This garden site of more than two acres was originally established in 1954, with design work by Leonora Boronio. In the late 1970s a pool and a pavilion modeled after one built for King Leopold II of Belgium in France were added. From the terrace of the main house, stone steps lead to a lower level, where formal pebble walks lead around the pool to the pavilion, which is planted on each side with boxwood. Two tall stone carved urns topped with flower baskets provide an accent. Two fruit baskets atop low stone pedestals end the pebbled walks. To the right of the pavilion is a fern-bordered allée leading to a stone nymph representing Spring. The pool is open to sunshine, and is partly surrounded by fine, tall trees, among them maple, oak, hickory, white pine, mountain ash, hemlock, and pin oak, under which grow rhododendrons, azaleas, mountain laurel, and ferns. A statue fountain of a boy holding a dolphin sprays water into one end of the pool, while the fountain is flanked by bronze sculptures depicting the flight of birds, the work of one of the owners. From the pavilion looking across the pool to the house can be seen scarlet and white azaleas bordering a low stone wall with a flower bed in the foreground, while to the left is a tall hickory tree encircled by pebbles. To the right of the steps above the wall is a small rose garden. Two white kousa dogwoods shade the terrace. On the southern side of the house is a raised vegetable garden, while the front of the house is planted with a fragrant light lavender azalea. Large rhododendrons are planted in front of the garage, while across the pebbled driveway is a flower bed backed by an evergreen hedge.

Persons and firms associated with the garden include: Leonora Boronio (landscape designer, 1954-1955); Sarah Stanton (landscape designer, 1980); and Oliver's Nursery (nurserymen).

Green Fingers Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

The approximately two acre sloping property has a 1930's Tudor style house with a dovecote on the roof, natural rock formations, whimsical boxwood topiaries, a koi pond and a 24-square foot potager within owner-designed deer fencing: low stone walls topped with pierced wood panels. Beginning work in 1983 the current owners had to clear away rampant ivy and weeds to discover the rock ledges, three existing connecting pools, neglected shrubbery and gravel paths. Some of the benches placed around the property were built from stones found there. There is an expansive lawn between the house and street and many mature trees although some have been lost to storms in recent years. Antique stone containers are filled with seasonal flowers and tropical plants including bananas and hibiscus are grown in containers so they can be cut back and overwintered in the garage. The gardens have been grown organically for more than thirty years.

Within the fenced potager the owner grows vegetables, herbs, perennial flowers and roses with annual marigolds around the perimeter to discourage pests. Large clover-shaped and basket-shaped topiary boxwood are featured on the front side of the house, under planted with catmint, giant allium, daffodils, carpet roses and sedum. There are lantana standards in the pool garden and near the covered porch there is a white garden with David Austin rose standards, hydrangea, white bearded iris, and Casablanca lilies. Deer resistant scilla, vinca minor, fern and trillium are grown as understory in the woodland garden and combination plantings and sprays are used to discourage deer from the unfenced gardens around the house.

Persons associated with the garden include Ophelia Bercume (former owner, prior to 1929); the Edgar Company (former owners, 1929-1932); Albert C. Edgar (former owner, 1932-1936); Ethel Leddy (former owner, 1936-1944); Edwin H. and Patricia R. Although ownership of this site can be traced to the 18th century, garden development of the current three-acre property dates only to the mid-1940s, with extensive work done by the current owners after 1976. The garden consists of informal planted beds and a terrace surrounding the house, leading to lawns followed by wetlands which lead to woodlands, all bounded by 18th-century stone walls. A water garden with aquatic and bog plants and koi was dug and built by the current owner. It is lined with rocks found on the property. Raised beds are planted with annuals grown from seed and is a combination of old favorites and new "trial" genera. A shade garden flourishes under the shade of old maples, some of them 200 years old.

Persons associated with the garden include: Major Brown (former owner, 1797); Michael Clark (former owner, 1859-1868); Patrick Reynolds (former owner, 1868-1914); John L. Provenance: Highland Design
Green Fingers Garden Club

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet and abbreviated site plans.

Robin's Nest is located in the Khakum Wood area of Greenwich, Connecticut, planned by the Olmsted Brothers in 1925. Although the house was constructed around 1930, the garden has been under extensive development only since 1998, and is designed to be a park-like setting in harmony with the Olmsted plan. Large rock outcroppings were used to produce a layered effect for the perennial garden. This garden is the focal point of the back lawn as viewed from the house's dining room, columned porch, and upstairs bedrooms. Large cut stones remaining from the house's construction were discovered during land clearing; these were used for edging the lower part of the garden. A professional landscape designer assisted in the design process and brought in most of the plant material in the first year, planting the larger shrubs and placing others. The owners have done all of the other planting and maintenance themselves. Because many of the plants and trees have come from fellow garden enthusiasts, friends, and field trips, the owners call their garden a "friendship garden."

Persons and firms associated with the garden include: Mr. and Mrs. Everett Dominick (former owners, 1929-1971); Charles and Carol Davis (former owners, 1971-1983); Timothy Paterson (landscape designer, 1998); and Highland Design, Inc. (landscape designers, 1998).

Green Fingers Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

 Located on approximately two acres on a corner of a major north-south artery into Greenwich, this two and a half story Arts and Crafts home was designed by architect William B. Tubby in 1904. When the current owners purchased the home in 1992, there was considerable traffic noise from the road, a large driveway dominated the front yard which was flanked by mature American beech and Copper beech trees and a large vegetable garden was located off the kitchen at the rear of the house. In 1994, the owner hired landscape architect Wolfgang Oehme to redesign the garden. The new planting design resulted in what has been described as a "big swooping American gesture." Oehme transformed the front garden by reducing and redirecting the driveway and replacing the entire expanse of lawn with small flowering trees and shrubs, and mass plantings of grasses and perennials. A fountain by the front door now masks the sound of traffic and there are paths that lead to woodland areas. The circular gravel driveway has been redirected to the side street and is reduced in size by two-thirds. A broad walkway, composed of flagstone and decorative brickwork leads to the front door, is lined with large seasonal containers.
 In the backyard, a large terrace runs across the back of the house. Grass steps lead down to the remaining bit of lawn on the property. This lawn is flanked on both sides by broad planting areas composed of birches, viburnums, ironweed, and other perennials which screen the pool from the house. The plantings also frame the "borrowed view" of the distant golf course.

The peak season of the garden is in the fall with the motion of the large ornamental grasses, Japanese anemones and other fall foliage. Spring showcases a bulb display and summer showcases the blue haze of nepeta and Russian sage. Peastone paths, flagstone walkways, stone planters, pergolas, and a lily pond combined with bare structural forms of historic and small trees ensures that winter displays the underlying structure of the garden.

Persons associated with the garden include: William B. and Clara J. Tubby (former owners, 1904-1950), Kenneth C. Towe (former owner, 1950-1943), Charles M. DuPuy, (former owner, 1953-196, William J. and Natalie W. Barron (former owners, 1960-1965), Ann S. Lanman(former owner, 1965-1988), Howard A. and Ruthann M. Silverman (former owner, 1988-1991), Arthur B. Duel (former owner, 1991-1992), William B. Tubby (architect, 1904), Cora Burnham (garden designer, 1995) James van Sweden (landscape architect, 1994), Wolfgang Oehme (landscape architect, 1994), Eric Groft (landscape designer, 1994) and Cora Burnham (landscape designer, 1995).

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet, garden plan, and photocopies of articles and illustrations about the old sawmill and the house/garden. This 5.2-acre garden is located on the site of an early (ca. 1750) sawmill with an overshot water wheel. It was established in the 1920s, with significant alterations being made in the 1970s. The topographical features that made this an ideal site for the sawmill (vertical drops in elevation, falling water) also make for a truly beautiful background for garden beds and borders, views, trees, and other landscape components. Because of the vertical drop there is always the sound of water (except in drought), and because the property faces south there is ample sun that also warms the length of the house. Nevertheless, there are also many shade areas under the trees and shrubs. This is truly a natural garden which incorporates and enhances the features of its topography and native vegetation.

Persons associated with the garden include: Caleb Mead (former owner, 1730-1750); Jeremiah Mead (former owner, 1750-1808); Edmund Mead (former owner, 1808-1841); Edmund Mead, Jr. (former owner, 1841-1895); Ellen and George Waterbury (former owners, 1895-1913); Joseph Howland Hunt (former owner, 1913-1928); E. Carleton Granberry (former owner, 1928-1954); Mary Lange Jackson (former owner, 1954-1974); and Richard Henry Dana (architect, 1929-1931).

Notes: The folders include worksheets, abbreviated site plans, and a photocopy of a book excerpt about the house and garden.

Established in the 1930s, this 11-acre garden was originally designed by noted landscape architect Marian Cruger Coffin. There are many established plantings on the property, which once comprised 43 acres. There are several very large copper beech trees, two apple orchards, a walled rose garden, and a small rock garden with a small pool. The terracing in the rear of the house and the courtyard in the front were redone in 1998. Walls and another courtyard to the left of the garages were also added in that year.

Persons and firms associated with the garden include: Robert Peckham Noble and estate (former owner, 1929-1975); John McAtee (former owner, 1975-?); Claudio Staub (former owner); Bruce Failing (former owner, 1993-1997); Marian Cruger Coffin (landscape architect, 1930s); Phelps Barnum (architect, 1930s); Susan Cohen (landscape designer, early 1990s); Peter Cummins (landscape architect, 1998 to date); Dan Taylor (landscape designer, 1998 to date); Donald Comes (gardener, 1997 to date); D'Andrea Nursery (nurserymen, late 1980s); Fairfax & Sammons (architects, 1997 to date); and Rosedale Nursery (nurserymen, 1998 to date).

Former owner: Lindholm, Magnus Niner, Richard
Niner, Pamela S.

Landscape architect: Rutherford, William, Jr.

Provenance: Green Fingers Garden Club

Notes: The garden file includes (7) 35mm slides, a worksheet and correspondence.

This two-acre garden is surrounded by woods and is backed by a 400-acre Boy Scout reservation. Planting has been dictated by invading deer and the sunny location. The owners' efforts have been to connect their garden and the well-designed pool to the surroundings by using grasses and native shrubs and trees for interesting year-round vistas from inside the house. An attractively planted courtyard is centered on a fountain and curved sitting wall. This provides a garden space that is deer-proof.

Persons associated with the property include: Magnus Lindholm (former owner, 1981-1985); Pamela S. and Richard Niner (former owners, 1985-1999); and William Rutherford, Jr. (landscape architect, 1987-1996).

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, garden and site plans, detailed information about the content of the slides (including plant names), and other information.

An imaginative garden of whimsical topiaries, this two-thirds-acre site combines both traditional and modern elements of design, as does the house it surrounds--a converted barn originally built in the early 1900s but renovated and expanded over the years. The plant material for the topiaries is also both traditional--boxwood--and innovative--a weeping willow. The materials used for the topiaries are always specific to the topiary, such as Carex used for the lions' manes. Each topiary has a unique personality and close scrutiny reveals amazing detail. Jumbo, added in August 2006, sports a howdah and delights his admirers by squirting water into a nearby wading pool. Complementing the topiaries are a variety of trees and shrubs, such as a royal palm near Jumbo. This is a garden that is unique and inventive.

Persons and firms associated with the garden include Laura Kaehler (architect, 1995-2002); Antonia Avalos (gardener, 2000 to date); Larry Labriola (landscape contractor, 2001-2002); Diane Devore (landscape architect, 2001-2002); Kate Reid (landscape designer, 2003); Steve Manning (topiary contractor, 2002); Matthew Larkin (topiary contractor, 2001 to date); Labriola Nursery & Landscaping (landscape contractors, 2001-2002); Kate Reid Landscape Design, Inc. Provenance: Hortulus Garden Club

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, garden and site plans (including plant lists), detailed information about the content of the slides, historical information about the house and site, and other information.

This 20-acre site, including 10 acres of woodlands, was originally developed in the 1920s and is focused around its 1926 Cotswold/Tudor design house. Reflecting the desire of its original owner for quiet and privacy, the original landscape architect, Robert Ludlow Fowler, Jr., covered the house with ivy and planted apple trees, dogwoods, and linden, while allowing the landscape to be dominated by white pine, Norway spruce, cedar, hemlock, juniper and yew. A subsequent owner added a greenhouse and cottage while tearing down and/or moving several other buildings. Beginning in 1975 the current owners have transformed the gardens, replacing dying American dogwoods with a mix of new trees: weeping beech, katsuras, weeping cherry, and birches, among others. Other flowering trees and shrubs have brought color with every changing season. At least eight new gardens have been created. For example, the old Secret Garden with its well, which was an abandoned rose garden, became an azalea garden with an abundant variety of plant material. A new vegetable garden, a hosta garden, a wildflower garden, a boxwood garden, an informal New England-style garden, and a white garden are some of the special spaces that have been created. The addition of all these gardens has brought new splendor to the house while maintaining the feeling of serenity and elegance that is the site's heritage.

Persons and firms associated with the garden include Delano & Aldrich (architects, 1925-26); Robert Ludlow Fowler, Jr. (landscape architect, 1926-30); Mary Jo Bridge Palmer (landscape architect, 1980); Armand Benedek (landscape architect, 1982); B. B. Stamates (landscape architect, 1988); Mary Patterson (landscape architect, 1989); Adam West (landscape architect, 1995-2000); William H. and Elizabeth Finnegan Fain (former owners, 1922-1940); and Elizabeth C. McBride (former owner, 1940-1975).

The Hortulus Garden Club of Greenwich, Connecticut, facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Provenance: Garden Club of Darien

Notes: The folder includes worksheets.

This stone manor house has brick walls and stone terracing with a collection of potted ornamental trees and topiaries--freestanding and alongside the wall--statuary, and garden furniture. The grounds include an expansive lawn with many specimen trees, formal flower beds, a rose garden, and a green house containing annuals. A rock garden with clipped and dwarf conifers is a main feature of this property.

The Garden Club of Darien facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Whitney, Stephen Mr. Mrs.

Fulton, John, MD

Fulton, Lucia Pickering

Gardener: Fulton, Lucia Pickering

Photographer: Radford, Jennifer

Owner: Axion Cushing-Fulton Corporation

Provenance: Garden Club of New Haven

Notes: "The English manor style house was built in 1870 by William Phipps Blake, a grand nephew of Eli Whitney. Blake was a geologist for the Union Pacific Railroad; later he became Director of the School of Mines at the University of Arizona. He was appointed by the Smithsonian Institution as Executive Commissioner for the Centennial Exposition of 1876 in Philadelphia. His late 19th century garden layout is down a sheltered southern slope. Massive retaining walls, masonry pillars linked by copper chains, and glazed brick paths, bricked-edged, have proved a very durable hardscape. Some features were added mid 20th century including the small fountain pool."

Persons associated with the property include: William Phipps Blake (former owner and engineer); Whitney Blake (former owner); Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Whitney (former owner); John Fulton, MD (former owner); Lucia Pickering Fulton (former owner); Axion Cushing-Fulton Corporation (owner); Jennifer Radford (photographer).

The Garden Club of New Haven facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Notes: The folder includes a work sheet, site maps, and plant list.

This garden, an island street divider, is an example of small scale civic planting. Sponsored, planted, and maintained for over ten years by volunteers, it creates a display near several commercial establishments. Winter hardy shrubs, perennials, and bulbs were chosen for changing colorful contrasts through a six months season starting in early spring with pink perennial tulips. Amendment with proprietary crystals decreases the need for frequent watering in hot weather. Named after a founder of a beautification effort, the garden is "a neighborhood highlight."

Persons associated with the property and garden include: Town of Hamden; Jonathan Ingersoll (gardener, 1996-present); Claire Ingersoll (gardener, 1996-present); and Louis Lettiero (gardener, 1996-present).

The Garden Club of New Haven facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Former owner: Gross, Samuel

Grigsby, James A.
Grigsby, Karen P.
Architect: West, Clifton C.
Wilhelm Associates
Landscape architect: Desmond, Thomas M., 1884-1950
Sculptor: Diepenbrock, Peter
Provenance: Garden Club of Hartford
Notes: The folder includes worksheets and photocopies of plans.

The original landscape was designed by landscape architect Thomas M. Desmond in the 1920's when the Federal-style brick house was built on a two-thirds acre lot in a newly developed neighborhood. Remaining features from the early gardens include a sugar maple tree in front of the house, a weeping beech at the side near the sun porch, curving beds along the back and side perimeters with mixed conifers, and winding paths of stepping stones. A venerable Japanese maple next to the original bluestone patio was pruned to reveal its branching structure, wisteria was removed from the house, and there are plans to remove rhododendron that have grown unattractive. Desmond's original planting plan had five fruit trees placed around the back lawn, a cutting salad garden, and a service area outside the laundry room, now converted to a breakfast room that opens to a new second patio. A curved drive in front of the house that connects to the original driveway leading to the garage was built in the 1980's.

From the driveway the garden is entered through an archway. The expanse of back lawn is used for games and entertaining and to display a stainless steel sculpture "Monogenesis #1" by Peter Diepenbrock. A curving stone wall in one corner is the backdrop to a planted bed and containers. The western bed of evergreens also has flowers planted on either side of the path of stepping stones.

In 1929 the architect Clifton C. West wrote articles for the Hartford Courant newspaper called "Your Prospective Home" with recommendations for designing houses and gardens that match the design of this house.

Persons associated with the garden include Samuel Gross (former owner, 1923-1938); Elbridge M. Beecher (former owner, 1938-); James A. and Karen P. Grigsby (former owners, dates unknown); Clifton C. West (architect, 1923); Thomas M. Desmond (1884-1950) (landscape architect, 1924); Edward Cape/Wilhelm Associates (architectural renovations drawings, 1985); Peter Diepenbrock (sculptor, 2002).

CT060: Hartford -- Elizabeth Park

Former owner: Pond, Charles Landscape architect: Wirth, Theodore

architect:

Provenance: Meehan, Kathryn

J. Horace McFarland Company

Notes: The folders include catalog sheets and articles.

Charles Pond, a wealthy businessman, bequeathed his estate to the City of Hartford in the late 1800s to be used as a horticultural park and named it after his wife, Elizabeth. In 1897, the Elizabeth Park Rose Garden was one of the first municipal rose gardens established in America. The rose garden was designed by Theodore Wirth, a Swiss landscape architect hired by the Olmsted firm, who finished training at London's Royal Botanical Gardens at Kew. In 1904, the rose garden was constructed and planted. In 1912, the American Rose Society recognized its splendor and significance and requested that a half acre semi-circle be added and used as this country's first test rose garden. The garden was originally famous for its variety of Hybrid Perpetuals (eight original beds continue to bloom). By the 1960s the park became so neglected and weed filled that the American Rose Society would no longer recognize it as an accredited testing grounds. In 1977, the Friends of Elizabeth Park was formed and they hired a rosarian. A restored garden replanted with new vintage plants was installed. The American Rose Society reinstated Elizabeth Park as a test garden. Today, the garden has 15,000 rose bushes of about 800 varieties--mainly Hybrid Teas, Grandifloras, Floribundas, shrubs, polyanthas, and minis. In 1990, the All-American Rose Selections awarded Elizabeth Park the most outstanding garden award. Other gardens in the park include an annual garden; a perennial garden; an herb garden; a rockery; a Dahlia garden; and a large number of rare and unusual trees and shrubs.

This collection is made up of glass lantern slides, photo prints (color and b&w), glass plate negatives, and postcards. The images include the construction of the garden and early visitors. They also depict the pond and bridge; rose gardens; perennial beds; an aerial view; and expanses of lawn.

Persons and entities associated with the property and garden include: Charles Pond (former owner); City of Hartford and Town of West Hartford (present owners); and Theodore Wirth (park designer and supervisor, 1897).

Elizabeth Park related holdings consist of 3 folders (55 photoprints, glass lantern slides and glass negatives; 6 postcards)

Former owner: Goodwin, Ruth Cheney Cheney, Charles A.
Levin, Richard C.
Lappin, W. Robert

Creator: Morris, Benjamin W. (Benjamin Wistar), 1870-1944

Provenance: Garden Club of Hartford

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, biographical information, photocopies of articles and a bibliography of background materials.

The 4.79-acre property with a red brick Tudor influenced mansion built in 1913, and the grounds, were in disrepair in 1994 when the current owner gave it a name and began restorations. Mature trees including fruit trees were kept and augmented with more trees and shrubs in front of the house and in the center of the circular driveway. Many garden room designs were inspired by visits to gardens in England and Ireland, and garden features were acquired following visits to gardens in Europe and the American southwest. The owners added an outdoor kitchen to a patio with ornamental ironwork that had been built by the original owners in 1926. A nearby stone fireplace that is used year round was inspired by the outdoor fire pits in New Mexico. Three terraces or tiers divided by low stonewalls and new plantings connect the patio to the swimming pool. On the uppermost terrace there is a formal parterre garden with boxwood hedges and pincushion topiary. Grass walkways on the terraces are bordered by continuous blooms; lilies are favored and other perennials are added to extend bloom time. There is another patio with a hot tub, Adirondack chairs, and a stone lantern. A rustic arbor and stone steps lead to a lower garden and the vestigial Park River. The newest garden room close to the river is Asian-inspired, with Japanese cherry trees, dogwood, magnolia and weeping evergreen and a red painted footbridge over a stone 'river'.

On the north side of the property a restored former pony barn is used for storing garden tools. Nearby there is a new heated chicken house and vegetable garden with fruit trees enclosed by a white picket fence. A cutting garden with ironwork arches at each end has been added. Outside the kitchen there is a large herb garden, wall fountain on a gray fence, and a grape arbor on the site of a former dog pen. Other garden rooms include rose beds and a shade garden with hosta, fern, lily-of-the-valley and trillium. Flowering shrubs include lilac, mature rhododendron, and mountain laurel, the Connecticut state flower. There are extensive vines including eight varieties of clematis, three varieties of honeysuckle, trumpet vines and wisteria. Garden ornaments include a statue of Neptune next to the swimming pool, a tall angel on the patio near the outdoor kitchen, a large stone face set in one of the terraces, many planted containers and urns, and an armillary sphere.

Persons associated with the garden include: Charles A. and Ruth Cheney Goodwin (former owners, 1913-1953); Richard C. Levin (former owner, circa 1956-1970); W. Robert Lappin (former owner, 1970-1994); Benjamin Wistar Morris (1870-1944) (architect, 1913); Tony DiBatiste (gardener, circa 1913-1954).

The Garden Club of Hartford facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

This is a three-quarter acre urban garden growing since 1987 around a 1926 Tudor-style house that is listed on the National Register of Historic Places as an Historic District property. The densely-planted gardens are described as an informal museum of perennials, native plants, shrubs and trees since the owners have created more gardens and kept adding plant materials for almost thirty years.

The first foundation garden planted in front of the house included juniper, hollies, and rhododendrons, later filled in with dozens of perennials and more shrubs including azaleas, day lilies, hydrangea, iris, peonies, allium, hosta, mountain laurel, English ivy, geraniums and rhubarb. Now in front of the house there are perennial borders all the way to the street, alongside the driveway and in island beds around trees. In the first years of ownership a bluestone patio was built off the sun room, with a patio garden eventually planted with weigela, tree peony, ferns, ladies mantle, ginger and more. A long perennial border that contained only azaleas and a crabapple was amended with peonies, lilies, bachelor buttons, lady's mantle, anemone, coreopsis and more.

When two diseased hemlocks near the patio had to be removed a sunny garden area opened up that was planted with kousa dogwood, hydrangea, rhododendron and new varieties of hosta. A shaded woodland garden border was created for May apple, wood poppy, astilbe, ginger, lily-of-the-valley, Solomon's seal, blood root and a burr oak. Two raised beds for vegetables were added in the sunny lawn, growing tomatoes, peas, beans, squash, lettuce, carrots and basil.

Persons associated with the garden include Charles Blake (former owner, 1926-1946); Louise Garvin (former owner, 1946-1975); Thomas Valashinas (former owner, 1975-1978); Michael Budlong (former owner, 1978-1986); Russell F. Barker (architect, 1926); Jackie Lloyd (landscape design, 1987-1988); John O'Brien (nurseryman); Alice Willard (garden designer, 2009); Melissa Emma (garden designer, 2013-2015); Amy Schuster (landscape designer, 2014); Samuel Sargent (landscape designer, 2014); Rusty Warner (organic consultant, 2015-2016).

The Garden Club of Hartford facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

CT727: Hartford -- Whitman Close Commons

Landscape designer: Gebrian, Jeffrey

Owner: Whitman Close Association

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, garden design plans, planting list, and historical information about the property and surrounding neighborhood.

Located on a third of an acre in downtown Hartford, this garden was established in 1985 as part of a redevelopment project. A parking lot which previously occupied the space was relocated and landscaped to make room for the community garden. Designed by Jeff Gebrian and his company CR3, it serves as a common area for the residents who host many activities and social events there. The garden is flanked by two groups of brownstone row houses that were built in the 1860s and 1870s. The centerpiece of the garden is a raised brownstone circle that provides seating along its edge. Vertical stones mark the four corners of the compass with a stone line pointing north. Other features include a vegetable garden, a shade garden, and a compost pile. The garden is part of the Buckingham Square Historic District, which was added to the National Register of Historic Places in 1977.

