29 photoprints; 143 negatives)

Provenance: North Country Garden Club of Long Island

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet, maps of slide locations, two photographic color prints, and garden plans.

Kirby Hill had its formation at the beginning of the twentieth century. The colonial revival movement reflected some of its early structures. The pool house with its slate roof is a copy of the octagonal Georgian arsenal at Williamsburg. The columns near the pool and pool house came from the Sampson Building on Wall Street (now demolished), which was owned by a direct ancestor of the present owners. The fruit tree orchard below the house was among the original plantings when the house was built.

Persons and firms associated with the garden include: Joseph Sampson Stevens (former owner, 1902 - 1935); Byam Kerby Stevens (former occupant and co-trustee, 1935 - 1940); Warren and Wetmore (architects, ca. 1900-1902); Umberto Innocenti (landscape architect, ? - 1940); Innocenti and Webel (landscape architects, 1952 - present); Donald K. Pollitt (landscape architect, 1952 - present); David H. Engel (landscape architect, 1990); Landgarden (landscape architects, 1999 - present); Henry Otis Chapman (architect, 1935 - 1937); and John A. Dunning (architect, 1967).

The North Country Garden Club of Long Island facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Provenance: Bedford Garden Club
Owner: Lewis, Diane Designer: Tomlinson, William Brierly
Shulz, Hermann
Brady, Sheila
Innocenti & Webel
Photographer: Michaelis, Peter T.

Notes: The Bedford Garden Club facilitated the documentation of this garden in 2021.

This 7 ½ acre property established in 1995 is defined by its vast grass lawns and native plantings that engulf the space in a sea of greens and yellows. On either side of the house are an in-ground pool, a vegetable garden, and fenced grass area leading to a large barn. Many non-native plants were replaced with natives in the creation of this garden, in order to enhance both biodiversity and aesthetics in an economical manner. Originally, 3 foot tall green velvet lined the entrance to the house, while 6 foot tall boxus sempervirens stood on either side of the door. Other non-native species replaced on the property were blue girl holly, miss Kim lilac, cystisus scoparius moonbeam, and rhododendrons.

Where these species once lived is now the setting for the owner's Native Garden that was intentionally kept low to allow for more visibility to the rest of the garden and increased light into the house. The plants closer to the house are slightly higher while the beds toward the Auto Court are lower. A low stone wall now defines the entrance to the Auto Court. Inside the stone wall are asters, coreopsis, switchgrass, and geranium macrorrhizum. The front of the house features hydrangea arborescens and itea virginica, amsonia tabernaemontana, iris cristata, and penstameon tubuloflorus. Monarda, asters, and coreopsis line the courtyard wall while asclepias and echinacea are planted near the garage. The property's major plantings include Appalachian Spring and perennials such as "blue ice", "ice ballet", "eco blue bird," and "green jewel."

Persons associated with the garden include: Diane Lewis (owner, 1995-present); William Brierly Tomlinson (designer [house and barn], 1995/2000); Hermann Shulz (designer, 1995/2000); Sheila Brady (designer, 2017) Innocenti and Webel (designer co., 1995/2000); Peter T. Michaelis (photographer)

NY315: Lake Placid -- Church Garden on the Hart Property

Former owner: Wasserberger, Maximillian Dr. Mrs.

Architect: Coulter, W. L.

Provenance: Essex County Adirondack Garden Club

Notes: Church Garden on the Hart Property related holdings consist of 1 folder (11 35 mm. slides; 2 photoprints), a worksheet, garden plans, and additional narrative documentation about the garden and church site.

Located on the original site (1899-1927) of "St. Eustace-by-the-Lakes" church, this nearly half-acre garden site was originally landscaped sometime after 1927. By 1972, however, when the area and an adjoining property were acquired by the present owners, there was no evidence of a garden. Slowly, original flagstone surfaces were unearthed, stone walls restored, gardens dug, and flowers planted, re-creating a sunken garden within the stone walled perimeter. Open to the public, the garden is designed in a cruciform shape and is surrounded by natural woodlands. A curving stone stairway leads from the house above to a shady lawn, while 18 inches below, the old flagstone terrace is framed by ostrich and maidenhair ferns, rhododendrons, and hosta, and enlivened by tuberous begonias. The garden also includes a flagstoned "bell tower" section and a curious "center stone" that may have been a support for the original church floor. Episcopal Church services are held once each summer, transforming this church garden into a garden church.

Persons associated with the property include: Dr. and Mrs. Maximillian Wasserberger (former owners, before 1972) and W. L. Coulter (architect, 1890s).

The Adirondack Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

NY978: Latham -- The Gardens at Pruyn House
 Former owner: Van Rensselaer, Stephen III
 Pruyn, Casparus
 Mayall, Alfred
 Henkes, John L.
 Henkes, John J.
 Provenance: Fort Orange Garden Club
 Notes: The folder includes worksheets, histories of the property and owner families, brochures, garden club notes and records, and photocopies of articles.
 The late Federal/early Greek Revival Pruyn House has public gardens planted and maintained by two garden clubs, the Fort Orange Garden Club, designers of the cutting and habitat gardens, and the Blue Creek Garden Club, which installed and maintained the herb garden until 2009. The gardens feature continuous bloom for the enjoyment and education of the public and to provide plant materials for arrangements in Pruyn House. Traditional annuals and perennials have been propagated elsewhere by members of the garden committee, and they also conduct trial plantings of new or unusual varieties of flowers. The herb garden is arranged formally in rectangular and curved beds around a central circular bed with a sundial. Originally the cutting garden had 14 rectangular beds in a 40 by 80 foot plot with the historic tool shed, which has been renovated. The planting scheme has been modified over the years to remove varieties that were not suited to the sandy soil or the severe winters. The plants are labeled and a comprehensive list is located in the tool shed for the garden's visitors. The habitat garden was created in 2007 to attract monarch butterflies, and features milkweed and brightly colored annuals and perennials.

The original 700 acre property was acquired in 1632 from Native American tribes by Kiliaen Van Rensselaer (b.1580-d.1643) of Holland. There were tenant farmers on the land until 1846 when New York State outlawed the feudal land tenancy system. Over the years the size of the property has been reduced but the land continued to be farmed and gardened by subsequent owners. In 1983 the property was purchased by the Town of Colonie and was placed on the National and State registers of Historic Places in 1985.

Persons associated with the garden include: Stephen Van Rensselaer III (former owner, 1785-1839); Casparus Pruyn (former owner, 1839-1846); Alfred Mayall (former owner, 1849-1866); John L. Henkes (former owner, 1866-1893); John J. Henkes (former owner, 1893-1966); Sid Bailey (former owner, 1966-1981); Fort Orange Garden Club (garden designers and gardeners, 1988- present); Blue Creek Garden Club (herb garden designers and gardeners, 1987-2009).

Fort Orange Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Provenance: Three Harbors Garden Club

Landscape architect: Webel, Jane

Photographer: Fuchs, Bessie Stout

Notes: 32 digital images (2021, 2023) and 1 folder.

Three Harbors Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation in 2023.

In 1964 eight acres of woodlands overlooking Cold Spring Harbor of the Long Island Sound were purchased with the intention of building a "house surrounded by a garden". The bones of their garden were laid out with professional help, and the house was built on the same plane as a mature red oak tree. Original trees and shrubs were retained as much as possible. These included laurel, arbutus, shad blow, holly, dogwood and American chestnut. Around the house and along pathways into the woods flowering trees and shrubs including rhododendron, azalea, camellia, and magnolia were planted. The woodlands were enlarged when five additional acres were added to the property and the gardens enlarged with specimens and cuttings from neighbors. Plants were "rescued from the bulldozer" as surrounding estates were broken up for redevelopment. Springtime bloom is considered the peak season although the gardens continue to thrive all year, with winter jasmine planted along steps to the pool. There is good drainage and glacial till soil although the property slopes in three directions.

His and her greenhouses were added to the house for orchids, seed propagation, and plant storage in winter. A glass garden room built over a terrace has a small pond with a bubbling fountain and many potted plants making a year-round garden within the house. An English oak planted at the top of the driveway was grown from an acorn imported from a family estate.

Dogwood declined due to extreme acidity while 30-foot-tall American chestnut were lost to the chestnut blight. Currently deer predation is a problem despite the addition of a seven-foot fence.

Persons associated with the garden's design: Jane Webel, Landscape Architect (1964); Jan Pratt, horticulturist and gardener.

 Provenance: North Country Garden Club of Long Island

Notes: The folders include worksheets, site plans (one with a plant list), photocopies of an article about the garden, and additional information.

Lying on 3.2 acres adjacent to a marsh and creek, this site is highlighted by a Japanese-influenced 40' x 80' iris garden that also includes features of a cottage garden in keeping with its location by a low, rambling house. Designed in the early 1980s by Nancy B. Taylor of the landscape architecture firm Innocenti & Webel, the garden replaced what was formerly an asphalt driveway. Running the length of the garden are a dry riverbed and path, accented by two small bridges. Although there is no actual water in the garden, the use of different plants helps to simulate that effect. In addition to this garden, the site includes more natural areas with marsh and water views, as well as a swimming pool and herb garden.

Persons and firms associated with the property include Nancy B. Taylor (landscape architect, 1981); Mr. and Mrs. C. Gachot (former owners, 1956-1981); and Innocenti & Webel (landscape architects, 1981).

The North Country Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

The folder includes a worksheet, landscape plans, a map, copies of articles, and copy of a statement by Mr. Cattier.

This property in the village of Matinecock (part of Locust Valley, New York) was originally a chicken farm, which continued until the early 1900s. A pond fed by two springs was said to be in existence since the middle of the 18th century. The original farm house, built in 1769, is now the central part of the present residence. The house had become the gardener's cottage when Anton G. Hodenpyl bought the property and named it "Hill House." The areas, except for the back of the cottage, were planted with white pine and locust, with exceptions of the primrose garden and an experimental rock garden. Mr. Jean Cattier bought the property in 1937 and gradually re-created the garden. He also renamed the property "Locust Valley." Only the large trees and some azaleas remained. The Cattiers introduced Gable and Glenn Dale azaleas, Dexter rhododendrons, ferns, and rare bushes. The current owners have named the property "Joslin."

Persons and organizations associated with this garden include: Anton G. Hodenpyl and Annie P. Hodenpyl (former owners, 1900s-1937); Jean Cattier (former owner, 1937-1990); Mrs. Jean Cattier (former owner, 1990-1995); Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Arthur (former owners, 1995-1996); H. Edwards Ficken (architect, early 1900s); Alfred Shaknis (architect, 1962); Ossian C. Simonds (garden designer, early 1900s); Edward Wood (superintendent, early 1900s); Herbert Durand and Bernard Harkness (sculptors of rock and wild garden, early 1900s); Alex Johnson (gardener and superintendent, 1937-1962); Willet Titus (gardener and superintendent, 1962-1995); Alan Rosen (horticulturist, 1996-present); Innocenti & Webel (landscape architects, 1950s-1960s); and Janet Darling Webel and M&A Landscapers.

The North Country Garden Club of Long Island, Inc. submitted a 2003 update of the garden.

Located on approximately 38 acres, this garden surrounds the mid-19th century house. Land's End Manor was remodeled in 1926 for banker Harvey Dow Gibson by the New York firm Walker and Gillette. The garden was originally designed in the 1920s by Frederick Olmsted, Jr. The view from the terrace of the house is of a sunken garden edged with a mature low hedge enclosing perennials. There is a round pool with a water spouting statue at its center. An adjacent grape arbor separates this garden from a classical walled rose garden with a planted urn at its center. On the south side of the house is a weeping sophora japonica tree. To the north of the house, with a view of Long Island Sound, is an enclosed teahouse with a wisteria covered trellis and two wire work swings. The pool house was designed by John Collins in the late 1980s, and the rock garden extending north of the pool with many perennials, ferns, evergreen trees, yews, and junipers was designed by Adele Mitchell around that time. A white brick wall on the edge of the driveway has espaliered myrtle in a curved design. Southeast of the house are outbuildings and the vegetable and cutting gardens. These gardens have arbors of roses and grapes incorporated into their design and white gravel paths. Adjacent to this area are the paddocks where the Gibson's horses were schooled and turned out. In the early 1980s, Innocenti & Webel did the master plan for the development of the original acreage (300+) of the property.

Persons associated with the garden include: George Galt Bourne (former owner, ca. 1920s); Harvey Dow Gibson (former owner, ca. 1926-1979); Frederick Olmsted, Jr. (landscape architect, ca. 1920s); Harrie T. Lindeberg (architect, ca. 1920s); Walker and Gillette (architects, 1926); Innocenti & Webel (landscape architects, ca. 1980s); John M. Collins (designer, ca. 1986); Adele Mitchell (landscape architect/designer, ca. 1986); Ralph Daniello (gardener, 1956-2012); John Martin (superintendent, 2013-).

The North Country Garden Club of Long Island facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation in 2021.

This was 5 ½ acre garden was established by the current owners in 1986. The garden features a formal Japanese water garden with descending ponds, bridges, and a tea house, as well as woodland areas with meandering paths, rooms, and specimen trees. The entrance to the property is marked by metal gates with fieldstone pillars flanked by Ilex crenata. The border to the entrance is planted with pachysandra, rhododendron, Canadian hemlock, and flowering dogwood. An island of rhododendron and Korean azalea lies between the driveway and the parking circle.

Major hardscape features on the property are the red Japanese Tea House and arch bridge with red and green railings. A lower pond lies at the bottom of the tea house with a nearby waterfall spilling into it. Surrounding the pond are iris and Japanese crabapple. A fountain terrace at the end of the lawn features a round pool with four cherubs seated around it. Two curbed flagstone terraces separated by a curved stone and flagstone bench are bordered with flowering dogwood, Japanese crabapple, Korean boxwood, and evergreen azalea. The view from the terrace features hinoki cypress and mixed hostas and ferns alongside descending ponds. Through the gazebo flanked by annual-filled urns and Rosa 'New Dawn' climbing roses lies a cutting garden divided into four quadrants. The garden is lined with flagstone paths and a circle in the middle featuring a column surrounded by daylily. The front two quadrants are mixed roses and the back are smooth hydrangea. Each exit has a wrought iron arch, two with Japanese honeysuckle and one with white climbing roses. A white oak grove stands at the east end of the house, featuring a thatched and timbered dog house modeled after the main house. Facing south is a large expanse of lawn bordered by banks of rosebay rhododendron with two Chippendale benches. The secret garden is enclosed by yew and features two stone benches that flank a circular bed of ilex with a statue in the center.

The upper pond is shaded by a large tulip tree and mixed oaks. A low arch bridge next to the Catawba rhododendron crosses the stream between the upper pond and the koi pond. The koi pond is surrounded by large boulders found on the property, as well as statuary and meandering stone paths planted with rhododendron. A large Japanese maple stands by the koi pond. A stone bridge engraved with a quote by Andrew Jackson, crosses back towards the koi pond. Conn Lane, named after one of the designers, starts at the stone utility structure with a gothic-arched door built into the berm. The roof is topped with pachysandra and a metal swan. Boxwood and English ivy create the border. The gravel path leading from north to south has a stone wall on the west side and is flanked by bigleaf hydrangea, mixed ferns, and ilex. Through the yew hedge is a garden room with rosebay rhododendron, astilbe, English ivy, mixed ferns and hosta. Natural-locust post stairs lead up the berm next to a giant shagbark hickory. The second garden room has a semi-circular stone walled area planted with trailing myrtle, astilbe, mixed ferns, hosta, and Korean boxwood.

Persons associated with the garden include: Mr. Eustus Langdon Hopkins (former owner, 1927-unknown); Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Rumbough (former owners, 1949-1950s); Mrs. Herbert Wellington (former owner, 1969-1974); Mr. Robert Strawbridge III (former owner, 1974-1985); Charles A. Valentine (architect, 1927); Mervyn Conn (landscaper, 1986-2013); Nancy Taylor, Innocenti and Webel

Locust Valley Cemetery is a private, non-denominational memorial that began with a unique plan over 100 years ago. The Cemetery's 19th century founders conceived of a sanctuary more like a woodland garden. In 1917, Locust Valley Cemetery was incorporated, and a perpetual care fund was established to preserve its natural beauty. A narrow curving road winds through thirty acres of evergreens, hardwoods, and ornamental plantings, which provide visual interest during all seasons. Charles Parker designed private garden rooms for family burials.

Persons and organizations associated with the garden include: Locust Valley Cemetery, INC. (owners, 1917-present); Olmsted Brothers (landscape architects, 1922-1948); Charles Parker (overall planner); Bradley Delehanty (architect of superintendant cottage, 1929); Innocenti & Webel (landscape architects, 1990-present); and James Wellington (landscape architect of sections 3, 4, 5, and Memorial Garden.

The North Country Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Former owner: Peck, Fremont
Hutton, Virginia
Taylor, H. Stillman Mr.s
Herzog, Helen Louise H.

Landscape architect: Innocenti & Webel

Provenance: North Country Garden Club of Long Island

Notes: The folder includes worksheets and site plans.

Located in Locust Valley, New York, this garden is located on a three-acre property originally part of a larger estate and divided in 1930. Fremont C. Peck, the original owner, moved the estate cottage and attached it to a garage for his permanent residence in 1960. Landscape architects Innocenti & Webel oversaw the landscaping of the garden throughout the 1960s and again, in 1980.

This garden features a four quadrant rose garden of hybrid teas and floribunda roses, surrounded by a perennial garden of hybrid peonies and bulbs encased by a low brick wall. The climbing roses in this enclosure are all white. A cutting garden of dahlias is located to the southeast of the courtyard near the greenhouse.

Additional plantings include a pair of distinguished white Beech trees, a pair of European yews 25 feet in diameter, a specimen tulip tree, as well as topiaries and boxwood. Around the perimeter of the property are mountain laurels and rhododendron plantings. Water features include a stream and a small waterfall that empties into one of two small lily ponds. The grounds also include a swimming pool, tool shed, herb garden, cutting garden, wall fountains and sculpture.

Persons associated with the garden include Fremont C. Peck (former owner, 1930-1976); Virginia S. Hutton (former owner, 1976-1979); Mrs. H. Stillman Taylor (former owner, 1979-1985); Helen Louise H. Herzog (former owner, 1985-1988); Innocenti & Webel (landscape architects, 1960-1980).

The North Country Garden Club of Long Island facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Notes: The North Country Garden Club of Long Island, Inc. facilitated the documentation of this garden in 2021.
This 6 ½ acre property was established by the current owners in 1996. The unique landscape features on the site were inspiration for the design of the property which combines formal gardens with meadows, woodlands, and open lawns. The design of the gardens is primarily symmetrical and features walkways to allow visitors to easily access different areas of the property. Numerous stone and iron benches are placed throughout the gardens.
The driveway from the entrance to the property leads one through a collection of stately oak trees and mature rhododendron. A low fieldstone wall with bluestone coping encloses the entrance courtyard. Buxus, rhododendron, Japanese maple, and holly are featured in this space. Behind the low stone wall, the shade garden displays an antique fountain with a frog sculpture in its center. This area features shade loving perennials such as Hosta, fern, astilbe, Alchemilla Mollis, hellebore, and annuals, while pruned variegated euonymus hedges act as a visual screen to the space. A path is created through moss and creeping mazus that fills the spaces between the granite steps. The urn garden is characterized by the footed urn in the center of a grassy lawn surrounded by deciduous trees. A formal sunken rose garden is located on the previous site of a kidney-shaped pool. A serpentine stone wall inspired by Thomas Jefferson's wall at the University of Virginia encloses the shade and rose garden. The chimney of the main house features a convex mirror to see inside of the rose garden.

A rectangular pool is surrounded by potted plants and wrought iron benches. The walls of the pool garden are constructed of old Virginia brick. A large terrace consisting of two symmetrical horseshoe shaped terraces are located at the back of the house. The central space is flanked by red maple trees. One of the most significant hardscape elements is the semi-circular stair [Lutyens steps] leading to the upper-level meadow from the rose garden. An arbor wrapped with climbing roses and bordered by mature American boxwood marks the exit to the property.

Persons associated with the garden include: Piping Rock Estate (former owner, 1913-unknown); Ronald M. Craigmyle (former owner, 1931-1980s); Thomas A. Sanders (former owner, 1988-1996); Jane Darling (landscape architect, 1947); Innocenti and Webel Darling (pool architect, 1955); Alan Greenberg (pool architect, 2004).

NY384: Manhasset -- Kiluna Farm
 Former owner: Paley, William S.
 Paley, Barbara Cushing
 Landscape architect: Ireys, Alice Recknagel, 1911-2000
 Page, Russell
 Church, Thomas Dolliver
 Innocenti & Webel
 Horticulturist: Du Pont, Henry Francis, 1880-1969
 Notes: The folders include worksheets, garden plans, photocopies of articles about the garden, and other information.

Kiluna Farm was the Long Island country estate of Barbara and William S. Paley and featured work by several noted landscape architects including Alice Recknagel Ireys, Russell Page, Thomas D. Church, Henry Francis du Pont, and the firm of Innocenti & Webel. The garden's design focused on a dell "transformed into a well-defined, planted punch bowl, with a large oval pond in the center, set in an inner frame of lawn, with an outer frame of ground covers, low evergreens, flowering trees and shrubs." Azaleas, rhododendrons, and mountain laurel were underpinned by more than 20 varieties of ground cover plants. The property also featured a vegetable garden and greenhouses.

Persons associated with the garden include: Barbara and William S. Paley (former owners, ca. 1947-1990); Alice Recknagel Ireys (landscape architect); Russell Page (landscape architect); Thomas D. Church (landscape architect); Henry Francis du Pont (landscape architect); and Innocenti & Webel (landscape architects).

Kiluna Farm related holdings consist of 2 folders (30 photoprints (including 3 contact sheets); 5 120 mm. slides; 17 35 mm. slides; 1 transparency)

NY471: Menands -- The Highlands

Image\(s\)

Image\(s\)

Former owner: Sage, Henry
Batcheller, Hiland G.
Nahl, Mary K.
Episcopal Dioceses of Albany

Provenance: Fort Orange Garden Club

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, site plans and other information.

Located on 23 acres in the city of Menands, NY the Highlands garden estate was created by the Batcheller family starting in 1927 when they bought the Henry "Heff" Sage estate. The Batcheller's then embarked upon an expansion of the gardens by installing ponds and adding trees and flowers. In 1945 tragedy struck the family when their beloved son was killed in World War II. In dedication to him, the Primrose Path and Garden was created and a statue modeled after St. Francis was placed there to honor him. Near the house the glass enclosed conservatory, with its beautiful tile floor and center fountain housed exotic orchids, camellias and gardenias. Attached to the conservatory, a greenhouse was filled with blooming geraniums, primroses, hyacinths, tulips and snapdragons in preparation for planting.

Outside, a stone terrace enclosed by a yew hedge, a border of roses and two dogwood trees afforded a lovely setting for outdoor dining. Flowering azaleas, rhododendrons and dogwoods framed the large expanse of lawn and led to the Tea House and down the colorful Primrose Path. Several pools, ponds and fountains formed the focal points of both formal and informal gardens. Garden chairs were placed so one can enjoy the tranquil setting.

Throughout all seasons, Highlands was a symphony of horticultural expression. In the spring, flowering azaleas, rhododendrons and dogwoods framed the large expanse of lawns. In the summer, riotous displays of perennials and annuals bloomed in the borders and cutting garden. The flaming red and yellow fall color of maples and dogwoods were followed by the quiet snow-covered landscape in winter. This was a garden created during a period of uncertain economic and political times in American history. While it followed beautiful plans and discipline, the garden was above all a labor of love, a rich horticultural experience and a testament to their creativity and passion for design and gardening to be enjoyed by family and friends.

Persons associated with the garden include: Henry Sage (former owner, unknown-1927); Hiland G. Batcheller (former owner, 1927-1969); Episcopal Dioceses of Albany (former owner, 1969-1982), and Mary K. Nahl (former owner, 1982-1997).

Fort Orange Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Sculptor: Flood, Mary Emma

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, photocopies of an article, photocopies of historical records, garden plans, and a title summary for the property.