Persons associated with the garden include: Whitman Close Association (owner, 1985-), Jeff Gebrian (landscape designer, 1985). The Garden Club of Hartford facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

CT144: Kent -- Brook Hill Farm

Landscape architect: Page, Russell

Garden designer: Weber, Nelva M.

Horticulturist: Burgess, Caroline

Notes: Burgess, Caroline

The folder includes work sheets and photocopies of articles about the garden.

This 200-acre country estate's gardens were originally designed by Russell Page. Landscape architect Nelva Weber was also involved in certain aspects of the early design, while Caroline Burgess was involved with additional garden design and planting in the early 1990s. The garden, which blooms continuously from May to October, features herbaceous borders, a double aisle of crabapple trees, yew hedges, hosta-lined stone steps, a formal garden centered on an English fountain, and other design elements that complement and incorporate views of the surrounding landscape.

Persons and organizations associated with the garden include: Russell Page (landscape architect, ca. 1972); Nelva M. Weber (landscape architect, ca. 1972); and Caroline Burgess (garden designer and horticulturist, ca. 1992-1994).

CT551: Litchfield -- Baby Boomer Retirement Garden

Provenance: Litchfield Garden Club

Notes: The folder includes worksheets and detailed garden documentation.

The Baby Boomer Retirement Garden is a dense yet low-maintenance garden designed to meet the needs of lifelong gardeners who have chosen to simplify their lives by downsizing to a smaller property. Described as a "retirement garden," the property serves to minimize tasks such as weeding, mulching, and staking. In setting the framework for the garden, the view of the surrounding landscape was a guiding principle. An old apple tree, named the "Iconic Apple Tree," is the focal point of the large lawn which leads the eye to the mountain vista beyond. The renovation of the house included the addition of glass windows and doors so that every room's west facing wall would have a view of the landscape.

The garden area is compact but features great variety. It includes elements of five different gardens, including a rock garden, an herb garden, a shade garden, perennial borders, and a water garden. In keeping with the low-maintenance theme plantings were chosen for their resilience including peonies, daffodils, daylilies, poppies, and sedums, which are set amongst an evergreen backbone of juniper, false cypress, holly, mugo pine, bog rosemary, periwinkle, and yucca.

The only staking occurs when the six peony plants are in bloom, and annuals are limited to a flat of petunias added in the spring.

Described as the garden's main attraction is a 35 foot long water lily pool, the side of the pool also provides garden seating in the form of a stone sitting wall. The pool is a naturally balanced system featuring a koi, snails, frogs, a school of goldfish whose population is kept in check by a resident great blue heron, and an assortment of aquatic plants such as water lilies, hornwort, and water violet.

Bordered by kale and marigolds the herb garden, which provides herbs and greens for salads, is conveniently located just off the kitchen. A shade garden is located in view of the master bath which sits in an oversized glassed window box, providing a verdant greenhouse-like view for bathers. Flanking each end of the lily pool two identical perennial borders provide continuous bursts of color in four waves of blooms: the first wave features daffodils and forsythia, the second wave arrives with the blooming of peonies, poppies, and assorted allium, the third wave occurs at the height of the summer when the water lilies, irises and daylilies bloom, and the color season closes with the fourth wave consisting of a massive overplanting of white 'Casa Blanca' lilies.

The Litchfield Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Known as the South Garden, the formal garden at Breeze Hill Farm covers about two-thirds of an acre of the four and one half acres estate that also includes forty acres of agricultural land. The house was built in the 1800s, and the formal garden next to it was conceived after the owners found the remains of an old pergola that had blown down in a hurricane. The pergola was rebuilt and planted with wisteria, clematis and lilac. The formal garden is rectangular with a large fountain set within a sixty-foot circular perimeter of Belgian block. One axis goes from the house through the fountain directly to the pergola and is bisected by another axis that leads to the bordering hedges of privet and rugosa rose with an herb garden and propagating greenhouse beyond; past the greenhouse is an old low stone wall shaded by mature trees. A wildflower meadow is being developed, supplemented with seedlings grown in the greenhouse.

The four quadrants within the fountain ring each contain a weeping cherry tree and egg-shaped boxwood along the walkways. The foundation planting at the house includes spring bulbs, hosta, peony and phlox. The greenhouse is the winter home for olive trees planted in containers and an heirloom geranium from the region that is propagated through cuttings. Vegetables and herbs are grown from seed and raised organically on the property for the owners and their dogs.

This property was originally documented as part of a 1992 donation to the Archives of American Gardens. At that time it was listed as the Wood Garden. An update of the garden documentation was provided in 2012.

Images CT039004 and CT039025 are variations of the same photographic image, created circa 1930; image CT039024 is of the same vantage point in 2011.

CT359: Litchfield -- Chestnut Hill Gardens

Landscape designer: McGourty, Mary Ann

Provenance: Litchfield Garden Club

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, planting plans, and a photocopy of an article.

An outstanding feature of Chestnut Hill Gardens is a 240-foot long perennial border planted in 2004 alongside a split rail and stone fence that separates the house and gardens from a nine-acre meadow. The owners first planted an 80-foot long border in the same location in 1982; by 2003 that border looked tired. Everything but the trees was dug up, more curves were added to widen the strip now three times the original length, and the soil was amended and tilled. Under the direction of landscape designer Mary Ann McGourty of Hillside Gardens four people replanted most of the perennials and shrubs that had been heeled into the vegetable garden temporarily, adding native plants and more deer resistant perennials - about 500 plants put in place on a single day in June 2004. Forty large pots of spring bulbs that were collected from the original border were replanted in the autumn. Milorganite, repellents and a large dog help reduce deer predation.

The 56-acre property includes a solar home, an octagonal barn with an espaliered crab apple tree, a vegetable garden in raised beds, a cutting garden, an ornamental grass garden, a parterre herb garden in raised beds with a water feature in the center, a pergola that shades the patio, a pinetum, and fruit trees. The varied plantings produce three seasons of color. The garden has been included in local garden tours on several occasions.

Persons associated with the garden include Mary Ann McGourty, Hillside Gardens, Norwalk CT (landscape designer, 2004).

The Litchfield Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Provenance: Litchfield Garden Club

Photographer: Stoner, Diane B.
 Oneglia, Ellen
 Patterson, Marla J.

Owner: Hinkel, Paul R.
 Hinkel, Jane B.

Landscape designer: LaFontaine, Rosalind Spring

Notes: The gambrel-roofed house built in 1736, reputed to be the birthplace of Ethan Allen in 1738, has been enlarged by many owners since then, and the sloping 1.41 acres garden always has presented challenges for ornamental presentation. Parterres with roses and perennials were established by garden designer Rosaline Spring LaFontaine in 1956. The current owners acquired the property in 1982, then in 2003 redesigned and planted a formal garden with French influences. These include extensive hedges, defined flower beds, a tea house as a focal point, and an unstructured hedge of forsythia, birdhouse and secret garden at the southern edge of the slope. At the eastern edge nine Norway spruce were planted to buffer noise from a nearby highway

Directly behind the house on the most level area there are two cutting gardens bisected by a stone path. An allée of crabapples leads down the slope that culminates in the teahouse designed by the owner who is an architect. Clipped boxwood hedges with curved corners were arrayed symmetrically to emphasize the axis of the garden and, at the same time, diminish the visual impact of the slope. The formal character of the garden is seen in the four lilac standards that flank the main path. Other plants include seven varieties of daylilies, five varieties of hostas, three hydrangeas, spikes of baptisa and ligularia, large alliums, Joe Pye weed, rhododendron and azalea.

Recently most of the shrubs in the boxwood parterres succumbed to infectious leaf minor blight and had to be removed. Other boxwood hedges remain. Features include tuteurs and an antique planted urn. One permanent feature of this garden, in a corner, is the stone incinerator from the 18th century when the property was a working farm.

Persons associated with the garden's design: Rosaline Spring LaFontaine (landscape designer, 1956), Paul Hinkel (architect, 2003) and Jane and Paul Hinkel (owners, 1982-2023).

Notes: The folder includes a catalogue sheet.

Extending off the side of this colonial home is an elongated vine-covered pergola. Free standing flower beds dot the lawn. A brick wall, stepping down in height, is the backdrop for extensive herbaceous borders. This garden contains a large birdbath/fountain. Mature lilacs are planted on either side of stone steps leading to a side door.

Person(s) associated with the property and garden include(s): Mrs. Seymour Cunningham (former owner).

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, historical information about the property, a reference print and an article.

The 15 acre property was one of the parcels of land allotted to settlers when Litchfield was founded in 1719, and the original Georgian-inspired house, since expanded, was built for Oliver Wolcott Senior in 1753. The gardens installed by the current owner beginning circa 1978 recall the agrarian history of the region with fruit trees, a working chicken coop, and gates designed to suggest barn doors. There is one ancient apple tree on the property and old species plants and modern cultivars have been mixed in garden beds. Trees and shrubs were planted in front of the house for privacy and to reduce noise from the street, which would not been done in colonial times. There is a curving driveway with an island flower bed that also is bordered by flower beds and fruit trees. Behind the house there is a terrace with the remnants of an old well and long double borders planted with perennials, bulbs and tubers. A headless and footless remnant of a classical sculpture is located at the far end of the double borders in a stand of barberry and other shrubs. There are island flower beds in wet spots, a tall wooden fence with barn style gates surrounding a private low stone walled garden with a swimming pool, a guest house with its own ornamental garden, a vegetable garden and an apple orchard. A pond, formerly a dump, marks the start of a natural woodlands garden with native trees, shrubs and wild flowers.

There is little evidence of the original gardens but since each household was mostly self-sufficient there would have been a large diverse kitchen garden near the house; chickens, cows, pigs and horses kept in outbuildings; orchards of fruit trees including apples, pears, peaches, cherries, quince and apricots grown from stock brought from England; and fields of grains and forage crops for the livestock on land that was cleared down to the Bantam River. Oliver Wolcott Senior was one of Connecticut's signatories of the U.S. Constitution and George Washington stayed overnight at his house on September 23, 1790. The house was listed on the National Register of Historic Places in the 1970's. According to local lore a lead statue of George III that was torn down in New York City in 1776 was brought by ox-cart to Litchfield and melted down to make ammunition, reportedly done under an apple tree on this property. The event was recreated in 1936 with participants in costume. A reference print in the file shows the garden and participants (including a young S. Dillon Ripley). The current owner found a musket ball near the wetlands flower beds on the south side of the property.

Persons associated with the garden include Oliver Wolcott Senior (former owner, 1753-1797); Frederick Wolcott, Huntington Wolcott (former owners, 1797-1843); Henry Migeon (former owner, 1843-1853); George and Alice Todd (former owners, 1853-1855); Thomas and Jenna Harney (former owners, 1855-1883); Alice Wolcott (former owner, 1883-1907); Alice Wolcott Brimley Sherman (former owner, 1907-1976).

The Litchfield Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

CT030: Litchfield -- Spruce Brook Farm

Former owner: Busk, Margaret Krebs Shope
 Busk, Frederick T.

Provenance: Litchfield Garden Club

Notes: The folder includes a catalogue sheet.

An extended terrace off the white clapboard colonial home steps down into a mature perennial garden surrounding the lawn. The garden contains a parterre rose bed, an arbor, and shade trees. A different view of the gardens looks out over a yew hedge and flower beds to a pergola and views of Litchfield Hills.

Person(s) associated with the property and garden include(s): Mrs. Frederick T. Busk (former owner).

CT032: Litchfield -- The Patterson Garden

Former owner: Curry, Margaret W.
 Curry, E. Norman
 Notes: Curry Garden, 1939.

The folder includes worksheets.

The Patterson Garden (also known as the Curry Garden or the Curtis Rose Hatheway House) in Litchfield, Connecticut surrounds an 1899 Colonial Revival house, both of which have undergone changes through the years. An earlier colonnade at the front of the house has been replaced by an allée comprised of twelve 30-foot tall Chanticleer pear trees, each under planted with four Green Pillow boxwood. The walkway to the front door is comprised of pea gravel edged in granite set, with a small granite set terrace and two antique urn container gardens filling the transition to the front steps. Behind the house a grass terrace is surrounded by a perennial border with a line of espaliered European pear trees and topiary yew pillars marking the transition to the lower lawn. Old trees and yew hedges provide shade and privacy for the long, rectilinear site. The primary color for blooms in this garden has been white, including white peonies, ancient hydrangeas, antique and shrub roses in white and pink, and the blooming pear trees in the spring.

Next to a carriage house at the bottom of the garden there is an herb and vegetable garden planted in eight raised beds and enclosed by a white picket fence with reproduction treillage at one end that is draped in honeysuckle. A circular rose bed in the lower lawn is anchored by a ten-foot iron trellis; nearby there is a hedge of ten hydrangeas thought to be about ninety years old. A shade garden featuring hostas also borders the driveway that runs along the side and back of the property, in an area too shady to grow roses.

The property has been owned by at least eight different families since the house was built in an undeveloped area in 1899. Gardening has been an avocation for six of those owners, all who were members of the Litchfield Garden Club.

Persons associated with the garden include Curtis Rose and Julia Hatheway, Elizabeth Pearsall Sparks Hatheway and families (former owners, 1899-1922); Grace H. Perry, Pearl L. Denison and Blanche Underwood (former owners, 1922-1925); Reverend E. Norman and Margaret W. Curry (former owners, 1925-1947); Richard F. and Marie H. Harker (former owners, 1947-1949); Paul F. and Nancy Coe Brogan (former owners, 1949-1961); C. Raymond and Carolyn Johnson (former owners, 1961-1984); Thomas W. Witherspoon, Jr. and Elaine Goss Witherspoon (former owners, 1984-2001).

The Litchfield Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

CT549: Litchfield -- Westview Farm

Provenance: Litchfield Garden Club

Notes: The folder includes worksheets.

Once a working dairy farm, Westview Farm serves as a quintessential example of the New England house and garden. The farmhouse and many of the trees on this 5 acre property date back to when it was established in 1850, an apple orchard on the property dates back to circa 1940. The gardens of Westview Farm, which include an herb and flower garden, a "red border" featuring plantings with red blooms and foliage contrasted with bright yellow and green plantings, a vegetable garden, and a cutting garden, were established in 1986 when the current owners purchased the property. One of the most recent additions to the property is a 1/3 acre pond added in 1993 which is surrounded by willows, forsythia, and daffodils.

The extensive vegetable garden includes over 115 varieties of vegetables that are grown over the course of the growing season. In addition to the annual plantings which vary from year to year, the cutting garden features espaliered pear trees, boxwood and Alberta spruce topiary, and a dwarf apple tree, all of which provide structure and definition to the garden, particularly in winter.

The Litchfield Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

CT202: Madison -- Beechcroft

Former owner: Redfield family

Borg, Alan C.

Borg, Elizabeth A.

Stedman, William

Belfield, Peter S.

Belfield, Judith S.

Landscape architect: Tremper, Gregory B.

Gardener:

Fuller, Barbara

Nolan, Margaret

Provenance: Garden Club of New Haven

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet, garden plan, and detailed plant list.

This .66-acre naturalistic garden straddles a granite ledge alongside a tidal marsh. Developed by the owner since 1977, the garden design shows great ecological sensitivity to the location. Boulders that resulted from excavation for the pool are sited amongst shrubs and ground covers, beside the pool, and to link the garden spaces. Variety and pictorial effects are achieved by well-chosen groupings of bulbs, perennials, flowering shrubs, and evergreens contrasting with the handsome copper beech. A thyme-covered flagstone terrace and also a deck extending from the house (a former barn with studio addition) provide views of the marshes.

Persons associated with the property include: the Redfield family (former owners, ca. 18th century- 1968); Alan C. and Elizabeth A. Borg (former owners, 1968-1971); William Stedman (former owner, 1971-1972); Peter S. and Judith S. Belfield, (former owners, 1972-1976); Gregory B. Tremper (landscape architect/ landscape design consultant, 1976-1977); Barbara Fuller (gardener, 1982-1984); and Margaret Nolan (gardener, 1997 to date).

The Garden Club of New Haven facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

CT201: Middletown -- Nehemiah Hubbard Homestead (Juana-Maria G. Flagg Garden)

Former owner: Hubbard, Nehemiah

Hubbard family

Wadsworth, Clarence Colonel

Winder, Frank D.

Winder, Mary S.

Consultant: Isham, Norman S.

Designer: Carter, Robert

Architect: Kelly & Kelly

Provenance: Middletown Garden Club

Owner: Flagg, Juana-Maria G.

Notes: The file includes 1 folder, (23) 35 mm slides, a worksheet, garden plan, and list of ornamental trees on the property.

Established in 1956 on property held by the Hubbard family from 1745 to 1916, this 11-acre country garden has evolved over the years mostly by elimination. Overgrown vegetation, undesirable trees, shrubs, and invasive vines have been selectively cleared by the owner. In 1965 a pond was created in a swampy area and the surrounding red maples were limbed up to provide a view of the pond from the house. Through years of mowing the meadows have become a lush lawn graced with mature trees. The effect is park-like, yet not imposing. Shrubs and flower borders have been planted with a naturalistic feeling. The vegetable garden includes herbs, a perennial border, and annuals for cutting.

Persons associated with the garden include: Nehemiah Hubbard and the Hubbard family (former owners, 1745-1916); Colonel Clarence Wadsworth (former owner, 1916-1952); Frank D. and Mary S. Winder (former owners, 1952-1956); Juana-Maria G. Flagg (owner and garden designer, 1956-), Kelly & Kelly (architects, ca. 1929); Norman S. Isham (consultant, ca. 1929); and Robert Carter (designer, ca. 1953).

Middletown Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Also known as Juana-Maria G. Flagg Garden.

Garden has been featured in Mary Tonetti Dorra, The Beautiful American Vegetable Garden (New York: Clarkson Potter, 1997), pp. 48-51.

CT352: Middletown -- Spiral of Life Gardens

Provenance: Middletown Garden Club

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, photocopies of articles, and write-ups of the property's history.

The Spiral of Life Gardens is transformative in many senses. What was once an ordinary one-acre suburban lot with lawn, shrubs and a dogwood tree now has about 120 native plants in free-form garden beds and habitats, and learning stations for the classes that visit. The owner and designer of the garden drew on concerns about the environment and her own spiritual convictions when she began the transformation by creating a sacred universe garden in a spiral directly behind the house that has a honeysuckle bush and birdbath at its center and native purple flowers including coneflower, false indigo and bee balm along with inspirational messages posted beside the pathway. Irregularly-shaped beds throughout the property are connected by grass paths and each is named for a particular function or concept, such as invitation, Zen, butterfly, peace, rain, and memorial. The plot is bordered on one side by land trust woodlands that, along with the garden's planted habitat edges, provide food and cover for wildlife. According to Vivian Felton, a conservationist with the USDA Natural Resource Conservation Service and local contact for its Ecological Landscaping Network, the garden reflects three themes: environmental awareness, diversity of plantings for wildlife conservation, and spiritual experience.

In 2006 the Spiral of Life garden was approved as an educational site for the New England Wildflower Society which holds programs each June on the property. Also starting in 2006 Connecticut wildlife biologist Peter Picone has been convening educational programs in the Spiral of Life garden. The Connecticut River Coastal Conservation District cited the owner with a special merit award on October 18, 2008. Water conservation is achieved by the use of rain barrels to collect roof runoff and the use of permeable surfaces for the driveway and walkways. The garden has been open for visitors and students interested in its spiritual and ecological qualities.

The Peace Garden features a large sphere painted to resemble the earth as it is seen from space, which was sculpted by Kim Kuzina. The sphere is surrounded by rock compositions based on the Inuit peoples' inukshuks, which are used as navigational aids to good fishing holes.

Persons associated with the garden include Hazel G. and William C. White (former owners of property, prior to 1958); John L. Skinner (former owner, circa 1958-1965); Kim Kuzina (sculptor of "Peace" sphere, 2003); Vivian Felten (USDA Natural Resource Conservationist, 2003); Greg Lowenberg (New England Wildflower Society Educator, 2006); Peter Picone (Connecticut wildlife biologist, 2006-2009).

The Middletown Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet, a garden plan and plant list, and a copy of a House Beautiful article about the garden.

This architect-designer's modernist garden with a highly ordered geometry is an extension to the 1836 Greek Revival style house. An abstract but formal composition using a series of stepped terraces merges, joins, and unfolds space on the one-third acre lot. Keeping to the minimalist theme, abundant summer annuals are limited to two colors. The serene landscaped rooms are formalized by yew parterres, serial hedges, stone and painted brick walls, a bosk of pruned crabapple trees, a cone folly, raked gravel, and other French and Italian elements. Its geometry contrasts with the thick, random woodland plantings of mature pines and hemlocks. An opaque screen of European beech separates the entry court from the landmark building, located in a historic district adjacent to the town center. The patter of water is created with two fountains in granite basins located side by side.

Persons and organizations with the property include: Theophilus Fitch (former owner, 1835-1837); Philo Fitch (former owner, 1837-1865); Clarinda Ayres (former owner, 1865-1891); Eleazer Fancher (former owner, 1891-1902); Helen Rogers (former owner, 1902-1919); The Community School (former owner, 1919-1924); Maxwell E. and Louise Perkins (former owners, 1924-1965); John and Bertha Frothingham (former owners, 1965-1972); and Johnson Lee (former owner, 1972-1973).

CT145: New Canaan -- Glass House

Architect: Johnson, Philip, 1906-2005

Former owner: Johnson, Philip, 1906-2005

Whitney, David, 1939-2005

Notes: The folders include worksheets, photocopies of articles and other information.

An iconic structure of glass and steel created by architect Philip Johnson, Glass House was completed in 1949. The house has no interior walls and provides uninterrupted views of the landscape from all four sides of the structure. The original property as it was purchased in 1946 spanned five acres. Glass House and its companion structure, Brick House, were the inaugural architectural projects to be built on the property. Over the next fifty years Philip Johnson and David Whitney acquired additional land expanding the holding to 47 acres, and fourteen architectural structures. The Philip Johnson Glass House, once the architect's personal residence, is now a National Trust Historic Site.

Persons associated with the property include: Philip Johnson (former owner, architect, 1949-2005); David Whitney (former owner, -2005).

architect:
Former owner: Iaccaci, Paul Thayer
Iaccaci, Hope Norton
Notes: The folder includes worksheets, a photocopy of an article featuring a photograph of the garden, and other information.

Designed by Friede Stege in November 1965, this garden was noted for its incorporation of roses into the overall landscape design. Stege situated the rose garden adjacent to the home's screen porch and terraces where it could be enjoyed by homeowner and guest alike. An adjacent woodland gave an added dimension to the overall design.

Persons associated with the garden include Friede Stege (landscape architect, 1965) and Paul Thayer Iaccaci and Hope Norton Iaccaci (former owners, ca. 1965-?).

CT757: New Canaan -- Kathie Moore Gardens

Provenance: New Canaan Garden Club

Owner: Moore, Katharine L.

Notes: 25 digital images (2008-2015) and 1 file folder.

The New Canaan Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

The brick Georgian colonial style house built in the 1940's with 8.3 acres was inherited but other than trees everything has been changed. One of the first projects was installing a brick wall and gazebo near the tennis court, followed by stone walls, steps, paths, picket fences, terraces, trellises, a passageway connecting the house to another building, a swimming pool, sculptures, garden statuary, garden lighting, hedges, trees, shrubs and perennials, with annuals added each year to containers and borders. The owner designed gardens that encircle the house, a gazebo garden, front entrance garden, a 160-foot wall garden, swimming pool garden and open terrace garden. Island beds and borders have been added, eliminated or replanted as the owner "paints pictures using living plants".

The property is entered on a gravel drive between stone pillars that are connected to stone walls and across a stone bridge over a stream that has fields on each side. On one side the field is filled with native plants including Joe Pye weed, butterfly weed, swamp weed, asters, ferns and sedge. The other field has grasses, irises, filipendula and a large diablo ninebark shrub. Further along the drive there is a circle bed with a mature linden tree, shrubs, a rabbit statue, a large rock, and a Mexican baptismal font used as a planted container. The perimeter of the house is planted with boxwood hedges and ball shaped bushes, crabapple and pachysandra. Sheared boxwood hedges zigzag to the front door and cast stone containers in the formal entrance garden are planted with white flowering annuals and companion foliage. Underfoot there are granite squares edged with brick. Near a venerable sugar maple at one corner of the house the 160-foot stone retaining wall garden room built in the 1990's is planted with shrubs, perennial flowers and boxwood with planted stone baskets perched on either side of stone steps that are planted with campanula and thyme. There are many whimsical features in the gardens or on exterior surfaces of the buildings such as statues of rabbits and dogs, giant ceramic frogs, birdcages, birdhouses, reflecting mirrors and on the retaining wall "The Old Man of Mikeno", a 1923 bronze bust of the Gorilla sculpted by Carl Akeley in 1864 for the Museum of Natural History in New York.

The swimming pool is surrounded by a white picket fence planted with New Dawn roses, tansy, spirea and hydrangea; large containers in each corner of the pool hold agapanthus, sage and rosemary. A pear allée leads to the barn that is embellished with a cupola and large window sourced from antiques dealers. The brick gazebo along the drive hosts climbing hydrangea, with the garden planted with smoke bushes, variegated dogwood, hosta, white astilbe, iris, sedum, white rhododendron, white birches, lilies and dwarf spruce.