The formal walled garden at Feathers, created in 1996 by the current owner along with landscape designer Lisa Thompson, is a small part of the six and one-half acre property with the original circa 1730 house. The 31 by 23 foot formal garden is divided into four parterres edged in boxwood with walks made from old bricks to match a standing old brick wall. A pink rose standard grows in the center of each parterre, surrounded by low-growing ground covers and annual flowers such as pansies. The brick wall is covered in climbing hydrangea and clematis, and has three arched doorways that lead into the garden. A bronze sculpture of the owner's son as a child created by his grandmother, Mary Emma Flood (1900-1987), overlooks the garden from a niche in the brick wall.

The spring-fed property overlooks Beaver Lake, where there is a small house and rock and fern garden. There is another garden of perennial and ornamental grasses near the lake, and many mature trees. A brick room next to the main house that held a furnace in earlier days has New Dawn roses trellised on the roof.

Persons associated with the garden include: Charles Wright (former owner and builder of the original house, circa 1730-1741); Isaac Frost and members of the Frost family (former owners, circa 1741-1763); John Underhill and members of the Underhill family (former owners, 1763-1901); Ella Kennard (former owner, 1901); Harvey Murdock and members of the Murdock family (former owners, 1901-1927); Alicia Gamble Ludlow (former owner, 1927-1953); Innis, Helen S., and Blanche S. O'Rourke (former owners, 1953-1973); Harvey L. and Cornelia D. Schwartz (former owners, 1973-1983); David W.C. Clark (former owner, 1983-1987); Norman C. and Kathleen H. Keith (former owners, 1987-1994); Helen Dillon (landscape designer, 1995); Lisa Thompson (landscape designer, 1996); Robert Gahagan (architect of new addition, 1997); Mary Emma Flood (sculptor of bronze statue of child).

This property has been extensively researched for the transfers of title beginning in 1685, when a deed of sale was signed by individuals who were likely Matinecock Indians.

The North Country Garden Club of Long Island facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Feathers related holdings consist of 1 folder (11 35 mm. slides (photographs) and 5 3.5 X 5 reference prints)

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet, a summary property plan, six black and white images of the garden from about 1950, and a photocopy of an April 2000 newspaper article about plans for expansion of the school.

Established around 1923, this 86-acre site, formerly a private estate, is now a school for the deaf. The gardens, which feature mature trees, terraces, and a gazebo, complement the Tudor-style mansion. Planted urns and broad, sweeping vistas complete the design.

Persons and firms associated with the garden include: Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Weicker (former owners, before 1940); Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Dodge (former owners, 1950s); and Clinton, Russell, Wells, Holton & George (architects, ca. 1923).

Provenance: North Country Garden Club of Long Island

Notes: The folders include worksheets, site plans, copies of printed materials about the house and garden, and additional information.

Designed in 1916 by architect William Adams Delano of Delano & Aldrich for Bertram G. Work, president of B. F. Goodrich, Oak Knoll was named after one of the largest oak trees on Long Island, which stands in the estate's gardens. With decorative ironwork by Samuel Yellin, the house and its grounds featured formal gardens, teahouses, terraces, pools, fountains, and pergolas. Still existing from the original design is a Roman style stone entrance court with sculptures and ironwork, from which there is a curving road to a second court with a fountain on one side and the front facade of the house on the other.

Persons and firms associated with the property include William Adams Delano (architect and landscape architect, 1916); Delano & Aldrich (architects, 1916); Samuel Yellin (ironworker, 1916); Bertram G. Work (former owner, 1916-1931?); Mr. and Mrs. Joel Ellis Fisher (former owners, 1931-1967); and Mr. and Mrs. Bronson Trevor (former owners, 1967-1995).

The North Country Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

NY794: Millbrook -- Deep Hollow Farm

Landscape designer: Donaldson, Renee Du Pont

Former owner: Hale, William D.
Hale, William D., Mrs.

Landscape architect: Crawford, Jack

Gardener: Kristofik, Louis

Provenance: Millbrook Garden Club

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet, narrative history, topographic map, landscape plan, lecture "Wildflowers in My Garden: A Neglected Element in Garden Design," by Renee du Pont Donaldson, and periodical copies.

The 260+ acre property includes the formal garden, secondary entrance to the house, terrace, paths to naturalized swimming pool, and the natural red cedar pergola at the tennis court. These garden areas were designed by Renee du Pont Donaldson in 1938. It was a combination of formal and informal plantings with a feeling for the topography of the land and existing trees and native shrubs. After three subsequent owners, the main garden, except for the original design outlined by the stone retaining walls, has disappeared.

Persons and Organizations associated with the garden include: Mr. and Mrs. William D. Hale (former owner, 1911); Mr. and Mrs. Donaldson (former owner, 1934-1974); Jack Crawford (Landscape Architect, 1938); Renee du Pont Donaldson (garden designer, 1938); Louis Kristofik (gardener, ?).

Original photographs are each in three sections to create one panoramic image. Several, however, do not continue the image with one of the end sections.

The Millbrook Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

NY796: Millbrook -- Far A-Field

Provenance: Millbrook Garden Club

Notes: Far A-Field holdings consist of 1 folder with 29 35 mm. slides,)The folder includes a worksheet, site plans, and newspaper and magazine clippings.

The structure of the garden is based on a collection of ornamental trees, specifically conifers, which the owner has planted since 1975. The garden surrounds a small "Adamesque" house built in 1931 and was enlarged in the early 1990s to add a conservatory and library. The site is over 800 feet above sea level and enjoys a vista that overlooks the Shawangunk Mountains and Hudson River some 30 miles away. A garden, called "The Orient," in front of the house, contains a dry stream bed crossed with native field stone steps, stone lantern, rhododendrons, and a red pagoda. There is also a secret hot-colors garden, a small orchard of apple and pear trees, and a dwarf conifers garden planted in indigenous moss.

Persons associated with the property include: Dr. Alice Gregory (former owner, 1931-1956) and Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Wing (former owners, 1956-1975).

The Millbrook Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

The garden is featured in Elvin McDonald, "Bound for Home," Traditional Home, Holiday 1998, pp. 120, 123-129.

The garden is featured in Carol Trapani, "Garden Worthy of Archiving," Poughkeepsie Journal, September 14, 2001.

NY397: Millbrook -- Innisfree Garden

Former owner: Beck, Walter, d. 1954
 Beck, Marion, d. 1960

Landscape designer: Beck, Walter, d. 1954

Landscape architect: Collins, Lester, -1993

Foundation president: Collins, Lester, -1993

Provenance: Millbrook Garden Club

Notes: The folders include worksheets, garden plans, correspondence, and photocopies of correspondence, articles, and brochures about the garden.

Established in 1930, Innisfree was designed and built by Walter Beck, a scholar-teacher-artist who was influenced by ancient Chinese garden art. Innisfree explores a Chinese garden design concept called a "cup garden," which has origins in Chinese paintings dating back a thousand years. The cup garden draws attention to something rare or beautiful. This special object is segregated by establishing an enclosure around it so that it can be enjoyed without distraction. A cup garden may be an enframed meadow, a lotus pool, or a single rock covered with lichens and sedums. At Innisfree the visitor strolls from one three-dimensional picture to another. Streams, waterfalls, terraces, retaining walls, rocks, and plants are used not only to define areas, but also to establish tension or motion. Although the cup garden idea came from China, Innisfree is unequivocally an American garden. The lake is glacial, most of the plant material is native, and the rocks have come from the immediate forest.

Persons associated with the garden include: Walter and Marion Beck (former owners and landscape designer [Walter Beck] 1930-1960) and Lester Collins (landscape architect and president, Innisfree Foundation, 1960-1993).

NY092: Millbrook -- Thorndale
Colorist: Van Altena, Edward Landscape architect: Allen, Nellie B.
Architect: Wodell, Helen Page
Coffin, Marian Cruger, 1876-1957
Allen, Jerome

Notes: The folder includes correspondence, brief description of garden, articles, notes about slides, excerpt from the Garden Club of America Handbook and information sheet done by GCA researcher.

"This historic eighteenth century residence was deeded by the Crown Grant to the Thornes, a Quaker family and has remained in their possession ever since. It was famed in the nineteenth century for the quality of their breeding cattle and for their standard bred horses."

"It was Mr. Thorne's great grandmother, the late Mrs. Oakleigh Thorne, who was responsible for the planning and planting of Thorndale's gardens which were for many years listed as the most beautiful in the world. The gardens have seen many changes through the years, but are still a beautiful setting for the largest classic white clapboard house with its huge columns on its portico. The trees, white pine, spruce, red oaks, white oaks, maples and elms have been assiduously tended for decades."

"Most of the gardens are within sight and sound of water. Old stone steps rise from the upper pond's edge to green lawn. A path circles the pool where water-lilies bloom and dogwood and azaleas abound. A swimming pool is passed on the way to the lower pond and water pavilion. The pavilion, designed by Jerome Allen, architect, stands two stories high to command a long vista."

"A stream links the two ponds and is shaded by birch, dogwood and elms. Drifts of daffodils are naturalized in the fields beyond."

"Pierced brick walls with espaliered fruit trees surround the yew garden. Here you will find a great many varieties of taxus and magnificent topiary work. At the entrance to trim paths stand eighteenth century English stone monkeys playing musical instruments."

Mr. and Mrs. Oakleigh Thorne also owned Las Tejas, Santa Barbara, California.

Persons associated with the property include: Edward Van Altena (colorist for lantern slides); Nellie B. Allen (landscape architect); Helen Page Wodell (landscape architect); Jerome Allen (architect); Marian Cruger Coffin (landscape architect); Helen Thorne (former owner); Wodell and Contrell (landscape architect).

NY394: Mount Kisco -- Avalon

Architect: Delano & Aldrich

Former owner: Brewster, Robert S.

Landscape architect: Shipman, Ellen Biddle, 1869-1950

Wadley & Smythe

Notes: The folder includes worksheets and photocopies of book and journal article excerpts about the garden.Designed as a summer home by the firm of Delano & Aldrich, Avalon is located in a hilly, wooded area in Mt. Kisco, New York. Its principal landscape architects were Wadley & Smythe, followed by Ellen Shipman, who worked on the property in the 1920s. With its Italianate garden, Avalon features a vista extending from a swimming pool to a small temple. Another axis intersecting with the loggia leads through a wooded hill to a vista of another small temple. Below the residence a pergola leads to a walled elliptical informal flower garden featuring a small pool with two frog-shaped fountain heads. An irregularly shaped perennial bed surrounds this water feature.

Persons and firms associated with the garden include: Robert S. Brewster (former owner, 1912-?); Ellen Shipman (landscape architect, 1920s); Delano & Aldrich (architects, 1912); and Wadley & Smythe (landscape architects, 1912).

Avalon related holdings consist of 1 folder (53 35mm. slides)
Eleanor Weller collection, circa 1981-1993.

Garden has been featured in Samuel Howe, American Country Houses of To-day (New York: The Architectural Book Publishing Company, 1915), pp. 118-123.

Garden has been featured in P.H. Elwood, Jr., ed., American Landscape Architecture (New York: The Architectural Book Publishing Co., Inc., 1924) pp. 36 and 180.

Garden has been featured in Augusta Owen Patterson, American Homes of To-day: Their Architectural Style, Their Environment, Their Characteristics (New York: Macmillan, 1924), pp. 334-335.

Garden has been featured in Richard G. Kenworthy, "Published Records of Italianate Gardens in America," Journal of Garden History 10, No. 1 (January-March 1990), pp. 53-54 [includes additional published bibliographic citations].

Provenance: New York State Historical Association

Notes: NY394006, NY354006

Slide indicates image may be the work of Richard Averill Smith and the property of New York State Historical Association. The image, however, is identical to one appearing in Augusta Owen Patterson's American Homes of Today (1924) and credited to Mattie Edwards Hewitt. In 1920 Hewitt published two views of Avalon, one of which may be this image. See citation in Richard G. Kenworthy, "Published Records of Italianate Gardens in America," Journal of Garden History 10, No. 1 (January-March 1990), p.53.

Sculptor: Plazzotta, Enzo

Provenance: Fort Orange Garden Club

Notes: The landscape was not "designed" by a landscape designer but was planted and cared for many years by a professional gardener. The story related was that the gentleman and his family lived in the house during the depression. His profession was little in demand during those years so he practiced on his own property.

The huge locusts all along the road are a native species and could have been gathered in nearby wooded areas but they were planted at measured distances. There is another row of them near the driveway on the right side of the house. As locusts must be removed from the property the present owner is replacing them.

The locust is currently "unpopular" and considered by some to be invasive, but on this property the owner thinks of these trees as the anchor plants. They hold the house to the ground. They certainly belong there. Whenever locusts are removed the wood is saved and used for fencing.

After the gardener and his family sold the property there were a few years when there was not much gardening, although there was good maintenance. The current lady of the house is a practiced gardener with a trained eye. The plan is to uncover the rock shelves and tuck in a minimum of plants. The selections are studied for shape and texture - not color. Summer color is added in pots.

Across the road from the house the owner has a tenant farmer working the fields. That field is planted in corn which he thinks is certainly appropriate to the vintage of the house. When the wind sweeps through the field it adds sound to the garden as does the Onesquethaw Creek when the water is high. Additional garden features include sculpture by Enzo Plazzotta and John Robinson.

The Fort Orange Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

NY519: New York -- Alice Austen House

Former owner: Austen, Alice, 1866-1952

Austen, John

Landscape architect: Greene, Bradford M.

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, copies of articles, and other information about the property and Alice Austen.

Also known as "Clear Comfort," this property was the home of photographer Alice Austen, who was also the founder (in 1912) of the Staten Island Garden Club. Originally a 17th-century Dutch farmhouse, it was transformed into a Victorian cottage in the 19th century by Austen's grandfather. Documented in Austen's photographs, now in the collections of the Staten Island Historical Society, the house and its four acres of grounds were restored in the 1980s. Austen's photographs were used as a guide for both preservation of mature specimens and restoration to the site's 19th century appearance. Mature trees dating back to Austen's residency include ginkgo, horse chestnut, Kentucky coffee tree, hackberry, and sycamore maple.

Persons associated with the garden include: Alice Austen (former owner, until 1944); John Austen (former owner, 19th century); and Bradford M. Greene (landscape architect, 1980s).

Alice Austen House related holdings consist of 1 folder (4 35 mm. slides)

Garden has been featured in Oliver Jensen, "The High Summer of Alice Austen," House & Garden, August 1987, pp. 95-99+.

Former owner: Smith, Kenneth D.

Smith, Catherine Hemingway

Notes: The folders include a worksheet, site plan, magazine articles, and copies of newspaper articles.

The former owners, Kenneth D. and Catherine Hemingway Smith, worked at hybridization and gardening. Kenneth and Catherine bred irises such as Repartee and Bread and Wine. The garden was designed for color in all seasons with daffodils, azaleas, rhododendrons, irises, hemerocallis, and herbaceous perennials. After the property was sold, it was subdivided. The garden no longer exists.

Persons associated with this garden include: Kenneth D. Smith (former owner, ? - 1951); Kenneth D. and Catherine Hemmingway Smith (former owners, 1951-1965); and Catherine Hemmingway Smith (former owner, 1965-1975).

NY407: New York -- Mount Vernon Hotel Museum and Gardens
 Landscape architect: Ireys, Alice Recknagel, 1911-2000
 Cattell, Mary Deputy
 Photographer: Adams, Molly, 1918-2003
 The City Gardens Club of New York City
 Notes: Formerly known as the Abigail Adams Smith Museum, this site is located on East 61st Street in New York City and was once part of a 23-acre estate. Following the acquisition of the property by the Colonial Dames of America in 1933, landscape architect Mary Deputy Cattell was commissioned to design an 18th-century style garden that featured espaliered ivy trained on fences, and plant material, bulbs, and flowering shrubs typical of that period. Some years later, following expansion of the site through the purchase of an adjacent building, the garden was redesigned by Alice Recknagel Ireys into its present form.

Persons associated with the garden include: Mary Deputy Cattell (landscape architect, 1930s); and Alice Recknagel Ireys (landscape architect).

1 Photograph (lantern slide, color; 3.25 x 4 in.)

Photographer: Cassebeer, F. W.

Notes: This special exhibit was coordinated by Mrs. John H. Lynch of the Ridgefield [Connecticut] Garden Club. Its photographs brought attention to the project to create a National Tribute Grove of old growth redwoods in California, of which the Save the Redwoods League and the Garden Club of America were principal sponsors. The goal was to acquire 5,000 acres for permanent preservation to honor the 16.1 million men and women who served in the U.S. Armed Forces in World War II.

The mission was a success and the grove, in Jedediah Smith Redwoods State Park, was dedicated on September 25, 1949.

NY860: New York -- The Jones' Wood Garden

Architect: Hewitt, Edwin S.
 Former owner: Burlingham, Charles C. (Charles Culp), 1858-1959
 Bell, Gordon Knox
 Gerry, Elbridge T.
 Notes: The folder includes a work sheet, articles, a narrative history, a planting plan and a features plan.
 A common garden, 100 feet north to south and 120 feet east to west, it is bordered by six houses on each of two streets on the Upper East Side. The name refers to an area once owned by the family of Edith "Jones" Wharton, who acquired the land in 1790. Architect Edwin S. Hewitt bought the developed twelve brownstones in 1919. He removed the walls and fences separating the backyards to create a single common area to be shared by all the owners, called the "Gerry Gardens" for a previous owner. Hewitt unified the architecture of the houses by installing planting beds, pathways, fountains, and pools, and set up the covenants to allow no structural additions. The garden is one of the few protected open green spaces left in the midst of high rises and a dense population. The trees, including an America elm, form an umbrella over formal beds of taxus, ilex, hostas and ivy. An upper terrace includes a large fountain with sculptured figure in the center. The lower terrace contains a pool and mask wall fountain.

The surrounding area--once a large reflecting pool--was bricked over. Few changes have been made to the property since the first design.

Persons and firms associated with the garden include: Robert and Louise Matilda Livingston (builders of twelve houses, late 1850s-1869); Edwin S. Hewitt (architect, 1919); Kennett Lynch & Sons (statuary and fountain figure, 1960s and 1997); Frances D. Dewey (head gardener, 1980-2000); Susan Murray (lighting, 1986); and Chris Stager ("Swiss Capes" fountain restoration, 1997). List of owners' names in 1921 included in documentation.

NY867: North East -- Hyland/Wente Garden

Provenance: Millbrook Garden Club

Notes: The folders include a work sheet, site plans, and copies of two articles.

Located within the Coleman Station Historic District, a 200-year old agricultural community in the town of North East, the property overlooks Indian Lake and Indian Mountain, and comprises 41 acres. In 2001-2002, the owners built a modern barn-like house and four outbuildings; started the gardens; and planted a 200 foot long windbreak of evergreens and an orchard of apple trees. The gardens, which are approximately 10,000 square feet in size, adhere to a 4' x 4' grid, which also applies to the house and other buildings. In keeping with the nature of the surrounding meadows, the gardens contain perennials and have a common theme of grasses. There is a bamboo garden and a 40 foot rill, a "sculpture garden" of solar panels; and a hidden garden. A cistern collects water from the roof of the main house for garden irrigation.

Persons and organizations associated with the garden include: Luke Engleback (landscape architect, January 2001); Hank White (landscape architect, October 2001); Chris Froehlich (designer, gardener, 2002-2004); and Deborah Davidson (gardener, 2004-2006).

Landscape architect: Olmsted Brothers

Notes: Sycamore Lodge

The folder includes a worksheet, site maps, and historical background.

The original property was divided into thirds. One named Locust Knoll (now Mayknoll); one (the original Clifton) renamed Willowmere; and one renamed Clifton in honor of the original Clifton (renamed Sycamore Lodge in 1917). The present owners changed the Sycamore Lodge property name back to Clifton. The gardens at Clifton, an 1862 Gothic Revival house, were designed in 1917 by Olmsted Brothers. In 1986, the present owners removed the dead and dying yews and rhododendrons. They replanted it as a re-creation of a mid-Victorian garden, using modern cultivars. The emphasis now is on climbing roses--some fifty varieties--shrub roses, hydrangeas and Victorian bedding out, plus a large collection of period garden furniture and ornament.

Persons and firms associated with the garden include: Joseph Hicks (former owner, 1861); Ann Eliza Cairns (former owner, 1861-1866); Blanche Cairns Willis (former owner, 1866-1917); John M. and Nevada Wills Demarest (former owners, 1917-1932); General J. J. Pershing (former resident, 1920-1921); Lucille Demarest (Mrs. Lester E.) Brion (former owner, 1932-1950); Glenn E. and Elizabeth Laird Riggs (former owners, 1950-1957); Frank C. and Catherine Bickford Fahnestock (former owners, 1957-1986); and Olmsted Brothers (landscape architects, 1917-1923).

The North Country Garden Club of Long Island facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet, garden plans, and photocopies of articles about the garden.

This three-acre garden was established in 1981 on a site that had no gardens or flowers except for a stand of old lilacs. The 19th-century farmhouse serves as the locus for the small, hedged-in garden areas that have been gradually made around it. Axes were laid out from the farmhouse's various doors. These axes form the basis for uncomplicated geometric patterns for the hedged-in areas of trees and flowers. Each area or room has a different emphasis and a different color scheme. Included are an herb garden, a white garden, a nasturtium garden, and shrub roses. The classic symmetry and simplicity of the house complement a garden formal in outline but filled with an unpretentious mixture of old-fashioned plants.

North Country Garden Club of Long Island facilitated the 2018 submission of this garden's documentation.

The gardens for this 23 acre property were reconceived by Nelson Byrd Woltz into zones for the body, mind and spirit, with each section divided longitudinally. The park section contains many native trees; the garden section includes the entrance court, seven distinct rooms and a formal vegetable garden with a greenhouse; the forest has a pine and fern grove; water encompasses the swimming pool and a large pond with a pagoda on an island; the field has the tennis court, cutting garden and a golf green with sand traps. Repeated features in the formal gardens include allées, sheared hedges, brick and bluestone hardscapes, oversize urns and pots planted with either seasonal flowers or vines, and flowering trees, shrubs, annuals and perennials with white blooms predominating. There are brick pillars at the entrance gate that are repeated at the end of the driveway. A field of daffodils and redbuds has a path mowed through for strolling in the spring. Layers of shrubs that surround the rectangular lawns at the arrival court include white hydrangea, lilac, boxwood, and viburnum, with Russian sage and pachysandra as the lower story and three large magnolias above. Behind the house a blue stone path and steps lead to a bluestone terrace garden with arborvitae in the corners, white rhododendron, white Japanese anemone, and shaped boxwood all surrounding a circle of grass. A rectangular white garden with benches at either end contains tree peony, white bleeding heart, hydrangea, Japanese anemone and ferns. The secret garden enclosed by a brick wall has a gravel center court with a large urn that is replanted each season, a cement bench under a kousa dogwood, white tulips and bleeding heart, rhododendron and hydrangea. Outside the wall there is a bed planted with two rows of Japanese stewartia.

A formal lawn has a reflecting pool in the center, allées of pollarded sycamore on two sides, and shaped boxwood at the far end. Another allée of yoshino cherry and large planted pots along the long walk leads to a walled formal vegetable and flower garden with a greenhouse. Teak tuteurs are planted with peas in spring followed by tomatoes. Apple and pear trees are espaliered on serpentine brick walls. Teak lattice gates attached to one wall can swing out to support climbing roses or other vines. Nearby a pine and fern grove lost many trees during Hurricane Sandy but has an understory planted with dogwood, rhododendron, hay scented fern, Virginia bluebells, beech, redbud and mayapple. Grass steps with stone risers lead to the swimming pool with low stone walls. A hot tub set in stone is flanked by beds of perennials. Next to the pool there is a playing field with blue painted benches that look towards the fish-stocked pond. Japanese style bridges lead to two islands in the pond, one of which has the Chinese style pagoda and a weeping cherry. The other island is planted with river birch. Along the boundary of the property there is an allée of silver maple that leads to a circle of clipped hornbeam and the tennis court. There is a cutting garden next to a shed, and beyond that lies the golf green complete with sand traps.