1973-); Enrique Monjo (1895-1976) (sculptor); Carl Akeley (1864-1926) (sculptor).

Former owner: Ryder, John Ryder, Harriet
Wright, Richardson

Provenance: New Canaan Garden Club

Notes: Wright Garden, formerly known as.

The folder includes worksheets, site plans, detailed information about the garden's plants, photocopies of articles about the garden, background details from and about the owners, and additional information.

Located on 1.7 acres, this historic property with its Greek Revival style house was built for John and Harriet Ryder in 1842-1845. The Deering family, local farmers added a barn and several outbuildings. In 1919, Richardson Wright, founder and editor of 'House and Garden' magazine began to chronicle the house and garden. In Wright's time, the property included 7 acres. Wright wrote extensively about the garden which was comprised at that time of an orchard, arbor with concord grapes, specimen magnolias, elms and tree lilacs, rock gardens as well as a large peony and iris garden. Among other plantings included roses, astilbe, clematis, columbine, delphinium, aster, poppies, marigolds, salvia, hyacinth, narcissus and tulips for color.

The gardens were revitalized by the current owner who renovated the hardscape and restored some of the older gardens. A small gardener's cottage with a bank of daylilies is located at the entrance of the property including the original hitching post. Also at the front of the property is a garden designed by the owner in 2005 which is planted with hollies, sedum, lamb's ears, black-eyed susan, lavender, nepeta, siberian iris, perovskia, oregano, chives, artemesia and hydrangea 'Pee Gee.' To the right of the driveway is a a hedge of boxwood.

The rear garden includes a star magnolia, one of the largest specimens in Connecticut, a shade garden planted with sweet woodruff, ajuga, myosotis forget-me-nots, goat's beard, hosta, astilbe, geranium, lady's mantle, primroses, lamium, and narcissus. A long back of Euonymus flank the stone retaining wall. There is a large blue stone patio planted with creeping thyme at the back of the house added in 2003. The patio is bordered on one side by sweeps of miscanthus, butterfly bush, sedum, caryopteris and echinacea. The other side of the patio is a rock wall garden with English ivy and clematis paniculata that cascades over the walls. A stand of bamboo dates to the time of Richardson Wright who brought it back from China and hardened it in his greenhouse for five years before planting. It was not invasive until recently with the warmer climate.

Other garden features include a stone stairway dating from Wright's ownership, a swimming pool, radiating brick walkways, a walled garden, a pool side gazebo, a cedar greenhouse and pergola with climbing clematis paniculata and morning glory.

Persons associated with the garden include John and Harriet Ryder (former owner, 1842-1845); Richardson and Agnes Wright (former owner, 1919-1950); Allison Slaughter (landscape architect, 2013); "The Swede" (gardener, 1919-1950).

The New Canaan Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

CT019: New Canaan -- Watts Garden

Former owner: Watts, Samuel H. Mrs

Landscape architect: Clark, Agnes Selkirk, 1898-1983

architect:

Notes: The folder includes a catalog sheet.

A series of grass terraces delineated by stone walls are featured in this small garden; graceful, curving stone steps lead to one lower level, a series of wide stone steps lead to the second level, which then opens to a grass quadrangle edged with perennial beds. A small, shingled cottage is located at the far end of the quadrangle along with a multi-storied bird house. A tall stone wall encloses the quadrangle; a wooden horse head is carved onto the entry post.

Persons and firms associated with the garden and property include: Mrs. Samuel Watts (former owner); and Agnes Selkirk Clark (landscape architect).

CT018: New Canaan -- Waveny

Former owner: Lapham, Lewis H. Mrs.

Architect: Tubby, William B.

Landscape architect: Olmsted Brothers

architect:

Owner: Town of New Canaan

Provenance: New Canaan Garden Club

Notes: The folders include worksheets, site plans, planting plan, and a photocopy of a book excerpt about the house and garden.

In 1904, Lewis Lapham bought the property and added 170 acres. Tudor mansion, "Waveny," was designed by W. B. Tubby. The gardens were designed by the Frederick Law Olmstead firm. In 1967, this 350 acre parcel of land was deeded to the Town of New Canaan for the future use of its residents.

Rose Garden: Frederick Law Olmsted, Jr., originally designed the walled garden as a rose garden with tea house. The walled garden fell into disrepair. Major repairs to brick walls, roofing, treillage, tea house, and a brick path in this garden were completed in October, 1995. For practical reasons, the central space--formerly filled with roses--was newly designed to be a low maintenance garden around the perimeter. Benches, fountain, tea house, and urns were reconstructed according to Olmstead plans. Restoration was made possible by private donations and by the New Canaan Garden Club. The garden is currently used for weddings, receptions, concerts, and other ceremonies

Persons and firms associated with the garden and property include: Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Lapham (former owner, 1904-1967); Town of New Canaan (owner, 1967-present); and Olmsted Brothers Landscape Architects (landscape architects, ?-1917); and William B. Tubby (architect).

New Canaan Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Architect: Townsend, C. F.

Designer: Balmori, Diana

Provenance: Garden Club of New Haven

Notes: "Stylish gate; front yard fence; precise placement of raised beds for color have revived an old town garden. Mature trees have been retained. Wisteria and Japanese Maples now skillfully pruned. Flowering trees and shrubs have been added. The three distinct areas relate spatially to house, greenhouse and garage. The larger central garden spreads across the driveway with the form of the sculpted trio of Japanese Maples as its main focus."

Persons associated with the property include: C. F. Townsend (architect in 1915); Raymond L. Walkley (former owner in 1915); Earl B. and Elizabeth Roberts (former owner from 1949 to 1958); William W. and Elizabeth Watson (former owner from 1958 to 1990); William E. Douglass (former owner in 1915); Diana Balmori (landscape designer); Jennifer Radford (photographer).

Former owner: Whitney, Eli, 1765-1825
 Whitney, Stephan
 Suydam, Carolyn
 Brewster, Frederick F.
 Whitney, Eli, II.
 Architect: Stephenson, Robert Storer
 Creator: Stephenson and Wheeler--architects.
 Provenance: Garden Club of New Haven
 Notes: The folder includes a worksheet and maps with features.

As a stipulation of Frederick Brewster's will, the grounds, designed by Robert Storer Stephenson in the English tradition, were given to the City of New Haven for a park. In 1972, The Edgerton Garden Center (now Edgerton Park Conservancy, Inc.) was incorporated for horticultural education. The center has expanded to include the community greenhouses, community gardens, the Sarah T. Crosby Conservatory, a cooperative program with the New Haven Rehabilitation Center, and restoration and maintenance activities in the Park. The community garden at Edgerton Park was started in 1982 on the site of the former Brewster Estate kitchen and cutting gardens. Approximately 74 plots 15 x 25 feet are leased annually. Divided by bark mulch paths, they are laid out around a large circle of grass, enclosed by yew hedges, which forms a focal point for the area. Water and a compost area are available on site.

Persons and firms associated with the garden include: Eli Whitney (former owner); Eli Whitney, II. (former owner, ? - 1855); Stephan Whitney (former owner, 1855 - ?); Carolyn Whitney Soydam Crane Baldwin (former owner, ? - 1905); Mr. and Mrs. Frederick F. Brewster (former owner, 1906 - 1965); City of New Haven (owner, 1965 - present); and Stephenson and Wheeler (architects, 1909).

The Garden Club of New Haven facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

CT338: New Haven -- Elizabeth R. Hooker House

Image\(s\)

Landscape architect: Coffin, Marian Cruger, 1876-1957

TPA Design Group

Architect: Delano & Aldrich

Provenance: Garden Club of New Haven

Notes: Home of Edith H. Ilmanen, formerly known as.

The folders include work sheets, site plans, and copies of site plans by Coffin and Delano & Aldrich.

The brick house was designed in 1914-1915 by architects Delano & Aldrich with a brick walled garden. Marian Coffin designed the perennial border. The grounds were designed to complement the house which was fashioned in the style of the English Arts and Crafts movement. The walled garden is a formal terraced garden situated near the house. Beyond the walled garden is a more naturalized, wooded area featuring a pond on the lower lying grounds.

Current owners of the property have undertaken a restoration of the property to reflect the original Delano and Aldrich design. The property has since received recognition from the New Haven Preservation Trust, the Connecticut chapter of the American Society of Landscape Architects, and the Connecticut Trust for Historic Preservation and is listed in the National Register of Historic Places.

This garden was originally documented in 2005, at that time it was identified as the Home of Edith H. Ilmanen. An update of the garden documentation was provided in 2012, as the Elizabeth R. Hooker House.

Persons and organizations associated with the property include: Elizabeth Russell Hooker (former owner, 1911-1965); Edith Hooker Ilmanen (former owner, 1965-2004); Delano & Aldrich (architects, 1914-1915); and Marian Coffin (landscape architect, 1929 and 1940); and TPA Design Group (landscape architects, 2008).

The Garden Club of New Haven facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Elizabeth R. Hooker House related holdings consist of 2 folders (13 35 mm slides (photographs); 40 digital images)

Plans and photographs are to be given to the New Haven Colony Historical Society.

Additional materials are located at Columbia University's Avery Library.

CT002: New Haven -- Greene Garden

Former owner: Greene, Daniel Capt.

Brewster, James

Issac, Ralph

Guernsey, Thomas

Provenance: Garden Club of New Haven

Notes: The folders include worksheets, copies of 1815 property map, 1979 township map, and 1997 newspaper article on Greene.

In New Haven, Captain Daniel Green, who had a comfortable fortune as owner of the clipper ship, Neptune, had a plan made for his garden dated 1815, which are still in existence. The house in which the captain lived was built before the Revolution. The image that AAG has shows that it had been architecturally changed in detail, though the main buildings are as they were. The property has been destroyed by an Interstate Connection and no longer exists.

Persons associated with the property and garden include: Ralph Isaac (former owner, 1771-1795); Captain Daniel Greene (former owner, 1795-1832); James Brewster (former owner, 1832-1844); and Mr. Thomas Guernsey (former owner, 1881).

The Garden Club of New Haven facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

CT186: New Haven -- Irwin Garden

Former owner: Bowers, Edward

Bowers, Fanny

Irwin, Christopher

Architect: Dana and Murphy

Provenance: Garden Club of New Haven

Notes: The folder includes garden description, slide list and information sheet.

"The Irwin Garden of 1/2 acre was created and developed by the late Christopher Irwin from 1976 to 1996. In the lawns a series of island beds, planted with perennials, bulbs, and specimen trees and shrubs, provide color ten months of the year. Pocket gardens of trellises with flagstones and circular stepping stones are featured on three sides of the house, with brick terrace along the front entrance. Christopher Irwin was a noted garden designer and horticulturist in New Haven.

Persons associated with the property include: Edward and Fanny Bowers (former owner in 1910); Christopher Irwin (designer and former owner); and Dana and Murphy, New York (Architects in 1910).

The Garden Club of New Haven facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

CT147: New Haven -- Phelps Triangle

Landscape designer: Sampson, Amy E.

Provenance: Garden Club of New Haven

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, site plans, plant lists, and photocopies of articles.

In 1824 Temple Street was extended to Whitney Avenue creating a triangular, detached piece of property at the intersection with Trumbull Avenue. In 1850 the owners, heirs of the Hillhouse Estate, presented the one-tenth acre "common" to the city which was fenced in and sodden the following year. The "common" was referred to as Temple Street Square or Temple Square until 1943 when it was renamed "Phelps Triangle" in honor prominent Yale professor William Lyon Phelps, whose house faced the triangle. Dutch elm disease killed the seven elm trees, which were replaced by three utility poles. Starting in 1968 the Garden Club of New Haven allocated its fund raising proceeds for a complete renovation of the Phelps Triangle to create a sitting park. The Garden Club worked on the planning, negotiating, and overseeing of the project in cooperation with the New Haven Parks Department. The city and utility company performed the preparatory site work, opening of the fence, and removal of the utility poles. All other work was performed by Glen Terrace Nurseries, a local landscape contractor. An in-ground fountain was built in the center of the pavement, and an irrigation system was installed as well. The fountain was vandalized after 1975 and it was filled with earth and replaced with a one foot tall planter. In 1992 two pink granite benches were installed on either side of the center piece. Four more pink granite benches were added in 2001 and 2003. In 2008 the triangle underwent a major overhaul. Landscape designer Amy Sampson created a four season interest component, whereas before the garden had been mainly a spring garden. Bricks and flag stones were replaced and the irrigation system was converted to a drip system. In 2011 a committee was formed with the intent to replace the planter and basin with a sculpture.

The landscape design incorporates continuously curved planting areas to soften the rigidity of the long site. Gently sculpted forms of low plantings reinforce this effect. Rhythm is established by textural contrasts of broad and narrow leaved evergreens, by trees spaced regularly and by the variation of tree heights. The paving with undulating edges of brick along the axial center was executed in brick and flagstone to give interest and subtle direction and relates in scale and context to the size of the park. An in-ground fountain was built in the center of the pavement. Six moveable benches which could be relocated into sunny or shaded areas were placed throughout the park. The original plantings included 12 Cherry trees, 140 rhododendrons, 78 azaleas, 150 cotoneaster, 1 pear tree and 96 yews. The cherry trees succumbed to pollution and severe weather and were replaced with pin oak, flowering pear, star magnolia, and hybrid crabapple. In 1995 a severe windstorm badly damaged two of the three flowering pear trees which were removed in 1996. In 1999 all rhododendrons had to be replaced. In 2008 the triangle was again under construction for a major overhaul. Ninety percent of the shrubs and ground covers had to be replaced. A lace bug and southern red mite infestation had attacked the azaleas and rhododendrons. In 2011 more ground cover plants were added like Deutzia, Rowdy Lamb Herb, Lentenrose, as well as daffodil bulbs in the fall.

Persons associated with the garden include Hillwood Estate (former owner, 1850); City of New Haven (current owner); Glen Terrace Nurseries (landscape company, 1969-2001); Amy E. Sampson of AES Landscape Design and Consultation (landscape designer, 2008).

The Garden Club of New Haven facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

CT194: New London -- Caroline Black Garden

Horticulturist: Black, Caroline Dr
Creighton, Harriett Dr
Thompson, Sally
Taylor, Sally

Director: Dreyer, Glenn

Provenance: New London Garden Club

Notes: This garden was established in the mid-1920's by Dr. Caroline Black, first chairperson of the Connecticut College Botany Department as a teaching facility for botany study. Following Dr. Black's death in 1930, the College named the garden in her honor.

"The garden began in the northern portion of its present location, and featured many perennial plants, especially Iris. Due to the increasing size of many of the trees and shrubs, as well as maintenance considerations, most perennials were phased out by 1960s."

"Today, the four-acre garden houses an outstanding collection of choice woody landscape plants from around the world. It is a part of the Connecticut College Arboretum, and serves as a living library and outdoor laboratory for botony classes and all plant enthusiasts."

"A landscape garden featuring woody plants; mature specimens of conifers; autumn interest beds; small viburnum and spirea collections. New holly collection, spring 1997. Small artificial stream and pool with re-circulating pump."

Persons associated with the property include: Dr. Caroline Black (first chairperson of the Connecticut College Botony Department); Dr. Harriett Creighton (manager of Caroline Black Garden from 1934 to 1939); Dr. Betty Thompson (manager of Caroline Black Garden from 1945 to 1970); Professor Sally Taylor (manager of Caroline Black Garden from 1970 to 1990); Professor Glenn Dreyer (Arboretum Director).

New London Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

The owners created their terraced vegetable, berry, herb and flower garden between a low stone wall along the sidewalk and the front of their brick house. The inspiration came from travels in Europe where they observed similar designs for home gardens – not estates. Lawn removal on the quarter acre lot began in 2013 with the digging of a ten-foot bed to grow tomatoes. By 2016 there were 18 raised beds brimming with vegetables, with companion planted flowers and ground covers filling in between the beds. Vining vegetables are trained up netting attached to two-foot by two-inch fir supports. Annuals flowers that are added for visual appeal and pollination include dahlia, bee balm, zinnia, sunflower, snapdragon, nasturtium and marigold. Beds along the sidewalk, at the foundation, and around a patio behind the house are mostly ornamental with hydrangea, azalea, perennials including lilies and iris, bulbs and many annuals. Tomatoes still are a main crop with about 200 pounds harvested every year.

The vegetable garden faces south with unimpeded sun and bordering tall conifers and stone walls add protection from winds as well as deer. The problem of controlling grass between the raised beds was solved by replacing it with ground covers that include creeping jenny, dead nettle, clover, buttercup, myrtle and crab grass. The planting plans for the raised beds were researched in Mel Bartholomew's books on square-foot gardening.

Persons associated with the garden's design: Brad Guardino and Phred Milesky (garden designers, 2013-).

Garden Eddison, Sydney, 1932-
designer:

Provenance: Garden Club of New Haven

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet and garden plan.

Echo Valley Garden was transformed from an old farm property over a 40-year time span. In the large garden behind the house, island beds are set at the north and west of a spacious lawn. To the west, a 100 ft. long border of bulbs, perennials and a collection of daylilies runs irregularly along a sloping bank. The fall of the land to the east is defined into upper and lower lawns by a long juniper hedge trimmed close on the edge of the upper lawn to carry the eye along the vista. The lower lawn, once an orchard, is planted with flowering trees and shrubs around two old apple trees. Circling the property are old fieldstone walls with an electric deer fence. A feature of this garden is its many controlled contrasts of form and color. Island beds consist of dwarf evergreens, variegated plants, flowering perennials, and ornamental grasses. Around the house is a seasonal display of small and large containers filled with colorful exotics and annuals.

Persons and organizations associated with the property include: John H. Mulliken (former owner, 1911-1940); Isabel Y. Knox (former owner, 1940-1960); Elizabeth MacDonald (sculptor of ceramic and fountain globes); Emil Racenet (twig and metal gate); and Sydney Eddison (garden designer, 1960-present).

The Garden Club of New Haven facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Former owner: Knudsen, Arvid O.
Hyde, J. A. Lloyd
Hyde, J. Hindon

Landscape designer: Martin, Chester W.

Nurseryman: Barstis, Joe

Gardener: Barstis, Joe

Provenance: New London Garden Club

Notes: The folders include worksheets, a plant list, and additional information about the garden and designer Chester W. Martin.

This garden site was established in 1940 on four acres of rugged granite outcroppings and meadow bordering a salt meadow in southeastern Connecticut. The original owner, Norwegian-born Arvid O. Knudsen, was an antiquarian, collector, world traveller, and lifelong student of architecture. He salvaged the Georgian post office in New London, CT, and brought it all--old bricks, urns, and cupola--20 miles west to his plot of land in Old Lyme. He rebuilt it into a house of his own design, giving it the facade of a 1750 Connecticut Valley Chippendale doorway. In the back of the property he carved into the land a formal green and white grass garden, complete with in-ground swimming pool, boxed in with arborvitae. A sunshading gazebo was the focal point of the base of the garden at the edge of the pool. A decade later, Mr. Knudsen's friend, J. A. Lloyd Hyde, became owner of the country estate. He maintained the gardens and grounds in their original design except for the gazebo, which he rebuilt into a pillared gazebo in memory of his friend.

In 1981 Mr. Hyde's nephew, J. Hindon Hyde, assumed ownership of the property and a few years later sold it to the current owners. With great respect to Mr. Knudsen's original design, the present owners redesigned the formal lawn garden in a number of ways. The walkways were removed and turf installed and forsythia planted in place of the arborvitae border. A garden of ornamental grasses, perennials, and annuals graces the entry of the pillared gazebo in place of the in-ground swimming pool. A parade of fruit trees parallel each other down the center of the lawn garden to where the original wide, baroque fountain stands surrounded by another new perennial garden. Many of the original classic white marble urns and garden statues decorate the garden and 40-year-old espaliered pear trees flourish along the terrace of the back wall of the peach-brick house.

Persons associated with the garden include: Arvid O. Knudsen (former owner, 1940-1950); J. A. Lloyd Hyde (former owner, 1950-1981); J. Hindon Hyde (former owner, 1981-1984); Chester W. Martin (landscape designer, 1940-1950s); and Joe Barstis (nurseryman and gardener, 1940-1950s).

New London Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Former owner: Turnbull, Charles Turnbull, Priscilla
Hubbard, Elizabeth

Gardener: Helsel, David

Provenance: New London Garden Club

Notes: The folder includes worksheets and photocopies of plans.

This rural garden in Connecticut boasts of numerous varieties of ground cover plants and native plant material used in naturalistic informal plantings. The property poses many challenges for the gardener from dry shade to wet areas around the pond and lots of rocks. The pond was enlarged and edged with boulders to delineate it from the lawn by the current owner. Fill from the pond was then used for the barn and perennial gardens and raised beds for vegetables. A rock garden was also created, with several bluestone walks and steps added to the front and back of the house.

A mix of outdoor furniture was placed around the property, with two Adirondack chairs creating a seating area for the sunken perennial garden and one overlooking the pond. The patio has a mix of teak furniture and an antique metal bench overlooking the formal shade garden. Overall, the garden provides peace and privacy with the feeling of small rooms, the change of levels from one area to another, and the paths that go through the woodlands.

Persons associated with the garden include Priscilla and Charles Turnbull (former owners, 1970-1976); Elizabeth Hubbard (former owner, 1976-1991); and John David Helsel (gardener, 1995-2010).

The New London Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

CT082: Ridgefield -- Ballard Park

Provenance: Ridgefield Garden Club

Notes: The folder includes a catalog sheet.

In 1889, Lucius Horatio Biglow, a New York City music publisher, bought the property and expanded the colonial home with fine, landscaped grounds and fancy stone and iron walls. He called the place Graeloe. Biglow's daughter, Elizabeth Biglow Ballard donated the grounds to the town in 1964. Today, the park includes a playground, a bandstand, and the Ballard Greenhouse, used by the Ridgefield and Caudatowa Garden Clubs. According to a plaque in front of the structure, the gazebo was built in 1975 in memory of Ms. Ballard. The backland of the property has become Ballard Green, one of the town's housing for the elderly communities. Ballard Park consists of a series of small garden rooms in a large expanse of lawn, and is articulated by low growing shrubs and perennials and accented by mature shade trees. The garden is open to the public.

Person(s) associated with the garden and property include(s): the Ridgefield Garden Club; Lucius Horatio Biglow (former owner, 1889); Elizabeth Biglow Ballard (donor); and town of Ridgefield (owner).

Ridgefield Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

CT131: Ridgefield -- Farrington Garden

Former owner: Farrington, Wesley
 Farrington, Gertrude

Provenance: Ridgefield Garden Club

Notes: 2 folder include worksheets, photocopies of articles, and three multi-year garden journals (1978 to 1992).

Situated on 3.3 wooded acres at the top of a high wooded hillside overlooking a large pond below, the property was purchased by Mr. and Mrs. Wesley and Gertrude Farrington in 1981. Mrs. Farrington, who was an active member of the Ridgefield Garden Club, and her husband were avid gardeners. After the house was built in 1983, a deer fence was installed, and mature plantings from the former gardens at their previous property were moved to the new location. The move consisted of many varieties of azaleas and rhododendron, including the orange color rhododendron calendulaceum (flame azalea), which are still extant today. Others included in the move were Cornus kousa saplings (Kousa dogwood tree), mature Juniperus horizontalis "Wiltonii" (blue rug juniper), iris ensata (Japanese iris), dianthus barbata (Sweet William), and many roses. Tsuga (hemlock) trees were planted as seedlings, and continue to thrive. A Viburnum carlesii (Korean spice viburnum) was also planted near the house. The Picea glauca "Conica" (Alberta spruce) that was also planted is no longer there.

The gardens were mostly alpine rock gardens, given the rock and outcroppings that are natural to the property. Beyond the house and not far from the large rock outcroppings are five raised beds for roses transplanted from their other gardens. Nearby is a water spigot installed by the Farringtons, as there are two wells on the property, in addition to the well for the house. Further down the path once existed a water feature with a small pond and a fountain at the base of a rock outcropping. It was designed to pump water to the top of the rocks which then fell down into the pond below. The fairy garden ornament placed there has also disappeared.

Of note is the herb garden planted just outside the kitchen. A greenhouse was built at this location and was used to overwinter plants. Alchemilla mollis (lady's mantle) was also planted along the low rock wall that borders this area. On the other side of the house is a stone patio where a fountain and a statue of Pan with a flute once existed, but neither is there now. There was also a large butterfly garden which no longer exists. Today vestiges remain, primarily shrubs and trees, and some rock plantings.

Persons associated with the garden include Mr. and Mrs. Wesley and Gertrude Farrington (former owners, 1981-early 1990s).

The Ridgefield Garden Club facilitated the 2016 garden update.

Provenance: Bedford Garden Club

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet, a garden plan, copies of a brochure about the garden/nursery and photocopies of articles about the garden.

Established in 1987, this eight-acre site is both a private garden and a specialty nursery. It contains a fine collection of both woody and herbaceous ornamental plants, planted along a stunning natural marsh filled with wild rice. The property contains a large raised-bed vegetable garden, hand-built cedar structures, whimsical statuary, water features, unusual annuals, and lots of birds and bugs.

The Bedford Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

CT130: Ridgefield -- Kincade Garden
 Former owner: Kincade, Edward Kincade, Marie
 Provenance: Ridgefield Garden Club
 Notes: The folder includes worksheets, photocopies of articles, and historic information.

The 3-acre wooded property was purchased by Mr. and Mrs. Edward and Marie Kincade in 1980, where they built the house and started the gardens in 1983. Mrs. Kincade designed the location and selection of fencing, latticework, retaining wall and steps, and all the garden beds, maintaining them until they sold the property and moved in 1992. Mrs. Kincade learned to garden from her mother, an avid gardener, as well as through trial and error in her own previous gardens on Long Island and Southern California. The Ridgefield, CT garden includes cuttings from hibiscus syriacus (rose of Sharon) and syringe (lilac) grown by her mother. Her goal in designing this garden was to have interest and blooms throughout the year. While primarily a perennial garden, Mrs. Kincade also planted annuals, usually marigold, for extra color in the spring and summer, as well as chrysanthemums for autumn color. She wanted a green garden with soft color blooms, primarily pinks, blues and yellows with silver interspersed for interest and definition. Although reds or dark colors, or gladiolus were not favored, Mrs. Kincade had no other restrictions on specific plants, and spent a fair amount of time each year moving and/or replacing plants that did not produce a desired effect.

CT130001 shows part of the garden bed that ran along the entire back of the house, garage, and along the latticework and fence that divided the driveway from the backyard. Mrs. Kincade designed this part of her garden with tall plants at the center, and then plants gently sloping down in size on either side to each end of the garden bed. She tried helianthus (sunflowers) and other tall plants over the years, eventually deciding on alcea (hollyhock).

CT130002 shows part of a large garden bed along the rock retaining wall in the back of the house to the west of CT130001. Mrs. Kincade built the long rock retaining wall to create a flat grassy area above the steps and close to the house, as well as a large flat grassy area below the steps. The rocks are visible in CT130002 below the junipers. The grassy area below the steps was the site of the large tent erected for her daughter's October, 1985 wedding attended by 250 people the day after Hurricane Gloria. Mrs. Kincade created garden beds in the front yard, too, hoeing and removing rocks herself, eventually creating a rock garden as well as other gardens. She also planted a variety of trees and shrubs including acer rubrum (red maple), a flowering cherry, and picea pungens, a slow growing blue spruce. Several of these trees and shrubs are still on the property today. Also Mrs. Kincade did all the work herself with the exception of one person who helped with weeding. That person also provided help with plant selection to achieve Mrs. Kincade's design goal of year round color and interest. Mrs. Kincade continues to maintain a garden in her current home in California.

Persons associated with the garden include Mr. and Mrs. Edward and Marie Kincade (former owners, 1980-1992).

CT129: Ridgefield -- Merrick Garden

Former owner: Wiggins, Albert

Clearand Mr

Merrick, Harold

Merrick, Helene

Provenance: Ridgefield Garden Club

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, photocopies of articles, and other information.

Mr. Albert Wiggins owned the 14-acre estate on Peaceable Street in the early 1900s. In the mid-1930s, the property was subdivided roughly in half - the southern half was addressed as 19 Peaceable Street. Mr. and Mrs. Harold and Helene Merrick purchased the 7-acre wooded country estate at 19 Peaceable Street in 1949 and lived in the South Cottage for over 40 years. In addition to the South Cottage, the property included a carriage house with apartments, a stable/barn which functioned primarily during these 40 years as a 9-stall garage, a north cottage, a chicken coup and pig pen, and a greenhouse and shed. The Merricks purchased an additional .9-acre parcel of the property from a neighboring property owner during this time. The Merrick property was re-addressed over the years as 21 Peaceable Street and 65 Peaceable Street. It was put up for sale in the early 1990s as Peaceable Meadows. Eventually, it was further subdivided during this same time. All buildings on what was once the 21 and 65 Peaceable Merrick property have been torn down, including the greenhouse and shed shown in CT129001.

CT129001 captures only part of the perennial garden Mrs. Merrick maintained across the driveway from the front of the cottage. The perennial garden was divided from the driveway by a 3-foot high traditional Connecticut stonewall. Several stone steps in the middle of the wall led to the perennial garden. The CT129001 photograph was taken north of the wall's steps, looking to the northeast, across part of the gardens and to the greenhouse used to overwinter plants, and to the shed used for potting and storage. The garden varied from year to year but nearly always included tuberous begonias, astilbe, and paeonia (peony), all shown in CT129001. Mrs. Merrick's home was always filled with bouquets of flowers cut from the garden. Tall picea (pines) bordered the perennial garden on two sides.

Persons associated with the garden include Mr. Albert Wiggins (former owner, early 1900s); Mr. Clearand (former owner, 1947-1949); Mr. and Mrs. Harold and Helene Merrick (1949-2009).

The Ridgefield Garden Club facilitated the 2016 garden update.

The 1735 saltbox house was restored in the 1950's by a previous owner but there were only remnants of previous gardens when the approximately two-and-one-half acre property was purchased in 1995. The house faces the road behind a closely-spaced picket fence atop a stone wall; the entrance garden has been planted with shade ground covers, tree peonies, dogwood and boxwood. The owner, a professional landscape designer, felt that plantings near the house should be kept simple for historic accuracy. A large stone landing, two sets of steps made from salvaged curbs and stone walkways to the garage and around the house to other garden rooms were built. A burr oak and fernleaf beech were planted in the gently sloping meadow; about 75 more trees have been planted around the property. The meadow trees and pinetum planted along one side integrate the lower woodlands with the groomed gardens. A shrub border with native rhododendron, holly, viburnum, blueberry, buttonbush and mountain laurel was planted leading to the wetlands, also at the bottom of the property, otherwise growing native species.

Behind the house an existing terrace was enlarged and re-laid with larger natural stones and an existing fence was removed. Its border is planted with peonies, roses, lilies, clematis, hosta, sweetshrub and dogwood. A perennial garden room was a formal parterre, now more "cottagey" with four sections, boxwood edging and additional stone paths. Many varieties of peonies have been trialed in the perennial garden over the years with favorites kept and others removed. Roses, iris and clematis are other favorites for this garden room and for borders along walkways. A vegetable and cutting garden was the first fenced area but after ten years of fending off deer the owners installed wire deer fencing around three sides of the property that is disguised by trees on either side. Other garden rooms include a shade garden between the house and the pinetum, a boxwood edged kitchen garden, a fern garden shaded by crabapple that has evolved into mixed bulbs, perennials and shrubs, and an ornamental grass and allium border that contrasts with a border of tall native grasses. Newer plantings favor native trees and shrubs that will attract birds and require less maintenance. The house was placed on the National Register of Historic Places in 1984 and this garden has participated in Garden Conservancy Open Days since 2000.

Persons associated with the garden include: Thomas Hyatt and family (former owners, 1735-1832); Pulling and Dykeman families (former owners, 1832-circa 1925); Cashman family (former owners, circa 1950-circa 1985); Clifford and Patricia Risell (former owners, 1985-circa 1993); Helen Dimos and Benjamin Oko, M.D. (owners, 1995-); Louise Cashman (restoration architect, 1951-); Helen Dimos ASLA (landscape designer, 1995-).

The current owners of the 1911 English style stone manor house and country place era gardens designed by Warren Manning have restored both since taking ownership of the 3.6-acre property in 2004. Their goals were to honor the original design, preserve the remaining trees and shrubs, and sympathetically incorporate elements for contemporary concerns such as deer fencing. The house and original 31 acres were on a hillside overlooking the surrounding countryside so the gardens were terraced, eventually melding into woodlands. The existing garden rooms have been unified with the consistent use of boxwood hedges for structure and formality combined with several varieties of hydrangea for softer textures, chosen for successive blooming times. The owners have preserved the climbing hydrangea growing on the stone pergola of the sunken terrace next to the house, as well as very old wisteria on a low stone wall with a covered arch on the far side of a flat acre farther downhill that was used as a polo field by previous owners. The garden rooms are planted with shrubs and perennials that are historically appropriate, and annuals for additional color. More than 30 containers placed around the property are replanted three or four times during the growing season from April to October.

Raised beds near the kitchen, and inside the deer fencing, contain vegetables, herbs and berries. The front garden, which is not fenced, includes peony, lilac, iris, cleome, daffodils, alyssum, salvia, and St. John's wort. Low growing blue juniper grows over the top of a wall made from boulders to soften the size of the rocks. In the garden rooms there are roses, dahlia, astilbe, cleome, allium, geranium, hellebores, hosta, butterfly bush, holly and yew. A row of arborvitae seen from the south terrace disguises the deer fence as well as screens the neighboring house. There is a koi pond in the sunken garden planted with floating hyacinth and lotus. The apples from espaliered trees on a nearby stone wall are shared with squirrels and chipmunks. Stately old trees on the property include copper beech, dogwood, oak, crabapple, birch, and weeping cherry; newer tree plantings include apple, pear, peach, shad, cherry, dogwood, red and sugar maples, and more than 60 evergreens.

Persons associated with the garden include: Arthur C. and Rose McLane Fraser (former owners, circa 1909-1941); Joseph M. and Nora Shapiro (former owners, 1941-1952); Paul D. and Elizabeth Arnold (former owners, 1952-1959); Tuccio Development Inc./ Jerry Tuccio (former owner, 1959-1999); John R. Milo and Juliet D. Sitaram-Milo (former owners, 1999-2004); Grosvenor Atterbury (1869-1956) and John A. Tompkins (architects, circa 1909-1912); Warren H. Manning (1860-1938) (landscape architect, 1919-1913); Valerie R. Becker (landscape designer and gardener, 2013-).

In 1927 the Garden Clubs of America held their annual meeting in Ridgefield and visiting delegates toured this garden. It was described as Old English on successive levels with delightful vistas and as perfectly fitting into its surroundings as shrubbery blended into forests.

The Ridgefield Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Architect: Easton, David A.
 Landscape designer: Munson, Deborah Weaner, Larry
 Horticulturist: Munson, Deborah Landscape architect: Robinson, Rodney D.
 Wirth, Thomas
 Former owner: Selleck family
 Lansing family
 Notes: The folder includes worksheets, photocopies of articles and a personal account by the current owner.
 When the current owners purchased Twin Maples in 1996 the nearly 325 acre property had belonged previously to only two other families and had never been developed. A Georgian-style house was built with two formal gardens, formal terrace, greenhouse, indoor swimming pool, guest house and caretaker's cottage. However restoring and preserving the habitat was just as important to the owners, and they installed the stand-out feature at Twin Maples: forty acres devoted to native grasses and wildflowers that can be seen from the house. Woodlands and shrub lands were cleared of non-native invasive species and supplemented with large scale planting of regionally appropriate trees, shrubs and understory. A rocky outcrop seen from the driveway supports native mosses, ferns and low bush blueberries. There is a substantial pergola in the woodlands walk garden and a labyrinth installed in a field. Following the initial renovation the landscape was designed to be self-sustaining with native species supported to the extent that invasive species cannot return and maintenance can be reduced. For instance, the meadow areas are mowed only once a year in the fall so nesting birds are not disturbed yet woody species do not get established. Despite the size of the property less than one acre is maintained as lawn.

The property was a land grant to the Selleck family from the English King George II in 1740. There were two maple trees marking the spot of a long-gone residence, and Twin Maples is the name associated with that history.

Persons associated with the garden include Selleck family (former owners, early 1700s-1953); Lansing family (former owners, 1953-1996); David Easton (architect, 1996); Deborah Munson (landscape designer and horticulturist, 2000-present); Rodney Robinson (landscape architect, late 1990s-); Larry Weaner (landscape designer of meadow, 1997-); Thomas Wirth (landscape architect, 1990s)

The Millbrook Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Notes:

The folder includes a worksheet and abbreviated garden plan.

Cobble Pond Farm comprises 250 acres with meadows, wetlands, a 22-acre pond that was lined with granite blocks, or cobbles, from an abandoned castle, a sunken garden, a formal Italianate secret garden, long herbaceous perennial borders, a sugar maple and dogwood allée, a cutting and vegetable garden, and farm animals including Aberdeen Angus cows and rescued horses, donkeys and llamas. The original garden was designed beginning circa 1930 by landscape architects Percival Gallagher and Edward Clark Whiting from the Olmsted Brothers firm. The Olmsted plan blends the formality of a European garden with the bucolic landscape of the surrounding areas. Within the formal areas there are broad lawns, stone footpaths and low stone walls defining the garden rooms.

Although the garden was severely overgrown in some places and unplanted in others the current owners discovered old plans and researched the original garden before commencing to recreate it. The formal garden rooms were planted in a more contemporary style with perennials and shrubs rather than the bedding annuals from the original plans, and the old flagstone walkways were replaced with bluestone. The Italianate garden is centered with a fountain and divided into four quadrants with hedges of clipped yew. Nearby stands an apple orchard and a pergola planted with wisteria and climbing hydrangeas. The sunken garden is anchored at one end by a one-hundred year old copper beech and contains two topiary lilacs, clematis, hydrangeas, and climbing roses. In spring the cutting garden's rectangular beds are filled with the bright colors of daffodils and tulips while the summer brings on more muted colors, featuring sambucus black lace and a weeping katsura tree.

Outbuildings include a garden hospital for plants needing attention. The surrounding woodlands were the source for the mature sugar maples in the allée, and saplings are still being transplanted to the formal garden areas. The summer house built in the 1920s was named Tintern Abbey after the poem by William Wordsworth.

Persons associated with the property include: James Punnett (former owner, ca. 1905); the Schwab Family (former owners, 1905-1921); Harold A. and Margaret Milliken Hatch (former owner, 1921-1981); James T. and Kathleen M. Metz (former owners, 1981-1986); Kathleen M. Metz (former owner, 1986-1992); Huntington and Kildare, Inc. (former owners, 1992 - 2002); Olmsted Brothers (landscape architects, 1929-1950); Fred McGourty (horticulturist, 1984 - 2003); Marsha Kaufman (horticulturist, 2001 to date); Harold A. Hoyt (landscape gardener, 1983); Agnes K. Dzenutis (landscape designer and gardener, 1984-1999); Dave Enos (gardener and greenskeeper, 1995); Heathcote M. Woolsey (architect, 1946); David Colbert (sculptor, 1999).

CT347: South Windsor -- Porter Gardens

Landscape architect: Edwards, Mary

Landscape designer: Lloyd, Jackie

Nurseryman: Turull, Bill F.

Provenance: Garden Club of Hartford

Notes: The folder includes worksheets; site plans (one with a plant list); detailed information about the garden and the property's history; a plant list; and additional information.

The Porter Gardens have four primary spaces covering much of the property's 4.5 acres: the south lawn, the pool area, the north lawn with espaliered apples, and the rose garden. Major plantings also include the foundation of the house on all sides and other transitional and peripheral spaces. The garden has been created primarily since 1986, inspired by garden design worldwide and by a love of individual plants. This plant collector's garden is unified by thematic elements including spaces defined by hedges and fences and connected by gates and arches. Another element is colored foliage, especially yellow and variegated hues, with reds playing a second note. Birds and bees are given their due with welcoming houses and feeders. Finally, the view west across the agricultural fields of the Connecticut River floodplain provides these gardens with a remarkably rural flavor.

Persons associated with the garden include Mary Edwards (landscape architect, 1980s-1990s); Jackie Lloyd (landscape designer, 1990); and Bill F. Turull (nurseryman, 1986 to date).

The Garden Club of Hartford facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

The red brick Colonial revival house was built in 1913 as a memorial tribute to Jessup Wakeman and later converted to a private home. The gardens, other than historic trees and remaining shrubs on the half-acre property were designed and planted beginning in 2004. There is a rose garden against brick walls planted in the narrow strip that abuts the sidewalk. The remainder of the south-facing front garden is accessed by a staircase, divided by the front walk into two approximately 30 by 50-foot rectangles. Straight lines were softened with curving borders inside the fences that top the walls and as foundation plantings along the house. The chosen palette favors orange, purple and chartreuse and cultivars in assertive colors that also attract pollinators were planted, supplemented with annuals. One red Japanese maple and two purple smoke bushes are the anchors for brilliantly colorful displays that include castor bean, love lies bleeding amaranth, tithonia sunflower, butterfly weed, orange zinnias, purple salvias, purple and orange dahlias, and, for overwintering, ornamental kale and purple pansies.

Along the part-shade side of the house there is a mixture of shrubs and perennials leading to a cluster with magnolia, crabapple, Japanese white pine, hollies, hydrangeas and another Japanese maple. The shady rear garden features the approximately 90-year-old American elm, which has been recorded by Connecticut agencies, and a horse chestnut planted in the 1950's. Holly, rhododendron, and magnolia are underplanted with hosta. A hidden path leads to a small patio shaded by redbud, viburnum, kousa dogwood and high bush blueberry, with perennials that include primrose, bleeding heart, hellebore, acanthus, wild orchids, Virginia bluebells, ferns and Solomon's seal. A bed of coleus is planted every year. The selected plants are intended to peak in late summer and fall when the gardens are dense and colorful.

Persons associated with the garden include: Frances Wakeman and Cornelia Wakeman Crapo (former owners, 1913-1948); George Brett (former owner, 1948-1980); Packer and Laura Wilbur (former owners, 1980-2001); Richard B. Architect: John Toates Architecture and Design

Designer: Haas, Kathleen

Gardener: Orban, Nicholas

Notes: The Sasqua Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation in 2021.

This ¼ acre coastal garden was established by owners Ellen and John Levinson in 2013 after they built their white Greek Revival home within a historic district in 2010. The property reflects the owner's expertise in landscape design, as Ellen Levinson, an interior designer and certified landscape design consultant, is credited with most of the gardens' design. The gardens feature natural and formal elements, with environmental rejuvenation being a motivating factor in the gardens' design and plant choice. The plants included in the gardens are all considered minimal maintenance plants such as knockout brand roses, perennials, and native plants like goldenrod and wetland grasses are embraced by the owners.

This property is defined by five primary areas. The entry garden sits behind a long white picket fence and is framed by cherry, maple, hawthorn trees, and two identical boxwood knot gardens. Lavender and lamb's ear surrounds the entry gate to the property. In the center of the knot gardens are marble urns filled with seasonal flowers and plants. The pool terrace has two planting beds; on one side, white-flowering climbing hydrangea and blue/lavender clematis cover the garage wall, and the water side of the terrace is kept low, allowing a view of the water. This bed features lady's mantle, lavender, dark purple salvia, and multi-colored succulents. The pool terrace's retaining wall is a backdrop to a long, curving perennial bed along the lawn level. The property features an herb and vegetable garden that sits directly off the kitchen, with an antique brick path outlining the center element, a large rosemary bush. Within the eight beds of the vegetable garden grows basil, chives, oregano, sage, mint, and thyme. The native pollinator garden spans the space between the boathouse and the dock. It is anchored with red chokeberry and miniature clethra. In a jigsaw-like fashion, white, blue, and yellow perennials grow in between swaths of the grass pathway leading from the open lawn to the boathouse. The garden beds near the picket fence offer a sneak peek of the property to those passing by. They feature a bed of peonies and pink crabapple, variegated weigela, and noninvasive barberry and ligularia. Within a shadier bed grows dark green, white, red, and yellow weigelia, Japanese painted fern, hostas, and golden creeping jenny.

Persons associated with the garden include: Ellen Levinson (owner and landscape designer, 2013-); John Levinson (owner, 2013 – present) Kathleen Haas, Wm. Kenny Associates (designer of pollinator area, 2019); John Toates Architecture and Design (architect, 2013); Nicholas Orban, All in One Lawn Care (gardener, 2013-present).

 Notes: The folder includes worksheets, planting plans, and a photocopy of an article.

The Gardens of John & Ellen Levinson include old-fashioned plantings that surround a recently installed pool and pool house, which has a stone façade and wooden pergola that complement the 1830 Federal style house. Those plantings include shrub roses

Carefree Beauty and Maitland for continuous bloom, butterfly bush, peonies, geraniums, hydrangeas, honeysuckle and trumpet vines on the pergola, with lower level plantings of lady's mantle, catmint and lamb's ears. The emphasis here is to have color during the summer months, June to September, when the family's entertaining and recreation center on the swimming pool. Alongside in the formal boxwood garden there are container gardens of annuals planted in antique urns, topiaries, azaleas, and two large standard lilacs.

A landscaped walk along a tidal marsh on the nearly two-acre property is planted with shrubs and indigenous seaside plants that provide food and shelter for visiting wildlife. Four casual seating areas for people were designed for viewing the tides as well as the birds. This area has colorful foliage and texture for year-round interest, including 100-year-old Sycamore trees at either end of the marsh walk, a wild cherry tree that grows horizontally over the marsh, hollies, cypress, laurels, inkberries, and red twigged dogwoods, and witch hazel and hellebores for late winter blooms. In spring white bleeding heart, primroses, tiarella and other flowers bloom under flowering lilacs, viburnum and crab apple trees, followed by daphnes, irises and geraniums. Summer flowering shrubs include roses and lace cap, oak leaf, paniculata and endless summer hydrangeas, with daylilies, lady's mantle and brunnera blooming in the understory. Next astilbes, Japanese anemones and hostas bloom. Various ferns provide texture to this garden through three seasons.

Other gardens include a border of flowering shrubs, cypress and groundcover along the lengthy driveway, foundation plantings of trees, shrubs and daylilies around the house, an herb garden near the terrace and trough gardens planted with flowering and foliage annuals. An old fishing shed on the property was moved to one side and is used for potting and storing tools, with cherry laurel and astilbe planted nearby. The extensive plantings of hydrangea include a climbing hydrangea in the trees.

In the nineteenth century, Walter Perry, III owned the waterfront district of Southport, Connecticut, and built this Federal style house for his son Gurdon Perry. The 1830 house is included in the Southport National Historic District, listed in the National Register of Historic Places in 1971.

Persons associated with the garden include Guordon Perry family (former owners, 1830-1994); John and Maureen Bortolot (former owners, 1994-1995); John and Ellen Levinson (former owners, 1995-2010); John P. Notes: The folder includes worksheets, a written description of the garden, site plans, garden areas plans, a features plan, a plant list, additional photos detailing features in the garden, and other information.

Located in Stamford, Connecticut, this four-acre property consists of land that has been in the Bartlett family since it was purchased along with a large tract of land by Dr. Francis Bartlett in the 1920's. Planted on one side of the house is a Bartlett chestnut tree, named as such by the U.S. Department of Agriculture in 1934 for Dr. Bartlett's efforts in creating a disease resistant chestnut tree. Some of the land once owned by the family now comprises the Bartlett Arboretum and Gardens.

The current owners purchased the property in 1983 and began to clear the heavily wooded property in 1987. A terrace made of stone from around the property was installed next to the house, and by 1992 a large lawn area was established in the back of the property. The Liberty tree on the southeast side was planted in 1991 from seeds the owner collected during a visit to the 100th anniversary celebration of the Statue of Liberty. The seeds were propagated at the Bartlett Tree Laboratories in Charlotte, North Carolina and distributed to all fifty states. Forty trees were given to the city of Paris in recognition of their gift of the statue to the United States.

During this time a dwarf conifer and heather collection were planted to the southwest of the main garden, and in 1995 the one-hundred-foot perennial borders were created. Tom Erikson of Pine Meadows Gardens in Southbury, Connecticut was hired to give the garden design a sense of structure. The two pergolas were built, and the garden house installed. The garden house was originally a Bartlett Tree Company display at the 1996 New England Flower Show, for which the company received a gold medal. It was dismantled and rebuilt in the garden. Large bricks columns, a brick terrace, and a wooden pergola were constructed in front of it. The perennial border is mirrored by a rose garden backed by a yew hedge, and the second pergola separates the upper and lower gardens. Two sixteenth-century millstones, originating in Spanish Florida, were sunk into the walkways covered by the pergolas.

In 2000 the owners began extensive renovations to the house. They enlisted the services of James Doyle of James Doyle Associates in Greenwich and Diane Bilgore of DAB Designs, Inc. in Ridgefield. Together they added the "Lilac Walk" to the garden, inspired by the owners' many visits to Hidcote Manor in England. Also on the property are a gazebo, a shade garden, a fountain, and a sundial garden. The entire property is enclosed by a woodland area, and a stream and stone wall on the southeastern edge.

Persons associated with the garden include Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Bartlett, (former owners, 1959-1982); Tom Ericson, (garden designer, 1996-2001); James Doyle, (garden designer, 2004-present); Diane Bilgore (garden designer, 2005-present)

The Stamford Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet, a garden plan, copy of photograph, article, and planting lists.

Built in 1940 for Herbert F. Garrick and wife, this French manor lies secluded on its own "inland island" just north of the Merritt Parkway. John T. Ostheimer connected the Rippowam River on the southeastern border to the Haviland Brook on the north side, a tributary that flows into the pond on the west end of the property. The original landscaping was destroyed during the house renovations in 1998. The current owners installed a moon garden, container gardens, and a golfing tee with two putting greens.

Persons associated with the property and garden include: Herbert F. Garrick (former owner); John T. Ostheimer (former owner, 1950); Burt Manning (former owner, 1978-1998); and Wesley Stout Associates (landscape architect, 2000).