Persons associated with the property include: Charles Addison Blackwell, Esq. (former owner, 1929-1937); Frederick Chauncey Tanner (former owner, 1937-c.1950); Joseph A. Thomas (former owner, c. 1950-1977); estate of Joseph A. Thomas (former owner, 1977-2002); Polhemus & Coffin (architects, c. 1926); Arthur F.  The 1922 Georgian Revival house and 29 acre estate (first called Gay Gardens) has gardens designed in different eras by Ellen Biddle Shipman in the 1920's, Umberto Innocenti in the 1930's and 1940's, and most recently by Oehme van Sweden starting in the late 1990's. Shipman designed a sunken grass garden surrounded by a yew hedge off to the side of the house with formal flower beds with yew or beech hedges, and more flower beds on the terraces. She placed a square stone reflecting pool in the center of the sunken garden. In the 1930's Innocenti moved the stairs to the sunken garden and removed Shipman's pool, adding a lozenge-shaped pool beyond the sunken garden with an open sightline from the house. He also designed an oval swimming pool with plantings (later replaced by a rectangular pool). In the 1940's Innocenti & Webel redesigned the front courtyard and surrounded the new tennis court with beech trees. Under the current owners landscape architects Oehme van Sweden designed a large pond with native plants and a recirculating water system that includes a waterfall and stream, added white pebbles to the driveway and pleached the beech around the tennis court.

Boxwood Farm has four acres of lawn interspersed with mature maple and other trees and huge flower beds. Perennial flowers include Russian sage, buddleia, lavender, ligularia, liriopse, echinacea, penstemon, rudbeckia, Joe Pye weed and ornamental grasses; shrubs include boxwood, hydrangea, azalea, viburnum and knock-out roses. Ficus trees are planted out each year near an antique wall fountain in a small garden room of the patio, then dug up and kept in the greenhouse over the winter. An adjoining small room has a sundial, stellata magnolia and hydrangea. The lawn to the south of the house is intersected with stone pathways that divide it into diamond and triangular patches. Numerous stone planters are filled with lavender and agapanthus or white lantana in the summer and violas in cooler seasons. There is a raised garden surrounded by a picket fence set on a low dry stone wall that has a wooden grape arbor and boxwood parterres filled with white tulips, dwarf alliums, cardinal flowers, salvia, apple mint and strawberry plants, depending on the season. In a nearby 15 by 21 foot raised garden vegetables and flowers for cutting are grown. Another vegetable and fruit garden was added in the service area, once the site of another house on the original 179 acre estate. Woodland gardens border the driveway and a bridle paths recalls the polo matches held on the property in a previous era.

Persons associated with the garden include Hugh A. Murray and estate of (former owners, 1922-circa 1935); Catherine B. Hickox (former owner, 1935-1970); Charles V. Hickox and estate of (former owners, 1970-circa 1982); Paul Guez (former owner, circa 1982-circa 1989); GOV agencies (former owners, circa 1990-1997); Julian Peabody (1881-1935) of Peabody, Wilson & Brown (architect, 1922); Ellen Biddle Shipman (1869-1950) (landscape architect, 1922); Umberto Innocenti (1895-1968) (landscape architect, 1937-); Innocenti & Webel (landscape architects, 1946-1970); Charles A. Parr (superintendent, late 1930's-1950's); Bradley Delahanty (architect of pool house, 1947-1950); Oehme, van Sweden & Associates (landscape architects, 1998-); James Ahern (estate manager, 2008-).

The North Country Garden Club of Long Island facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Landscape architect: Innocenti, Umberto

Architect: Malmfeldt, Adams & Prentice

Provenance: North Country Garden Club of Long Island

Notes: The folders include a work sheet and features plan.

Named by Howard Phipps, "Erchless" is a Welsh word meaning solitude, solemnity, calmness. Rhododendron is the focus of the garden planted with companion plants. A rhododendron also carries the name Erchless. The landscape consists of many shapes and sweeps of landscape design with a priority on tree preservation. A nursery, paddock, greenhouses, stables, playground, Japanese garden, Meadow garden, pinetum and rhododendron hill are some of the features of the estate.

Persons and organizations associated with the garden include: Mr. and Mrs. Howard Phipps (former owners, 1910-1981); Philip Goodwin (architect); Adams and Prentice (architects, 1929-1942); Umberto Innocenti (landscape architect); Alice Treys (landscape consultant, 1960-1980); and Barbara Capen (herbaceous borders designs, 1970s).

The North Country Garden Club of Long Island, Inc. submitted a 2003 update of the garden.

Former owner: Hicks, Jacob
Titus, John
Winthrop, Robert W.
Winthrop, Beekman
Winthrop, R. D.
Sedgwick, Henry Renwick
Winthrop, Grenville Lindall, 1864-1943

Deed holder: Willis, William

Landscape architect: Innocenti & Webel

Architect:

McKim, Mead & White

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, photocopies of articles and other information.

The landscaping for Groton Place was designed in the 1930s by Umberto Innocenti and Richard K. Webel, featuring uninterrupted axial passages with stopping places but no feeling of enclosure. Since then the trees on the property have matured, the serpentine yew hedge has filled in, and the original oval rose garden has been converted to flowering shrubs. A ha-ha separates the house and the ornamental gardens from horse pastures. A pinetum shades the rectangular swimming pool, and woodlands on the property are filled with native trees and shrubs. A mature cedar allée leads to the stables, the one example of a passage that ends in a structure. Architects McKim, Mead & White designed a house and outbuildings at Groton Place in 1912, but that house was razed in 1948 and another Georgian house on the property built in the 1930s is the residence of the current owners.

In 1968 a parcel of 250 acres of land was sold to a golf club, and the remaining 108 acres of Groton Place were placed in a conservation easement for protection.

Persons associated with the garden include William Willis (deed holder, 1700s); members of the John Titus and Jacob Hicks families (former owners, 1700s-circa 1895); Robert Dudley Winthrop (former owner, 1895); Beekman Winthrop (former owner, 1912); Grenville L. Winthrop (former owner, 1940); Robert W. Winthrop (former owner, 1943-1997); Henry Renwick Sedgwick (architect, 1932); McKim, Meade & White (architects of former house and stables, circa 1912); Umberto Innocenti (d. 1968) & Richard K. Webel (d. 2000) (landscape architects, 1930s).

The North Country Garden Club of Long Island, Inc. facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Architect: Hastings, Thomas

Carrère & Hastings

Former owner: Duryea, Herman

Martin, Bradley

Landscape architect: Lewis & Valentine Company

Provenance:

North Country Garden Club of Long Island

Notes:

The folder includes a worksheet, garden plans, photocopies of house, and several photocopies of articles about the garden.

Situated on the top of a hill, Knole has been classified as a Beaux-Arts mansion and a Palladian-style villa. It was named after Sackville West's "Knole" in Sevenoaks, Kent, England. Thirty-three acres remained of the original estate as of 1985. The garden includes allees, terraces, formal gardens, a folly of limestone arches, court yard, water garden, and two walks--The Long Walk, and The Grassed Walk. A Le Notre style treillage originally surrounded the entire back of garden.

Persons and firms associated with the garden include: Herman B. Duryea (former owner, 1902-1903); Bradley Martin (former owner, 1907-1963); Carrere & Hastings (architects, 1902-1903); Thomas Hastings (architect, 1902-1903); and Lewis & Valentine (landscape architects (1902-1903).

The North Country Garden Club of Long Island facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Knole related holdings consist of 2 folders (32 35 mm. slides)

Garden has been featured in Orin Z. Finkle, "The One That Didn't Get Away," Town and Country, June, 1985, 187-194 pp.

Garden has been featured in Monica Randall, The Mansions of Long Island's Gold Coast (New York: Hastings House, 1979).

Garden has been featured in "The House of Herman B. Duryea, Esq.," American Estates and Gardens.

Architect: Guest, Winston
 Hastings, Thomas
 Carrère & Hastings
 Landscape architect: Hastings, Thomas
 Notes: de Seversky Conference Center, formerly known as.
 The folders include worksheets, garden plans, and photocopies of articles and other printed materials about the estate and garden.
 Templeton, with its neo-classic Georgian manor house built in 1916-1917 by Alfred I. Du Pont, Jr., originally consisted of 130 acres. Thomas Hastings' design for the house, originally called White Eagle, exemplified his thesis of combining the house with the surrounding landscape to form a marriage between them. The grounds' sweeping vistas with undulating rises combine with architectural terraces, loggias, and balustrades. The estate is now the de Seversky Conference Center of the New York Institute of Technology.
 Persons and firms associated with the garden include: Alfred I. Du Pont (former owner, ca. 1916-1926); Amy Phipps (Mrs. Frederick E.) Provenance: North Country Garden Club of Long Island

Notes: Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney Studio

The folders include a work sheet, features plan, slide view plan, copies of photographs, and copies of articles.

Gertrude Vanderbilt Whitney commissioned the retreat for a place to work on sculpture and as an entertainment pavilion for friends. The axis of the site is north and south. The rear of the studio was developed as an intimate garden with swimming pool and sunken parterre. The garden incorporates many statues created by Whitney and her students. In 1982, it was adapted for use as a residence.

Persons and organizations associated with the garden include: Gertrude Vanderbilt Whitney (former owner, 1914-1918); Barbara Whitney Henry (former owner, 1942-1960s); Flora Whitney Miller (former owner, 1960s-1986); William Delano and Chester Aldrich (architect and garden designer, 1914-1918); Raleigh Cottnek (landscape designer, 1914-1918); and Charles G. Meyer, Jr. (architect, 1982).

The North Country Garden Club of Long Island facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Landscape architect: Coffin, Marian Cruger, 1876-1957

Architect: Gilman, Winthrop Sargent, Jr.

Former owner: Gilman, Winthrop Sargent, Jr.
Hill, Anna Gilman
Hill, Robert Carmer

Notes: The folder includes worksheets and photocopies of articles, correspondence, and other information about the house and garden. Built around 1872 by Winthrop Sargent Gilman, Jr., Niederhurst featured gardens designed by Marian Cruger Coffin as well as by its one-time owner, Anna P. Gilman Hill (Mrs. Robert Carmer Hill), daughter of Winthrop Sargent Gilman, Jr. Features designed by Coffin included a tapis vert, or bowling green, as well as a hidden garden below a cliff. Other design elements included an iris garden, a woodland area, the "Hebe Garden," and a rock garden. The "Hebe Garden" took its name from a statue located in this area. The property lies on a lower ramp of the Palisades, overlooking the Hudson River and was still extant in 2004. Anna P. Gilman Hill was the author of Forty Years of Gardening. She and her husband were also one-time owners of another AAG garden, Grey Gardens, in East Hampton, New York (NY103).

Persons associated with the property include: Winthrop Sargent Gilman, Jr. (architect and former owner, c. 1872); Robert Carmer Hill and Anna P. Gilman Hill (former owners), and Marian Cruger Coffin (landscape architect (c. 1925-1930).

NY650: Cooperstown -- Fernleigh

Owners: Clark family

Landscape architect: Reynolds, Marcus T.

Architect: Van Dyke, James
Hardenburgh, Henry

Landscape designer: Fleming, Bryant

Provenance: Lake & Valley Garden Club

Notes: The file includes 9 35mm slides, worksheets, photocopies of printed information about the garden, and photocopies of photographs of the garden from the New York State Historical Association library.

Fernleigh, the country home of the Clark family since the 19th century, is situated along both sides of the Susquehanna River, linked by a footbridge. The house, only part of which remains, was a Second Empire stone mansion designed by New Jersey architect James Van Dyke and built in 1869. The original garden was located to the south of the mansion and included a servants' house and Turkish bath. In 1923 Stephen Clark commissioned Marcus T. Reynolds to design new gardens for Fernleigh. Reynolds incorporated his love for Italian villas into the plans. When they were completed in 1929, the new Fernleigh gardens had terraces, balustrades, a fountain, and a swimming pool, which was placed on the site of the original garden. The garden architecture included a wrought-iron casino, pavilions, iron trellises, and bird cages. Reynolds' design centered the mansion, servants' house, and Turkish bath around the swimming pool and terraces. Period photographs show that the property was used extensively for lawn parties, fairs, and other recreational activities. Reynolds was responsible for the terraced plan for the garden, while Bryant Fleming, a landscape design professor at Cornell, drew up the planting plans. Planted beds are evident in the period photographs. Today, only a portion of the Fernleigh mansion remains. The Turkish bath is gone and the swimming pool has been replaced with grass. The wrought-iron casino and fountain still stand. Containers of large topiaries are placed in the garden during the summer months. Planted beds are not used, although some permanent plantings exist.

Persons associated with the garden include: the Clark family (owners, 1869 to date); James Van Dyke (architect, 1868); Henry Hardenburgh (architect, 1870s); Marcus T. Reynolds (architect and landscape architect, 1923-1929); Bryant Fleming (landscape designer, 1920s); and Christi Vadnais (artist of mural in pavilion, 1995).

The Lake and Valley Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Garden has been featured in Eugene J. Johnson, Style Follows Function: Architecture of Marcus T. Reynolds (Albany, NY: Washington Park Press, Ltd. and Mount Ida Press, n.d.), pp. 15-17.

Garden has been featured in Jessie A. Ravage, Redesigning Nature: Historic Gardens Around Otsego Lake (exhibit brochure), n.d.

Olmsted Brothers

Provenance: North Country Garden Club of Long Island

Notes: The folder includes a work sheet, narrative garden description, features plan, and copy of plan for rose garden (1927).

The Harrimans hired the Olmsted Brothers firm to design their 71-acre property in Brookville, New York. The estate was characterized by natural plantings of trees and shrubs; open vistas; wooded paths; water features; a walled garden; and a rose garden. After former owner, Albert Smith, died in 1936, the estate was subdivided and sold. The house was torn down, and a much smaller Cape Cod style frame house was built on part of the foundation. The gardens remained, but fell into disrepair. The current owner is in the process of restoring the garden according to the Olmsted plans.

Persons and Organizations associated with the garden include: Philip W. Livermore (former owner, ca. 1910-1918); Joseph W. Harriman (former owner, 1918-?); Albert L. Smith (former owner, ?-1936); Robert Lee Henry (former owner, 1945); Margaret Bayne (former owner); Mary W. Harris (former owner, 1956-1973); Hoppin and Koen (architects, ca. 1910); Beatrix Farrand (landscape architect, ca. 1910); Sir Alfred C. Bossom (architect, 1918); Olmsted Brothers (landscape architects, ca. 1920); James F. Dawson and Percival Gallagher (landscapers); and Elizabeth Thompson (garden designer, 1991-present).

The North Country Garden Club of Long Island facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Former owner: Tiffany, Louis Comfort, 1848-1933

Landscape architect: Hutcheson, Martha Brookes

Schulz, Hermann Fred
Innocenti & Webel

Provenance: North Country Garden Club of Long Island

Notes: The folders include a work sheet, copies of articles, copies of photographs by Mattie Edwards Hewitt, and features plan.

This five-acre property is surrounded by twenty acres of preserved land containing wetlands, a stream, and pond. Elmwood includes a formal Ilex garden dating from the 1920s. The lower courtyard is framed by brick walls. One length of this garden is planted with heirloom lilacs, underplanted with perennial geraniums. A shade garden at the far end is planted with ferns, hellebores, astilbe, oak leaf hydrangea and is overhung by a large, flowering cherry tree. Framed by a pair of hornbeam trees, two antique marble statues of fanciful rams overlook a hill which blooms with Camassia and bluebells in the spring. Wisteria vines hang from the trees below. The pool garden is green and simple with lawn, a Japanese holly hedge and a natural stone wall dividing it from the cutting garden. The wall is planted on top with Nepeta and Rosa "Carefree Wonder." The cutting garden is planted with annuals such as zinnias, ageratum, cleome, and cosmos. A large, stately black walnut tree shades the corner of this garden.

Persons and organizations associated with the garden include: Thomas F. Youngs (former owner, 1836); Louis Comfort Tiffany (former owner, ? - 1910); Charles L. Tiffany (former owner, 1910-1947); Bushrod B. and Margaret C. Howard (former owners, 1947-1952); Lowrie Flagg (former owner, 1952-1993); Martha Brookes Hutcheson (landscape architect, 1911-1912); Mattie Edwards Hewitt (photographer, 1927); Schulz, Innocenti & Webel (landscape architects, 2000-present); and Tony Lepsis (garden designer, 1997-present).

The North Country Garden Club of Long Island facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Elmwood related holdings consist of 1 folder (12 35 mm. slides)

Fox Ridge is located in Oyster Bay, New York. Established in 1990, the 10-acre property features a pond, specimen trees, perennial borders, and vegetable garden on land that had been horse pasture.

The property is entered through a long driveway, lined with Acer saccharum (sugar maples) on the left with split-rail fencing beyond. On the right side of the driveway, spring bulbs bloom at the edge of woodlands. The driveway curves around to the north before reaching a circular turn-around where the road then turns south at the main gate. This is a transitional moment between the main driveway into the property and the drive up to the house. A pair of square stone pillars topped with bluestone hold white painted wood gates. Another row of Acer saccharum (sugar maples) along the left of the drive with Forsythia beyond the trees and horse jumps that are original to the property. Looking northwest, back through the gate, there is a bank of Rhododendron. As the driveway curves around, it circles a pond.

The pond is considered the focal point of the property, and includes a re-circulating waterfall. At one end of the pond, nearest to the house, are Adirondack chairs and Fagus sylvatica "Purpurea" (copper beech). In the distance are many small flowering trees including Acer rubrum (red maple), Lagerstroemia (crepe myrtle), Salix (willow) and Prunus floribunda (crabapple). Nearby is a large dome-shaped Malus floribunda (Japanese crabapple) underplanted with Muscari (grape hyacinths) An alleé of six Zelkova serrata (Japanese Zelkova) trees connects the pond to the house. Southwest of the house, is a vegetable garden enclosed by a split-rail fence with Prunus floribunda (crabapple trees) and Prunus persica (peach trees) around its perimeter.

Next to the house, there is an upper terrace, with a green painted gate, which looks onto the pool. The pool has a brick patio in a herringbone pattern and small statues at the corners of the bluestone coping. There are also large banks of Rhododendron in the background. Another large field with banks of Rhododendrons and a large perennial border to the south of the house. In the spring, two of these beds are full of flowering bulbs.

Persons associated with the garden's design: Innocenti and Webel (landscape architect, 1980s -1990s), Keith Kroeger and Associates (architect, 1990s), Ed Stein (builder, 1990s), Tony Lepsis and Brian Whitney (garden design, 2008-2018).

NY862: Oyster Bay -- Hillside Farm

Provenance: North Country Garden Club of Long Island

Notes: The folders include a work sheet and features plan.

The 27-acre property features a "very old" wisteria arbor next to an in-ground steel swimming pool; an allee of Bradford pears; and a man-made pond, which previously served as the swimming pool. The garden also includes an English-type rose garden and a Dutch-influenced perennial/vegetable garden. According to the owner's son, Mr. John Minturn was responsible for all the major landscaping of Hillside Farm: gardens, ponds, woods, and the rhododendron collection brought from North Carolina.

Persons and organizations associated with the garden include: Mr. John Minturn (former owner, 1920s); Gus Rausch (superintendent/horticulturist, 1920s-1930s); Robert Bellois (superintendent/horticulturist, 1959-1979); Allen Bellois (superintendent/horticulturist, 1979-2003); and Amand Bellois (superintendent/horticulturist, 2003-present).

The North Country Garden Club of Long Island facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

NY274: Oyster Bay -- Holly Pond

Architect: Thompson, Benjamin
Myaido, Shogo J.
Architects Collaborative, Inc.

Gardener: Parenti, Louis
Wenger, Charlie
Grannis, John

Notes: The folders include worksheets, garden plans, photos of pages from an article about the house and garden, and other information about the garden and its owner.

This garden shows the influence of its owner's trip to Japan in the 1950s in the irregular shape of the pond and use of flat rocks around its rim; the island of planting from which a small waterfall issues; and the recirculating stream which runs from the pond under the holly hedge. The path of irregular flat stones and the round grass shapes in the small pebbled surface were inspired by circles made with moss in Samkoin, Kyoto, Japan. There is also a purification basin. The pool house garden has a dry stream with a stone bridge and at the beginning a small memorial (standing stone) to a child with the image of Jizo, the patron saint of children, women in childbirth, and travelers. Above it are two Korean ancestor figures leading the way to the upper garden, which is filled with different varieties of lilacs.

Persons and firms associated with the garden include: Ben Thompson (architect and landscape architect, 1954-1955); Shogo J. Myaido (architect, 1970); Louis Parenti (gardener, 1954-1962); Charlie Wenger (gardener, 1963-1978); John Grannis (gardener, 1978 to date); and the Architects Collaborative (architects, 1954-1955).

NY899: Oyster Bay -- Nouri Garden

Consultant: Weiler, Jack
Landscape: Weiler, Jack
Former owner: Marton-Smith Mr.
Iselin, Adrien
Landscape designer: Walsh, Donald

Notes: One file that includes worksheets and photocopies of aerial images, and 9 digital images.

The Nouri Garden is an estate of nearly 25 acres, part of a larger property on which trees were planted by the Olmsted Brothers firm prior to the building of this house in 1949. Many mature trees and shrubs comprise the current garden, including lengthy clipped yew hedges around the swimming pool, clipped holly at the entrance gate, clipped boxwood at the foundation of the house and at the swimming pool, Japanese maples near the pool, many rhododendron, pines and other evergreens and copper beech. Daffodils planted along the driveway and other bulbs and annuals add color to the grounds according to the seasons.

Persons associated with the garden include: Mr. and Mrs. Adrien Iselin (former owners, beginning in 1949); Mr. and Mrs. Marton-Smith (former owners, until 1967); Jack Weiler (tree specialist and landscaper, 1960s to present); Donald Walsh (landscape designer 1990s); Olmsted Brothers (landscape designers, dates unknown).

The North Country Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Garden Club of American Collection, ca. 1920- [ongoing].

Records related to the original site of this property, prior to it being subdivided, can be found at the Frederick Law Olmsted National Historic Site, Olmsted Job Number 07465 C. Oliver Iselin in Brookville, New York.

Former owner: Salvage, Samuel A. Mrs. Sir
 Landscape architect: Shipman, Ellen Biddle, 1869-1950
 Architect: Innocenti & Webel
 Architect: Bullard, Roger Harrington
 Owners: Banfi Vintners
 Provenance: North Country Garden Club of Long Island
 Notes: The folders include worksheets, garden plan, and copies of articles.
 The gardens at Rynwood, originally designed by Ellen Shipman were replanted in 1982 by Innocenti & Webel for minimum care. Today the gardens feature 45 acres of vineyard, started in 1982, along with formal lawn terraces. A reflecting pool is approached by descending steps in Lutyens' style from the upper lawn terrace.
 Persons associated with the garden include: Sir Samuel Agar Salvage (former owner, 1927-1946); Miss Margaret Emerson, widow of Alfred G. Vanderbilt, daughter of Isaac Emerson (former owner, 1946-1960), Frederick Wm. Irving Lundy (former owner, 1960-1977); Banfi Wine Corporation (owners, 1979-present); Roger Harrington Bullard (architect, 1927); Dr. Marcello Matteini and Mark Hampton (interior designers, 1980); Ellen Shipman (landscape architect, 1927); Innocenti & Webel (landscape architects, 1982); and Banfi Vintners (owners, 1979-).
 The North Country Garden Club of Long Island, Inc. submitted a 2003 update of the garden.
 Rynwood related holdings consist of 2 folders (42 35 mm. slides)

NY076: Oyster Bay -- Sunken Orchard Landscape Flanders, Annette Hoyt
architect:
Innocenti & Webel
Former owner: McCann, Charles E. F.

Notes: In 1932, the Architectural League of New York awarded the Gold Medal in Landscape Architecture to Annette Hoyt Flanders for her design of the French Garden at Sunken Orchard, a Long Island estate owned by Helena Woolworth McCann (daughter of the founder of the five-and-dime chain stores) and multi-millionaire Charles E. F. McCann. Flanders designed informal and formal garden rooms so the McCanns could entertain guests at both large and more intimate gatherings surrounding the Playhouse, a separate building from the main house that included an indoor tennis court, a music room, and ballroom. The French Garden featured a long vista and grass allée or garden-walk terminating at a classical temple on one end. Along the central axis point were expanses of lawn on either side punctuated with fountains. Symmetrical pathways were cut through the woodland areas and a formal knot garden planted with white flowers was set in close proximity to the Playhouse so that its embroidered pattern could be viewed from above.

Persons associated with the garden's design include: Annette Hoyt Flanders (landscape architect, 1925) and Helena Woolworth McCann and Charles E. F. McCann (former owners).

Notes: The folder includes worksheets.

The residence was built in 1963 as a smaller version of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Burnham's other house in Pebble Beach, California, and the original landscaping was designed by Umberto Innocenti of Innocenti & Webel. The spacious property includes formal and informal areas, with mossy walkways, stone walls and steps and a children's playground in the woods added over the years. The formal back lawn is enclosed by clipped hedges leading to a wall fountain. At the front of the house there are formal planted urns, walls and clipped hedges. But other features are more casual, including a vegetable garden surrounded by a rustic fence made of branches, the woodland gardens featuring two southern magnolias, and flowers and flowering shrubs bordering the front lawn. A swimming pool is enclosed by a high brick wall and planted for privacy. Another designed garden behind the house is the oval lawn bordered by flowering shrubs and trees. A children's playground is tucked into the woodland area along with a stone fire pit.

Persons associated with the garden include: Mr. & Mrs. William H. Burnham (former owners, circa 1963); Mr. & Mrs. Malcolm McConihe (former owners, 1969-1979); Mrs. William Moore (former owner, 1979-1980); Umberto Innocenti of Inocenti and Webel (landscape architect); Hermann F. Shulz, ASLA (landscape architect, 1980-2010), Irene Belk Miltimore (garden designer); Margarida & Mauricio Duraes (gardeners).

The North Country Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

NY248: Philipstown -- Crescent Reach

Landscape designer: Rich, Frederic C.

Architect: Byrns, Stephen F. AIA
BKSK Architects (New York)

Provenance: Garden Club of Orange and Dutchess Counties

Notes: The folder includes worksheets articles about the owner, and additional documentation.

Crescent Reach, a ten-acre property on a granite bluff overlooking the Hudson River, has thin acidic soil and many outcroppings of rock yet it has been developed into 15 different garden rooms or areas since 1989. Native trees, shrubs and perennials, including white, red and chestnut oaks, Eastern white and red pines, viburnum, mountain laurels, grasses and ferns recur throughout the property. Other plants that thrive in the acidic soil and climate and are used repeatedly in different settings include magnolia, Japanese maple, oak leaf hydrangea, rhododendron, native azaleas and ferns. The plan gives coherence to the large property, creating a backdrop for the design elements and featured plants that distinguish each garden room. There are 2800 planted trees, shrubs, perennials and bulbs at Crescent Reach.

The overall plan for the garden began by appreciating the natural setting and developing ways to take advantage of the cliff side location, natural waterfalls and stream on the property. The first task was the removal of invasive plants and the building of walkways made of sustainably harvested locust that would unite disparate parts of the property. Stairs were installed to connect the stream bed to more formal garden areas near the house. Rooms and areas are divided by low stone walls, bamboo fencing, arbors and gates. Bark-on cedar and green trellis were used for deer fencing to preserve the rustic appearance.

Design features include a small temple, a Zen dry garden, a carved mermaid recovered from a Manhattan demolition site and set in a wall, a Chinese scholar's bench, Thai temple bells and a gong. In addition to the immersion in and appreciation of the natural setting there are rooms designed for specific purposes. An outdoor theater has a two tier stage, seating, and the only linear perennial borders on the property. An outdoor conference room has a twelve-foot round bluestone table and ergonomically-designed rustic chairs. A sacred grove with a stone and copper drip fountain and Buddhist prayer gong is tucked under a broken granite ledge. The Zen dry garden, developed in 2009, is approached through an oversize gate under native trees that had the lower limbs removed to create a contemplative, Cathedral-like atmosphere.

The shade garden has red pines pruned to resemble bonsai, Japanese maples, wild geranium and buddleia to attract Monarch butterflies in late summer. The woodland garden includes primulas, woodland peonies, iris, and varieties of Solomon's seal and blood root. The deep pond is planted with water lilies and native iris and features two waterfalls. A shaded valley houses the fern glen, which includes non-native varieties.

Persons associated with the garden include: Frederic C. Rich (landscape designer, beginning in 1989); Stephen F Byrns (role unknown, dates unknown); BKSK Architects, New York (architects of the house, 1998).

The Garden Club of Orange and Dutchess Counties facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

NY334: Philipstown -- Stonecrop

Notes: The folder includes work sheets, photocopies of manuscript and published articles about the garden, garden plans, correspondence, and other information.

This 40-acre site, featuring 6 acres of gardens and more of meadows and woodland, is located in the highlands east of the Hudson River. Developed bit by bit by its owners since 1958, its varied features include rock gardens, a conservatory and alpine house, ponds and water features, a metasequoia grove, and systematic order beds. Plants from the garden are offered for sale and although the garden is opened to the public on a limited basis, it is still a private sanctuary, a true plant lover's paradise.

Stonecrop related holdings consist of 1 folder (13 35 mm. slides; 1 photoprint)

Garden has been featured in Derek Fell, photographer, "Gardens: At Stonecrop," Architectural Digest, June 1983, pp. 104-108+.

NY880: Philipstown -- Wagner Garden

Former owner: Moebus, William Moebus, Anna

Provenance: Philipstown Garden Club

Notes: Linnevoid.

The folder includes worksheets and site plans.

The Wagner Garden 'Linnevoid' occupies one acre of a former farm that comprises more than five acres in the Hudson Highlands. The house was at one time a barn on Griffin Farm, built circa 1850 and converted into a residence by former owners in 1946. The informal country garden on a sunny hillside is protected from deer by a seven-foot high fence around the entire perimeter. Old-fashioned roses are featured in the planted beds and on an arbor. Flowering trees and shrubs include magnolia, dogwood, Lady Apple, fruiting and ornamental quince, spirea, hydrangea and azalea.

The owners began their garden by cutting back the surrounding woods in 1961. Grass paths were planted between asymmetrical beds, which may contain wild flowers, herbs, vegetables, or fruit trees in addition to ornamentals. The owners do all the garden work themselves, which included building a greenhouse after a stay in England during the 1970s. The garden is designed for rambling, for aesthetic pleasure, and for the cultivation of food.

The property is located on an historic dirt road that has 18th century milestones. There is evidence that soldiers camped on the property circa 1770.

Persons associated with the garden include: Anna and William Moebus (former owners, 1946-1961).

The Philipstown Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

NY595: Rochester -- Allen Garden

Landscape architect: Steele, Fletcher, 1885-1971

Former owner: Allen, Charlotte Whitney
Allen, Atkinson

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, photocopies of publications mentioning the garden, and additional information.
Beginning around 1915, Fletcher Steele worked over a period of years designing and re-designing a garden for Atkinson and Charlotte Whitney Allen (and for Charlotte alone after the Allens' 1934 divorce). Incorporating European elements, especially from the Munich School, the garden featured evergreens and other greenery (Charlotte Allen detested flowers) as well as a long lawn leading away from the house toward a pool at the far end. During the 1920s a sculpture by Gaston Lachaise was added as a focal point, while later accents include an Alexander Calder mobile and a "Saracen" tent. Although Charlotte Allen no longer owned the property in 1978 when it was documented by the University of Rochester, the owners at that time were committed to retaining and maintaining the garden's historic design and features. The property was last sold in April 2009; the current status of the garden is unknown. With the exception of one image, the slides were all taken from published sources, although those sources reproduced original documentation.

Persons and firms associated with the garden include Fletcher Steele (landscape architect, 1915-1967); Charlotte Whitney Allen (former owner, 1915-1978?); and Atkinson Allen (former owner, 1915-1934). Allen Garden related holdings consist of 1 folder (6 slides (photographs))

The slide is taken from p. 35 of Robin Karson, Fletcher Steele, Landscape Architect: An Account of the Gardener's Life (New York: Harry N. Abrams, Inc./Sagapress, Inc., 1989). The image in the book is taken from an original image in the Fletcher Steele Collection, F. Franklin Moon Library, College of Environmental Science and Forestry, State University of New York, Syracuse, New York.

NY589: Rochester -- George Eastman House

Former owner: Eastman, George

Landscape architect: DeForest, Alling Stephen

Architect: Mead, William Rutherford, 1846-1928
Warner, John Foster

Landscape designer: Bragdon, Claude

Restorationist: Rahn, Katherine Wilson

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, photocopies of articles and other information about the property.

The gardens at the George Eastman house have been partially restored to the original circa 1920 designs of landscape architect Alling S. DeForest (1875-1957) and architect and theatrical designer Claude Bragdon (1866-1946), with work beginning in 1984 following a grant of $16,000 from the Rochester Garden Club. The original eight gardens rooms had been reduced to four: a terrace garden, library garden, rock garden and sunken west garden. The formal terrace garden has boxwood-edged flower beds planted with more than 90 varieties of perennials, with reconstructed brick paths between the beds. The library garden, replacing the historic cutting garden, contains double rows of arborvitae lined with tulip bulbs, trees, shrubs, ground cover plants and vines. The rock garden features scalloped borders of dolomite rocks and a grape arbor with seating beneath. The sunken west garden, originally designed by Bragdon and influenced by the gardens at Hestercombe in England designed by Sir Edward Lutyens and Gertrude Jekyll, has formal flower beds and a wisteria-covered garden house. Trees and shrubs have been planted in front of the house, placed so that they will not obscure the house and 70 feet of open lawn. About 300 historic varieties of perennials, bulbs, ground covers, trees and shrubs have been planted.

George Eastman (July 12, 1854-March 14, 1932) purchased 8.5 acres in 1902 and worked with landscape architect Alling S. DeForest to install elegant floral gardens as well as a working farm on the property. Eastman purchased four more acres in 1916. The Georgian Revival house and colonnaded pergola were designed by architect J. Foster Warner. During Eastman's lifetime, known as the "Country Place Era", there were five greenhouses including a palm house that supplied fresh flowers and orchids, a rose garden, orchard, sizable vegetable and berry gardens, a poultry yard, stables, a barn, and pastures. Eastman bequeathed the property to the University of Rochester as a home for the college president, and that led to the simplification of the gardens, including replacing brickwork walkways with turf or concrete. A sunken lily pool was filled in and covered by a rectangular reflecting pool. The remaining farm elements such as the vegetable garden and livestock facilities were removed or converted. When the Eastman House was transformed into a museum of photography beginning in 1949 the greenhouses and peony garden on the west side were replaced by a parking lot, with the remaining lawn bordered on two sides with white flowers.

The museum's West Garden was dedicated as a memorial to Virginia Pike Judson, past president of the Rochester Garden Club in 1985. At that

The Eastman House gardens and grounds can be toured, with guided tours offered from mid-May through September. The property was designated a National Historic Landmark on November 13, 1966 and is listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

Persons associated with the garden include George Eastman (former owner, 1902-1947), University of Rochester (former owner, 1947), George Eastman House, Inc. (former owner, 1947-), Alling Stephen DeForest (landscape architect, 1902-1921), Claude Bragdon (landscape architect of West Garden, 1916-1917), J. Foster Warner (architect, 1902), William Rutherford Mead (architect, 1902), Katherine Wilson Rahn (landscape architect, restoration, 1985).

NY254: Rochester -- Woodside
 Landscape architect: Smith, Sibley Coslett
 Former owner: Smith, Silas O., 1783 or 4-1863
 Willard, Ernest R.
 Willard, Mary L.
 Notes: The folders include worksheets, photocopies of articles about the house and garden, photocopies of Sibley C. Smith's designs and sketches, and additional information about the property.
 Woodside was originally built around 1838 in the Greek Revival style by Silas O. Smith, a dry-goods merchant.. Landscape architect Sibley Coslett Smith, whose parents lived next door (but were not related to Silas O. Smith), designed a garden for the property about 1917, when it was owned by Mr. and Mrs. Ernest R. Willard. After years of neglect the garden was restored in 1978 according to the original blueprints and sketches. The restoration featured crabapple, lilac, hollies, and perennials as well as structural details such as a gazebo and tuteurs. An island in the driveway was planted with ferns, Japanese maple, and dwarf Scotch pines. Woodside was for many years the home of the Rochester Historical Society, but was sold around 2009 and returned to private ownership.
 Persons associated with the site include Sibley Coslett Smith (landscape architect, 1917), Silas O. Smith (former owner, ca. 1838), and Ernest R. and Mary L. Willard (former owners, 1917).
 Woodside related holdings consist of 2 folders (1 glass negative; 2 slides (photographs))
 Thomas Warren Sears photograph collection, 1900-1966.
 Garden has been featured in John Taylor Boyd, Jr., "Some Principles of Small House Design," The Architectural Record, Vol. XLVI, No. V (November 1919), pp. 403-415.

NY873: Rye -- Bird Homestead

Provenance: Garden Club of Rye

Former owner: Bird, Henry
Erikson, Alice Bird

Landscape architect: Erikson, Alice Bird

Notes: The folder includes worksheets and photocopies of articles.

Located on the banks of the tidal Blind Brook estuary, lined with salt marshes, Bird Homestead was the home of Henry Bird (1869-1959), a prominent entomologist and president of the New York Entomological Society who specialized in the study of moths. The landscape and garden was of a modest size and represents a unique combination of a small self-sufficient farm with ornamental perennial beds, shrubs, and roses plus fruit trees that combined both beauty and utility, along with specific plants grown for entomological research. The Greek revival style house, outbuildings, picket fence and stonewall all date to the 19th century, a rarity on Westchester County's Long Island Sound Shore.

The garden features date primarily from the 1920s and 1940s, with additions in 2012 for educational purposes. The Bouton-Bird Erikson family owned the property for five generations from 1852-2009. The non-profit Bird Homestead Preservation trust now operates the property as a historic, environmental, and educational site.

The Greek revival style house built in the 19th century, white oak trees shading the house, the remains of earlier gardens, and outbuildings including a barn, a workshop and chicken coop. The small family farm was self-sufficient until well into the 20th century, raising chickens and growing fruits and vegetables. The property is being restored by the Bird Homestead Preservation Trust and is used to teach children about the natural environment including organic gardening in four raised beds on the site of an earlier large cold frame. A cedar arbor for grape vines was recently hoisted back to stand vertically in the garden after many years of leaning at a severe angle. Surviving shrubs near the house include lilac, wisteria, roses, azalea, mock orange and beautybushes, and a bed of ferns is undisturbed by neglect for many years.

Henry Bird encouraged the use of beneficial insects in the garden rather than spraying pesticides and maintained a small garden area with plants that would attract the insects he wanted to study. Bird also was a proponent of native plants and established a large natives garden at 'Bye-Wood' on the Mr. and Mrs. William J. Knapp estate, which led him to write "A Proposed Type of American Garden" with Louise Allen Knapp, published in 1929 in ASLA's "Landscape Architecture" journal. Daughter Alice Bird Erikson (1903-1993) was an artist and trained as a landscape architect at the Lowthorpe School of Landscape Architecture. In 1942 she illustrated Trees of the Countryside (Alfred A. Knopf) by Margaret McKenny, who had been a classmate.

Persons associated with the garden include Henry Bird (former owner, 1959), Alice Bird Erikson (former owner and landscape architect, 1903-1994); City of Rye, New York (2009-).

The Little Garden Club of Rye facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

NY306: Rye -- Brookside

Former owner: Matthews, Jean Louise Flagler

Notes: The folders include work sheets and a photocopied page from the 1967 Garden Club of America Visiting Gardens Guide.

Brookside was the home of Jean Louise Flagler Matthews, granddaughter of Florida tycoon Henry Flagler. Featured in the 1967 Garden Club of America Visiting Gardens Guide, it was noted as a showplace, with "gardens and landscaping of horticultural interest and great beauty." Of particular note were thousands of naturalized daffodils on the banks and hillsides surrounding a pond.

Persons associated with the property include: Jean Louise Flagler Matthews (former owner, 1960s).

Brookside related holdings consist of 3 folders (10 35 mm. slides; 3 transparencies; 4 photoprints; 5 negatives)

NY864: Rye -- Mason Garden

Provenance: Little Garden Club of Rye

Garden borders, paths, and trails line the outer edges of the property and create secluded areas while leaving wide expanses of lawn to give the visitor an impression of a space much larger than the property's two acres. The garden is entered from a small courtyard through a sculpted arch in an evergreen and boxwood hedge. The rear exposure of the hedge provides a backdrop for a copse of dogwood and maples; and an anchor for a perennial garden that winds its way into a shade garden and deposits you at the entry to a gravel path. The path travels through a woodland garden ending at a tranquil outcrop of rocks with a cascading spring into a pool filled with goldfish, water lilies, and other aquatic plants. The water garden contains a gnarled and twisted yew, which created a natural sculpture shading a sitting area with a teak bench. A cedar shaving path continues along the perimeter of the property through additional specimen border gardens. A small formal garden with boxwood-lined beds leads to grassy paths through arches created from surrounding hardwoods. Two large conical yews defines a formal seating area.

The mission of the Rye Nature Center is to promote conservation and environmental education within an urban forest and preserve. The 47 acre site, once a private estate, is comprised of three distinct gardens: a 300 square foot educational garden inside a deer fence, a rain garden, and a native plant garden, an educational center with two classrooms in the former carriage house of the estate, woodlands with natural water features and an outcropping of volcanic gneiss, more than two miles of hiking trails, a seasonal butterfly house, and two children's playgrounds and a sunflower maze. Classes are given for pre-school and school age children, summer campers, and adults on water conservation and storm water management, plant lifecycles including decomposition, and gardening techniques that are beneficial to the environment and wildlife. The teaching methods are hands on, encouraging participants to sample organically grown produce while planting or hand-picking insects that will be fed to the bearded dragons housed in the educational center. Rain water is collected and channeled to the rain garden's ferns, Joe Pye weed, milkweed, blue flag iris, cardinal flower and shrubs. A roof garden with self-watering containers also demonstrates how rain water can be captured and used.

Food grown in the gardens is used for cooking demonstrations and leftover food from the campers is turned into compost for the vegetable garden. Logs from the woodlands, straw and wood chips are inoculated with several varieties of mushroom spawn, also demonstrating how decomposition aids food production. Tomatoes and squash are planted in straw bales that were used for autumn decorations and an old wash basin is repurposed as a bog garden containing Venus flytraps, pitcher plants, cranberries and sphagnum moss. The native plant garden, established by the Little Garden Club of Rye in 1988, includes an edible forest garden shaded by sweet gum trees growing native perennials, trees, shrubs and ground covers that provide food for wildlife and humans. Also a bee-friendly garden is being planned by the nature center staff.

The Friends of Rye Nature Center was first founded as the Rye Conservation Society in 1964 and has been managed by the non-profit Friends since 2006. It has been certified as an urban wildlife sanctuary by the National Institute for Urban Wildlife.

Persons associated with the garden include: Parsons family (former owners 1902-1942); City of Rye (owner, 1959-); Nature's Cradle (rain garden design and installation, 2011); Jacob Nurick (urban farming installation, 2013); Taro Letaka (director of conservation, 2013-); Annette Hein (horticulturist, 2014-).

Little Garden Club of Rye facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Provenance: Little Garden Club of Rye

Notes: The folder includes a work sheet and features plan.

Established in 1985, this one and a half acre manicured garden has an Asian influence inspired by the owners' extensive travels through the Far East. The driveway entrance to the property is framed on one side by a delicate Japanese maple in a small perennial bed; and on the other, by a stand of weeping evergreens in a bed with iris and lilies. A rock wall was constructed to create a bank with a shrub and flowering plant border along the back edge of the the property. Another rock wall creates a bank of foundation plantings, and comes to a finish in a sweeping stone staircase from the back of the house. A stepping stone path leads from the pool to a large two-story pool house. The land was reclaimed from a "muddy expanse" by directing the natural springs into a meandering stream that dissects the rear lawn. A stone bridge connects the lawn lawn areas. A formal rose garden exists through an arched gateway. The rose garden has a traditional design with brick walkways laid out geometrically and anchored by garden sculpture, seating, and a garden house.

Person(s) and organization(s) associated with the property include: Kevin Mangan of Rosedale Nurseries (landscape planner, 1990-present).

Southworth, C. Robert, Mrs.
Southworth, C. Robert
Garden designer: Steinhoff, Tim

Horticulturist: DeCiutiis, Laurie
Gardener: Pelletier, Amy
Provenance: Millbrook Garden Club

Notes: The 55-acre property included an 1866 Hudson Valley style Victorian farmhouse with wide porches, historic black walnut, Norway spruce and massive arborvitae, worn out lawns and a five acre pond when purchased in 1971. Beginning in 1982 the current owners had gardens designed, first installing a gently curving driveway to replace one that ran straight from the road. They had added a stone terrace and shallow stone steps that became the starting point for long borders flanking a wide grass walkway, planted with perennials on one side and woody shrubs on the other. Towards the barn they placed a huge custom-built curved bench in front of a stone wall and hedge; parallel to the borders there is a long wooden pergola above low stone walls. Beyond the pergola there is a fenced meadow with a mowed path to the pond and beyond that there are woodlands. Other gardens include native plants, wildflowers, cutting flowers and vegetables. There is a decorative iron gazebo and another wooden gazebo moored at the pond that has a silent motor for perambulations. The cohesion and flow between the house and garden were influenced by Gertrude Jekyll's design principles, but a heavy shale substratum impairs drainage and necessitates rather frequent replanting of perennials and bulbs.

Persons associated with the garden include Dr. Gilbert Titus Pearsall (former owner, 1866-); Mr. and Mrs. C. Robert Southworth (former owners, -1971); Tim Steinhoff (garden designer, 1982-1992); Laurie DeCiutiis (horticulturist, 2002-2008); Amy Pelletier (gardener, 2010-2017).

NY512: Southampton -- Currey Garden
 Landscape architect: Ireys, Alice Recknagel, 1911-2000
 Notes: The folders include worksheets and other information.
 Alice Recknagel Ireys was the landscape architect for this property. Taking advantage of the site's water views, Ireys designed an expansive stone terrace that was used for dining and other outdoor living functions. A side of the home away from the water featured an allée of decorative trees that were underplanted with annuals in season. Planting immediately around the house appears to have been limited in order not to obstruct the water views, although a 2009 description mentions rose and iris beds, boxwood, a cutting garden, and daylilies.
 Persons associated with the garden include: Alice Recknagel Ireys (landscape architect, ca. 1960-1972).

NY439: Southampton -- Madoo
 Landscape designer: Dash, Robert Owner: Dash, Robert
 Notes: The folder includes worksheets, a garden plan, and photocopies of correspondence and articles about the garden.
 Madoo is an artist's garden that has been under development since 1967. Its name comes from an old Scottish term meaning "my dove." Situated on two acres on the south shore of eastern Long Island, it has grown more or less spontaneously with plants dominating over any hard structure. A radical pruning technique, whimsy, and bold use of color in outdoor furnishings are constants in this oceanside garden that reflects its creator's life as an artist. The garden was opened to the public on July 10, 1993.
 Persons associated with the garden include Robert Dash (landscape designer and owner, 1966 to date).
 Madoo related holdings consist of 1 folder (12 35 mm. slides)

Former owner: Lee, J. Bowers

Architect: Lee, Sarah H.
 Architect: Fraser, Arthur
 Grounds superintendent: Czelatka, Joseph
 Provenance: Southampton Garden Club
 Notes: The folder includes worksheets, site plans, and other information.
 Located on eighteen plus acres The Meadow Club, founded in 1887, is a private tennis club where the gardens link the clubhouse and dining rooms with the thirty-six grass courts. The garden was established in 1902 with a footprint that is basically rectangular in shape, echoing the geometry of both the tennis courts and the clubhouse. The layout of the perennial and annual garden beds is described as "curvilinear."
 A tightly clipped privet hedge in the "English Style," defines the gardens. An ovoid arrangement of Pee Gee hydrangeas, truncated in size and with trunks knotted and gnarled by weather and age, is the central focus. An archway punctuating the privet hedge is both functional and aesthetic. It provides a charming entry into the gardens from the tennis courts and, viewed from the clubhouse, focuses one's eye on the grass courts beyond. The "bones" of the gardens are the privet, hydrangeas and other perennial shrubs that thrive in the seaside environment situated 200 yards from the Atlantic Ocean. They serve as a backdrop for an annual border that is bold and distinctive in color, texture and shape.
 Persons associated with the garden include: Arthur Fraser, architect (1992-present), Joseph Czelatka, grounds superintendent (1979-present).
 The Southampton Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.
 The Meadow Club of Southampton related holdings consist of 2 folders (7 35 mm. slides (photographs))
 This garden was featured in "The Meadow Club Centennial, 1887-1987," privately published, 1987.