Stamford Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Goodbody, Augusta

Landscape architect: Harriman, Lucy W.

Creator: Stamford Garden Club (Connecticut)
Glenbrook Garden Club (Connecticut)

Provenance: Stamford Garden Club (Connecticut)

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, a garden design and complete plant list, brochures about the garden and Fort Stamford, a brief history of the property, and photocopies of newspaper articles about Fort Stamford and the garden.

"This is a semi-formal garden surrounded by a stone balustrade on three sides, with a stone-pillared pergola along the fourth, centered on a dropped flagstone oval with stone retaining walls. These features were restored from an original design of unknown date and granite-chip paths and beds were laid out in 1976, as a Bicentennial project of two garden clubs. The beds are planted with perennials, herbs, and annuals, accented with boxwood, ilex, yew, and a central blue spruce. Flowering trees are also in the garden. The garden is in a city park which includes Fort Stamford and large old trees. A bronze Bicentennial commemorative plaque is in the park near the garden.

Persons and organizations associated with the property include: the Goodbody family and Robert and Augusta Goodbody (former owners to 1970); Lucy W. Harriman (landscape architect, 1975); the Stamford Garden Club (restoration and garden care, 1974 to date); the Glenbrook Garden Club (restoration, 1974); and the City of Stamford (1972 to date).

Stamford Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

CT349: Stamford -- June House

Image\(s\)

Image\(s\)

Former owner: June, Silas, 1753-1832

Landscape architect: DeMarche, Dickson

Landscape designer: Larry Weaner Landscape Design Associates

Harvey, Michael P.

Garden designer: Chips, Lori

Provenance: Stamford Garden Club (Connecticut)

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, site plans, photocopies of articles about the project, and other information.

Located on approximately five acres, June House gardens have been constructed in sympathy with the natural topography of the land and with respect to the plant communities employed. The goal has been to create a balance between traditional styles of gardening and plant community-based landscaping.

Silas June (1753-1832), for whom this property is named, built the main house in 1797. There are many rock outcroppings and few broadly flat areas on this land. The woodland areas are largely second or third growth, indicating the property had been cleared of trees in Silas' day.

There were no ornamental gardens when the present owners moved to June House in April, 1977 so they started to develop the immediate area around the main house and carriage house by putting a shady border perennial bed in between the two houses and named it "Valley Garden." In 1984, the owners constructed a terracing and stone retaining wall by the swimming pool with rock used from the construction of the pool in 1960 then planted apple trees, a sunny perennial bed and apiary. An increase in deer browse by 1990 prompted the enclosure of over 4 acres with a deer fence. By 1992, the owners decided major work needed to be done around the two houses and professional design assistance was needed. Landscape architect, Dickson DeMarche was asked to create a master plan and managed the installation of designs over the ensuing three years. The Overlook Garden and the Arbor House by the swimming pool was added in 1994 and an enclosed vegetable and herb garden with raised beds and pergola was completed in 1995.

With the millennium came renewed efforts to enhance the property. A prominent rocky promontory named "Mole Mountain" was stripped in 2002 of unwanted plants growing on it and xeriscaped by landscape designer, Michael Harvey. A wildflower meadow seed mix was then planned and installed along the north face of Mole Mountain by Larry Weaner of Larry Weaner Landscape Design Associates in collaboration with Harvey. In 2003, the owners along with Harvey turned their attention to the south of "Mole Mountain" for the installation of an Alpine/Conifer Garden using H. Lincoln Foster's Rock Gardening (Houghton Mifflin Co., 1968) as a guide. In 2004, a bridge designed by Dickson DeMarche (landscape designer), was constructed joining the barn with the top of "Mole Mountain" and a butterfly garden was designed and planted by the owners south of the croquet/tennis courts. From 2005 to present day many projects were started and not yet completed or will continue to be refined. Such projects include a shade garden under the bridge, conifer grove and southwest shrub border, woodland garden trails, Metasequoia grove and a meditation garden. The owners are "hands on" gardeners; they do a significant amount of the planning, planting and maintenance themselves.

Persons associated with the garden include Silas June (former owner, 1797-date unknown); Dickson DeMarche, (landscape architect, 1992-1995, 2004); Larry Weaner of Larry Weaner Landscape Design Associates, (landscape designer, 2002); Michael P. Harvey, (landscape designer, 2002-2005) and Lori Chips of Oliver Nurseries, (garden designer, 2003).

Additional materials on the June House can be found at the Stamford Historical Society. More information about the landscape designs of Dickson DeMarche can be found in the archives of the Laurel Rock Company.

The Stamford Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

CT136: Stamford -- Levitan Garden

Architect: P. Nathan & Co.

Provenance: Stamford Garden Club (Connecticut)

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet, site plans, and copies of articles.

This is a small woodland one acre garden located on reclaimed farm land. After a visit to the Alhambra, running water features were added between two centrally located boulders. A little fishpond with fountain and water lilies completed the project. The owners included many types of spring flowers to add color to the garden. Ferns later dominate the wildflower paths. The central garden provides color in July and August with lilies, daylilies and hostas.

Persons and organizations associated with the garden include: P. Nathan & Co. (architect, 1956).

Stamford Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Landscape architect: Wadley & Smythe

Provenance: Stamford Garden Club (Connecticut)

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet, a diagram of the 1999 garden layout, a copy of the original 1915 design, photocopies of articles about the site, and a photocopied color enlargement of a postcard depicting the site, ca. 1915.

This 1.7-acre garden site was established in 1915. The grounds of Marion Castle, the home constructed by motion picture pioneer Frank J. Marion, originally included five acres, but the portion located directly on Long Island Sound has since been subdivided. The original garden design by Wadley & Smythe was typical of a grand house and included allées, perennial borders, an orchard, a vegetable garden, and a tennis court. A terrace running the width of the property below the house was laid out as a parterre of flower beds. Unfortunately, only some of the trees, walls, and paths still exist. The property is listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

Persons associated with the garden include: Frank J. and Florence H. Marion (former owners, 1915-1963); David and Martha Cogan (former owners, 1963-1978); Gordon Micunis and Jay Kobrin (former owners, 1978-1998); Joseph Howland Hunt (architect, 1915); Hunt & Hunt (architects, 1915); and Wadley & Smythe (landscape architects, 1915).

Stamford Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

CT736: Stamford -- Marion's Garden

Former owner: Hyde, Katherine Lauder

Toombs, Noel B.

Paul Bacco Realty

Architect: Site Systems

Provenance: Stamford Garden Club (Connecticut)

Notes: The folder includes worksheets and additional photographs.

The property comprises just under one and one-half acres, much of it sloping to woodlands and a brook, nearly all shaded by mature trees, with outcroppings of native boulders. The gardens were transformed after World War II from a vegetable garden into a mini nursery with a collection of dwarf conifers. When purchased this property had hedges of hemlock and pine on one side, false cypress and rhododendron on the other, and some foundation planting. The front rock garden was created first with narrow walkways of indigenous stone among the newly planted flowering shrubs. The back foundation garden and driveway embankment were planted next, then the flat areas in back were filled with deep borders of flowering shrubs, dwarf conifers and perennials, working around the massive granite boulders left behind by ancient glaciers. Azaleas, native rhododendrons, and mountain laurel suited the high shade from the woodlands and acidic soil condition; mosses thrive as groundcover in this location and encourage volunteer offshoots from the shrubs. The colorful spring blooms of azaleas, rhododendron and dogwood trees are followed by summer blooming hydrangea and perennials planted in beds and containers, while in fall the changing colors of leaves and ornamental grasses are featured.

Over the years the owner has introduced some newer cultivars and has added a deer fence, two small fish ponds, a bird feeder and bird houses to encourage other native wildlife. The moss lawns and terrace are kept neat by using a weed whacker and the azaleas are pruned so they do not overgrow the dwarf conifers. Since the property drops off sharply on the east side a row of containers planted with spirea on a purpose built platform line the walkway to the back garden.

Persons associated with the garden include: include Katherine Lauder Hyde (former owner, 1956); the Paul Bacco Realty (former owner, 1958); Noel B. Toombs (former owner, 1961-1966); Site Systems (terrace and fish pond, 2006).

CT279: Stamford -- Mianus River Garden

Landscape designer: Schwerner, Adam

Peter Rolland Company

Provenance: Stamford Garden Club (Connecticut)

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet and garden plans with plant names.

Established in 1984, this garden site of more than three acres was originally so thickly wooded that the sky could not be seen. Adjacent to city park land, the garden now features a naturalistic woodland and a sunny field. One of its owners also calls it "a rockery on the river." Trees were selectively thinned and a woodland garden created under them. Flowering shrubs and some understory trees were also added. The open, sunny field is bordered on one side by annual and perennial flowering plants. The house exterior around which the garden is designed is brown wood in a contemporary design. One side overlooks the Mianus River as it rushes over large boulders and stones. A small terrace at the river's edge is surrounded by ferns, seasonal flowers, grasses, flowering shrubs, and small trees. A small beach was created with white sand on the river bank. Another terrace is at the same level as the house and a large deck behind the house overlooks the river. Planters of flowers border the house.

Persons and firms associated with the garden include: Adam Schwerner (landscape designer, 1984) and the Peter Rolland Company (landscape designers, 1984).

Stamford Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

CT286: Stamford -- Rose Court

Consultant: Kaufman, Harvey

Landscape architect: Armand Benedek & Partners, Ltd.

Provenance: Stamford Garden Club (Connecticut)

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet, a planting plan with plant list, a list of the rose varieties in the garden, and a copy of an article about the garden.

This garden of less than one-quarter acre has been under development since 1993. While previous landscaping at the front of the house had been limited to a lawn and two small trees, the current design incorporates two courtyards, one for vehicles and the second for more private use. This courtyard is entered through wrought iron gates leading into a space under a pergola on axis with the front entrance door. The pergola consists of fluted columns supporting a series of trellises intertwined with wisteria, clematis, ivy, and climbing roses. The pavement consists of brick partially covered by moss, giving a feeling of age. The pergola area overlooks a sunken courtyard surrounded by eight-foot-high stone walls and topped with lattice work. It is an outdoor living room, with a fountain, raised planting beds, and comfortable furniture. There is an abundance and a variety of plantings, the majority of which are roses. A raised terrace and second floor wrought iron balconies overlook the area. Brick is continued as a paving material. On the other side of the house a deck, seaside rock garden, and other plantings take advantage of waterside views.

Persons and firms associated with the garden include: Harvey Kaufman (architectural consultant (1993-1994); and Armand Benedek & Partners, Ltd. (landscape architects, 1999).

Stamford Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

CT287: Stamford -- Slocum Seaside Garden

Garden Slocum, Sharon
 designer:
 Former owner: Towne
 Provenance: Stamford Garden Club (Connecticut)
 Notes: The folder includes a worksheet, history of property, and map with features.

This compact Holly Pond site includes a great variety of plantings and several distinct seating areas. Plants on the flood plain are saltwater-resistant. Most of the wide borders are mulched with stone. There is a sizeable vegetable garden next to this 1872 carriage house, as well as other edible landscaping. The design adheres to many of the principles of feng shui. The owners favor a naturalistic garden style, generally preferring perennials to annuals and native species to exotic ones. Most of the plantings are only a year or two old.

Persons associated with the garden include: Towne family (former owners); Sharon Slocum (garden designer, 1996); and Alex Stotine (contractor, 1996).

Stamford Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Image\(s\)

Architect: Mayers, Francis L.S., b.1886
Former owner: Nichols, Rosalie
Provenance: Stamford Garden Club (Connecticut)
Notes: The folder includes worksheets, photocopies of articles, and write-ups of the house, the garden, and the current owner's career.

The owners of the garden began planting trees and shrubs around the perimeter of their half-acre property in 1984, and today have many lavishly planted garden rooms. Distinct areas of the garden include the formal English perennial garden, shade garden, rose garden, water garden, Quadrangle garden, vertical garden on a separate studio building, vegetable garden, and herb garden. The garden was devised for year-round interest, with plant materials collected and used to decorate the house.

The stone and slate cottage-style house was designed in 1917 as the personal residence of the prominent ecclesiastical architect Francis L.S. Mayers (b. 1886) of the New York firm Mayers, Murray & Phillip. The current owners designed a perennial cottage garden to complement the house, adding stone walls and winding paths. Additional garden rooms are embellished with garden structures and ornaments, statues and architectural salvage. Roses are prominent on rose arbors and in a garden bed, while other arbors support wisteria and hydrangea. Annuals, herbs and vegetables are planted in containers as well as in garden beds.

The current owner wrote "The Passionate Gardener: Month-by-Month Ideas for Using Your Garden to Enrich Your Life," based on her own experience. She also has written the "Dirt" feature for "Living in Stamford" magazine, about gardening and crafting projects, and has appeared on the CBS television network as a garden and natural crafts expert.

Persons associated with the garden include Francis L.S. Mayers (architect, Mayers, Murray & Phillip, 1917); Rosalie Nichols (previous owner until 1983).

The Stamford Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

CT282: Stonington -- Captain Amos Palmer House

Former owner: Palmer, Amos Captain
 Palmer, George E. Dr.
 Palmer, Lillian MacNeill
 Palmer family
 Stuart, Rodney Mrs.
 Benét, Stephen Vincent, Mrs.
 Benét, Stephen Vincent
 Architect: Jones, L. Irwin
 Provenance: Stonington Garden Club
 Notes: The folder includes a worksheet with additional information about the history of the property and its owners, garden plans, and a photocopied illustration from an article about the garden.
 A childhood home of artist James A. M. Whistler, the Captain Amos Palmer House garden takes its name from a former owner, whose original marble tombstone stands in the garden among English ivy (his present grave is in the local cemetery). The entrance to the garden off Main Street has granite stairs that rise past a head-high fence topped by Chippendale fretwork. There is an outbuilding that acted as a summer kitchen and cool winter buttery and is now a potting shed. A wide stone path inset in gravel passes the house and enters the full rectangular garden, a winter garden built atop the hummock edged by Wall Street. The long side bed with perennial plants has rounded 'Newport Blue' boxwood and a small fishpond with a circulating waterfall over flat granite stones. The corner linden tree, planted after the hurricane of 1938, rises from a bed of ivy. The most striking feature is a red Chinese gazebo. Boxwood hedges (Buxus sempervirens 'Suffruticosa')--thick, vigorous, and trimmed knee high--frame the four central, brick-edged squares that are each of a slightly different size. Four other species of boxwood grow in large round shapes to counterbalance the square hedge framing; gravel paths are laid between. The smallest square has a hedge of Ilex crenata 'Compacta' with a raised central festoon of mixed flowers in summer replaced with a shell birdbath in winter. The present layout plan and plantings were begun in the 1980s by the current owners.

The approach to and from the garden door of the house is from the central hallway. Adjacent is an area of natural flat stones, laid sometime after the War of 1812 bombardment that damaged the house. This stone area is the site for a summer table and umbrella. Repeating the Chinese feeling in the garden is an ornate red railing next to an area of chrysanthemums. The stone-lined pit beneath it is rumored to have been the hiding place for Captain Palmer's share of privateer's bounty taken during the American Revolution. The Wall Street entrance is a stone stairwell. Topping it, a low red wooden fence supports a lengthy climbing rose named 'White Dawn'. Half a dozen 100-year-old glazed Chinese egg pots embellished with flying dragons hold topiary junipers and there are Inuit sculptures from the Canadian Arctic made of old bone, stone, and ceramic. Round baskets planted with annuals placed at the height of the boxwood edges are multi-colored accents for six months of the year as are a few roses, dahlias and lilies. The perennial green boxwood, ilex, and azalea shape a pleasing winter garden that can look quite enchanting when laced with snow.

Persons associated with the house and garden include: Captain Amos Palmer (former owner, 1787-1816); Dr. George E. Palmer (former owner, 1833-1868); the Palmer family and Lillian MacNeill Palmer (former owners, 1869-1936); Mrs. Rodney Stuart (former owner, 1936-1939); Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Vincent Benét and heirs (former owners, 1940-1983); and L. Irwin Jones (architect, 1936-1937).

Stonington Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

The 1848 clapboard house on a half-acre lot has a quarter-acre of garden rooms that were renovated between 2005 and 2008 to complement the house and provide privacy from the busy village. Nearly 30 large boxwood were installed around two sides of the house while existing Alberta spruce, privet hedge and shrub roses inside the picket fence from earlier gardens were retained. The main garden overlooked by the porch was totally renovated by building new walkways, shrinking the lawn and adding a bench, and adding a yew hedge and new deep perennial borders. Trellises were built for the house and garage that support climbing hydrangea and roses. A diamond ivy topiary softens the fence bordering the terrace where volunteer fern and moss grow in the cracks between flagstones. A boxwood square with an armillary sphere in the center is the main feature in the kitchen herb garden, with plans for an espaliered tree.

At one end of the lawn panel there is a painted Lutyens-style bench surrounded by spirea under kousa dogwood. In another corner there is a mature apple tree with shade-loving perennials growing beneath, including bluebells, Solomon's seal, anemone, ferns, hosta and lady's mantle. This garden has been visited during local garden tours.

Although this garden site was established ca. 1900, ownership of the property dates to at least the mid-18th century. The current site includes ca. 60 acres, once part of a larger dairy farm that was active until the 1980s. Among the historical features of the property are a greenhouse that may have been built in the late-18th century and a ca. 100-year-old boxwood hedge 1,237 feet long. Many of the plantings, such as waterlilies, tree peonies, and other foundation plantings were put in after the hurricane of 1938, while many trees and shrubs are specimens from the Brooklyn Botanic Garden. Flower beds and borders are underplanted with bulbs, and there are 19 rose arbors on the property. Other features include a vegetable garden, cutting garden, and apple orchard (formerly there were pear and peach orchards as well). Old lilacs, a grapery, and walkways round out this rural garden site.

Persons associated with the garden include: Charles Phelps, M.D. (former owner, ca. 1755); Charles Phelps, Jr. (former owner, ca. 1830); Erskine Phelps (former owner); Eugene Phelps Edwards (former owner); Dr. Frederic Paffard (former owner); Charles Anderson (gardener/farmer, 1950-1985); Edward Piver (farmer, 1960-1999); and Christian Careb (gardener/historian, to date).

CT196: Warren -- Marsh-Whitlock Farm

Former owner: Marsh, Ebenezer
Whitlock, Samuel

Sculptor: Gritman, Zebulon
 Weisman, Gary Artist: Hill, Nathaniel
 Provenance: Washington Garden Club
 Notes: The folder includes a worksheet and abbreviated garden plan.
 The gardens on this 80-acre property were created and are maintained by the current owners. Established in 1976, the gardens include an enclosed (circle in a square) dooryard garden; a fenced "Grandmother's Garden," centered on a sundial; a potager; and a woodland garden with a collection of species primula raised from seed. Other landscape features include ponds, barns, meadows, and fruit trees. The gardens complement the house, a saltbox built in 1738.
 Persons associated with the garden include: Samuel Whitlock and descendants (former owners, ca. 1750); Ebenezer Marsh (former owner, ca. 1758); Zebulon Gritman and descendants (former owners, ca. 1833); Gary Weisman (sculptor, 1997-1998); and Nathaniel Hill (artist, 1998).
 Washington Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

 Parker, Lloyd

Landscape designer: Calverly, Harold

Consultant: Gray, Wallace

Gardener: Rouse, Wes
 Loomis, Scott

Horticulturist: Keim, Gary

Provenance: Washington Garden Club

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet, a garden plan, and a bibliography of articles and book references about the garden.

Brush Hill Gardens have been evolving since 1971, the year when the owners first acquired and began to restore the 18th century farmhouse and barn. The garden began in the space defined by old stone walls between the house and barn and has been expanding ever since. Visitors enter the more formal part of the garden from the east through the garden gate next to an old Lord and Burnham greenhouse moved to the site from Pennsylvania. The first area is a moon garden, featuring a fountain and planted for foliage and texture in yellows and purples. Next, a rose walk of old shrub roses and climbers supported by a cedar-post arbor connects the house to the garden shed. Further along, the original garden space includes herbaceous borders, a peony border planted for spring interest with two "tors" that support clematis and other climbing vines (as well as two sprinkler heads), and a wheelbarrow garden planted for later season interest. To the west, the terraced serpentine garden, supported by stone walls, is planted in hot colors around a garden folly. Up the hill, the woodland arch leads to a developing woodland garden of rhododendrons, shade plants, and 14 cascading pools adorned with two bridges, one bright blue and the other yellow, where also lurks a grotto-like sculpted figure of Persephone by Simon Verity. The north-facing front of the house overlooks a pond created from an abandoned gravel quarry with its white wisteria-draped turquoise bridge. A separate well house in the field provides an additional water feature and a place to sit to survey the scene.

Persons associated with the property and garden include: Mary Ann Dayton (former owner, before 1883); Julius E. Clark (former owner, 1883-1892); Edward J. Thayer (former owner, 1892-1918); Elizabeth Barrett (former owner, 1918-1947); Hildegarde Shaw (former owner, 1947-1964); Lloyd Parker (former owner, 1964-1971); Harold Calverly (landscape designer, 1979); Wallace Gray (landscape designer, 1990); Wes Rouse (consultant, ongoing); Scott Loomis (gardener, ongoing); Steve Tabacinski (gardener, ongoing); and Gary Keim (horticulturist, ongoing).

Washington Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet with an abbreviated garden plan and photocopies of articles about the garden.

Situated on three acres, this garden, which was established in 1983, reflects the creativity and ingenuity of its artist-owners. A whimsical cottage garden is enclosed by a rustic fence of branches and saplings. Overflowing beds of vegetables, herbs, and annuals are in a geometric layout between used-brick paths. A vine-covered pergola and a retractable awning between a gazebo and its twin shed shade the outdoor dining area. The raised pool with wood siding and edging, fences, outbuildings, twig gates, scarecrows, sculpture, and plant pots were all created by the artist-owners. An old stone wall and steps lead to mixed borders (fragrant flowering shrubs and fruit trees, perennials and annuals) on each side of a path, forming a contrasting garden area around the house, while another stone wall defines the west boundary of the property.

Persons associated with the garden include: C. H. Trowbridge (former owner); Charles Nichols, (former owner, ca. 1895); Helen Russell (former owner); Isabel Proudfit (former owner, ca. 1935); Mrs. Niles (former owner, ca. 1940); and Carol Anthony (former owner, ca. 1981).

Washington Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Garden designer: Favretti, Rudy J., 1932-1923

Former owner: Keator, Alice

Notes: This garden is based on the colonial tradition of mixing herbs and perennials and annuals and is laid out in a parterre syle , enclosed in a low stone wall broken by a picket fence along one side. Garden designer Rudy Favetti helped with the design. An inner circle is planted with culinary herbs. The inner quadrants are planted with vegetables; and the outer quadrants are planted with perennials and annuals. A large birdhouse on a tall pole stands in the middle of the inner circle. A dovecote and arbor seat covered with grapevines are built at each end of the enclosure.

Notes:

The folder includes a worksheet with site plan, two summaries of interviews and one narrative reminiscence about the site and its history, a chronology of the history of the sawmill located on the site, photocopied narratives of the sawmill's history, copies of photographs of the site in the 1920s, 1930s, and 1940s, and photocopies of related correspondence.

This 22-acre garden site consists of a series of informal gardens and natural areas in a rural setting. Development of the current garden dates only to 1991, but previous owners of the property contributed significantly to its overall design and plantings and to the preservation of the ca. 1840 farmhouse and the historic red sawmill that gives the property its name. Today, intimate spaces on changing levels around the house and conservatory, paved with local granite, feature tropical and half-hardy container plants and vines along with roses and perennials. Fieldstone steps and walls delineate specific areas. A curving sunny border below the house is backed by a stone wall topped with a picket fence. Drifts of spring bulbs are planted under trees, while sweeping lawns drop to the sawmill area, where native plants, wildflowers, and a wet garden border the millpond and waterways. To the southeast ferns outline a rustic grape arbor. A vista north of the house leads through the circle garden enclosed by mature evergreens to a shady glen.

Persons associated with the garden include: Captain Gideon Hollister, II (former owner, 1750-1803); Gideon Hollister (former owner, 1803-1844); Almon D. Galpin (former owner, 1844-1876); Edward Wallace Fenn (former owner, 1876-1926); Clarence L. Richmond (former owner, 1926-1936); Bonnell W. Clark (former owner, 1936-1952); Sidney and Beatrice Hessel (former owners, 1952-1991); Billie Haas (garden designer, 1953); Steve Solley (historical advisor, 1993); Charles Boucher (contractor, 1993); Jim Kriker (millwright, 1993); Emilio Sinapoli (stonemason, 1993 to date); and Christine (Tina) Burlingham Dodge (landscape designer and horticulturist, 1993 to date).

Notes: Middlebrook Farm.

The folder includes worksheets and a drawing of the features of the garden.

The gardens of Sprain Brook Farm, surround a home built in 1750. Established in 1970, the gardens have evolved over time to complement the farm house and barn on the property. Garden features include a silver foliage herb garden growing around a sundial, a crow's foot pattern Colonial garden, a salad garden under a pair of espaliered pear trees, an old rose garden near a pond, and a large perennial border.

The garden also features a number of Bill Heise metal sculptures and five bridges over waterways.

The garden has been featured on The Garden Conservancy tours.

Persons associated with the garden include: Sherman Hollister (dates unknown), John S. Hammond (dates unknown), Theodore Pomeroy (dates unknown), Georgia Middlebrook (garden designer, 1970-present).

The Washington Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet and garden plan, and a photocopy of an article about the garden's stone stairway.

Established in 1988, this one-acre garden includes garden rooms, mixed borders, foundation plantings, and containers of shrubs, perennials, vines, half-hardy plants, and annuals. The garden furniture and containers are simple, in keeping with the farmhouse's architecture. Of special interest is the wide stone stairway planted with silver and white herbs that ascends in two levels to the terrace. Also noteworthy are the deep foundation beds and garden borders, densely planted in sweeps of color. A moon garden, planted in white, adjoins the upper terrace. Pinks and blues predominate in the garden room off the kitchen, and the deck is planted with purples, pinks, and reds. Bright yellows and reds are used at the back of the property, and a secluded side garden includes a collection of grasses.

Persons associated with the garden include: Timothy C. Jordan (former owner, before 1889); Julia Kilbourn (former owner, 1889-1929); Rising Sun Lodge M 27 (former owner, 1929-1932); Ed Coll (former owner, 1932-1939); Teresa Coll Coar (former owner, 1939-1946); Francis J. Coll (former owner, 1946-1987); Timothy Mawson (landscape designer, 1988-1995); and Christine (Tina) Burlingham Dodge (landscape designer and horticulturist, 1988 to date).

Washington Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Former owner: Oran, Stuart
 Architect: Allard, David Landscape architect: Allard, David Zion, Robert
 Provenance: Washington Garden Club
 Notes: The folder includes a worksheet, garden plan, and photocopies of articles about the garden.

The gardens on this 70-acre country estate have been under development since 1990. Inspired by the work of Palladio, the 16th-century Italian architect, the house is complemented by a three-part garden that is a blend of Italian Renaissance and French forms. A potager with mixed vegetables, fruits, and flowers, as well as fountains and arbors, is the main focal point and combines great abundance of plant life with formal architectural design. Adjacent to the potager are a rose arbor and boxwood parterre. The garden is walled, both to reflect its Palladian design origins, but also as a deterrent to the many deer that live in the nearby woods. In addition to this main garden, the opposite side of the house is flanked by a smaller courtyard garden and pool area. A broad meadow in front of the house is planted with twisted old apple trees, while a 200-tree orchard is located in back of the house.

Persons associated with the garden include: Stuart Oran (former owner, 1986-1988); David Allard (architect and landscape architect, 1988); and Robert Zion (landscape architect, 1990-1991).

Washington Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Photographer: Corr, Jill A.
 Garden designer: Hamsher, Gail
 Notes: The garden documentation was facilitated by the Stonington Garden Club in 2021.
 This 6 acre property was purchased by the current owners in the late 1970s, and in 1979, a plot plan was created by local landscape designer, Judy Nickerson. The gardens are located on a tidal cove that empties into the Long Island Sound, surrounded by marshland. The current owner's trip to Japan with the Japanese Garden Society had a profound impact on the property's landscaping that reflects hints of Japanese minimalism. The owners intended to create gardens that did not overshadow the view of the cove, but frame and highlight this element. The property features collections of vegetable, pollinator woodland and conifer plants. The owners deliberately fill any unplanted spaces with a variety of ground covers such as gravel stone, triple chopped leaves from the property, and organic mulch made from the property's many oak trees.
 While 1 ½ acres are under cultivation and management, the rest of the property runs freely along the cove. The owners purchased the adjoining lot of approximately .5 acres in 2010 and it is now used to manage and cultivate unhealthy trees and eradicate invasive species. The owners used soft curving lines throughout the landscape of the property to visually soften the straight driveway entry. The driveway ends in a courtyard created by two buildings with a circular cobblestone-edged space that surrounds an immense red oak tree. A curved stone wall lines the east side of the cul-de-sac with a large gate in the center. The west side of the house features a large Japanese maple, gravel stone, and a collection of conifers. On the south side of the house, the owner's interpretation of a dry Japanese garden is constructed of gravel stone and a Japanese lantern peeking through miscanthus grass. The south side of the lawn along the cove features a drift of Pfitzer Juniper amongst high blueberry bushes that have performed for over 40 years. A curved granite wall runs north and south around one corner of the house until it meets the composting area that also contains raised beds, flower and herb gardens. Major hardscape features include a granite patio, swimming pool capped in granite, a pergola overlooking the cove, and many functional bird houses. A prominent decorative element on the property is an armillary approximately 10x10 ft. made of Cor-Ten steel. This piece was commissioned from a math professor at a small agricultural college in Vermont.

Persons associated with the property include: Judy Nickerson (original plot plan, later modified by Gail Hamsher, 1979) and Gail Hamsher (redesigned and installed present garden).

CT141: Waterford -- Harkness Memorial State Park

Landscape architect: Farrand, Beatrix, 1872-1959

Brett & Hall

Former owner: Harkness, Edward Stephen, 1874-1940

Harkness, Mary Emma Stillman, 1874-1950

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, a park brochure, an article about the garden and its restoration, information about the estate's greenhouses, and photocopies of correspondence.

Harkness Memorial State Park focuses around "Eolia," the 200+ acre summer home of Edward S. and Mary Harkness. Built in 1906 and purchased by the Harknesses in 1907, the Roman Renaissance Revival-style mansion is complemented by an Italianate garden (also known as the West Garden) originally designed by the Boston firm of Brett & Hall. From about 1918 to the 1930s noted landscape architect Beatrix Jones Farrand transformed a tennis court into an Oriental garden (also known as the East Garden) to showcase the owners' collection of Chinese and Korean statuary. She also replanted the Italianate garden. When Mrs. Harkness died in 1950, the property was left to the State of Connecticut, which established it as a state park in 1952. An extensive renovation of the mansion and gardens began in 1996. Hardscaping, including four fountains and fencing, was restored or re-built to be compatible with the original specifications of the Brett & Hall and Farrand plans. Gardens were restored to their original planting designs with shrubs, trees, perennials and annuals.

Persons and firms associated with the garden include: Edward S. and Mary Harkness (former owners, 1907-1950); Brett &

Hall (landscape architects, ca. 1910); and Beatrix Jones Farrand (landscape architect, 1918-1930s).

CT140: Waterford -- The Harriet Whitmore Enders Heart Garden

Former owner: Perkins
Enders, John O.
Enders, Harriet Goulden Whitmore

Gardener: Rose, Thomas
 Delpriore, Charles Helsel, David
 Costa, Mario

Provenance: New London Garden Club

Notes: Enders Garden, also known as.

The folder includes worksheets and other documentation.

The footprint of this vanished garden returns every spring with the emergence of a border of 1,000 daffodils that were planted in the shape of a heart to mark its perimeter. A waterless fountain, a Grecian urn, segments of the low white picket fence with heart-shaped pickets, a wooden birdbath and a deteriorating house for purple martins are remaining artifacts. In its heyday the 90 foot by 125 foot heart garden was comprised of island beds lushly planted with flowers that included climbing roses, hollyhocks, lilies, iris, delphiniums, baby's breath, zinnias and other large-scale flowers that could be appreciated from a distance. Picket fences bordered each bed with grass walkways throughout. A sculptural fountain in a shallow pool was centered near the top of the heart; a line drawn around and connecting the flower beds would produce a heart shape. The original 12-acre property was a farm with woodlands, with access to Long Island Sound, and one family home. Later, more land was acquired which increased the property to 28.5 acres; four houses were built for the owner's children and their families. The original house was demolished in the early 1960's and the heart garden was dismantled in the 1990's. One of the two green pergolas that spanned entrances to the heart garden is used as the entrance to a vegetable garden maintained by a member of the family.

Persons associated with the garden include the Perkins family (former owners); John O. and Harriet Goulden Whitmore Enders (former owners, 1905-); Thomas Rose (gardener, prior to 1905); Charles Delpriore (gardener); David Helsel (gardener, circa 1980's); and Mario Costa (gardener and estate manager).

The New London Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

CT756: West Hartford -- Doty Garden, The

Former owner: Doty Family

Landscape designer: Dumaine, Darlene

Gardener: Holcombe, Anne S.

Provenance: Garden Club of Hartford

Notes: A suburban garden of about one-third acre that blends native plants with ornamental cultivars and illustrates fresh landscaping added to established perennial beds and mature trees on an inherited property, with the original house built in 1963. Landscaping was designed in 2000 for a terrace garden abutting a new patio, then revised when the current owner added another room and fish pond in 2004. About 75 varieties of perennials, shrubs, vines and trees include sentimental favorites: forget-me-nots, lilies of the valley and roses, German, Siberian, Japanese and Louisiana iris, and new favorites Korean wax bells and umbrella plant. Foundation beds in front of the house include daphne, rhododendron, climbing roses, kiwi vine, candytuft, creeping phlox, coral bells, and a Japanese snowbell. There are flower beds near the street under a massive conifer with plumbago and along the side fence line, with hydrangea, roses, trumpet lilies and daisies. An arched gateway to the rear garden leads to flower beds that spill over the walk, including peonies, clematis, salvia, geranium, coneflowers and iris. Purple coneflowers, blue and white iris, purple and white clematis, apricot daylilies, also dark blue salvia and annual coleus with boxwood anchors fill the narrow terrace bed above a stone wall.

Native plants are encouraged or planted in the back garden, including spice bush, skunk cabbage, red cardinal flower, Joe Pye weed, jewel weed, iris and ostrich fern. An ipe wood boardwalk was built in 2000 to the flooding stream behind the property. Nearby plants that thrive in wetland include swamp azalea and primroses. A row of hemlock along the other property sideline shades a walkway of stepping stones, hosta beds, rhododendron, ferns and astilbe. A sunnier bed has climbing hydrangea on a trellis against the house, white azaleas, peonies, bleeding heart and forget-me-not.

Persons associated with the garden include The Doty family (owners, 1963-); Darlene Dumaine (landscape designer, 1999-2000); Anne Holcombe (garden advisor and helper, circa 2002-).

The French Norman style house was built in 1928 with features from the Arts & Crafts movement, such as pot-shaped terracotta trim under the roof line, signs of the zodiac, fleur de lis and glazed tiles. There are descending terraces on the less than one acre property with high brick walls, some of which have built-in platforms that would support containers for vertical gardens. Mature pines tower over the house and mark one perimeter while a mixture of pine, hemlock, oak, birch and Dutch elm form a woodland border on another side of the property. The original garden plan is mostly intact, featuring mature rhododendrons, native mountain laurels, azaleas, and perennial borders. A dense yew hedge acts as a privacy barrier in front of the house although it is set along the side of a circle of lawn in the center of the driveway, and not next to the house. Perennials, ferns and ground cover plants are layered beneath established shrubs and trees along the driveway entrance to the property and around the foundation of the house. New trees have been planted when needed as replacements that renew rather than change the established garden.

A major storm in 2010 damaged trees and opened up areas for more sun tolerant plants. A perennial mixed bed in the middle terrace includes hydrangeas, peonies, spirea, Russian sage, coreopsis, rudbeckia, and sedums. A sunken garden in the lowest terrace includes American ginger, lambs ear, ligularia, pulmonaria, tiarella, Jefferson twin leaf and a climbing hydrangea on a high brick wall. A modern extension at the rear of the house was constructed within the structure of brick topped stone walls, and opens to the top terrace that has outdoor furniture. A small barn-shaped shed was added at the lowest elevation of the property and is used to store garden tools and furniture out of season. The neighborhood was designated as a National Historic District in 1968.

Persons associated with the garden include Soby family (former owners, 1928-1934); Cooley family (former owners, 1934-1984); Firger family (former owners, 1984-2001); Johnson family (former owners, 2001-2009); Desmond, Eddy & Warner (landscape architects, 1928); Lester Beach Scheide (1897-1953) (architect, 1928); Edgar M. CT118: West Hartford -- Hyland-Schutz Garden

Former owner: Schutz, Robert Hutchins, 1865-1948

Schutz, Robert Hutchins Jr., 1903-1991

Architect: Schutz, Robert Hutchins Jr., 1903-1991

Platt, Charles A. (Charles Adams), 1861-1933

Landscape architect: Platt, Charles A. (Charles Adams), 1861-1933

Landscape designer: Stevenson, Katharine M., d. 1999

Canning-Malley, Jacqueline

Notes: The folders include worksheets, site plans, planting lists, a detailed history of the property, and extensive documentation of garden ornamentation and furniture.

The Hyland-Schutz Garden was originally designed by architect Charles Adams Platt in 1908 to complement the home he designed in 1907 for the Hartford, Connecticut businessman, Robert H. Schutz. Designed with a focus upon geometry and proportion, the Georgian brick house is reminiscent of colonial Tidewater mansions in Virginia. Reflecting Platt's belief that a building should be well connected to its site, the geometry of the home is mirrored in the formal rectilinear beds of the corresponding garden design.

The garden design offers a contrast between the natural area to the south with undulating borders, and the formal hedged garden to the west with a stately columned loggia overlooking it. The original formal garden was a square split into four quadrants, each bordered in Japanese barberry hedges. The formal quadrants were replaced during a 1964 renovation which included the construction of a garage that now serves as the northern border of the west garden. At that time the property was owned by the son of the original owner, architect Robert H. Schutz Jr., who designed the garage and garden renovations. In 2009 a brick-walled garden room was added to the east of the house, built by the current owner to commemorate of his 60th birthday.

Many of the plants listed in the original design still exist, though the current owners have also added numerous plants in every section of the property since its purchase in 2003. The west garden, as designed by Robert Schutz Jr., now features a lawn enclosed by flowerbeds and boxwood hedges. The east walled garden, built of salvaged bricks from various historic sites, includes Alyce boxwood which surrounds a pair of flowering callery pear trees, and four dwarf Albert spruce that anchor the corners.

The Notable Trees Committee of the Connecticut Botanical Society has identified several trees worthy of note at the Hyland-Schutz property, though many of the trees were badly damaged during a severe snowstorm in October 2011. Other special specimens include a stand of heirloom lilacs transplanted in the early 1900's from the home of the original owners' parents. Climbing hydrangeas on the south façade flank the loggia and embellish the north brick wall at the east end of the house. Purple wisteria planted in 1908 festoons the west loggia and white wisteria adorns the garage.

As a setting for social occasions, a Garden Club of Hartford member and president was married in the formal garden in 1968 and the property has been included consistently in the annual House and Garden Tour sponsored by the Hartford Art School Auxiliary. The current owners have used the garden as a setting to entertain numerous museum trustees, artists and collectors; and the house has been owned by two museum directors, including a former director of the Wadsworth Athenaeum and a director of the New Britain Museum of American Art.

This garden was originally documented as part of a 1992 donation to the Archives of American Gardens. At that time it was listed as the Schutz Garden, included in the Garden Club of America's Slide Library of Notable American Parks and Gardens. An update of the garden documentation was provided in 2012.

Persons associated with the property include: Robert H. Schutz (former owner, 1907-1948); Robert H. Schutz, Jr. (former owner, 1948-1991, architect, ca. 1949); University of Hartford (former owner, 1992-1994); Wilson W. Jr. & Jacqueline A. Wyatt (former owners, 1994-1995); Michael T. & Mary M. Dorsey (former owners, 1995-1997); Peter C. & Mary Lynn Sutton (former owners, 1997-2003); Charles Adams Platt (architect, 1907-1908); Katharine M. Stevenson (landscape designer, 1949); Jacqueline Canning-Malley (landscape designer, dates unknown);

Hyland-Schutz Garden related holdings consist of 2 folders (25 35 mm slides (photographs); 22 digital images)

Additional materials are also located in the Connecticut Historical Society in Hartford, CT; and as part of the Platt Collection at the Avery Library of Columbia University.

The property has been featured in: The Hartford Courant, Real Estate section, July 26, 1992; and in Country Houses, by Aymar Embury, Garden City, N.Y.: Doubleday, Page & Co., 1914, pp 104-106.

Provenance: Garden Club of Hartford

Photographer: Bermel, Lisa
Howard, Nora O.

Architect:	Whelan, Jan Morris Haar, Mary Ann Potter, George
Notes:	The Garden Club of Hartford facilitated this garden submission in 2022. 31 digital images (2022-2021) and 1 file folder. This Reformed Gothic style house and garden are steeped in Connecticut history, listed in the National Register of Historic Places in 1985. The crabapple planted circa 1880 by the first owners, the Chinese Educational Mission, has been on the Champion Tree List since 1995 as the largest crabapple in the state. The property is slightly less than one and three-quarters acre. Since 1980 the current owners have studied and mostly maintained the original lawns, shade trees and shrubs planted by members of the Erving family from 1882 until 1980. Trees on the property that may date back to the late 19th century include maple, white pine, hemlock, oak, and spruce. Additions of native trees and shrubs in the early 20th century include rhododendron, laurel, euonymus, white cedar, lilacs and hydrangeas; non-native plants include Swedish weeping birch, European spruce, rhododendron, azalea, quince and yew. The current owners have replaced some losses with Japanese dogwood, redwood, and natives including dogwood, laurel, holly, pawpaw, clethra and pepperbush. Gardens include a perennial garden, a 40-year old vegetable garden on the site of an older cutting garden, a cottage garden of annuals outside an additional residence building, a contemporary tulip garden and a new pollinator and wetland woodland garden with native shrubs, ferns and flowers. The perennial garden provides blooms for three seasons starting in spring with wood scilla, Chinese and herbaceous peonies, and black cohosh. In summer there are hollyhocks, lilies, astilbe, begonia and lantana with some in terracotta containers. For autumn bloom the garden has orchid dahlias, Japanese anemones, monkshood, sedum, and begonias. A 140-year-old wisteria drapes over a 75-foot dead hemlock – a "natural topiary". The tulip garden was replanted in 2019 with more than 500 late pastel varieties, followed by a day lily collection in midsummer. Individual beds have been planted with English hybrid hellebores, heirloom irises, heirloom dogtooth violets, and in an all-white bed there are two varieties of narcissus, leucojum and snowdrops. Antique and contemporary bronzes, pottery, garden ceramics, 19th century urns, English cast stone dogs, Japanese giboshi on upturned whiskey barrels, and cast iron seating are placed at focal points. The vegetable garden at the back of the perennial garden is surrounded by a wire fence and has oak plank movable walkways. Plant supports include towers made from aluminum rods for heirloom pole beans. Crop rotation has been practiced for forty years. An heirloom cold frame is used to raise salad seedlings. There is a cottage on the property for a resident gardener who grows a cottage garden of annuals. The new pollinator and wetland woodland garden replaces a grove of infested hemlock and includes native shrubs, ferns and flowers. A grove of dogwood was started in the 1980's and added to in 2005. Mature woodland shade trees are underplanted with understory trees and shrubs with ivy ground cover and serve to disguise five compost piles.

Persons associated with the garden's design: Malcolm Larson, resident gardener (1915-1941); Raymond Baker, resident gardener (1941-1985).

There is an extensive bibliography associated with this property.

Provenance: Connecticut Valley Garden Club
Garden Club of Hartford

Notes: The folder includes worksheets and other information.

This approximately one-third acre property and Cape Cod style house built in 1956 has been gardened by one owner since 1973. Professional design help was sought when a swimming pool and pool house were added in 1978. Beds with flowering shrubs, perennials, and bulbs encircle the house, mature and specimen trees stand further away; and flowers, vegetables, and herbs are grown each year in raised beds behind the house. A koi pond with a circulating fountain was added off the patio circa 2004. Trees on the property include pink and white dogwood, Japanese black pine, Norway spruce, kousa dogwood, holly, Japanese maple, hinoki cypress, weeping cherry, juniper, and weeping larch. Garden ornaments include small bird statues, birdhouses and feeders, birdbaths, and a small fountain set in boulders. The pool house is called Chateau Beyond.

Persons associated with the garden include: Robert (Bob) Powell, landscape designer and gardener (circa 1978-2016).

The Garden Club of Hartford and the Connecticut Valley Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Provenance: Fairfield Garden Club

Owner: Blau, Barry
Blau, Eileen

Former owner: Beinfield
Alswang, Ralph

Photographer: Lenz, Tim
Riggio, Anthony
Panning, Candace

Notes: This garden documentation was facilitated by the Fairfield Garden Club in 2021.

These 2 acres of gardens were developed over 50 years by owners, Eileen and Barry Blau. Before Ralph Alswang purchased the property in 1963, the land remained a wooded lot that had never been developed. It was not until Alswang built the midcentury modern house on the property that the former lot began to transform. The Blaus moved to Westport in the mid 1950s and purchased the property in 1964. Since then, Barry Blau has developed a complex arrangement of formal and informal gardens that exemplify mid-century garden design. Major hardscape features on the property include meandering stone paths and walks that connect each garden space with various benches placed throughout. Ornamental gates and double stone sculptures mark the entrance to new paths. Stone retaining walls and boxwoods supply the structure for each of the garden spaces. Major plantings on the property are large rhododendron groves planted below oak trees.

An allée of pollarded crabapples lead to a Neptune fountain circle surrounded by columnar Norway spruce. The entrance is guarded by two metal griffins. The Neptune fountain circle is paved with limestone and surrounded by columnar Norway spruce. The entrance is flanked by two concrete sphinx sculptures with ceramic pots filled with spider grass on their heads. Bamboo groves form a backdrop to the Asian garden with a large Buddha sculpture, waterfalls, and stream with water lilies and water iris and a new grass garden. A vibrant red bridge crossing over stream creates a colorful contrast amongst the green. This area also features Pinus parviflora and a controversa variegate and bamboo grove. A sunken rose garden is framed by stone retaining walls with an ornate sunken boxwood parterre and an old fountain pool. Cherubs and Roman sculptures punctuate beds of Geranium macrorrhizum and Digitalis purpurea near the entry circular drive. A folly of astilbe-filled terraced beds is surrounded by stone retaining walls and steps. Fenced in gardens feature lilacs surrounding roses, lilies, and other flowers and vegetables. The house also includes front entry terraces, a roof deck with a commanding view of the gardens, and a sky lit pool room and mezzanine filled with interior plants. The back patio features a wide set of stairs leading to beds of astilbe folly. A roman relief sculpture amidst ferns lies at the end of a path of fescue.

Persons associated with the garden/landscape design include: Ralph Alswang (1963), Barry Blau (1967-1999). See 55 year chronology for detailed list of designers and design changes.

CT294: Westport -- Hagel-Donnally Garden

Landscape designer: Donnally, Michael

Provenance: Stamford Garden Club (Connecticut)

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet, a garden plan, and planting lists.

When Mr. Hagel bought the property in 1971, the property consisted of a tangle of second growth trees and vines with a lot of weeds in front of the house. Hagel established a collection of woody plant specimens and perennials. In 1987, he met Mike Donnally, who started designing a planned garden. It is a year-around garden with trees with interesting shapes when they are dormant. The garden is slated to be destroyed in 2003 with change in ownership.

Persons associated with the property and garden include: Raymond C. Hagel (former owner, 1971-2003); and Mike Donnally (landscape designer, 1988-2003).

Stamford Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

 Teck, Nina Cuccio
 Landscape designer: Cutler, Amelia MacDonald
 Garden designer: Donnally, Michael
 Provenance: Stamford Garden Club (Connecticut)
 Notes: The folder includes a worksheet, survey plans, garden tour script (2002), and magazine article.

The property is located in Westport, Connecticut and consists of approximately two acres. Originally, the Kiernan Garden was part of the 1929 Juniper Hill Estate until the land was sold and divided in 1981. The Georgian-style manor house was built in 1991. Mr. Mike Donnally, Garden Designer, initiated the five year project for the Kiernan Garden in 1987. The garden incorporates free formed island beds and plantings of hardy trees and shrubs set against a native woodland backdrop. Design elements include a grass ellipse, hornbeam allee, espaliered fruit trees, informal grass garden walks and swimming pool. The main axis of the garden can be seen from the center of the terrace. Strong vertical lines continue throughout the garden in the repetition plantings of the slender, arborvitae cultivar 'deGroot's Spire'

Persons and organizations associated with the garden include: George and May Peterson Tompkins (former owners, 1929); William James Wood (former owner, ca. 1930); Dr. Golden S. Lampert (former owner, 1981); Charles Cutler (architect of original house, 1929); Amelia MacDonald Cutler (landscape designer, ?); Nina Cuccio Teck (architect of Kiernan House, 1991); Michael Donnally (garden designer of Kiernan Garden, 1987-1994).

Stamford Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

CT293: Wilton -- The Garden House
Architect: Peters, Frazier

Landscape designer: Greene, Luther

Provenance: Stamford Garden Club (Connecticut)

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet, a garden plan, and garden tour description, and magazine article.

Parnes and Schneider purchased a property near the road that lacked privacy. Luther Greene created a garden that provided protection from neighbors and the road. Greene built a raised bank along the road and planted it with evergreens and flowering trees. The main plan for the garden was to create a central open lawn with a sequence of small gardens or "rooms." The rooms include a Japanese garden, a cutting garden, a cloister garden, a white garden and a blue garden. Four of the rooms include water features. Waterfalls are a principal feature in the Japanese and the blue gardens. Stones and plantings are the two other most important features in the garden.