NY803: Southampton -- St. Andrew's Dune Church

Provenance: Southampton Garden Club
 Notes: The folder includes a worksheet.
 The land surrounding Saint Andrew's Dune Church represents some of the last surviving dunescape in the village of Southampton that the public can enjoy. The planting immediately surrounding the Church and the Magowan Memorial Garden to the west have been steadily improved over the past twenty years. Since the 1920s, all of the improvements to the gardens have involved the direction of members of the Southampton Garden Club. The Trustees annually select a member of the Garden Club as the Chairman of the Grounds Committee, and the then-serving President of the Garden Club is invited to serve as an ex-officio member of that Committee. This eighty-year tradition has expedited rapid recovery after hurricanes and allowed knowledgeable supervision of construction and repair projects. The purpose of the garden is not only to enhance the beauty of the Church, but also to demonstrate the variety of native and ornamental plants that can tolerate an oceanside setting and contribute to the preservation of both natural and man-made environments. In 1987, the garden was redesigned through the generosity of Mrs. Robert A. Magowan and her children and dedicated to the memory of Robert Anderson Magowan, a Trustee for 37 years and former Treasurer of Saint Andrew's. Following Mrs. Magowan's death in 2001, a new memorial table was placed on a stone in the garden.

Persons and firms associated with the garden include: United States Coast Guard-US Life Saving Service (former owners, 1851); Dr. T. Gaillard Thomas (donor, 1879); C. Wyllis Betts (donor of land and church, 1879); Edward H. Kendall (designer of choir and aisles, 1887-88 and 1894); R. H. Robertson (designer of reredos, altar, and decorations, 1893); George E. Wood (designer of belfry tower with main entrance, 1903); Arthur W. L. Fraser (designer of organ tower, 1995); Mrs. Alexander T. Mason & Mrs. William M. NY858: Stanford -- Petersen Garden

Creator: Millbrook Garden Club

Notes: The folder includes a work sheet and features plan.

Begun in 1981, this garden is a plant collector's garden with an informal country garden design. Unusual trees planted in small sizes are gradually gaining importance. The property includes meadow, pond, and farmland views.

The Millbrook Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

NY795: Syosset -- Memorial Cemetery of St. John's Church

Former owner: Jones, John Devine

De Forest family

Superintendent: Carew, William J.

Landscape architect: Olmsted Brothers

architect:

Provenance: Three Harbors Garden Club

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet, topographical and planting plans, additional narrative and visual documentation about the site, and a plant list from 1924.

This 37-acre site was given to St. John's Church by John Devine Jones in 1862. The De Forest family, local estate owners, bought approximately one-third of this parcel from the church with the intention of creating a private family memorial park and in 1918 hired Olmsted Brothers to design it. The result, with the appearance of a park or nature preserve, includes curving paths that follow the naturally rolling land; dark, simple tomb slabs of black slate that from a distance look more like natural stones than gravestones; and low stone walls and steps that lead to and help define family plots. These plots, which are as much as a half acre in size, are also defined by the shrubs and trees the Olmsteds selected and sited. Among these are native plants such as Cornus florida (flowering dogwood), Juniperus virginiana (red cedar), Rhododendron carolinianum (Carolina rhododendron), Kalmia latifolia (mountain laurel), Betula papyrifera (canoe birch), Vinca minor (common periwinkle), and diverse azaleas, viburnums, and ferns. In 1930 the family heirs (De Forests and Whitmans) sold their private cemetery back to the church, which subsequently commissioned Olmsted Brothers to design the remainder of the estates section of the cemetery.

Persons and firms associated with the property include: John Devine Jones (former owner, before 1862); the De Forest family (former owners, 1918-1930); William J. Carew (superintendent, 2002); and Olmsted Brothers (landscape architects, 1918, 1932, 1958).

Memorial Cemetery of St. John's Church related holdings consist of 1 folder (10 35 mm. slides)

Records related to this site can be found at the Frederick Law Olmsted National Historic Site, Olmsted Job Number 05571, DeForest Burial Plot.

NY802: Tomkins Cove -- Rose Cove

Landscape Furlong, Ethelbert Ely, d. 1993

architect:

Provenance: Rumson Garden Club

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet, copy of patent approval for trademark by Kittie N. Tomkins, and site plan.

Calvin Tomkins, Jr. built Rose Cove in 1900. The property is located high on a hillside with views of the Hudson River. From what can be assumed by studying the photos, a stone terrace was a level above the formal gardens. Steps led down through woods to the two gardens--rose and cutting gardens. Furlong described his work in a business brochure as "seven gardens, garden walks, pools, fountains, garden houses, perennial borders, [and] natural plantings." It is currently unknown where the other five gardens were located. It is known that one was a sunken garden. The property was subsequently subdivided and several houses were added to the original site.

Persons and Organizations associated with the garden include: Mr. and Mrs. Calvin and Kittie Tomkins, Jr. (former owners, 1900-1930s?); Mrs. Katherine Villard (former owner, 193?-?); and Ethelbert Furlong (landscape architect, 1920s).

NY286: Warwick -- Meadowburn
Creator: Ely, Helena Rutherford, -1920
Provenance: Garden Club of Orange and Dutchess Counties
Notes: Ely Gardens [Middletown Daily Times-Press, 7 November 1925]
The folder includes worksheets; landscape plans; copies of photographs; copy of biography of Helena Rutherford Ely(October 1951); compilation of notes from oral history by Albert Furman, Jr. (1998-2000); and copies of articles and programs.

The originals of NY286005-NY286057 do not belong to Archives of American Gardens (AAG) and were scanned from a photo album. AAG has them in digital format for research only.

Meadowburn was the summer home of Helena Rutherford Ely, a prominent gardening author who wrote three books at the beginning of the 20th century. Her first book, A Woman's Hardy Garden, is reflected throughout the five acres of gardens she designed at Meadowburn. She has been called the American Gertrude Jekyll, as they both advocated a casually abundant, hardy, no-fuss gardening style. Towards the end of her career as a designer/gardner, Mrs. Ely was more and more drawn to the use of evergreens.

Vernon, New Jersey, Warwick, New York's "sister town" across the state line, is also shown as Meadowburn's location. Meadowburn straddles the border between the two states. According to Helena Ely Rutherford Meade's biography of her mother written in 1951, "Meadowburn Farm is mainly in New Jersey, but there is still a good bit of it in the State of New York." Though it is listed in a registration form (1992) for the National Register of Historic Places as being located in Vernon Township, New Jersey, this designation only covered the "significant features of the house and gardens at Meadowburn Farm; five acres, more or less."

Persons and organizations associated with this garden include: Louisa and Mary Rutherford (former owners, 1853-1860); John and Charlotte Rutherford (former owners, 1860-1881); Helena Rutherford Ely (former owner, 1881-1920); Alfred Ely, Jr. (former owner); Charles H. Coster (former owner, 1930-1977); Albert Furman, Sr. (gardener, 1893-1948); Albert Furman, Jr. (gardener (1948-2004); and Kurt Seligman (frog sculpture and fountain pool).

The Garden Club of Orange and Dutchess Counties facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Meadowburn related holdings consist of 3 folders (26 35 mm. slides)

NY630: Wellsville -- Elizabeth Bradley Holbrook Garden

Former owner: Bradley, Harry

Bradley, Myrtle

Holbrook, Elizabeth Bradley

Landscape Reaves, Eric J.

designer:

Provenance: Garden Club of Hartford

Notes: The folders include a garden design and narrative history, as well as a description and worksheets.

"This garden is unusual in several respects. It is not one but several gardens--a formal English garden, a terraced garden, a rock garden, a wildflower garden, a rose garden, cutting garden, kitchen garden, orchard and meadow. The design and workmanship of the terraces, the use of local fieldstone and ornamental wrought iron railings to sculpt the natural slope of the land into a variety of outdoor spaces and vistas is most unusual, as is the profusion of lilacs throughout. It is a sanctuary for birds and wildlife."

Persons associated with the property include: Harry and Myrtle Bradley (former owners, 1900-1955); Elizabeth Bradley Holbrook (Mrs. George W.) (former owner, 1955-1992); and Eric J. Reaves (landscape designer, 1922-1923).

The Garden Club of Hartford facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Notes: The Rumson Garden club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation in 2021.

This 50 acre farm dates to the 19th century and was documented in circa 1940-1949. Visitors to the property during this time included Thomas Mann and Albert Einstein as they fled Nazi Germany. Some of the gardens on the property are over 100 years old. It features various gardens including an herb garden, kitchen garden, water garden, rose garden, and rock garden. The significant hardscape elements on the property include a greenhouse, swimming pool, terrace, tree house, two-room playhouse, retaining wall and patio. A walkway leads from the house to the formal gardens and small lily pool with a fountain in the center. Along the walkway are roses and irises. A garden path leads to the entrance of a hidden, maze-like boxwood garden. The vegetable/flower gardens and the pool area are connected by a grape covered pergola. Behind the pool area is a red clay tennis court. A man-made lake was installed on the property by Max and Mabel Rossbach.

Persons associated with the garden include: Max Rossbach (former owner, circa 1915-1963); Mabel Rossbach (former owner, circa 1915-1967/8); IBM (former owner, circa 1967/8-2000).

NY461: Willsboro -- Flat Rock Camp

Former owner: Paine, Augustus
 Paine, Augustus, Mrs.
 Hickey, William S.
 Hickey, William S., Mrs.
 Paine, Peter S.

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet, a map of the 183-acre camp, and two photocopied, published descriptions of the garden. The garden is noted for its incorporation of natural rock outcroppings in a lakeside setting into its overall design and planting scheme.

Originally developed as a camp in the late 19th century, this 183-acre site on the shores of Lake Champlain includes three different gardens: a walled garden, a rock garden, and a picking garden. Lying between the camp and the lake, the rock garden features low-lying flower beds and trees. The walled garden lies west of the camp and is surrounded by a curving, five-foot-high wall, which forms a horseshoe shape on its open-ended eastern side. The picking garden lies along the road which is followed on the approach to the Flat Rock Camp proper. It is planted with both flowers and vegetables; a grape arbor and cold frames are also found there. Throughout the site flat rock outcroppings lend themselves to the growth of mosses, trees, and wild flowers.

Persons associated with the property include: Mr. and Mrs. Augustus G. Paine (former owners, ca. 1888-?); Mr. and Mrs. William S. Hickey (former owners, 1978-1981); and Peter S. Paine (former owner, 1981-1997).

NY961: Willsboro -- Scragwood Garden

Former owner: Wood, Charles Fiske Garden: Wood, Florence Tanner
 designer:
 Provenance: Essex County Adirondack Garden Club
 Notes: The folder includes worksheets, features map, planting plans, historical images and other documentation as well as 21 digital images.

Established circa 1910, Scragwood Garden is located on one third of an acre in Willsboro, New York. The property lies on what was once a large land tract owned by the Clark family that dates back to the mid-1800s. The garden is adjacent to the Scragwood home, a clapboard house with elements of the Gothic Revival Style, built circa 1842. From 1857 to 1895 it was the home of Solomon Wesley Clark, Rhoda Adsit Clark and their seven children. Solomon Clark operated an extensive limestone quarry which furnished stones for the foundations of the Brooklyn Bridge and the New York State Capitol. Scragwood Garden's establishment is attributed to Florence Tanner Wood, the wife of Charles Fiske Wood, Solomon's grandson. Scragwood Garden was abandoned following Florence's death in 1945. The original plan for the garden was discovered in 2003. Restoration of the garden's traditional Colonial Revival pattern was begun in 2004 and completed in 2012.

The perimeters of Scragwood Garden are defined by low limestone walls. The garden is divided into five parterres separated by paths of blue limestone. The paths converge at a diamond shape in the center, marked by a sundial and centerpiece of Lake Champlain stones.

During the restoration, perennials found still growing on the grounds were kept and reset if necessary. These include varieties of Dutch iris, daffodils, narcissus, thistle, lupine, pink and white phlox, hens and chicks, and century plants. The garden was restored with close attention to the plantings noted on the original drawings. Some plants from the original plan will not thrive in the current climate, and annuals have been included to compensate.

Scragwood Garden is visited by garden clubs, historians and other groups and individuals who are particularly interested in vernacular Colonial Revival gardens.

Persons associated with the garden include: Charles Fiske Wood (former owner, 1920-1943); and Florence Tanner Wood (garden designer, circa 1910).

Essex County Adirondack Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Original documents pertaining to the Clark family are located in the private collection of the current owner of the property.

 Former owner: Graniere, Bobby McCall, Cary Lawson
 Architect: Samsel, Jim Turner, Deborah Landscaper: Hoots, Mark
 Provenance: The French Broad River Garden Club Foundation

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, garden plans, and photocopies of articles.

Created in 2010 and 2011 this Asian dry-landscape garden features more than 200 bonsai and overlooks a stone house and courtyard garden within a one and one-quarter acre hillside property in North Carolina. The owners named their garden after the Temple of the Golden Pavilion in Kyoto, Japan, and installed a pavilion used for entertaining, winter storage of some of the bonsai collections, and for storing gardening supplies. The rectangular garden and adjacent lawn are enclosed by low stone walls where the smaller bonsai containers are displayed, each sitting on a revolving stone to facilitate watering and sun exposure. The surface of the dry garden is brown crushed gravel, with islands of mondo grass and stonecrop planted with Japanese maples, boxwood, dwarf hosta, rockwork, and two large boulders echoing Tenryuji's boulder arrangement in Kyoto. There is a waterfall boulder from which water feeds into a meandering stream that ends at a stone-lined small pond, with a statue of Buddha alongside. The pond and stream are lined with pebbles and usually kept dry. A brass Burmese temple gong hangs at the pavilion.

The owners became interested in bonsai and Asian design while living in New York, and have been active in the National Bonsai Friendship Foundation, the National Bonsai and Penjing Museum at the U.S. National Arboretum in Washington DC, and the World Bonsai Federation. Two ancient trees in their collection were gifts for service to the federation.

Persons associated with the garden include: Jim Samsel and Deborah Turner (pavilion architects); Mark Hoots (landscaper).

Landscape designer: Godfrey, Charles E., Jr.

Landscape: Alexander, Kirk

Provenance: The French Broad River Garden Club Foundation

Notes: The folder includes a work sheet and feature plans.

This garden is located in a suburb of Asheville at 2,200 feet altitude. It was designed and built simultaneously with the construction of the 5,000 square foot French Chateau-style house. The garden is located across the width of the rear of the house. A large waterfall and "stream" run the breadth of the house; and are visible from the many terraces of the property. Most of the flowers are white and pale pink. There are urns and toppled jardinieres with flowers flowing from them. A vegetable garden was added in 1999 on the northwest portion of the lawn with decorative fencing. This vegetable garden is protected from the deer population of the area. There are three levels of the back lawn. They include the terrace areas, a waterfall area, and a higher lawn with tall trees to provide privacy in the rear. The front of the house looks down a significant slope to the street with naturalistic plantings among the trees. Immaculately maintained by the owners, the gardens exude a "Continental flavor."

Persons and organizations associated with the property include: Architectural Accents (1985-1986); Richard Thornton, RA (1985); Charles E. Godfrey, Jr. (landscape, 1986); April Carder (landscape, 1986); and Kirk Alexander (landscape plan, 1987).

The French Broad River Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

NC124: Asheville -- Brown Hill Gardens

Provenance: The French Broad River Garden Club Foundation

Photographer: Lockwood, A.

Brown, Karen K.
Morgan, Katrina
Owner: Brown, Elizabeth
Brown, Kemper

Notes: Brown Hill Gardens was an undeveloped rural site in 1983 when the owners began a journey of art, science, and living, first by siting their house on a knoll near a mature white oak in the middle of their 7-1/2 acres. The land sloped upwards from the road, with woodlands, masses of rhododendron and proliferating wildflowers that they wanted to leave undisturbed as much as possible. With new projects every few years the property has become less rustic and more sophisticated with stonework replacing walls and steps made from railroad ties and gravel paths with steppingstones replacing mulch. They've added another ten acres and cultivate about two acres surrounding the house with 15 acres of managed native woodlands. Every time a construction project left disturbed or newly uncovered areas the soil has been supplemented with rock phosphate and organic material for one season before new planting. The owners were determined to save as many native plants as possible, moving rhododendron maximum, mountain laurel and ferns from the woods to supplement hollies, leucothoe, yew and pieris around the foundation of the house.

A survey of the property discovered yellow lady's slipper, trillium, trailing arbutus, black cohosh, crested iris, monkshood, trout lilies, bellwort, and Jack-in-the-pulpit natives. A shady perennial bed was planted with creeping phlox, cardinal flower, columbine, astilbe, fern and hosta. A fruit and vegetable garden was planted in 1990 with apples, peaches, blueberries, raspberries, grapes, strawberries, asparagus and annual vegetables. The perennials were phased out in favor of thinning out and limbing up some of the native trees, which include hawthorne, dogwood, sourwood, poplar and oak, and adding specimen conifers, trees and shrubs that can be viewed from the house and deck or from strolling paths. Wildflowers persist as the understory. Every few years there was a new construction project followed by a new garden.

The house is approached from a 1000-foot winding drive with a chipseal finish on brown Tennessee pea gravel. Alongside there are thickets of rhododendron with native moss on the shoulders that is carefully maintained. Additional planting includes Japanese maple, winter honeysuckle, hellebore, witch hazel and Florida anise. A bank of leucothoe above the drive was cleared out for a new terrace and fire pit, an outdoor gathering place during the pandemic and a new sunny garden for dwarf conifers, dwarf Japanese maples, and other specimen plants. Change has been a constant in the garden journey: the front foundation bed has been redesigned three times, the perennial bed has been renovated four times, and the vegetable/fruit garden was moved when an outbuilding was added. The gardens also yield relics from native Americans.

Persons associated with the garden's design: Robert Ulrey (landscape designer, foundation garden, 1983-1987); Kirk Alexander (patio garden designer, 2003-2004); Hunter Stubbs (north garden designer, 2006); Kathryn Writesel (maintenance and design, 2006-2013); Elizabeth Brown (maintenance and design, 2006-).

Brown, Karen K.

Owner: Hutchinson, Eileen
Hutchinson, Chuck

Notes: The French Broad River Garden Club Foundation facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation in 2023.

Bucky's Run, named after the owners' late Labrador, was created since 2009 from an overgrown and unruly landscape that was removed and was replaced with over 100 tons of stone, more than 150 cubic yards of garden soil, and more than 400 trees, shrubs and multiple varieties of perennials. The landscape styling of the one and two-thirds acres property includes stone-edged perennial beds with Japanese maples, hornbeam hedges, flowering shrubs, conifers, a small waterfall with a birch grove and rain garden, and a dry stream bed. There is a layered shade garden in front of the house that features native and pollinator plants. Cutting flower beds in back include echinaecea, Agastache, leucanthemum, gaura, and lavender. A tractor path encircles the property to enable delivery of materials and maintenance while a cattle guard in the front driveway and deer fencing around the perimeter protect the gardens. The pea gravel driveway is bonded with a permeable epoxy so rainwater is absorbed. A seven-foot-tall iron sculpture "A Prayer to the Universe" by Berry Bate and a custom iron arch and lantern embellish the bluestone walkway to the front of the house.

The kitchen and breakfast nook windows overlook a path bordered by perennials and flowering shrubs, planted containers, a fountain and a birdhouse behind a hornbeam hedge. There are several gravel pathways through the front woodland and shade garden. A sitting area includes an eight-foot stone slab bench. Here there are beds with layered plantings of ferns, perennials, unusual conifers, shrubs and understory trees under the canopy of older trees. On the lower side of the property behind the house there is full sun exposure. There is a stone patio with a lap pool, an echinaecea cutting garden, and an abstract concrete statue of a dove. Further down there is a wide expanse of lawn and shaped beds. Restored iron gates provide access to the lawn and gardens. A small birch grove surrounds a rain garden with casual seating below a water feature with two waterfall drops. At the back of the property there are more plantings of Japanese maple, perennials, evergreens and flowering shrubs with a movable tubular sculpture by David Caudill.

Persons associated with the garden's design: Hunter Stubbs (landscape designer/consultant, 2009-2014), Anne Higgins (landscape designer/consultant, 2012-2019), Randy Burroughs (landscape architect, waterfall and water feature consultant, 2016-2017), Barry Bate (sculptor), David Caudill (sculptor), and Chuck and Eileen Hutchinson (owners).

NC022: Asheville -- Capt. W. T. Weaver Garden

Former owner: Weaver, W. T.. Capt

Architect: Lord, Anthony

Engineer: Six Associates

Notes: The folder includes plans, information sheet, garden description and slide descriptions.

"The garden is a ten acre site in the middle of the city of Asheville and comprises a garden begun at the turn of the century. The garden illustrates how land acquired and developed almost 100 years ago can be accommodated to present day life and economics. Like many other gardens in the mountains, its plan includes heights and valleys, curvilinear walkways and the use of native plants and flora. Today's garden has been developed on the foundations of previous gardens which were planted by the previous owners.

"When the property was purchased by Captain W. T. Weaver about 1895, the city of Asheville lay some four miles to the south. The Weaver property included a residence, garden for flowers and vegetables, quarters for servants and farmland in a small community. Later, a tennis court was added for a growing family. With the exception of the farmland which was donated to the city of Asheville, all of these early features remain today. Captain Weaver's house was demolished in the 1950's; the present residence was built about 1930. However, few changes have been made to the original garden plan."

Persons associated with the property include: Captain W. T. Weaver (former owner from 1890-1935); Anthony Lord (architect in 1950); and Six Associates (architects and engineers in 1930).

Architect: Griffin, Robert S.

Landscape architect: Balowyk, Michael

Provenance: The French Broad River Garden Club Foundation

Notes: The folder includes a work sheet, plant lists, planting plans, and feature plans.

The expansive garden surrounds a Tudor style house in a suburb of Asheville, North Carolina. Located at an altitude of 2,200 feet, the garden is a mix of collections and displays. The hillside has dry stack retaining walls providing views, from the interior, of flowers, ferns, and roses. The edges of the serpentine driveway, which follows the terrain of the land, are heavily landscaped with peonies and flowering trees ending in a circular rose garden at the entrance of the house. There are collections of conifers, roses, hostas, wild flowers and herbs with an emphasis on perennial bloomers. Two small ponds provide water gardens and pleasant sounds for the dining area of the terrace. The architect planned for views of the garden to be an integral part of the interior of the house. Only about ten years old, the garden displays maturity beyond those years.

Persons associated with the property include: Robert S. Griffin, ATA (architect, 1990); and Michael Balowyk (landscape designer, 1990-present).

NC048: Asheville -- Crowfields Community Gardens

Former owner: Nettles, Zebulon V.
Beverly-Grant, Inc.

Architect: Traber, Larry

Contractor: Beverly-Grant, Inc.

Owner: Crowfields Condominium Association

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet, map of Crowfields Condominiums, garden plot assignments, and history of Crowfields.

In 1971, Judge Zeb Nettles and his wife sold their property, "Crowfields," in south Asheville to Beverly-Grant, Inc. Beverly-Grant, Inc. began their project to build a condominium complex for "empty nesters" and retired people in North Carolina. Rhododendron and azaleas were planted around the condominium clusters. The company added three willow trees at the entrance in 1972.

The community garden arose from a grassy field in a flood plain that was not suitable for building. Thirty-five plots on the Crowfields Condominiums Association grounds are planted and cared for by individual owners. Individual plots of approximately 500 square feet are planted with various vegetables and flowers by residents, which change every year. The gazebo, bird house, and produce stand were either made by or purchased by the gardeners.

Persons associated with the garden include: Zebulon Nettles (former owner, 1930? -1971; Beverly-Grant, Inc. (former owner, 1971-1984); George Beverly (former co-owner, 1971-1984); Bob Grant (former co-owner, 1971-1984); Larry Traber (architect, 1971); Wayne Coulter (landscape architect for Beverly-Grant, Inc., 1971); and Crowfields Condominium Association (community garden, 1984).