Persons associated with the property and garden include: Sidmore Parnes and David Schneider (former owners, 1971); Frazier Peters (designer and builder of house, 1929); Luther Greene (landscape designer, 1971); Ellen Spingarn (Japanese garden cascades); Martin Fitzgerald (topiaries, 1926-?); and Dwight Brooks (original gardener). Stamford Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

CT192: Woodbridge -- Cupola Hill Garden

Former owner: Perkins, Stephen Tyler, Morris F.
Tyler, Delia
Tyler, Victor M.
Tyler, Leonard S.
Tyler, Ernest F.
Tyler, Audobon
Hitchcock, Alice Hitchcock, Harry
Crosby, Sumner McKnight
Crosby, Sarah T.

Architect: Orr, Douglas Landscape architect: Kycia, Douglas S.

Photographer: Radford, Jennifer

Provenance: Garden Club of New Haven

Notes: The folder includes a garden description, slide list, garden plan and information sheet done by GCA researcher Jennifer Radford. The garden is noted for its formal garden and how it contrasts with the looser formal areas.

"Two generations of the same family have developed the garden at Cupola Hill, an old property. Open fields and woodland surround the gently north-sloping land. Fieldstone retaining walls were built to accommodate the slope and provide level terraces around the house. Two-tier borders in an L-shape centered on a pergola circled by boxwood, and anchored at the corners by arborvitae, formed earliest garden."

"A cutting garden due south of the pergolas with a central rose arbor leading to a small fountain is screened from the main garden. The mature arborvitae are now a major feature in this quite formal section of the garden. A magnificent white oak stands on the open lawn. The gazebo has been there since 1901. South of the driveway circle are flowering trees and shrubs in an open lawn; a berm beside the driveway is planted with shrubs, native plants and spring bulbs."

"The property was acquired by the second generation in 1990. They have restored the garden, relocated mature evergreens, extended the retaining walls in a free form which complements the 1970's pool, added the pool terrace, and planted the new raised area with a mix of alpiners, perennials and evergreens. At the edge of the woodland and around the gazebo, a naturalistic shade garden has been developed. Color is extended to the north by the quarter-circle bed of perennials and the rose garden."

"Four and a half acres on a 20.5 acre property make up the garden area. Spatially the effect is generous. The traditional formal section contrasts with the looser informal areas under the trees and the somewhat tight treatment edging the house terraces, providing great visual interest. In addition this old garden is beautifully maintained by current owners who are skillful horticulturists."

Persons associated with the property include: Stephen P. Perkins (former owner in 1837); Morris F. and Delia Tyler (formers owner in 1891); Victor Morris Tyler (former owner in 1909); Leonard S. Tyler (former owner in 1909); Ernest F. Tyler (former owner in 1909); Audobon Tyler (former owner in 1909); Alice and Harry Hitchcock (former owners in 1927); Sumner McKnight Crosby (former owner in 1940); Sarah W. Crosby (former owner); Douglas Orr (architect in 1940 to 1941); Douglas S. Kycia (landscape architect in 1991 from Bethany, CT).

The Garden Club of New Haven facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Raskob, Helena Springer Green

Sculptor: Keck, Charles, 1875-1951

Architect: McClure & West

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, a photocopied image of the courtyard, and additional information.

Located just north of Wilmington in Claymont, Delaware, what is now Archmere Academy was from 1910 the home of John J. Raskob, his wife Helena Springer Green Raskob, and their 12 children. The property had two houses, the Italianate Renaissance "Patio," which served as the Raskobs' residence, and the separate servants' quarters, "Manor Hall." A striking feature of the grounds was the interior courtyard of the "Patio," with a fountain designed by sculptor Charles Keck. In 1932 the 48-acre property was sold to the Norbertine Order, which established the college preparatory school that continues on this site.

Persons and firms associated with the property include: John J. Raskob and Helena Springer Green Raskob (former owners, 1910-1932); Charles Keck (sculptor); and McClure & Harper (architects, 1916-1918).

DE047: Greenville -- Dugdale Garden

Landscaper: Creative Garden Solutions

Provenance: Garden Club of Wilmington

Notes: The folder includes worksheets.

A perennial flower border that is more than 100 feet long is the colorful features of the Dugdale Garden on a 4-1/2 acre country estate. There is a low dry stone wall behind this border and many trees and shrubs that provide color, shade and texture to other areas of the property. The flower border, known as "Summer in Bloom" starts at a water lily and fish pond next to the house and traverses to the swimming pool enclosure which is also filled with perennial flower beds. The owner's favorite colors, yellow, orange and purple predominate in the plant selections.

Persons associated with the garden include Creative Gardens Solutions (design and maintenance, 1986-2007).

The Garden Club of Wilmington facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

 Notes: The folder includes a worksheet, site plans, and garden features descriptions.
 A fieldstone house is set among fields with views of ponds and woods. The topiary gardens sit below the house, overlooking woods and farm fields. The topiary, in the form of spirals, birds, rabbits, a dancing bear, a large frog and baskets, are placed around the garden with groundcover in-between. In the center of the garden is a low hedge encircling stonework, urns and flower beds. To one side is a small fountain and pool.

Landscape architect: Wheelwright, Robert

Landscape designer: Innocenti & Webel
Buck, Douglass, Jr.

Architect: Victorine & Samuel Homsey, Inc.

Notes: The folder includes worksheets and a printed description of the garden and house from 1963.

Millwind's garden was established in the late 1930s on a site overlooking the Hoopes Reservoir. A low brick wall surrounded the terraces containing the formal gardens and pool. The hillside below, leading down to the water, was planted with dogwoods and azaleas. Other garden features included an apple orchard, a vegetable garden, cold frames, and a small greenhouse.

Persons and firms associated with the garden include: George and Didi Beach (former owners, 1935-1945); Robert Wheelwright (landscape architect); Douglass Buck, Jr. (landscape designer); Innocenti & Webel (landscape architects); and Victorine & Samuel Homsey, Inc. (architects, 1939).

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, a brochure, site plans, plant lists, photocopies of correspondence and articles about the garden, and other information.
Mt. Cuba was the private estate garden of Lammot du Pont Copeland and Pamela C. Copeland. The 630 acres that now comprise the property were acquired beginning in 1935. Development of the gardens began soon after, with some early design work by Thomas W. Sears (initial tree planting and formal areas around the house) and Marian Cruger Coffin (the south terrace and round garden). More importantly, Pamela Copeland's interest in preserving indigenous plants led to Mt. Cuba's becoming a center for the preservation and study of Piedmont flora. More than 1,800 taxa are represented in the collection. Various habitat areas, such as woodlands, fields, and a series of ponds, highlight native plants. Of particular note is the largest cultivated display of wildflowers in the Mid-Atlantic region. Other features of the garden include a lilac path, the Coffin-designed round garden with its seasonal plantings, a cutting garden, and a rock garden. Today, Mt. Cuba Center is a non-profit institution committed to promoting an appreciation for plants native to the Piedmont, encouraging their use in gardens and supporting their conservation in nature.

Persons and firms associated with the garden include: Lamot du Pont Copeland (former owner, 1935-1983); Pamela C. Copeland (1935-2001); Thomas W. Sears (landscape architect, 1930s); Marian Cruger Coffin (landscape architect, 1949-early 1950s); Seth Kelsey (landscape architect, 1960s); William H. Frederick, Jr. (landscape architect, 1970s); Richard W. Lighty (garden director, 1983-1998); and Victorine & Samuel Homsey, Inc. (architects, 1935-1937).

Gardener:	Williams, Tom Henry Skibinski, Paul
Notes:	The folders include worksheets, copies of articles about the garden (including a plant list), a garden plan, narrative descriptions, and other information. Ashland Hollow is a 17-acre stroll garden and has been under development by its owners (one of whom is a landscape architect), with the assistance of other professionals, since 1963. Situated in a hilly stream valley, the garden combines strong design and plants from around the world (80% are non-natives) to create seasonal interest. Ponds and dams, sculpture, a gazebo, a game lawn, a vegetable garden, and a small "test nursery" complement the garden itself. The garden is constantly undergoing fine tuning. Interactive audio features were added in 1998-1999, and plantings are altered to reflect new ideas and changes in conditions. Persons associated with the property include: William H. Frederick, Jr. (landscape architect, 1963 to date); Conrad Hamerman (landscape architect, 1965-1966); C. Douglass Buck, Jr. (architect, 1963); Theodore Fletcher (architect, 1963); Sir Peter F. DE041: Montchanin -- Barbara's Vegetable and Herb Garden

Landscape designer: Vogel, Richard

Provenance: Garden Club of Wilmington

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet and site plans.

The garden was designed in response to the owner's love of vegetable gardening. Interesting paths intersect, leading to a potting shed, with a rail fence beyond.

Persons associated with the site and garden include: Richard H. Dayton (architect, 1981-1982); Richard Vogel (landscape designer, 1982-1983); and Richard Dyon, Wallace Landscaping (creator of "the keep" and the stone steps).

Garden Club of Wilmington facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Former owner: Dean, J. Simpson
Dean, J. Simpson, Mrs.
Landscape architect: Chamberlin, Noel
Notes: The folder includes worksheets and other information.
Sharing a name with its more famous Delaware counterpart, this site features a formal garden designed in 1928 by Noel Chamberlin on the site of an old croquet court. Bricks in the walks were originally in the sidewalks of Wilmington. Plantings include rhododendrons, azaleas, hollies, magnolias, dogwood, and tree peonies imported from Japan. Persons associated with the property include: Mr. and Mrs. J. Simpson Dean (former owners) and Noel Chamberlin (landscape architect, 1928).

DE022: New Castle -- George Read II House and Garden

Former owner: Read, George, II
Couper, William
Laird, Philip D.
Laird, Philip, Mrs.

Notes: The folders include worksheets, brochures, photocopies of correspondence and printed information about the garden, and a 1981 thesis by Nancy Bossler, "Interpreting History Through Gardens and Landscapes, with an Interpretive Prospectus for the Garden of the George Read II House in New Castle, Delaware.

This property was the home of George Read II (1765-1836), a lawyer and son of a signer of the Declaration of Independence. The parterre garden was added about 1847 by then-owner William Couper and was in the style of Andrew Jackson Downing. The basic design of this formal garden is an oval with a circle at each end, surrounded by box and containing brick walkways. The back part of the garden is less formal in plan. After the site was donated to the Historical Society of Delaware in 1975 extensive tree work and other restoration of the garden was undertaken.

Persons associated with the property and garden include: George Read II (former owner, 1797-1836); William Couper and the Couper family (former owners, 1845-1920); and Mr. and Mrs. Philip D. Laird (former owners, 1920-1975).

DE028: Wilmington -- Bellevue Hall

Former owner: Du Pont, William, 1896-1965

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, correspondence, and other information about the garden.

Bellevue Hall was the home of William H. du Pont, Jr., who, in addition to being a business executive, was keenly interested in horses and racing. A 1.25 mile track and stables were adjacent to the mansion and du Pont was an animal breeder and horse race course designer. The garden reflected his interests and included beds designed in the shape of a stirrup, hunting horn, and similar motifs. The mansion was transformed by du Pont from its original Gothic Revival style into a replica of President James Madison's home, Montpelier, a property once owned by du Pont's father. The property is now Bellevue State Park.

Former owner: Du Pont, Eleuthérie Irénée, 1771-1834
 Crowninshield, Francis Boardman
 Crowninshield, Louise du Pont
 Notes: The folders include worksheets, brochures, photocopies of articles about the garden and site, photocopies of correspondence, and other information.
 Now a part of the Hagley Museum and Library, Eleutherian Mills was the first du Pont family home. Following a 1972 restoration plan drawn by landscape architect William H. Frederick, a portion of the garden has been restored to its appearance during the period 1803-1834, when it was cultivated by E. I. du Pont, an experienced gardener and botanist. Of equal interest is another Eleutherian Mills garden, the "Italian ruin" garden, designed in the 1920s by Louise du Pont Crowninshield and her husband Francis Boardman Crowninshield.

Situated on the site of the du Pont Company's first black powder mills, this garden features faux ruins, classical sculpture, pools, terraces, and a naturalized appearance. Restoration of this garden began in 1987.

Persons associated with the garden include: Eleuthérie Irénée du Pont (former owner, 1803-1834); Francis Boardman Crowninshield and Louise du Pont Crowninshield (former owners); and William H. Frederick (landscape architect, 1972).

Notes: The folders include worksheets, photocopies of book excerpts featuring the garden (one includes a plant list), and other information.

Elton was noted for its walled garden, whose development began in the 1920s. The walls' stones came from an old house. Gradually a pond, pergola, and plants were added. A wide variety of plants provided year-round color and interest.

Persons associated with the garden include: Mr. and Mrs. A. Felix du Pont (former owners); Mr. and Mrs. J. Dudley Clark (former owners); and Mr. and Mrs. A. Felix du Pont, Jr. (former owners).

DE039: Wilmington -- Frog Hollow Garden

Former owner: Lawrence, William J.
Lawrence, Lesley D.

Sculptor: Simple
Heise, Bill
Bullwinkle, Mark

Provenance: Garden Club of Wilmington

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet, garden plans, photocopies of articles about the garden, and additional narrative description of the garden and slides, including plant names.

This 2.25 acre suburban garden is situated on a sloping site and has been under development since the early 1980s. It is an outdoor living space reflecting the owners' passion for collecting unusual perennials and woodies and incorporating them into a series of gardens utilizing stonework, water features, and playful statuary. As of 2002 there were 1588 different species growing in the garden of which 992 were perennials, 185 trees, 271 shrubs, 32 vines, and 108 bulbs. The landscape design includes: a shady terrace with one pool surrounded by a moss garden plus another pool with goldfish and a formal fountain; a sunny terrace by a conservatory with a stand of hardy pitcher plants as well as approximately 100 non-hardy succulents in containers; a hillside rock garden including a collection of Japanese maples and dwarf conifers, two pools with frog fountains, and an artificial bog; a newly created desert garden for hardy agave, yucca and cacti; a walled knot garden along with a traditional herb garden and "dipping" pool; cozy sitting spaces; a gazebo overlooking a woodland pond with spouting frogs; and an octagonal vegetable garden. In the gardens, blooms, berries and lily pads cater to butterflies, birds and frogs. In a newly built conservatory attached to the house is a collection of tropical plants, in ground as well as in containers, and a horticultural library. Aside from heavy excavation and building of terrace areas, the design, planting, and maintenance of the garden are entirely the work of the owners.

Persons associated with the site and garden include: Holsinger (former owner, ca. 1949); Bruce (former owner, before 1978); Sodeburg (former owner, before 1978); William J. and Lesley D. Lawrence (former owners, 1978-1979); Simple (sculptor); Bill Heise (sculptor); and Mark Bullwinkle (sculptor).

Garden Club of Wilmington facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

DE003: Wilmington -- Gibraltar

Landscape architect: Coffin, Marian Cruger, 1876-1957

Former owner: Sharp, Hugh Rodney, 1880-1968
Sharp, Isabella Mathieu du Pont, 1882-1946
Sharp, Hugh Rodney, Jr., d. 1990

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, photocopies of printed references to the garden, and photocopies of correspondence.

Originally designed and planted between 1916 and 1923 by Marian Cruger Coffin, Gibraltar contains a series of unique garden rooms on its six-acre site, with its house designed by Thomas Waterman. Former owners Hugh Rodney Sharp and Isabella Mathieu du Pont Sharp, who commissioned Coffin's work, had a large collection of statuary, urns, and fountains that are featured in the gardens. A highlight of the design is the several terraces--the Flagstone, Evergreen, and Pool. The latter, formerly the site of the Sharp's swimming pool, features a reflecting pool with aquatic plants, surrounded by purple and white Chinese wisteria in the spring and African lilies in the summer. Other features include a flower garden with borders of roses and herbaceous perennials, a bald Cypress allée, an Italian garden pavilion, and English landscape style lawns. Placed on the National Register of Historic Places in 1998, Gibraltar underwent a major restoration project in 1998-1999, which returned the gardens to their original appearance. Gibraltar is now open to the public.

Persons associated with the garden include: Marian Cruger Coffin (landscape architect, 1916-1923); Hugh Rodney Sharp (former owner, 1909-1968); Isabella Mathieu du Pont Sharp (former owner, 1909-1946); and Hugh Rodney Sharp, Jr. (former owner, 1968-1990).

DE006: Wilmington -- Goodstay

Former owner:	Wheelwright & Stevenson Wheelwright, Ellen Coleman du Pont Meeds Du Pont, T. Coleman (Thomas Coleman), 1863-1930 Meeds, Hollyday S., Jr.
Notes:	The folders include worksheets and photocopies of articles about the garden one of which includes a garden plan. A du Pont family property, 16-acre Goodstay became the home of Ellen Coleman du Pont Meeds in 1923. In 1924 she undertook development of its gardens with Robert Wheelwright (from 1926 one of the principals of Wheelwright & Stevenson). Wheelwright was one of the founders of the journal Landscape Architecture, which he edited until 1920, and he also later married Ellen Meeds. Development of the gardens took about 13 years. A focal point was a Tudor-style square garden with three paths down and three crossing the squares. Other features included a lavender crocus drift on the lawn behind the house, a small woods, and a cutting garden highlighted by a magnolia walk, an allée of 38 pink magnolias ending at a circular pool and fountain. The property was given to the University of Delaware in 1969, where it serves as a conference center. Restoration of the gardens began in the early 1990s. Persons and firms associated with the garden include: T. Coleman du Pont (former owner, 1911-1923); Ellen Coleman du Pont Meeds Wheelwright (former owner, 1923-1969); Hollyday S. Meeds, Jr. (former owner, 1923-?); Robert Wheelwright (landscape architect, 1924-1965); and Wheelwright & Stevenson (landscape architects, after 1926). Goodstay related holdings consist of 1 folder (1 glass lantern slide, 19 35 mm. slides) American Gardens Collection, ca. 1920-[ongoing] Garden has been featured in Robert Wheelwright, "The Garden at 'Goodstay'," Landscape Architecture, XX, No. 1 (October 1929), pp. 5-11. Garden has been featured in Josephine Eccel, "UD Moves to Restore Lost Glory of Goodstay Gardens," The News Journal, September 5, 1991.

DE026: Wilmington -- Granogue

Former owner: Du Pont, Irénée, 1876-1963

Du Pont, Irénée, Mrs.

Notes: The folders include worksheets and photocopies of published descriptions of the garden.

Granogue's gardens were designed to reflect French influence. Its center features a pool of still water surrounded by gravel paths and circular beds laid out in tulips and other seasonal plants. Yews, boxwood, and native trees complement this design. A rock retaining wall separates the formal part of the garden from a rock garden beyond. The wall features alpine and rock garden plants, as well as trailing and vining plants, while adjacent beds provide a succession of blooms throughout the growing season.

Persons associated with the garden include: Mr. and Mrs. Irénée du Pont (former owners, before 1963).

DE045: Wilmington -- Harold S. Schutt, Jr. Residence

Gardener: Buckler, James R.
Meyer, Paul

Provenance: Garden Club of Wilmington

Notes: The folder includes worksheets and site plan.

The half-acre garden changed several times since the 1950s by design of the owner. Perennial borders have given over to formal pachysandra and boxwood. An ironwork gate, furniture, and lead garden features add interest to the space. Thirty-five year old dwarf conifers were placed into the rock garden with many evergreen and flowering shrubs.

Persons and firms associated with the property include: Mrs. Lillian Schutt Armbrrecht (former owner, 1938-1948); Wallace Landscape Services; James Buckler (gardener); and Paul Meyer (gardener).

Garden Club of Wilmington facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Notes: The folder includes worksheets and photocopied information about the garden.

The English country-style house at Mauchline was built in 1917. Elizabeth Bootes Clark was the landscape architect. The site is urban, on two levels, and has year-round interest. It was designed to be enclosed by a hedge and brick wall, with a small pool, surrounded by box-bordered flower beds, and a greenhouse.

Persons associated with the garden include: Elizabeth Bootes Clark (landscape architect, c. 1917); Frank G. Tallman (former owner); Anne Dickie Tallman (former owner); Julia Ashbrook Tallman (former owner); Irving Warner (former owner); and Marian Tallman Warner (former owner).

DE030: Wilmington -- Nemours
 Former owner: Du Pont, Alfred I.
 Du Pont, Jessie Ball
 Landscape architect: Masséna, Gabriel
 Du Pont, Alfred V. (Alfred Victor), 1900-1970
 Architect: Carrère & Hastings
 Contractor: Smythe and Son
 Notes: The folder includes worksheets, brochures, copies of articles about the garden, garden designs, correspondence, and other information. Originally the estate of Alfred I. du Pont, Nemours was named for the site of the ancestral du Pont family home in France. Its grand, French-style gardens, designed largely by du Pont's son, Alfred V. du Pont, and Gabriel Masséna, complement the 77-room Carrère and Hastings mansion. Highlights of the gardens include a boxwood parterre, the "Four Borders" (mixed herbaceous borders), woodlands, a maze garden, sunken gardens, a rock garden, and a one-acre reflecting pool with 157 water jets. Greenhouses were built between 1909 and 1929, with an addition in 1981. Architectural features reflect the heroically royal scale and style of the garden's design.

Persons and firms associated with the property include: Alfred I. du Pont (former owner, before 1935); Jessie Ball du Pont (former owner, before 1970); Gabriel Masséna (landscape architect); Alfred V. du Pont (landscape architect); Carrère & Hastings (architects); and Smythe and Son (contractors).

Landscape architect: Shipman, Ellen Biddle, 1869-1950
Coffin, Marian Cruger, 1876-1957
Former owner: Du Pont, Eugene, Jr.
du Pont, Ethel Pyle (Mrs. Eugene du Pont, Jr.), 1881-1954
Notes: The folder includes worksheets and photocopied pages from the 1938 Garden Club of America annual meeting program.
Designed by Ellen Biddle Shipman, with additional work by Marian Cruger Coffin, the gardens at Owl's Nest combined formality and informality and commanded a fine view of the surrounding countryside. The property was sold in 1961. Eighteen acres became part of the Greenville Country Club, while the rest of the land was developed as Owl's Nest Estates.
Persons associated with the garden include: Ellen Biddle Shipman (landscape architect, before 1938); Marian Cruger Coffin (landscape architect); Mr. and Mrs. Eugene du Pont, Jr. (former owners).

Sculptor: Harvey, Andre Gardener: Petersen, Ellen
Provenance: Garden Club of Wilmington
Notes: The folder includes worksheets and site plan.
The ca. 1750 farmhouse originally had simple "country plantings" around it. Old plantings included daffodils by the stream and rhododendron by the pond. The present owner added the pool and pool garden in 1985 and the barnyard garden in 1996. A walk through the woods was also added.
Persons and firms associated with the property include: Everett G. Ackart (former owner, 1937-1978); Andre Harvey (sculptor of "Helen" the Pig); and Ellen Petersen (landscape gardener of barnyard garden).
Garden Club of Wilmington facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

DE023: Wilmington -- Rockwood Museum

Former owner: Shipley, Joseph

Architect: Williams, George

Landscape architect: Williams, George

Gardener:

Salisbury, Robert

Notes:

The folder includes worksheets, brochures, photocopies of articles about Rockwood, garden plans, and photocopies of correspondence.

A 19th-century country estate, Rockwood is an outstanding example of Rural Gothic architecture and "Gardenesque" landscape design. Of its original 200 acres, 70 were acquired in 1972 by New Castle County. The estate was built by Joseph Shipley, a Delaware native who spent most of his life in England as a merchant banker. When he retired to his homeland he chose George Williams, the architect of his English estate, Wyncote, to design his new country home and its grounds. Williams incorporated features such as an orchard, kitchen garden, pleasure garden, pinetum, and conservatory into his design. Specimen trees from the original plantings as well as ancient rhododendrons remain today. Despite changes over the years, Rockwood retains much of its original atmosphere and flavor.

Persons associated with the property and garden include: Joseph Shipley (former owner, 1850-1867); George Williams (architect, landscape architect, ca. 1850); and Robert Salisbury (gardener, ca. 1850).

DE046: Wilmington -- Rowland Garden

Garden Petrell, Wally

designer:

Architect: DeArmond, Ashmead & Bickley

Provenance: Garden Club of Wilmington

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, site plans, and additional information.

Located adjacent to Olmsted-designed Rockford Park, this garden has been under development by its owners since 1973, although the house was built in 1900-1904. In the early 20th century formal gardens stretched toward the park and many magnificent tall trees remain, although some have been removed due to age and condition. In the 1950s a border of azaleas, rhododendron, mountain laurel, leucothoe, and dogwood, designed by the head gardener at Winterthur, was added against the fence opposite the formal terrace to the southeast of the house. During the 1970s, while clearing overgrown ivy and trees, the owners discovered a rock garden set against a granite retaining wall. Over the years they have sought to echo the original plantings as well as to add rare plants and natives suitable to the conditions of the soil and the various sites within the garden. Containers, troughs, and built-in brick terrace beds are used for a variety of plantings, from vegetables to summering house plants, while a unique propagating bed is filled with worm castings. No chemicals are used in the garden. Future plans include a formal garden, English Tudor in feel (as is the style of the house), with tall conifers at the corners and triangle-shaped parterres reflecting the shapes on the timbered house. The garden continues to be a source of intellectual stimulation, inspiration, delight, and good health.