NC067: Asheville -- Elmore Garden

Landscape architect: Alexander, Kirk

Architect: Parker, Charles N.

Notes: The folder includes a work sheet; site map; and garden tour brochure.

A small garden setting with boxwood and paths connect four different areas. A pond with waterfall defines a large terrace area planted with a variety of perennials and shrubs. An herb garden is nested by a greenhouse. A vegetable garden, behind the locust arbor and fence adds to the interest as does a double perennial border behind the boxwood hedge. Many different species of plant material can be found in these gardens, bound together by hedge and walk.

Persons and/or organizations associated with the property include: Caude and Genevieve Smith (former owners, 1949-1986); Charles N. Parker (architect, 1949); and Kirk Alexander (landscape architect, 1990 and 1998).

The French Broad River Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

NC070: Asheville -- English Country Garden in Western North Carolina

Former owner: Adams, Junius
Architect: Parker, Charles N.
Provenance: The French Broad River Garden Club Foundation
Notes: The folder includes a work sheet, plat; site map; garden tour pamphlet; and Judge Junius G. Adams House: An Architectural History for nomination in National Register of Historic Places, by Daniel J. Vivian.

The Judge Junius G. Adams house is a Tudor Revival-style residence built in 1921 in the Asheville development, Biltmore Forest. The landscape retains many of its historic features. A curvilinear driveway leads from Stuyvesant Drive to the rear of the house and terminates in a circle. Several mature oak trees stand in the front yard. A dense band of trees wraps along the east side of the property, providing a visual buffer from passing traffic ; and the rear of the property is also heavily forested. Areas around the main house--the gardener's residence and the pool house--are landscaped with a variety of rhododendrons, mountain laurels, azaleas, forsythias, and boxwoods. Along the west side of the pool house is a terrace with flowerbeds.

Persons and organizations associated with the property include: Judge Junius Adams (former owner, 1921-1933); Burnham S. Colburn (former owner, 1933-1938); Daniel and Eleanor McCarthy (former owners, 1933-1979); Peter Hall (former owner, 1980-1998); Charles N. Parker (architect, 1921); and Anthony Loid (architect of renovations, 1940).

The French Broad River Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Symmes, Gatha B.

Former owner: Bartelme, Frederick

Notes: The folder includes garden description, information sheet, and garden plan sketch.

"The Bartelme Garden represents the residential garden designed for a new house in the Asheville suburb of Biltmore Forest in 1936. In this design, the garden figures as a part of the house plant and presents a pleasing formal vista when viewed from within the house."

"Today, the garden retains the parterre garden which is still part of the original design for the house. The present garden has become more manageable in the present day by the removal of the cutting garden and the addition of lawns and woodlands to the original garden area."

Persons associated with the property include: Frederick Bartelme (former owners from 1936 to 1978); Carolyn Humphries (photographer in 1997).

Owner: The French Broad River Garden Club Foundation

Provenance: The French Broad River Garden Club Foundation

Notes: The folder includes a work sheet, site plans, landscape plan, plan list, and brochures.

The French Broad River Garden Club sponsored a project to help women with limited incomes conserve and utilize native plant materials to create and market Christmas decorations. Because of its charitable and educational activities, the Club won "foundation" status. Land was purchased in 1958, and an old log cabin was re-erected on the property to house this expanding industry. A small log cabin was added to the property in 1960. A tool shed and green house were added in 1965 and 1967; and a large log cabin was added as a meeting space in 1971. In 1990, the gardens were torn up and re designed and the buildings were moved because the adjacent highway was widened. "Theme" herb gardens were created by club members as a part of this new design. Themes include medicinal, Biblical, fragrance, industrial and dye garden, and Cherokee. The gardens are maintained in a cooperative effort by the club members. They are now used to share ideas and techniques for gardening as well as to demonstrate the many uses of plants. The gardens continue to support the Foundation in its endeavor charitable contributions through sales of plants and plant material.

Persons and organizations associated with the site include: Julia M. Ruland (former owner, ? to 1910); E. A. Hess and wife (former owners, 1910-1956); J. A. Coston and wife (former owners, 1956-1958); S. C. Dean (former owner, May 1958-August 1958); French Broad River Garden Club Foundation, Inc. (present owners, 1958-present); Doan Ogden (landscape architect, 1959); Charles Godfrey, Jr., ASLA (garden designer, 1991); Kirk Alexander (planter of foundation plantings, 1992); Alex Towe (boxwood horticulturist, 1991); and Robert Griffin, AIA (designer, 1990).

The French Broad River Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Notes: The folder includes a work sheet and feature plans.

From the street, privacy is attained with a wooded hollow full of ferns at the entry. The garden itself is primarily located in the rear of the house on a natural berm with a backdrop of tall trees bordering the Blue Ridge Parkway. The native area supports a wide variety of plant material and is a true sound buffer for the traffic beyond. It is a "perennial border" about 100 feet long and about 30 feet deep. On one end, the lawn drops to woods and a creek. On the other side, the lawn ends in woods with an informal wood post pagoda used for dining or for relaxing in a hammock. Quite removed from the house, the shelter affords a place to survey the activities of children on the lawn and driveway. The depth of the bed is divided by a gravel and flagstone walkway providing access to the beds. An outstanding feature of the garden is the great clumps of perennials that have reached substantial size in the ten years of its existence. The garden is best viewed across a rather wide lawn from the long deck on the rear of the house where the family eats and entertains. No neighboring houses can be seen from the house or yard. The whole yard surrounding the 3,500 square foot house maintains an informality complementing the gray shingled mountain home.

Persons and organizations associated with the property include: John Rogers, AIA (architect, 1992); and Kerney McNeil (builder, 1992).

All Souls Church (Asheville, North Carolina)

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet, site plans, and other information. Located in the Biltmore Forest section of Asheville, this garden, established in 1962, was significantly altered and redesigned in the 1990s by J. Allan Zabriskie. A water feature with a streambed of rocks and a recirculating pool of water was added. Existing garden areas were replanted and a bank of plantings off the south side of the house was improved. These plantings have a natural appearance and include many native plants. Hemlock and rhododendron planted many years ago provide a screen between the house and its neighbors. Hemlock and oakleaf hydrangea are planted along the border between the lawn and the woodlands to the east of the property. The water feature and the bank to the right of it are planted with ferns, cathedral bells, dog hobble, dwarf evergreens, azaleas, boxwood, and maple. In the beds along the patio are shrubs such as holly, hydrangea, and dwarf fir, and perennials such as purple coneflower, balloon flower, and euphorbia. Some annuals such as zinnias and impatiens are added each year.

Persons and organizations associated with the property include: the Biltmore Forest Company (former owner, before 1957); the Z. B. Robinson Construction Engineering Corporation (former owner, 1957-1960); Eugene J. and Dorothy Phillips (former owners, 1960-1961); All Souls Church (former owner, 1961-1998); Henry Gaines (architect, 1959); and J. Former owner: Ogden, Doan R.

Landscape architect: Ogden, Doan R.

Provenance: The French Broad River Garden Club Foundation

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet, garden plans from 1950 and 1998, and photocopies of articles about the garden and an excerpt from a master's thesis about designer and former owner Doan Ogden.

Located about three miles from the center of Asheville, this nine-acre garden was established in 1950. Beneath a dam, and bordering a creek and lake, it was originally an experimental garden with about 1,200 species of plants. It has been modified somewhat from the original design but remains a showplace of mountain flora primarily due to the attention of the designer to growing conditions in the area. It now has approximately 800 specimens. This is an ever-evolving garden with extensive garden ornamentation and sculpture, which changes from time to time, since the current owner also is an art gallery owner.

Persons associated with the garden include: Doan Ogden (former owner, 1950-1987, and landscape architect, 1950-1980).

NC058: Asheville -- Killian Ridge Garden
Former owner: Emmet, Richard Emmet, Richard, Mrs.
Landscape architect: Ogden, Doan R.
Builder: Deck House MFG.
Provenance: The French Broad River Garden Club Foundation
Notes: The folder includes a work sheet, copy of landscape drawing, and landscape plan with plant list.

It is seldom that a house is built with the landscape designs already planned. The original owners of this property had Landscape Architect Doan Ogden design the site for their house before it was built. It is nearly entirely dependent on foliage and texture. The house itself takes up nearly all the flat area of the lot and consequently the garden areas are long and narrow. Other houses are not visible from the 1.5 acre property and all the living rooms of the house are designed to take advantage of the views. The garden is designed for ease of maintenance. The extraordinary view serves as a constant inspiration. Over the years, some trees have matured, died and have been replaced or removed. The walkway has been paved rather than the original crushed stone. However, the property remains, remarkably, true to the original design. The current owners have added a "grass garden" to an area where the trees had been lost to storms.

Persons and organizations associated with the property include: Mr. and Mrs. Richard Emmet (former owners, 1970-1996); Mr. Doan Ogden (Landscape Architect, 1972); "Deck House" MFG Post and Beam Construction, Acton, Mass. (Builder).

Notes: The folder includes a work sheet, site plans, and photocopy of house photo dated 1923.

Located in suburban Asheville, North Carolina, this transitional Georgian to Federal house is at an altitude of 2,200 feet. It was the second house built in the "Golden Horseshoe" of Baltimore Forest Country Club property. The house was originally built by Charles Minor, MD, who was the physician to the Vanderbilt family. Built in 1923, the house went through a succession of owners and was in a dilapidated condition when acquired by the present owners in 1993.

The landscaping becomes more formal as you pass up the drive. The owner wanted to "create a pool of green" at the entrance to the house, which required moving the driveway further toward the street. The 70 year old boxwoods were relocated on the property; and additions were made to the house. The flower garden has been designed to include curvilinear elements to soften the hard lines of the colonial architecture. Emphasis on placement of the beds was that they be visible from inside the house. A "summer house," which is really a foil for a grill area, and a pergola were added in 1994. The garden includes a North Carolina Silver Bell tree, which is among the largest in the state and awarded a Treasure Tree Certificate. The vast lawn extends into the golf course, so that nothing interferes with the view of Bushee Mountain.

Persons associated with the property include: Charles L. Minor, MD (former owner, 1923); Zelda Williams (former owner, 1928); Horton (former owner, 1935); Richard Merriweather (former owner, 1977); Robert Pew (former owner, 1989); Henry Gaines (architect); Tony Lord (architect of addition); Bill Ache (builder, 1992); and Charles Godfrey (landscape architect).

The French Broad River Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Architect: Griffin, Robert S.

Former owner: Hughes, Roger Landscape architect:

Balowyk, Michael

Provenance: The French Broad River Garden Club Foundation

Notes: The folder includes a work sheet and feature plans.

The gardens are located primarily within a fenced-in area. The back wall of the garden is a stepped wall with "antique" garden art built into it, serving as a backdrop for the boxwood parterre. Surrounding the gardens are woods-screening the garden and home from the neighbors. Espaliered trees create small fences, breaking up sections of the gardens. In the blue garden, the wisteria arbor anchors the garden with purple, blue, and lavender flowers surrounding it.

This garden was re-documented in 2013. The formal boxwood parterres in the walled garden now contain urns, statuary and other garden ornaments. White-flowered container plants and topiary boxwood in containers are featured, but vegetables, herbs and other colored flowers are no longer planted. Plants with family connections have been transplanted from a previous home, including rhododendrons that were installed outside the walled area along the driveway and peonies. The two acre property has a woodlands garden surrounding the walled garden, where the native trees and shrubbery have matured, forming an evergreen privacy screen. An open porch has been added that blends seamlessly with the country French style of the house, provides space for outdoor entertaining and contains urns of boxwood and topiary.

Persons and organizations associated with the property include: Mr. and Mrs. Roger Hughes (former owners, 1994-2006); Robert Griffin, ATA (architect, 1994); and Michael Balowyk (landscape architect, 1994-).

The French Broad River Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Provenance:

Notes:

The folder includes a worksheet, a site plan, and excerpts from the property's National Register of Historic Places nomination form.

Situated well back from the road and not visible from the street, this is an imposing house built on the plans of the original Gunston Hall in Virginia. The unusual shape of the lot contributes to the privacy of the property. This is one of the original houses in the Biltmore Forest area (see National Register of Historic Places nomination form in folder). The gardens and the house were once extensive and although they remain charming it is impossible to keep them in the manner once intended. The boxwood garden is more of a secret garden and not visible from the lawn or the house. The current gardens were established in 1944.

Persons associated with the property include: Dr. and Mrs. William Beverly Mason (former owners, 1923-1944); John Bartlett and Lola Anderson Dennis (former owners and landscape designer, 1944-1969); Dr. C. Ray Franklin and Ruth Holman Franklin (former owners, 1970-1987); and Chauncey D. Beadle (landscape architect, 1920-ca. 1930).

Landscape architect: Ogden, Doan R.

Provenance: The French Broad River Garden Club Foundation

Notes: The folder includes a work sheet; site map; copy of watercolor landscape plan; and plant list and work detail for original design.

The street view of this typical 1950s ranch house belies the specimen gardens in the rear. The lot slopes back from the street to a spring fed creek with a log cabin beside running water. The cabin is used as a guest house. The garden is laced with naturalistic paths all converging at the log house in the rear. The paths are edged with fern, wildflowers and specimen rhododendron plants. Near the house, a terrace provides a place for alfresco dining and bird watching.

Persons and/or organizations associated with the property include: Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Keener (former owners, 1956-1998); and Doan R. Odgen (landscape architect, 1956).

Provenance: The French Broad River Garden Club Foundation

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet and photocopies of published information about the property.

This garden is located near downtown Asheville at an elevation of approximately 2,700 feet. The house was built in 1922 and is an excellent example of the Colonial Revival style of architecture. The gardens are found to the north and east of the home behind a lovely old brick wall. Doan Ogden, a well-known local landscape designer, redesigned the gardens in 1975. A pool and poolhouse were also installed about this time. A formal boxwood garden is located to the east of the home. Tulips provide color there in spring, while there are annuals and roses in summer. Sculpture, much of it playful and whimsical, is found throughout the garden and beside the pool.

Persons associated with the garden include: Hope T. Robertson and Reuben Robertson (former owners, 1913-1920s); Nathaniel Gennett (former owner, ca. 1920s and later); James Gamble Rogers (architect, 1922); and Doan Ogden (landscape architect, 1975).

The French Broad River Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

NC074: Asheville -- Owen Garden

Former owner: Owen, Charles Dexter

Provenance: The French Broad River Garden Club Foundation

Notes: The folder includes a work sheet, publications and feature plans.

The 3 1/2 acre property is a collection of over 40 varieties of rhododendron. The house is situated on the back third of the property with a full wall of rhododendron cascading over a 50 foot long brick wall on the parking area. The front terrace of the house looks out onto a huge outdoor "room" surrounded by a five foot holly hedge. Perennial beds in each corner soften the view. Beyond the hedge are raised beds for tomatoes, which are hidden from view. Total privacy is maintained in the garden by 60 foot trees around three sides of the property. On the street side, scattered trees remain with rhododendrons throughout. Only the side of the house is visible from the street.

Persons and organizations associated with the property include: Charles Dexter Owen (former owner, 1933-1970); Anthony Lord (architect, 1933 and 1970); Charles Owen Dexter (plants, 1933-1970); De La Terre Landscapes (fences, 2003); Allen Roderick (tool shed, 2006); and Nexus (greenhouse, 2006).

Landscape architect:	Beadle, Chauncey D.
Architect:	Ross, Donald J., 1872-1948 Lord, Anthony Parker, Charles N.
Provenance:	The French Broad River Garden Club Foundation
Notes:	The folder includes a worksheet and a garden plan. Established in 1924 on a four-acre site, this property features one of the first houses built in the community of Biltmore Forest and has remained in the same family since its creation. Since the house's first owner, Thomas Wadley Raoul, was one of the developers of Biltmore Forest, the house sits on one of the choice pieces of property in the community. At an altitude of 2,200 feet, the property faces the Biltmore Forest Country Club golf course, which acts as a continuation of the property's lawn, while the Smoky Mountains provide the backdrop of the view. Originally there was a formal rose/flower garden with boxwood hedging that was down the drive from the house, but visible from the owner's bedroom. A vegetable garden was equally removed and across the drive from the flower garden. The present owners moved the flowers and vegetables to the present kitchen garden area in 1975 with the idea that they would receive more attention and use. The garden is long and narrow, running north to south to take advantage of the morning sun. Primarily composed of raised beds, it mixes vegetables with flowers. The remainder of the property is maintained as woodland with a long drive swinging up from the main road. The Tudor-style house is not visible from the road, only from the golf course. Its window boxes and flowers have provided a colorful moment for golfers for 80 years. Persons associated with the property and garden include: George W. and Edith Vanderbilt (former owners, 1894-1924); Thomas Wadley Raoul (former owner, 1924-1961); Charles N. NC035: Asheville -- Tench Cox Garden

Former owner: Cox, Tench

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet with an abbreviated garden plan.
 The property is one of the early houses in an exclusively residential village of Asheville, North Carolina. The community as a whole has tried to maintain a tree-shaded, quiet residential atmosphere. The property's front portion is left entirely natural with a thicket of native rhododendrons completely screening the house from the street. The rear yard is divided between a formal lawn with 25-foot conical conifers across the back and a secret garden designed by the original owner. The conifers are the original hemlocks and yews that were planted in 1923. Through the conifers one passes to a secret garden. It is about 40 feet square and contains boxwood parterres filled with perennials. There is a small rose arbor. Behind the parterres there was once a cutting garden that has been turned into grass. The garden has been maintained just as it was in the 1920s.

Persons associated with the property include: Mr. and Mrs. Tench Cox (former owners, 1924-1989) and Dr. and Mrs. John Dean (former owners, 1989-1997).

Former owner: Adams, Junius

Adams, Junius, Mrs.

Provenance: The French Broad River Garden Club Foundation

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet, a copy of the property plat, a photocopy of a published photograph of the potting shed, and other information.

This two-and-a-half acre garden is located at 2,200 feet altitude in Biltmore Forest, a residential suburb of Asheville in the mountains of western North Carolina. The placement of house and garden take full advantage of the privacy afforded by backing to the 8,000-acre Biltmore estate. The house is approached by a rhododendron-lined lane off the main road and is not visible from the street. A full acre of roadside property remains a mature woods of pine and hardwood, providing it a rural setting. A rock garden is nestled on a slope behind the house and can be viewed from the breakfast room and bedrooms; it also serves as an entrance garden to the guest cottage. Off the living room a circular terrace overlooks three levels of lawn which slope to the vast woods adjoining. An herb garden surrounds the terrace and a rhododendron thicket borders the upper level of the lawn, which is often used as an outdoor dining room. Outbuildings include a 19th century-style, octagon-shaped well house used as a potting shed and a "play house" at the end of a secluded path through the thicket.

Persons associated with the property include Mr. and Mrs. Junius Adams (architect and former owners, 1939-1988).

The French Broad River Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation for the year 2000.

NC065: Blowing Rock -- The Cottage Garden

Provenance: The French Broad River Garden Club Foundation

Notes: The folder includes a work sheet and site maps.

The property consists of 3.73 acres. The original house on the property was removed. A parking area and a few stone retaining walls remain from the previous owners. Access to the new Gothic-style house, located in the center of the property, required a series of stairs and walkways to connect the house to the existing parking area. The design called for stairs placed on an axis with the front door of the house for a grand vista in the classical style. The very top is a double switchback with stairs at a stone wall and niche for sculpture. The lower sets of stairs were built with cheek walls and a pedestal positions for urns or ornamentation. The final set of stairs were in a new retaining wall that created a level drive at the front door. Within the circular loop drive, perennial beds were laid out on semi-circular gravel paths. The property also incorporated a cottage garden and woodland garden. An "electric" mix of evergreens, deciduous flowering shrubs, groundcovers, perennials and annuals cover the landscape. "Organized chaos with an emphasis on organized" characterize the landscape designers' style.

Persons and organizations associated with the property include: Betsy Alexander Patterson (former owner, ?-1915); Mildred Patterson Beard (former owner, 1915-1980); Alexander Patterson Beard (former owner, 1980-1996); Sammy Greeson (architect); Laura Bischofs-Himmelman (landscape designer, 1997); Robert Arner Himmelman (landscape designer, 1997); and Virginia Bullman (sculptor for garden statuary)

The French Broad River Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

 Elizabeth Lawrence Garden foundation mission, and site maps.

Elizabeth Lawrence, author of A Southern Garden (1942) and other garden-related books.

Established in 1949 by Elizabeth Lawrence, the property has no lawn. The entire property, only 75x225 feet, includes a parking area, driveway, and house. The remaining space is plantings and pathways. A narrow path between a bamboo hedge and a fence covered with garden tiles provides the garden entrance. In the back, intricately designed partiers are outlined with stone. Numerous seating areas and small statuary are found throughout the garden. Designed for privacy in a neighborhood of close neighbors, Elizabeth Lawrence used the garden as a laboratory and sat at a desk overlooking the garden. The garden was renovated in 1986 and is maintained by a devotee of her work. According to the Garden Conservancy, the structure of the garden remains "essentially the same and as much as sixty percent of Lawrence's own plantings continue to prosper." The Friends of the Elizabeth Lawrence Garden, with the Garden Conservancy, was formed to preserve the garden.

Persons and organizations associated with the property include: Elizabeth Lawrence (former owner, 1949-1984), James Sommers (former owner, 1984-1986); Elizabeth Lawrence (landscape designer); David Wagner, AIA (remodel architect); Steve Del Vecchio (gardener); Mecklenburg County Master Gardeners (volunteer project); Charlotte Garden Club, affiliated with Mint Museum (volunteer in garden); and Friends of Elizabeth Lawrence (foundation for preservation).

The French Broad River Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

NC079: Cherry Lane Township -- A Mountain Garden
Image\(s\)
Image\(s\)
Gardener: Mathis, Kevin
Provenance: Twin City Garden Club
Notes: The folder includes worksheets.
A Mountain Garden is filled with a profusion of color from annual and perennial flowers in beds interlaced with stone paths. The one-tenth acre garden is planted on a sloping site between the main house and guest house on the property. The garden is centered by a small fountain and fish pond surrounded by rocks. Tea is served at a rustic twig table with a galvanized steel top and twig stools. The porches are decorated with hanging containers stuffed with blooms, a rose trellis stretches over one of two garden gates, and the entire garden provides cutting material for flower arrangements.
Persons associated with the garden include Kevin Mathis (Head Gardener, 2000 to present).
The Twin City Garden Club of Winston-Salem (North Carolina) facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

NC072: Fairview -- Cairn Laird

Notes: The folder includes a work sheet, site map, land survey map, and copies of photographs before garden installation.

"Cairn" is a Scottish term indicating a mound of rough stones marking a high place. Laird is a paternal ancestral name. Cairn Laird is a garden in the Sugar Hollow community--founded in the 1950s by Chicago emigres--of Fairview. The design and construction began in April 1999. The property consists of ten acres, two and a half of which comprise the house and gardens. Clearing and construction of the loamy woodland soil has created microclimates with full sun as well as deep shade. Natural features were used to organize a system of themed gardens and destinations for entertaining and meditation. The heart of Cairn Laird is the dining/entertaining area, which is oriented to capitalize on the views of Mount Pisgah. Other garden highlights include the White Garden; a children's woodland garden; the beehive garden; the camellia room and the koi pond. The series of garden areas is connected by stone steps and moss covered paths. A 600 square foot greenhouse was added in 2003 to house a large orchid collection, citrus, and banana trees.

Persons and organizations associated with the property include: Robert and Mae Fitch (former owners, 1987-1998); April Carder (landscape architect, 1999); Brenwen La Joie (gardener, 2003-2005); Steven Townsend (gardener, 2004-2005); and David Gernandt (pruner, 2000-2005).

Provenance: The French Broad River Garden Club Foundation

Notes: The folder includes a work sheet; site map; ownership chronology; narrative description; brochure; plant inventory; site analysis (2001); and Design Guidelines for landscape and architecture (2004).

Drovers Road Preserve is a new park-like development located thirteen miles from Asheville, North Carolina. This Preserve is the first Conservation Easement Development in Buncombe County. It is a 195 acrea conservation residential development planned to protect and celebrate the property's unique ecological features and historic past. A total of 23 lots ranging from 1.5-10 acres have been sensitively located within the landscape in order to protect the site's resources whild also providing homesites that offer meadow, woodland or mountain views. More than half of the property is held by an easement by Southern Appalachian Highlands Conservancy. Rare and endangered species have been located, identified and protected.

The entrance, picnic areas, and community lands have been carefully planted with native shrubs and flowers providing a mature look to the property without much maintenance.

Persons and organizations associated with the property include: Walter Wray (former owner, 1907-1911); John McBrayer (former owner, 1911-1947); Emma McBrayer (former owner, 1947-2001); Samsel Architects (community amenities, 2001); Equinox Environmental, David Tuck (land planning, 2001-2005); and Equinox Environmental, Kevin Caldwell (field biologist, 2001-2005).

 Notes: The folder includes a work sheet, and site map with plant list.
 The property was incorporated in 1951 as Sugar Hollow Farms, Inc. by two men, Beverly Williams and Samuel Hypes, from the Chicago area. This property, one of the five original houses, was built in 1953-54 at the foot of Little Pisgah Mountain. The landscape, as it exists today, began in 1964. It has been restored and expanded since 1998. Some lawns were returned to woodland; and paths now run through the returned wildflower spaces. Walls, steps, water features and ponds were added to create a natural mountain environment.
 Persons and organizations associated with the property include: Guy Osbourne (former owner, 1953); Justus I. and Janet H. Wakelee (former owners); Wallace M. and Isabel R. Hughes (former owners, 1964-1991); Wallace M. Hughes Trust (former owner, 1991-1999); James McMillon (architect of stone and water features, 1998-present); and Douglas Clarke (gardener, 2003-2004).

NC049: Flat Rock -- Dethero Cottage
Former owner: Edney, Fonzey
Browning, Mabel Edney

Landscape architect: Lowe, Bruce
 Architect: O'Cain, Bill
 Provenance: The French Broad River Garden Club Foundation
 Notes: The folder includes a worksheet, a narrative description and history of the house and garden, a garden plan, and a copy of a newspaper article about the garden.

This five and one-half acre property is situated in Flat Rock, a "summer retreat" in the foothills of the Blue Ridge Mountains. Dethero Cottage is one of the smallest of the town's "cottages" and has been renovated to more modern tastes. The cottage is approached by a hydrangea-lined circular drive, which leads to the pergola and the more formal entrance garden. In front of the house next to the driveway is a dwarf conifer garden featuring plants from around the world. The garden includes heathers, heaths, dwarf blueberries, azaleas, and strawberries, as well as evergreens such as a Mugo pine, hemlock, and Fat Albert spruce. There are also Johnny jump-ups and a Japanese maple. Across the driveway from the house is a pergola covered with a profusion of white wisteria and kiwi vines; inside the pergola are an ornamental urn, dwarf box, dahlias, and black-eyed Susans. Through a gated picket fence flanked by Japanese carriage lamps, a lavender-lined walkway with creeping thyme among the bricks leads to the house. In the garden on either side of the walk are roses, allium gigantium, a dove tree, a mock orange, lilies, phlox, dianthus, and other sweet-smelling plants.

Persons associated with the garden include: Fonzey Edney (former owner, ca. 1919); Mabel Edney Browning (former owner); Bruce Lowe (landscape architect, 1995); and Bill O'Cain (architect, 1995).

The French Broad River Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Provenance: Rumson Garden Club

Former owner: Bernstein, Shirley Bernstein, Martin
 Taylor, Wesley
 Taylor, Catherine

Photographer: Brighton, Avery

Notes: Rumson Garden Club facilitated the 2020 submission of this garden's documentation.

This 29 acre property in Greensboro, North Carolina originally resided within the 300 acres purchased by the original owners in 1923. The original 300 acres were a working dairy farm with a dairy barn, stables, cattle, horses, chickens, and hogs. In 1924, the couple started building their fieldstone manor house and added many plants and trees throughout their residence on the property. In 1955, the owners sold the house, log cabin, and tenant house along with 29 acres, while retaining the remaining acres in their family. In 1973, the 29 acre property at Justamere Farm was purchased by the new owners who have occupied the property for 45 years. The current garden layout remains similar to its original design. The gardens consisted of a formal rose garden bordered by American box woods, and a pergola that is no longer standing. The original two Beech trees remain in the front of the farm workshop. A hidden spring "cooling house" buried underground next to the lower garden steps was used as a root cellar and includes a spring with water and small windows to circulate fresh air. This opened into more flower beds which the current owner filled with native wildflowers and ferns.

The main architectural features of the property are the main house, the cabin, three barns, and a pool. The entrance to the farm is bordered on each side by two original grade flora magnolia trees, old oak trees, and an original row of English box wood bushes. "Rooms" built into the backside of the stone gateway were once used as a smokehouse and a shed for equipment. The roof of the smoke house collapsed and is now a walled garden, while the old equipment shed now acts as a potting shed. The main house is a three-story gray fieldstone house built with twelve-foot ceilings. It maintains its original glass windows. The property was also built with French drains and underground pipes from the lake to irrigate the gardens and provide fire protection. This system is no longer in operation. The log cabin that overlooks a small pond was used to house the original owners while the main house was being built. The current owners converted the original pool into a water garden equipped with lilies, lotus plants, Koi, and other fish. More terraced gardens wind down towards the east in front of the log cabin with additional large granite stone steps. Many of the original trees have been destroyed by lightning, age, ice storms, disease, and a tornado in 2017, but the current owners frequently replace the trees. They reportedly have a chestnut oak that came from a sprig taken at Robert E. Lee's home, amongst a variety of flowering cherry trees, transplanted hemlocks, and wild azaleas. The woods are full of red, white, willow, pin, and post oaks, as well as a grove of black walnut trees, white pines, mulberry trees, cedars, poplars, pecan trees, and persimmons that scatter the property. The original owner planted many invasive plants which she believed would attract birds, such as ivy, periwinkle, floribunda roses, wild pear and grape; the current owners continue to clear these plants. Numerous original holly, hellebores, oak leaf hydrangeas, and daffodil plantings remain on the property.

Persons associated with the garden include: Dr. Wesley Taylor and Catherine Taylor (former owners and designers, 1920-1955); Martin and Shirley Bernstein (former owners, 1955-1973).

NC037: Highlands -- Cheeononda

Former owner: Sloan, Henry Worrell

Photographer: Symmes, Gatha B.

Provenance: The French Broad River Garden Club Foundation

Notes: Materials relating to the private gardens, located in Highlands, North Carolina. The folder includes slide list, photocopies of black and white photographs from 1925, a tree list, an article, garden description, correspondence and worksheet completed by GCA researcher, Gatha B. Symmes.

"This garden was designed and built by Henry Sloan in 1901. It was originally a formal garden with reflective pools and statuary. It is only moderately maintained today. It was built in the Satulle Mountain National Register area and has a view of the mountains."

"The Cheeononda Gardens are a relic of the 1901 gardens designed and built by Henry Sloan, a New Orleans cotton broker. While it was once a formal garden replendent with reflective pools and statuary it is maintained today in a practical manner. Only the walkways and native stone walls remain to provide a footprint of the original garden but the Italian style house remains the crown of the garden."

"Flowing westward there are seven tiers of lawn following the contours of the hillside. While you see only one or two levels at a time, they lead you down to the lowest level where a creek's rippling can be heard. The reflective pools have been filled and are now maintained as flower beds or lawns."

Persons associated with the property include: Mr. and Mrs. Henry Worrell Sloan (former owner/designer/builder from 1901 to 1979); Gatha B. Symmes (photographer).

The French Broad River Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

NC038: Highlands -- Neese Garden

Former owner: Neese, Martha Plowden
Kuckleburg, Ray
Canning, Robert

Contractor: Picklesymers Builders

Provenance: The French Broad River Garden Club Foundation

Notes: "The garden is located at 4,000 feet altitude in a primarily summer resort town in the mountains of western North Carolina. Mrs. Neese spent 12 years in Japan and transformed a mountain stream into a Japanese Garden. The stream was dammed to provide a waterfall which can be heard from the porch of the house. Japanese statuary abounds in the garden in typical simplicity and quiet. A moss garden remains a symbol of eternity. There are few flowering plants aside from the native rhododendron hedges that secure privacy. When the garden was first developed only the owners house was near. Now several homes have been built on high slopes above the garden to take advantage of the view.

Mrs. Neese was a writer and Ikebana enthusiast who was awarded for her work by the government of Japan. A garden has been built as a memorial to Martha Neese in front of the Husdon Library in the Highlands.

Persons associated with the property include: Martha Plowden Neese (former owner from 1978 to 1989); Ray Kuckleburg (former owner from 1989 to 1994); Robert Canning (former owner from 1994 to 1997); Picklesymers Builders (contractors).

The French Broad River Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

A 61-acre property is comprised of woodlands and numerous garden rooms, some with layouts that date back to the mid-19th century. The rock garden has remains of the original rocks and lilies of the valley. A fenced sunny garden behind one of many outbuildings is planted for color. A large kitchen garden has been subdivided but honors the original layout. Newer rooms are called the May Garden, Tropical Garden, Aster Border, Color Garden, Moonlight Garden, Jo's Memorial Garden, and Blue and Yellow Garden. Other early gardens rooms include a serpentine boxwood hedge planted in the 1920's and a circle garden on the approach to the house. Venerable trees include a massive juniper, oaks and redwoods, and the trees and varieties of shrubs complement the 1898 main house on a hill and the woodland garden. There are more than 20 named garden rooms or walks, ten historic outbuildings, and newer features that include cold frames, greenhouses, a lath house that provides shade, and deer fencing around 30 acres. The owners ran a small mail order nursery selling rare plants for about 10 years. In 1930 the Works Progress Administration (WPA) terraced the woodlands to control erosion. In 2001 Montrose was added to The National Register of Historic Places; that same year the owners deeded development rights for 50 acres to the North Carolina Triangle Land Conservancy and began planning a preservation project garden with the Garden Conservancy.

The Woodland Garden was started in 1985 on about 20 terraced acres planted with thousands of bulbs that included daffodils, trilliums, bloodroot, selaginella and wood hyacinths from the owner's mother's garden. Snowdrops proliferate along a walk and in the woods, followed by hellebores, rhododendron, Christmas orchids and cyclamen in August. Maple, beech, oak, sweet gum, hickory and walnut with understory dogwood and redbud provide shade and are filled with the sounds of birds. The informal woodland is the "soul" of the owner's garden. Other features throughout the gardens include a hand-made rustic trellis, antique urns and iron fencing, and large iron utilitarian farm pots that are planted with favorites from year to year.

Persons associated with the garden include: Kirkland (former owner, 1799-); William A. and Susan Washington Graham and family members (former owners, 1842-1977); Thomas Paxton (landscape gardener, 1842)

This property is featured in A Year in Our Garden letters by Nancy Goodwin and Allen Lacy, published by The University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill NC, 2001; Montrose: Life in a Garden by Nancy Goodwin, published by Duke University Press, Durham NC and London UK, 2005.

NC122: Hillsborough -- Nash-Hooper House Garden
Provenance: Rumson Garden Club

Photographer: Gallman, Minnie C.
 Landscape architect: Anderson, Taimi
 Notes: The Rumson Garden Club facilitated the 2022 garden submission.
 The historic Piedmont style house was built in 1772, with 27 different owners over the years: first Revolutionary War hero General Francis Nash, followed by William Hooper, signer of the Declaration of Independence. The third owner was William Alexander Graham, an influential politician who held many offices including governor of North Carolina. The house was designated as a National Historic Landmark in 1972 which meant the current owners could make only approved changes to the property they purchased in 1998. Their solution was to build a garage disguised as a carriage house with a breezeway connecting to the house. In the space between the buildings there is an enclosed formal kitchen garden, an herb garden, an arbor, and herbaceous perennials with a walkway.
 The owners collect 18th and 19th century furniture, 19th century Hudson River school paintings, North Carolina pottery and 21 historic weathervanes that are placed around the 2.44 acre grounds. A pecan tree estimated to be 200 or more years old is a surviving historic tree while other trees and roses have been lost. Newer plantings include 28 Japanese maples, hosta, phlox, columbine, pulmonary, anemones, day lilies, astilbe, hellebores, lily of the valley, camellias and yaupon holly. There is a woodland garden around the periphery of the property with specimen trees. Colonial flagstones that formed a road for General Cornwallis have been salvaged by residents of the town and some of them pave a seating area under a grape arbor covered with old vines. A copper roof made circa 1800 tops a well house built by the owners.
 Persons associated with the garden's design: Taimi Anderson (landscape architect, 2004).

NC057: Little Switzerland -- Pipes of Pan

Former owner: Newland, Margaret McDowell Mrs.

Provenance: The French Broad River Garden Club Foundation

Notes: The folder includes a work sheet and garden plan.

The 2.6 acre property is positioned at 3600 feet altitude. The house, a summer home, is near the main road and is a little English style country house of stone and wood looking out to Woods Mountains across the valley. The defining feature of the garden is its slope which is about 35 degrees straight down hill bordered on one side by a small creek. Near the house, the garden is primarily wildflowers and ferns in a heavily wooded area. Huge wild azaleas and foliage plants are used for color. Accents include Solomon Seal coming from crevices in the stone work and bits of fern in the edge of the steps. Below the terrace, the garden is designed off each side of a stone step "trunk path". There are seven levels going out from differing heights from each side of the path. The garden is entirely composed of raised beds made of stone and locust posts. Special interest is devoted to climbing plants, specifically roses and vines, due to the slope. The garden abounds with English and French iron grill work to hold plants and act as backdrops for vines. A lathe house is positioned near the base of the slope to provide privacy and support for roses.

Persons associated with the garden include: Mrs. Margaret McDowell Newland (former owner, 1940-1970).

Former owner: Pearson, Charles William

Pearson, Giles

Naturalist: Peattie, Donald Culross

Author: Peattie, Donald Culross

Botanist: Freeman, Oliver M.

Owner: Tryon Garden Club

Gardener: Tryon Garden Club

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet with additional information about individuals associated with the garden, site plans, a copy of Donald Culross Peattie's booklet about the site, and copies of brochures and newspaper articles.

Pearson's Falls is a 267-acre tract of land that the Tryon Garden Club of Tryon, NC, rescued from development in 1931. The falls were discovered by Charles William Pearson, a young engineer searching for a route for the Southern Railway in 1876. He purchased the land and it remained in the Pearson family until it was bought by the Tryon Garden Club. It is maintained today by a caretaker and volunteers from the club. Within the tract a wild flower garden and preserve are maintained. It is located in an unusual climatic area in the Blue Ridge Mountains called the "Isothermal Belt," where the winters are lighter and the summers longer, providing unusual growth possibilities. Located on Colt Creek just before it joins the Pacolet River, the garden preserve has over 200 species of wild flowers growing in the granite rocks and loamy soil along the creek. The garden walk follows the creek up to the 90-foot falls. There are blooms except in deepest snow. The property, which is open to the public for a small fee, is truly one of the gems of preservation of a natural garden and provides significant opportunities for study and wild flower identification.

Persons and organizations associated with the site include: Charles William Pearson (former owner, 1876-1903); Giles Pearson (former owner, 1903-1931); Donald Culross Peattie (naturalist and author); Oliver M. Freeman (botanist); and the Tryon Garden Club (owners and gardeners, 1931 to date).

Provenance: The French Broad River Garden Club Foundation

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet and site plans.

The house was originally built in 1908 as a summer home. Saluda soon became a summer colony for many people from South Carolina. The house is named "Stoney Lodge" for a previous owner, Mary Stoney Fisher, who laid out the gardens. The original gardens and stone walls were laid out in the early 20th century. Plantings included native wildflowers and shrubs with additions of Japanese maples, hydrangea paniculata, etc. A collection of native azaleas also dates to this time. The property now consists of approximately 1 1/2 acres with the balance of property in woods. The basic design of the original beds were retained by the present owners. The owners expanded some areas to extend the season of bloom beyond original summer-only plantings.

Persons and organizations associated with the site include: William B. Gordon (former owner, 1908); Martha W. Hill (former owner, 1919-1923); Mary Stoney Fisher (former owner and garden designer, 1923); Jane Fisher Dana (former owner); Julia Keenan Walker (former owner, 1951); William J. Keenan, Jr. (former owner, 1972-1984);

The French Broad River Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

NC050: Tryon -- High Holding

Former owner: Holt, Ellen Hubbard
Webster, Elizabeth
Landscape architect: Flanders, Annette Hoyt Architect: Wolcott, Russell S.
Meriweather, Shannon
Provenance: The French Broad River Garden Club Foundation
Notes: The folder includes a worksheet; photocopies of the original garden plan, landscape architect's report and a planting invoice; and photocopies of articles about the house and garden.

This 3.5-acre garden is located in Tryon, North Carolina, 45 miles south of Asheville in a thermal belt that has less severe winters than most of the mountains. True to North Carolina tradition the house and garden are laid out with the view as the focal point, in this case a back view over the garden and walls to Hog Back Mountain across the valley. The property falls off steeply in back and is held in place by a 20-foot retaining wall that serves as a boundary for the back of the garden. Today the garden is maintained only on the upper level by the house and is still planted with myrtle and ivy as planned in 1939. The remainder of the garden has been allowed to naturalize. There is also an additional one-acre plot across the street from the house which, although not maintained as a garden, affords the entire property remarkable privacy.

Persons associated with the garden include: Ellen Holt (former owner, 1939-1992); Elizabeth Webster (former owner, 1939-1992); Annette Hoyt Flanders (landscape architect, 1939-1940); Russell S. Wolcott (architect, 1938-1939); and Shannon Meriweather (architect, 1938-1939).

The French Broad River Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

NC020: Wilmington -- Airlie (NC)

Former owner: Jones, Pembroke

Landscape architect: Pope, John Russell, 1874-1937

Barney, J. Stewart

Owner: Landfall Development Company

Notes: The frontage of this estate is on Wrightsville Beach. Pembroke Jones began acquiring property in the late 19th century for a hunting preserve. He build a hunting lodge on the tract. John Russell Pope designed the lodge. The property was called Pembroke Park.

The property has been developed by the Landfall Development Company. "Landfall" is name given to this development in honor of the explorer that landed on the shores of Cape Fear River on March 1, 1524.

NC034: Wilmington -- Untitled Garden

Horticulturist: Sawada, K.

Landscaper: Gillette, Charles F.

Designer: Clarke

Notes: The folder includes a sketch of the garden layout, plant list, and detailed description of the garden "rooms", as well as a worksheet compiled by GCA researcher Helen Pickney. The garden is noted for its series of garden rooms and its outstanding collection of camellias and azaleas.

"This garden was designed and developed over a long period of time. It was designed for the pleasure of the blooming plants throughout the year. Light effects were studied during all hours of the day and beautiful shadow gardens were the result. One of the most interesting aspects of the garden is that it was developed as a series of small rooms. The gardens have outstanding collections of camellias and azaleas.

Persons associated with the property include: the late Barbara Rehder (designer); Charles F. Gillette (landscaper; supervised overall planting in the 1960's); Clarke (designer); K. Sawada (camellia consultant in the 1950's); Helen Pickney (researcher and photographer).

NC010: Winston-Salem -- Reynolda Gardens

Owner: Wake Forest University

Landscape architect: Sears, Thomas Warren, 1880-1966

Horticulturist: Conrad, Robert

Architect: Keen, Charles Barton

Former owner: Reynolds, Katharine Smith, 1880-1924

Reynolds, R. J. (Richard Joshua), 1906-1964

Notes: The folder includes photocopies of articles, images, transcript of a lecture and thesis by Sherold D. Hollingsworth, brochures, and other information.

Reynolda was the county house estate of the founder of R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, Robert Joshua Reynolds, and his wife, Katharine Smith Reynolds, comprising nearly 1,100 acres that included a 38,000 square foot house built for them by architect Charles Barton Keen. Reynolda was primarily conceived by Katharine Reynolds to include a family home with gardens, a village within the estate that housed the twenty families that worked on the self-contained estate, a 350-acre dairy, grain and vegetable farm, a 19-acre golf course with grazing sheep, and woodlands with thousands of daffodils. Before the house and formal gardens were built, Lord and Burnham constructed commercial greenhouses and a large glass conservatory on the property in 1913. Mrs. Reynolds decided to site a four-acre formal garden next to the greenhouses, near the public road, for the benefit of passersby. The first garden designers on the estate were Miller and Buckenham, and then Thomas Sears was brought in to design the viewable greenhouse garden, as well as gardens at the house and boathouse. The boathouse was sited beside the 16-acre artificial Lake Katharine created by Miller and Buckenham's stone-faced dam. The lake has since partially filled with silt and become a wetlands habitat.

Thomas Sears' 1917 formal greenhouse garden was divided into two rectangles, an approximately two-acre formal rose and perennial garden, and next to it another two-acre garden for fruit, flowers and vegetables. Grass panels that divided and surrounded the formal gardens were known as the sunken garden. The original rose garden was divided into four parterres, two planted with roses, one for blue and yellow flowers and the last for pink and white flowers. There were grass panels between the parterres with a double row of Japanese cedar trees on the horizontal axis. Rows of Japanese weeping cherry trees and southern magnolias were planted as a perimeter; later the trees shaded the rose garden to the extent that it had to be replanted when the garden was restored in 1997. Each axis of the two formal gardens ended in an attractive terminus, a feature of many of Sears' designs. These included pergolas and Japanese-styled teahouses for Katharine Reynolds, who wanted to include trees and features from Japanese gardens. Like the rose garden, the design of the fruit and vegetable garden was geometric with a central feature. At the time of its restoration, a large section of this garden was replanted with All-America selection roses, other flowers and herbs.

In the 1930's daughter Mary Reynolds Babcock and her stockbroker husband Charles Babcock bought her siblings' shares in the house and rehired Thomas Sears to redesign the gardens. Renovations to the house included moving the original central entrance to the side of the house, and new gardens were needed in front. A tulip and chrysanthemum garden was designed, with pink, white, blue and purple tulips and forget-me-nots complementing the colors of the new flagstone terrace. Summer flowers included heliotrope, plumbago, salvia, nicotiana, snapdragons and annual phlox, although heliotrope did not flourish in hot weather. Red, yellow, bronze, copper and terra cotta chrysanthemums were planted in autumn. Sears suggested poinsettias, camellias, chrysanthemums, gardenias and begonia semperflorens for a winter garden, but they were not winter hardy and were used for holiday decorations inside the house. Sears also designed a study garden in 1916, which comprises a patio with a recessed pool, stone benches and extensive plantings of rhododendrons and other flowering shrubs, a canopy of flowering magnolias, dogwood and crape myrtles, and an understory of ground covers, lilies, hosta, ferns and daffodils.

Reynolda is now the Reynolda House Museum of American Art. The gardens were donated to Wake Forest University in the 1960's by the Mary Reynolds Babcock Foundation.

Persons associated with this property include R.J. (Robert Joshua) Reynolds (c. 1850-1918) and Katharine Smith Reynolds Johnston

(1880-1924) (former owners, 1909-1924); Mary Reynolds Babcock and Charles Babcock (former owners, 1935-1953); Wake Forest College, later University (owner beginning in 1958); Louis L. Miller and Horatio R. Buckenham (landscape designers, 1911-1913); Thomas Warren Sears (1880-1965) (landscape architect 1915-1917, 1930s); Robert Conrad (horticulturalist, c. 1910-1960); Charles Barton Keen (architect, 1912-1917).

Reynolda Gardens related holdings consist of 3 folders (61 glass plate negatives, and 4 35mm slides)

Thomas W. Sears landscape design for Reynolds included parkland that was sub-divided later for residential neighborhoods including this two and one-third acre property. The house was designed by the same architect employed by R.J and Katherine Reynolds, Charles Barton Keen, and the initial landscaping was designed in keeping with Sears' landscape design: natural woodland borders, mature boxwood, periwinkle and ivy ground covers, and flowering shrubs and spring bulbs. The current owners wanted to maintain the historic parkland feel and create more intimate garden spaces for themselves. Starting work circa 2004 their projects included pruning mature trees and shrubs and developing the woodland gardens by adding an understory of flowering trees including dogwoods, cherries, magnolias and crepe myrtles. At ground level in the woodland gardens there are thousands of daffodils, periwinkle and hellebores that can be seen across the lawn. A massive holly arbor off to one side of the house is this garden's signature feature, and a source of winter berries for birds. The Arbor hosts other wildlife, too, including bees, rabbits, deer, opossum and foxes.

Next to the house inside trellised fencing there is a small garden full of roses, ferns and lambs' ear in summer, followed by Japanese anemones. Akebia and climbing hydrangea grow on the fencing which was installed for an earlier garden design, and wisteria is trained up columns at the back of the house. Wooden steps lead to a vegetable and cutting garden, and a new potager for vegetables and flowers is being planned that will be entered through another arbor.

Persons associated with the garden include G.W. Coan, G.W. Coan, Jr. and Mary Wiggins Coan (former owners, 1929-?); Bowman Gray II and Elizabeth Christian Gray (former owners, 1941-?); James A. Former owner: Ayres, Fanny
Barton, Fred

Gardener: Barton, Margaret Albrecht

Architect: Barton, Margaret Albrecht
Good, Albert

Provenance: Good and Wagner
Akron Garden Club

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet and garden plan.

This half-acre garden takes its name from the 1834 cobblestone Greek Revival house on the property. Much of the landscaping was undertaken by former owners Fred and Margaret Albrecht Barton, who rescued and rehabilitated the property in the 1920s, when it was approximately two acres in size. Since that time the property has been reduced in size through subdivision. A low stone wall installed by the Bartons, for example, now encloses four houses. The current owner has developed a cottage garden with informal plantings. There are numerous stone paths and a brick path from the front door to the curb. There are two small patio areas built of millstones excavated on the property, as well as a large stone patio underneath a pergola. Major trees on the property include pin oak, American beech, and Norway spruce, while shrubs include oakleaf hydrangea, Hydrangea 'Annabelle', highbush cranberry, and Kalmia. Additional plants featured are Helleborus orientalis, peonies, Iberis, and other perennials, annuals, and bulbs.

Persons and firms associated with the property and garden include: Fanny Ayres (former owner, ca. 1834); Margaret Albrecht Barton (former owner and gardener, ca. 1924-ca. 1961); Fred Barton (former owner, ca. 1924-1961); Albert Good (architect, 1924-1925); and Good and Wagner (architects, 1924-1925).

The Akron Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

OH248: Akron -- Compact Urban and Japanese Garden at Twin Oaks

Designer: Vittum, John

Installers: Lewis, Wilson

Provenance: Akron Garden Club

Notes: The folder includes worksheets and a features plan.

The main feature of this property is a compact Japanese-style garden at the rear of the townhome built by the owners in 1991. Visits to Japan inspired the garden's creation in the approximately 0.06 acre space. Inspiration for the plant material came from the Portland Japanese Garden's trees and shrubs. A collection of 25 bonsai specimens represents 15 species with the oldest being 200 years of age. Other plantings include bamboo, a Japanese cherry tree, a Japanese maple, a Japanese white pine, a red pine, cedars, arborvita, azaleas, tree and herbaceous peonies, ferns, hosta, ornamental grasses, hydrangeas, an espaliered wisteria, and clematis.

Hardscapes, furnishings, and accents of the garden include two teak benches, a birdbath, a Pennsylvania bluestone patio with wrought iron table and chairs for dining, sculptures of cranes and a dragon, planter boxes, a Buddhist prayer bell, four stone Japanese lanterns and two smaller metal lanterns, a Zen garden with a coin basin and 20 ton of boulders. Water features include an upper pond containing a water iris that spills into a lower pond holding water lilies, water hyacinth and koi. Stairs made of marble gravel and granite pavers traverse the garden on its east side and lead through the garden from the dwelling to an exit gate. Other pathways in the garden are composed of stepping stones. There is a wooden fence with a gate and a small greenhouse.

At the front of the dwelling is a brick courtyard garden that the owners describe as English in inspiration. Foundation plantings and containers include seasonal annuals and herbs. Additional plant material includes ivy, azalea, rhododendron, hosta, Korean lilac and clematis. The courtyard was constructed around an old oak trunk that was struck by lightning. There is seating and accents including a sundial from Tuscany and a wall sculpture of the Greek god Bacchus.

Persons associated with the garden include: John Vittum (designer, 1991-) and Wilson Lewis (garden installer, 1991).

Provenance: The Akron Garden Club

Notes: The folder includes a work sheet and site plans.

A cathedral-like effect is presented by the naturally-designed perimeter at the property, comprised of conifers, arching mature oaks, beech and tulip trees surrounding the house and inner gardens. A herringbone brick terrace provides direct access to and from the 1920 era French-style house, as well as to the natural areas and to a formal parterre. The parterre leads to the kitchen and cutting gardens and planting house.

Person(s) associated with the property and garden include: Dietzhold (former owner, 1927); Chamberlain (former owner, ?); Warren Manning (laid out area, 1917); Dunn & Copper (architects, 1927); Jaytless (landscape designer, 1972); and John Vittum (landscape architect for front entry garden, 1994).

OH214: Akron -- Storksnest
 Former owner: Stanson, Virginia
 Landscape architect: Hess, Jay
 Landscape designer: Wade & Gatton
 Provenance: Akron Garden Club
 Notes: The folder includes a worksheet, garden plans, and photocopies of articles about the garden.
 This ten-acre site consists mostly of shade gardens, the largest of which is a hosta garden that contains over 60 varieties and various companion plantings and walkways. The "backbones" of these gardens are extensive walls and terraces of barnstone on various levels. A woods with lovely virgin beech trees and a ravine with many native wildflowers are on the property. In a sunny upper meadow is a walled vegetable and herb garden.
 Persons and firms associated with the garden include: Virginia Stanson (former owner, 1968-1976); Jay Hess (landscape architect, 1970 and 1982); and Wade & Gatton (hosta garden designers, 1994).
 The Akron Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

OH033: Akron -- The Garden of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Farley

Provenance: The Akron Garden Club

Notes: The folder includes a work sheet, update sheet, and copy of small article.

With a date span of approximately 1959 to the early 1980s, the garden included a small putting green; a small water feature with an oriental theme; and a greenhouse for orchids. The garden was situated on a gentle rise with gradual slope to gardens behind. The terrace adjoining the house in back is an elliptical area bordered with beds of Fashion and Peace roses edged with iberis. Across the lawn, in the border of rhododendrons and azalea, is a statue of Hebe. A Japanese garden, a copy of one in Kyoto, exists at one end of the border. (Fifty-Second Annual Meeting, The Garden Club of America, May, 1965).

OH213: Bowling Green -- Bridge House

Architect: Jacobsen, Hugh Newell

Landscape architect: Jacobsen, Hugh Newell

Provenance: Country Garden Club

Notes: The folder includes a work sheet, landscape plan, copy of architect's drawings, history of Roche De Boeuf, and brochure of Georgia and David K. Welles Sculpture Garden at Toledo Museum of Art.

This tree-lined estate property, located on the banks of the Maumee River in Northwest Ohio, overlooks the historic abandoned "Roche de Boeuf Bridge" (a.k.a. "The Old Electric Bridge" and "The Interurban Bridge"). The bridge was placed on the National Register of Historic Places in 1972. The twelve spans of Roman aqueduct arches set the stage for this "Bridge House" property landscape, sculpture garden, and home design. The architect's plan incorporated the bridge's arched aqueduct design into the upper exterior of the East wing of the home, such that the residence appears to echo the bridge over the reflecting waters below. Carefully pruned little leaf linden trees in allees on either side of this wing also appear to duplicate the geometry of the bridge's arches. Exterior lighting includes illumination of the bridge at night by the homeowners, with spotlights located in trees on the property near the river. The property also features a maple allee at the property entrance; a grove of green and blue spruce trees; raised bed gardens; and library terrace plantings with herbs and hawthorn.

Eight sculptures were donated to the Toledo Museum of Art in 2001. They are located at the "Georgia and David K. Welles Sculpture Garden" on the lawn in front of the museum. Six sculptures were at Bridge House as of 2002.

Person(s) associated with the property and garden include: Hugh Newell Jacobsen, FAIA (architect and landscape architect, 1980s).

The Country Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

OH238: Broadview Heights -- Ruth & Don's Garden at Braemar Farm
Former owner: Wiltshire, Alfred and Ann
Wiltshire family, 1853 - 1949
Hanck, Lester and Jesse, 1949-1963
Landscape designer: Connelly, Ed
Connelly Landscaping Company
Provenance: Akron Garden Club
Notes: The folder includes worksheets, photocopies of articles, and a write-up of the garden.
Ruth & Don's half-acre garden surrounds the old farmhouse on their 36-acre Braemar Farm property, which was established in 1853. The garden was started in 1963 with the decision to maintain the original farmland and woodlands guided by a plan from the U.S. Soil Conservation Service (now the Natural Resources Conservation Service). Additional acres of conifers and other trees were planted, old diseased weeping willow trees were removed, low sandstone walls and foundation plantings were added, and three additions were made to the house. In 1989 the owners worked with The Connelly Landscaping Company to add structure to the garden by using hardscaping made of brick, sandstone found on the property, and wood to define garden rooms, accommodate sloping terrain, and create spaces for outdoor living. A small stone pond houses frogs and goldfish, an old millstone is at the center of an herb garden, and a large stone well cover found on the property is used as a landing for a set of stairs.

The garden's style is informal English with three deep borders planted with perennials, foliage, and grasses, shrubs and trees. There is a vegetable garden on the edge of the agricultural sector, near one of the two old barns on the property. The ornamental plants provide continuous color throughout the growing season, views from every window of the house, and meet the owners' desire to reduce maintenance. The owner is a trustee of the Cleveland Botanical Garden.

Persons associated with the garden include Alfred and Ann Wiltshire and members of the Wiltshire family (former owners, 1853 - 1949); Lester and Jesse Hanck (former owners, 1949 - 1963); Ed Connelly, The Connelly Landscaping Company (landscape designer, circa 1990).

The Akron Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

OH004: Cincinnati -- Ca Sole

Former owner: Schmidlapp, Horace
 Hinkley, Leila
 Scripps, Charles
 Ragland, Nicholas

Landscape architect: Innocenti, Umberto

Vitale & Geiffert

Colorist: Pratt, Gladys L.

Architect: Atterbury, Grosvenor, 1869-1956

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, photocopies of articles, and write-ups of the property's history.

Ca Sole, with its Italian farmhouse style and red tile roof, hints that the garden was meant to be Italianate as well. The house is on a hillside overlooking the Ohio River. In 1930 the terraced garden of the 3.5 acre property was surrounded by a rustic brick wall with arched cut-outs that provided views of the Ohio River and created a large garden room. Most of the wall has been removed, with parts still standing as decorative features. The current garden has pruned hedges with landscape roses, container planting in classical urns, and vines covering some walls.

The glass lantern slides were painted by Gladys Pratt, who has other work at the American Museum of Natural History in New York.

Persons, and firms associated with the garden and property include: William Horace Schmidlapp (former owner beginning in 1930); Lela Hinkley (former owner); Charles Scripps (former owner until 1993); Nicholas Ragland (former owner 1993-2006); Grosvenor Atterbury (architect); Umberto Innocenti (landscape architect); Vitale & Geiffert (landscape architects); and Gladys L. Pratt (colorist for lantern slides).

The Garden Club of Cincinnati facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Ca Sole related holdings consist of 2 folders (17 glass lantern slides (hand colored); 35 35 mm slide (photographs); 12 digital images)

Garden has been featured in Mac Griswold and Eleanor Weller, "The Golden Age of American Gardens," (New York: Harry N. Abrams, Inc., 1991); and "The Architecture of Grosvenor Atterbury," by Peter Pennoyer and Anne Walker, published in 2009.

OH026: Cincinnati -- Cedarwood

Landscape architect: Kenney, Henry Fletcher

Former owner: Kenney, Henry Fletcher

Provenance: Cincinnati Town and Country Garden Club

Notes: The folder includes a work sheet, update sheet, and copy of Garden Club of America Annual Meeting, 1954, article.

OH026009 to OH026014 are duplicates from originals in Cincinnati Public Library.

Established in 1935, this garden owned by landscape architect Henry Fletcher Kenney. Features included an espaliered Magnolia grandiflora, cedars near the entrance, and a stream bank across the road. An enclosed herb and rose garden was located on the first terrace. A long path leads past the terraced pool to the woods. Kenney utilized ground covers, mulches, and deeply incorporated humus in order to conserve water. "Water for the pool area was rain-trapped in successive basins along the dry hillside cut and each downspout has its Chinese bathtub to catch every drop." Deep unheated pits were used for tender potted material. Below the parking area lie the vegetable and cutting gardens. (The Garden Club of America Annual Meeting, 1954, pp. 30-32). The garden was reported vanished in 1987.

Persons associated with the property include: Henry Fletcher Kenney (landscape architect, 1954).

Cedarwood related holdings consist of 1 folder (16 35 mm. slides)

Plans and drawings by H. F. Kenney exist at the Cincinnati Historical Society, Eden Park, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Notes: The house was built in 1840 on 300 acres. In 1920, the house was enlarged, swimming pool added, and landscape improved. Formal gardens were not a part of the landscape. The estate was subdivided from 300 acres; and consisted of ten acres in 1975. In 1975, the pool was rehabilitated with a large terrace, bathhouse and wetbar facilities. "Improvements were made to produce an established appearance, rather than display newness and new materials." (Bentley, 1980)

OH229: Cincinnati -- Garden of Beth and Jay Karp Garden

Garden designer: Karp, Elizabeth

designer:

Provenance: Garden Club of Cincinnati

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, site plans, and other information.

Located on three acres the garden is divided into smaller gardens with different themes. Garden designer Elizabeth Karp began the project by erecting seven brick pillars joined by four foot boxwood hedges on the north and south side of the entryway that enclose a blue and white garden. Continuing around to the rear of the residence, a patio garden room was created by building two mirror English-style patios with sitting walls featuring numerous moveable containers. A stone pathway leads to another room of naturalized plantings grown behind a box hedge. On the other side of the back patio is a parterre with a pathway around a knot garden. Due to seasonal standing water on the south side, drainage ditches were dug that eventually became a winding U-shaped stone path next to multi-level ponds with a wide grass lane and gazebo. Around the property are several other garden rooms planted with fruit trees, vegetables and herbs, ferns, roses, hostas, hellebores and conifers.

Amongst the gardens are several sculptures, statues, benches, pergolas and fountains, a sundial, urns, a weather vane, wood chip and stone trails. The property is surrounded by nylon deer fences, shrubs, trees, Norway Spruce, and Alberta Spruce.

Persons associated with the site include: Elizabeth Karp (garden designer).

Provenance: Garden Club of Cincinnati

Notes: Knowthewaite

The folder includes a worksheet, update sheet, and copies of articles. Walter L. Rapp designed a reproduction of a Colonial Williamsburg mansion in 1937. The original name for the house, "Knowthewaite," is Gaelic for "clearing on the hill". Rolling lawns end at woodlands. The owner described the overall design as casual, according to the GCA Annual Meeting publication in 1954. Perennial borders lead to a swimming pool. Landscape architect, Henry Fletcher Kenney, designed a terraced rose garden ca. 1954. The rose garden is dominated by a hexagonal tool house, a copy of one at Mt. Vernon. A small walled garden with greenhouse at one end lies off the morning room.

Persons associated with the property include: Henry Fletcher Kenney (landscape architect, 1954); Eleanor Christie (landscape architect, ?); Walter L. Rapp (architect, 1937); and Frederick Geier (former owner).

Notes: The folder includes worksheets.

Originally located on sixty+ acres and subdivided into three acre lots in the 1990s, this garden was established in the 1930s or 1940s. It was re-established in the 1990s after a period of neglect between the 1960s and 1990s. During the 1930s, landscape architect Henry Fletcher Kenney was hired by Dr. and Mrs. Wylie Ayers to design the grounds, formal garden, greenhouse, stone and brick terraces and lengthy meandering driveway. Dr. Ayers was an award winning iris hybridizer and planted masses of several varieties of iris in the garden. Between 1948 and 1964, the William Mooney Family owned the property and maintained staff of gardeners. Mrs. Ann Mooney served as President of the Indian Hill Garden Club. During this time peonies were planted in the garden.

The current owners, John and Helene Bentley, purchased the house along with 5.8 acres in 1995. John Bentley, a landscape architect, reestablished the formal gardens and the informal perennial gardens containing the peony collection established during the Mooney family tenure. The 60 year old plant collection contained many single, open varieties in whites and pastel pinks. The peony collection from the late 1940s, together with hundreds of surprise lilies and narcissus have survived the years of neglect and deer browsing, whereas the massive iris collection of Dr. Ayres did not survive. This peony collection, along with a new installation of Siberian iris and German bearded iris, is the main feature of the gardens during the springtime. The Bentley's have planted additional trees on the property, alongside the surviving mature trees and out-plantings on the property, most of which were planted in the 1930s and 1940s. One original native tree is a 65 inch caliper "old growth" white oak with a 120 foot spread, which some experts believe may be more than 200 years old.

Persons associated with the garden include: Dr. & Mrs. Wylie Ayres (former owners, 1904-1948); William Mooney Family (former owners, 1948-1964); Thomas Corcoran Family (former owners, 1964-1995); John Bentley Family (present owners, 1995-); Karen Heyl (sculptor, 1999); Full time staff of gardeners, names unknown (gardeners, 1940- early 1960s); Henry Fletcher Kenney, L.A. (landscape architect, 1940s-1950s); John Alden Bentley, FASLA (landscape architect, 1995-); David Scott Ross (architect, 1998).

Garden Club of Cincinnati facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Landscape designer: Delano, William Adams

Provenance: Cincinnati Town and Country Garden Club

Notes: The folder includes a work sheet and update sheet..

Mill Trace was established in 1929 with two acres of gardens. The garden is described as formal with many holly cultivars, perennial garden and cutting garden. There is an allee of swamp oaks backed by clumps of hollies and beyond through the high-walled court entrance. According to the Garden Club of American Annual Meeting publication of April, 1954, the owner "has an abiding interest in rare, strange, and hardy plants." A field in ca. 1930 was turned into parklike lawns accented with trees.

 Notes: The folder includes a work sheet and update sheet.
 The garden existed on three of 1,200 total acres. In 1954, the Garden Club of America Annual Meeting publication reported low yew hedges that flank a wooded walk and a small herb garden. The lake and house were surrounded on three sides by woodlands. A swimming pool existed on the lower level. West of the house was a green garden with specimens of tree box. The Peterloon Foundation, a nonprofit organization, currently maintains the estate for the benefit, education, and enjoyment of Greater Cincinnati.

OH051: Cincinnati -- Procter & Gamble Company International Headquarters Garden

Landscape architect: Bentley Meisner Associates, Inc.

Architect: Kohn Pedersen Fox (Firm)

Nurserymen: Ammon Nursery

Notes: The folder includes worksheets and copies of articles about the garden.

Designed by Bentley Meisner Associates, Inc., this urban garden plaza covers two city blocks and was completed in 1985. Highly structured, formal, and symmetrical, it also lends a romantic touch to its large scale city setting. Matched tree groupings, a bosque, and display beds that change with the seasons surround and complement rectangular grass parterres. Wisteria-covered pergolas enclose walkways on the perimeters of the site.

Persons and firms associated with the garden include: Bentley Meisner Associates, Inc. (landscape architects, 1982-1985); Kohn Pedersen Fox (architects); and the Ammon Nursery (nurserymen).

Procter & Gamble Company International Headquarters Garden related holdings consist of 1 folder (94 35 mm. slides)

Garden has been featured in Landscape Architecture in Ohio: Designs for Livable Places (Ohio Chapter of the American Society of Landscape Architects, 1985), p. 12.

Landscape architect: Christie, Eleanor H.

Kenney, Henry Fletcher

Provenance: Cincinnati Town and Country Garden Club

Notes: The folder includes a work sheet and photo copied page of photos, and update sheet.

Red Bird Farm was established ca. 1920 with approximately two acres under construction. Eleanor Christie made changes over the years to H. F. Kenney's original designs. Formerly formal, the garden was modified by 1987.

Person(s) associated with the property include: Mr. and Mrs.
George Dana (former owners, 1920-1948); Henry Fletcher Kenney
(landscape architect); and Eleanor Christie (landscape architect).

Taylor, Albert Davis
Battin, Dalton W.
Bentley, John A.
Steele & Whittaker Landscapes, Inc.
Vivian Lambi & Associates Inc.

Former owner: Warrington, George H.

Richardson, Rosemary Sawyer
 Landscape designer: Hoffman, Stu

Provenance: Cincinnati Town and Country Garden Club

Notes: The folders include work sheets, copies of landscape plans, newspaper and periodical articles, additional visual images, and planting lists.

"River High" represents one of Cincinnati's most characteristic architectural types: the large house set on a wooded hill-top and oriented toward a view of the Ohio River Valley. Built in 1912, the house combines English Georgian and American Colonial Revival with influences of the Arts and Crafts style. "River High" is perceived at first as a long, substantial, dark red brick mass with the original slate roof, lying athwart a shallow bowl of lawn, with the drive winding down to the entrance and sweeping back to the road. The architects' intent was to block the view until the house had been penetrated; when the riverscape appears at the end of the central hallway. The house consists of three main blocks. The lower porch on the left opens onto the reconstructed formal garden that extends the axis of the house eastward. The lower porch leads out onto the lawn that descends gradually through a formal parterre with a pool and fountain. Symmetrical plantings frame this lower lawn. In 2005 the front arrival courtyard was transformed and is now centered with the formal front entrance in keeping with the symmetrical Georgian style of the house. The new design features a fountain with waterfall and a sculpture of two great blue herons as well as seasonal display beds for annuals, a serpentine retaining wall, landscape lighting, and a unique bench sculpture. Completing the picture are custom-designed wrought iron gates, 19th-century Italian urns, and ornamental and shade trees.

Person(s) associated with the property and garden include: George H. Warrington (former owner, 1912-1951); Rosemary Sawyer Richardson (former owner, 1951-1989); Albert Davis Taylor (landscape architect, 1917); Eleanor H. Christie (landscape architect, ca. 1917-1951?); Dalton W. Battin (landscape architect, 1980); Stu Hoffman, Natorp Landscape Organization, Inc. (landscape designer, 1987); Steele & Whittaker Landscapes, Inc. (landscape architects, 1991); Vivian Llambi & Associates Inc. (landscape architects, 1996); and John A. Bentley (landscape architect, 2005).

Cincinnati Town and Country facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

OH066: Cincinnati -- The Public Library of Cincinnati and Hamilton County

Landscape architect: Bentley Meisner Associates, Inc.

Architect: Architekton/F. W. Pressler, Inc.

Notes: The folder includes worksheets.

Designed and planted between 1975 and 1982, the library's "reading garden" is intended to provide a soft, lush, informal respite from a harsh urban environment. Its rich, dense planting provides interest for all seasons.

Persons and firms associated with the garden include: Architekton/F. W. Pressler, Inc. (architects); and Bentley Meisner Associates, Inc. (landscape architects, 1975-1982).

OH216: Cleveland -- A Small City Garden in the Circle at Fairhill Village

Landscape architect: Gray, A. Donald

Williams, Maggie

Architect: Fullerton, Henry O.

Notes: The folder includes a work sheet, landscape plan, copy of architect's drawings (1931), new paper article, and proposal and sketches for new gardens.

The garden and house are located in a planned community with thirteen semi-detached and detached units built between 1929 and 1933. This is a city garden on a corner lot. It is L-shaped--both arms are very narrow. The arm on the south side abuts directly on to a busy thoroughfare. The main features are plantings of trees. An pleached row of holly trees has been carefully shaped into a topiary "hedge on stilts" has been balanced by the addition of an allee of crab apples on the other arm of the "L." The geometry of both is reinforced by hedges of yew and boxwood. The garden is subdivided into smaller areas, containing perennials, herbs, and seasonal plantings.

Person(s) associated with the property and garden include: A. Hadden and Olga C. (Towl) Alexander (former owners); Belle Sherwin (former owner); Donald F. and Barbara H. Stroup (former owner, 1955); Mrs. Bascom Little (former owner); Max M. and Louise E. Muller (former owners); A. Donald Gray (landscape architect, 1928); Harold Fullerton (village architect, 1928); Robert Goode (architect for new addition, 1993-1994); Maggie Williams (architect for new gardens, 1994); and James Brownfield (gardener, 1995).