Persons and firms associated with the garden include Wally Petrell (garden designer, 1950s) and DeArmond, Ashmead & Bickley (architects, 1900-1904).

The Garden Club of Wilmington facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Located on Market Street in downtown Wilmington on the banks of the Brandywine, the garden of Elizabeth Canby Rumford (Mrs. Charles G.) complemented a 1792 house. The two-acre property was sold in 1933 to the City of Wilmington as a school site. Following demolition of the school and construction of a new high-rise building, the site became a park.

architect:

Former owner: Du Pont, Henry Francis, 1880-1969

Du Pont, H. A. (Henry Algernon), 1838-1926

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, copies of correspondence, photocopies of articles about the garden (including one with a plan of the garden), and other information.

The gardens at Winterthur complement the museum that shares its name and reflect the aesthetic sensibilities of Henry Francis du Pont, founder of the Winterthur Museum, and his father, Henry A. du Pont. Naturalistic and woodsy in style, they feature a wide range of garden ornaments. Including over 200 acres of display gardens, Winterthur is renowned for its spring azalea displays, as well as rhododendron and woodland flowers. Millions of naturalized bulbs may be found in the area called the March Walk. The plant collection, which includes a wide range of specimens, was gathered from throughout the United States, England, and France. This is truly one of America's outstanding gardens.

Persons associated with the garden include: Henry Francis du Pont (founder and former owner, 1927-1969); Henry A. du Pont (former owner, 1902-1926); and Marian Cruger Coffin (landscape architect, before 1957).

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet and garden plans.

This 10-acre garden, established in 1966, has been designed and planted by Daniel Urban Kiley, Penelope Hobhouse, and David Culp. Sited deep in primeval hardwood forest, it utilizes all the major trees and includes temples, ruins, an allee, a bog, a stream, a lagoon, a cascade, a unicorn court, an auricula house and potager, cold frames, a cutting garden, and an orchard.

Persons associated with the garden include: Daniel Urban Kiley (landscape architect, 1991 to date); Penelope Hobhouse (landscape planner, 1997 to date); and David Culp (horticulturist, 1999 to date).

Garden Club of Wilmington facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Notes:

The folder includes a worksheet, copy of article (1953), and planting plan.

The house was built in Georgetown (part of Washington, DC) in the early nineteenth century. City deeds and census show no owners living in the house until 1930; and then only seldom until 1944. Miss Hendricks wrote in 1968 that she arranged construction of a pergola. She may have planted the wisterias. Gertrude Sawyer altered the former garage to make a loggia with closets and storage. The garden was established between 1928 and 1932 and later designed by Perry Wheeler. The garden was altered in 1986 to provide parking for two cars.

Persons associated with the garden include: Charles McCarteney family (former owners, 1869); Marshall H. Rorh (former owner, 1920); Margaret Adreon and Luta and Genevieve Hendricks (former residents, March, 1928); Mr. and Mrs. Dunthorne (former owners, November, 1928); Hendricks (landscape designer, 1928); Dunthorne (landscape designer, 1931); Gertrude Sawyer (architect, ca. 1942); and Perry Wheeler (landscape architect, ca. 1942).

DC040: Washington -- Gray Garden

Notes: The folders include worksheets; garden plans; photocopies of articles about the garden; photocopies of Wheeler notes, plant lists, and correspondence relating to the garden; and additional information.

Situated in the Georgetown section of Washington, D.C., this garden was originally established in the 1930s or 1940s with design work by Rose Greely. In 1958, the property's new owners commissioned a design from Perry H. Wheeler. Structurally the garden has changed little in the past 50 years and still includes many of Wheeler's details: a "thimble" rotating fountain jet, a ram's head mask, a marble "reclining" figure, and four boxwood circles in beds. Wheeler installed hardscapes of different kinds throughout the site's terraces and designed the gardens with the idea of entertaining and low maintenance during the summer months. Boxwood, lirioppe, mondo grass, bulbs, and other all-season plants were used. The lower, formal terrace features boxwood-edged beds, a fountain and a lawn. The upper terrace includes a swimming pool, greenhouse, garden house, vegetable garden, walkways, and cutting beds. The one-acre size of the garden is unusual in this urban setting and its continuity over the years makes it a site of special interest.

Persons associated with the garden include Perry H. Wheeler (landscape architect, 1958-1980) and Rose Greely (landscape architect, 1930s-1940s).

DC020: Washington -- Herter Garden

Landscape Wheeler, Perry H., 1914-1989

architect:

Former owner: Herter, Christian Archibald, 1895-1966

Herter, Mary Caroline Pratt, 1895-1980

Notes:

The folders include worksheets, copies of magazine and newspaper articles featuring the garden, orders and invoices, correspondence, and other information.

The Georgetown garden of Christian A. Herter and Mary Caroline Pratt Herter involved Perry Wheeler for a period of about 10 years.

Wheeler's association began in 1954, when he provided additions to an original plan (with plant names) by Cary Millholland Parker, and lasted until at least 1964, when he created a new design for the garden's pool. Typical of Georgetown gardens, the Herter Garden occupied a relatively small space behind its Federal period house, situated cheek by jowl with its neighbors. Privacy was provided by brick walls, a bamboo fence, and shrub and tree plantings. A wide brick walkway led to a small ornamental pool at the back of the garden, while smaller brick walkways provided additional circulation. Azaleas, magnolia, boxwood, spring bulbs, and other plantings amply filled the garden space, while seating was provided on a terrace area near the pool.

Persons associated with the garden include Perry H. Wheeler (landscape architect, 1954-1964) and Christian Archibald and Mary Caroline Pratt Herter (former owners, 1943-1980).

Herter Garden related holdings consist of 3 folders (30 slides (photographs); 2 photographic prints; 1 safety film negative; 10 plans; 3 drawings; 1 blueprint)

 Notes: The folder includes a worksheet with an abbreviated garden plan.
 Established in 1978, this garden of less than one acre is situated primarily behind the house, affording considerable privacy. The majority of plants are perennials, bulbs, and flowering shrubs such as azaleas. Mature trees provide a woodland background. Boxwood accents the rear of the garden, while a rose garden has been planted on a lower level.
 Persons associated with the garden include: Mrs. James Crudgington (former owner, before 1975).

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet and a copy of the garden plan.

This 108' x 30' garden is designed to complement the Federal style of its companion house and uses simple straight lines with brick for paths and walls. There are three sitting areas connected by paths that lead back along both sides of a long rill. An evenly spaced line of river birch runs along one wall and across the back. There are no lawns or formal beds, but there is an informal woodland planting of shrubs and perennials. The proportions are elegant and soothing in this urban woodland setting.

Persons associated with the property include: John Williams (former owner, ca. 1806); Isaac Owens (former owner, ca. 1815-1835); William Nicholls (former owner, 1835-1856); William O. Lumsdon and heirs (former owners, 1856-1887); Sallie Jones (former owner, 1887-1903); James Plummer (former owner, 1921-1939); Drew Pearson (former owner, ca. 1930s); John Walker (former owner, 1939-1991); Samuel H. Williamson (landscape architect, 1991-1992); Len Jacoby (gardener, 1992 to date); and Chris Jacoby (gardener, 1992 to date).

Around the time of the Civil War, this 18th century property was established by the Tenney sisters as a school for young ladies in the main house; and a kindergarten for boys, attended by the son of General Grant, in the outbuilding that is now an artist's studio. A stone channel leads from the southern wall across the lawn to a cistern in the basement to collect rainwater for use in cleaning and laundry. A pump found on the property was used to obtain drinking water from a private well where the rocky waterfall is now located. By the time the current owners took possession in 2001, a terrace and some low walls had been added, connecting the old house architecturally to the garden. Since then the property has been developed by its current owner into a colorful and vibrant space for entertaining and peaceful enjoyment.

The private areas of the property were divided by the current owner into four discrete sections, all lush with plantings and reflecting the originality of the owner, an artist. A fence and gate screen off the first area, a courtyard with converted artist's studio, from the street. Holly, nandina and vinca minor soften the perimeter, and the studio entry is framed by a stand of bear's breeches. Rounding the corner of the house is the koi waterfall garden with a "natural spring," inspired by the old pump, culminating in a fish pool. There is a Fullmoon maple and various woodland perennials such as Dixie wood fern, cinnamon fern, hellebore, sweet box, astilbe and sedum, grow among the rocks, while the studio is fronted by white camellia japonica.

A short flight of brick steps leads to a larger area with a large lotus pond (unusual in Georgetown) with a simple waterfall. A changing palette of blooming plants such as iris and peony, buddleia, Shasta daisies, black-eyed Susans, and phlox that were originally white have now turned pink, surround the pool. A wide trellis breaks up the expanse of brick wall that forms the rear garden boundary. An abutting wall, forming the garden's western boundary, features a trompe l'oeil mirror and trellis that contribute light and depth, in addition to supporting red honeysuckle and morning glory. Through an entry in a low brick wall parallel to the lotus pond is a terrace and the fourth garden area and the only section that predates the current owner. There a hybrid apple tree presents a magnificent espalier against the wall of the house next door. Dusty Miller billows at the base of the apple tree.

Persons associated with the garden include General Louis Little, USMC, (former owner, circa 1930s); the Hon. Robert H. Thayer, Ambassador to Romania (former owner, circa 1950s-1960s); John Wilmerding (former owner, dates unknown); Mrs. Carter Brown, (former owner, 1990-2001); Garden Gate Landscaping (garden designer, 2001); and Perry H. Wheeler (landscape architect, 1964-1966).

The Georgetown Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation to the Garden Club of America Collection.

Notes: The folders include worksheets, copies of magazine and newspaper articles featuring the garden, and other information.
The Georgetown garden of Admiral Neill Phillips and his wife Grace Hendrick Phillips (for whom a boxwood cultivar was named) was designed by Perry Wheeler in 1952, with construction and installation moving forward in that year. By April 1953 the garden was featured on the annual Georgetown Garden Tour. Wheeler's design for the small space included a brick wall for privacy, brick paving of most of the garden area, and an unusually shaped pool with twin fountain spouts and a striking sculpture. A variety of shrubs and small trees lined the perimeter, with emphasis on boxwood. Seating was provided throughout the garden. Duplicates of many of the images, the originals of which are in the Perry Wheeler Collection, may be found in the Garden Club of America Collection. The prints originated with Condé Nast Publications and appear to have been associated with a magazine article about the garden.
Persons associated with the garden include Perry H. Wheeler (landscape architect, 1952-1953) and Admiral Neill Phillips and Grace Hendrick Phillips (former owners, 1951-1966).

A small formal urban garden extends the living area of a 1930's colonial style house with comfortable seating on the sunnier side and outdoor dining furniture on the shadier side, directly behind the house. French doors and flanking full-length windows also connect the outdoor room with the living room inside. The walled garden that was planted in the late 1990's is bisected by a wide brick path with a diamond-shaped lozenge centered by a small stone fish pond. There are patches of lawn bordered by miniature boxwood hedges and behind them are flowering shrubs and trees, including climbing roses, wisteria and clematis that all flower together. More flower beds at the rear of the garden feature the color blue which is cooling and seems to extend the space. Planted here are a vitex tree, hosta, scabiosa, speedwell, columbine, creeping phlox, catmint and ajuga. Pairs of antique and classically styled planted containers are placed throughout the garden, and a crate in the alley outside the garden wall holds surplus annuals. The formal design features were inspired by the Federal style of nearby Tudor Place and the gothic style of the National Cathedral garden close while the dense plantings were designed to soften the straight edges.

Persons associated with the garden include: William Brockman Bankhead and family (former owners, 1939-1969); Mr. and Mrs.

Andrew Sager Keck (former owners, 1969-1994); Susan Boasberg (garden co-designer, late 1990's).

The Georgetown Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Former owner: Wheeler, Perry H., 1914-1989
Stroud, Franklin L. Dr., d. 2008
Magnuson, Laura T.
Magnuson, Paul B.
Shoemaker, Frances
Jones, Fred W.
Notes: The folders include worksheets, plans, financial documents, correspondence, plant lists, copies and photocopies of articles featuring the garden, and other information.

Noted landscape architect Rose Greely did the original design for this garden, while Perry Wheeler undertook extensive remodeling beginning in the early 1950s. A typical small Georgetown garden only 48 feet wide, its privacy was assured by a wisteria-topped brick wall, shade trees, and shrubs around its borders. The plan divided the area into several distinct sections, including a shade terrace, living terrace, lawn, lawn terrace, and even a small circular formal vegetable and herb garden. A fountain adjacent to the living terrace provided white noise to mask the sounds of the urban setting. The Wheeler portion of the series includes not only visual images but plans, financial records, and other documentation. Greely's architectural drawings and papers are housed in Special Collections at the University of Virginia Library, Charlottesville, Virginia.

Persons associated with the garden include Rose Greely (landscape architect, circa 1920-1940); Perry H. Wheeler (landscape architect, circa 1951-1964); Dr. Franklin L. Stroud (former owner, 1976-2008); Paul B. and Laura T. Magnuson (former owners, 1946-1974); Frances Shoemaker (former owner); and Fred W. Jones (former owner).

DC105: Washington -- The Everts' Garden

Former owner: Randolph, Frank

Garden designer: Everts, Florence
 Carpenter: Wechsler, Peter
 Notes: The folder includes a worksheet, article in "Garden Design" Magazine, photocopies of garden from book publications, and map.

This is a small, secluded, hillside garden with the ground rising steeply behind the house. The living room opens out onto a patio marked by two old specimens of dogwood. From here, steps lead up to another terrace which features a walk of quarry stone and river washed pebbles. In spring, it is bordered by plants in a pastel palette of tulips, scillas and pansies that complement the pink and white of the dogwoods. Winding paths of thick quarry flagstone lead beneath a Japanese Snowbell tree and a Japanese maple. Low walls of fieldstone retain the soil. At the top of the hill, 30 ft. above the house floor level, is a rustic Japanese-style garden pavilion built by Peter Wechsler.

Persons associated with the garden include: Frank Randolph (former owner, 1972 - 1977); Peter Wechsler (master carpenter, 1984 - 1988); and Florence Everts (garden designer, 1979).

Landscape architect: DCA Landscape Architects

Provenance: Perennial Garden Club

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet and garden map with plant list..

Thirty by fifty feet, The Townsend Garden is surrounded by a dark gray high board fence to the west and south; to the east a high stone wall; and a house to the north. A stone terrace occupies the northern quarter, a brick terrace the southern. The terraces are connected by a brick and stone walk which is crossed by a waterway in stone. Fountains lie at the center and both ends of the waterway. In the center, half of the garden is a low planted circle that is cut into quadrants by the walk and the waterway. To the sides are borders filled with perennials and punctuated with old camellias ten to fifteen feet high.

Persons associated with the garden include: Guy Williams and Amy Mills (landscape architects, 1999).

The Garden Club of Dublin facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Landscape architect: Greely, Rose, 1887-1969

architect:

Provenance: Perennial Garden Club

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet and site and garden plans and plant lists from Rose Greely's 1955 design.

Underoak is an estate featuring a house and garden situated on 2.75 acres in northwest Washington, D.C. One main feature is a magnificent oak tree that is over 350 years old. There are also an oval entrance garden and a series of rear terraces that were designed by Rose Greely. The side yard has a swimming pool and bath house, as well as a rose garden. There are many varieties of flowering trees and shrubs and extensive borders of perennial and annual flowers.

The house has been expanded over the years and the garden has evolved into a tranquil oasis in the midst of a growing city.

Persons associated with the garden include: William Welker (former owner, 1924-1941?) and Rose Greely (landscape architect, 1955).

Notes: This garden was created, beginning in 1990, by leaving as much of the native foliage as possible while building a one-story home, connecting pool and guest house on the approximately two-acre J-shaped property. Grass and invasive melaleuca trees were removed. Areca palms were planted to shore up the bank of their pond that is home to a seldom seen alligator. A Live oak in front of the house is ornamented with a yellow dendrobium orchid, one of many orchids on the property. Other native plants in the front garden include scrub palmetto, bamboo, slash and Dade pines, and fire spike bushes. A pine straw path leads past a bay rum tree, a grove of bananas, white bird of paradise, buddleia, a huge rubber plant moved out from the house, and many palms. Orchids are attached to some of the trees or planted in the stumps of trees that succumbed, with a stabilizing cement base. Some of the orchids are volunteers.

A creek runs through the garden and drains into a large pond, home to water plants and, possibly, an alligator. Native fauna includes herons, woodpeckers, turtles, snakes, iguanas, raccoons, possums, otters and anole lizards. Round white stepping-stones pass by an avocado tree, a frangipani, an enormous heliconia, and the resurrection ferns that grow on many of the trees. There are pine trees, Live oak and palm that were growing before the property was developed. The intention for Grams Tropical Garden was to disturb as little as possible and celebrate Old Florida. Two garden assistants, Carlos and Ramon, have aided in this endeavor from the beginning.

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, site plans, detailed slide descriptions with plant names, and additional information about the garden.

This six-acre property is located on the Halifax River, two blocks west of the Atlantic Ocean. It is unique because of its size (quite large for Florida), but especially because it has been maintained in its natural state as hammock land. It has hundreds of trees, including oak, bay, pine, magnolia, palm, cedar, and Florida orchid (the latter now considered invasive), and stands of bamboo, palmetto, sea grape, fern, and mangrove. It is home to numerous species of birds, including owls, osprey, and herons, and to butterflies, rabbits, possums, raccoons, and turtles. Over the years the effects of hurricanes as well as the growth of invasive vines have led the owners to initiate careful yet aggressive practices aimed at ensuring the growth of more desirable trees, such a live oaks, and the native flora. Natural dunes, another feature of the site, are aided in their survival by maintenance of lush vegetation and healthy trees as anchors and stabilizers. A "trail" to allow access to and viewing of this remarkable site has been created by the owner, its highlight being a view of the river upon nearing its end.

The Garden Club of the Halifax Country facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

The red brick house was built in the 1950s and modeled after the governor's palace in Williamsburg, Virginia, which inspired the current owners in 1994 to install gardens with both southern and tropical plants and features on the four acre property Toronito. There are 200 year old Live Oak trees dripping with Spanish moss shading much of the property so the plant selection had to succeed in filtered shade, with some sunny locations including a rose garden. From the brick terrace with a round leaded glass window set into the wall supporting the gate there are views of the formal serpentine border planted with jasmine, sago palms, tea roses and conifers, and other formal beds contain caladium and agapanthus. The area known as the shade garden contains holly fern, iris and sago palm. A small orchard has pecan, fig and Meyer lemon trees. Throughout the property there are brick walkways that co-ordinate with the formal style of the planted beds and containers on the brick patio. The Halifax River runs alongside the property and is reached by walkways that divide around a sculpture of Poseidon, himself surrounded by a clipped circular hedge. In addition to the main house there is a guest house, garage, pool and garden shed where container plants are wintered over.

Toronito is a Seminole name meaning sunshine and goodwill, and Toronito's crest has been placed over the English colonial style front door of this house. There is a local legend about Princess Toronito who avenged the death of her French father at the hands of the Spanish settlers by siding with and helping the British explorer Sir Francis Drake defeat the Spanish in the 16th century.

Persons associated with the garden include: Dr. and Mrs. Dwight Harris (former owners, 1950-1966); Mr. and Mrs. Paul H. Gugger (former owners, 1966-1986); Mr. and Mrs. R.T. Ayers (former owners, 1986-1991); Harry Griffin (architect, 1953-1954); Joe Knight, ASLA (landscape architect, 1994).

The Garden Club of Halifax County facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Notes: The folder includes worksheets.

Historic recreation is the theme of the layered tropical garden the current owners have created for their 1929 Mediterranean style house on a 1/2 acre site. To escape the redevelopment of its original location along a state road the house was moved to this site by a previous owner in 1972. Although palms, banyans, and hedges were already planted, the property presented a mostly blank canvas to be filled in with colorful tropical shrubs, groundcovers, ferns and vines as well as pots of orchids and gardenias, some hanging from old ficus trees. The circular brick driveway is lined with banyans and bent royal palms that grew from coconuts stuck within the banyan's multiple trunks. Bougainvillea surrounds the front gate and Confederate jasmine surrounds the front door. In the backyard a large Spanish-style fountain is set in a circular brick terrace that is bordered with ixora and hibiscus shrubs and ferns. The rectangular swimming pool with a tiled wall fountain and spa at one end is shaded by a partial allée of tall palms that form a square garden room. Inspiration for the round and square garden features came from the historic Palm Beach gardens at the houses designed by Addison Mizner in the 1920s.

Persons associated with the garden include Albert Parkhouse (former owner, 1930-); Lawrence Lombard (former owner, circa 1972-); A. Gran Thornbrough (landscape architect, 2006-2008); Carol Borough Perez (garden designer, dates unknown); Juan Vigoa, (gardener-maintenance, 1986-2017); Sergio Vigoa (unknown).

Gerbing, George Gustave, 1900-1982

May, Ralph

Creator: Gerbing Gardens

Provenance: Late Bloomers Garden Club

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, photocopies of images, a chronology and other information.

In 1937 Gustav George Gerbing transformed about 7 acres of family property along the Amelia River into a public garden, Gerbing's Azalea Gardens, with plans for massive plantings of azaleas and camellias for viewing and for sale. The entire 15 acre holding became Gerbing Gardens, with groves of native trees including cedars, magnolias, bay, pines, live oaks and water oaks draped with Spanish moss, and wisteria trees. The advertisements for the garden claimed plantings of 100,00 azaleas, an 800-foot long camellia japonica "Sarah Frost" windbreak, a natural terraced amphitheater of camellias and trees, rose gardens, a 4-acre sunken garden planted in roses, azaleas, camellias and bulbs, picnic grounds and children's playgrounds, all behind a 1,200-foot concrete sea wall. Concrete curbing was used to define garden beds, chain link fence was covered with Spanish moss and other vines, and broad walkways of sawdust were known as sawdust trails.

The garden remained public for about 20 years and was used for events such as the Festival of Flowers, but was not commercially successful. Gerbing and his business partner Ralph May continued to breed and sell the popular cultivars Mrs. G.G. Gerbing azalea indica and Jean May camellia sasanqua.

The current owners removed vines and undergrowth from the original 7-acre Azalea Gardens uncovering mature azaleas and camellias. Skeletal traces of concrete curbing, garden beds, parking areas and the extensive irrigation system also have been uncovered. The Gerbing greenhouse was remodeled and is a private building and the sunken garden and rose garden have been developed for home sites.

Persons associated with the property include Gustav Gerbing (8/11/1854-9/7/1930) (former owner, circa 1898-1930); Gustav George Gerbing (3/1/1900-1/25/1984) (former owner, 1930-1944); Ralph May (former owner 1944-1971); Amelia Island Company, Sea Pines Plantation (former owner 1971-???) ; Thomas J. and Sara M. Edwards (trustees 12/1/1993-6/8/2006).

The Late Bloomers Garden Club of Jacksonville, Florida facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

FL173: Gulf Stream -- Fairy Garden on Lemon Hill

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, photocopies of images, a chronology and other information.

Most gardens come into their own when the plants grow and fill in spaces. The Fairy Garden on Lemon Hill is comprised of young plants and bonsai that are in scale with its miniature castle and other houses, fountain, stone walls, gates and furniture, and fairy figurines. The Fairy Garden occupies a ten foot by thirty foot space on a three acre property that takes its name from the Meyer lemon trees grown in the vicinity. The Fairy Garden is sited in a sheltered space seen from the resort colonial style house designed in the 1930s by architects Wyeth & King, and near the guest house and swimming pool. It is visited often by school and scout groups, and is a special project for the owner and her grandchildren. Created in 2007, the original inspirations were miniature gardens found in Ireland and in books.

Since the climate is tropical the Fairy Garden is laid out on mosses under the shade of overhanging lady and areca palm trees and croton. Bonsai in the garden include ficus, mimosa, juniper, spruce, and boxwood. Other plants used include many succulents, purple shamrock, dracaena marginata, mondo grass, red shrimp plant, sedum stonecrop, dianthus, bacopa, antherium and polka dot plant.

Persons associated with the property include Harold Johnson (former owner, 1939); William Wallace (former owner, 1986-1996); Marion Sims Wyeth and Frederic Rhinelander King, Wyeth & King (architects, 1930s).

The Grass River Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Provenance:	McKeever, Rosie Hatch, Bambi Jupiter Island Garden Club Garden Club of the Halifax Country Late Bloomers Garden Club
Notes:	The folders include worksheets, site plans with aerial images, copies of correspondence, historical and other information. Once a part of a much larger property, this dramatic garden is comprised of 13.8 acres between the Intracoastal Waterway and the Atlantic Ocean on Jupiter Island. It is contiguous with another recently submitted garden, FL254000. Avenida derives its name from a long allée of Royal Palms probably planted in the 1930's. Remnants of the original allée remain on this and other neighboring properties. There is a long history of distinguished horticulture on this part of Jupiter Island. It is believed to have been the site of a late nineteenth century horticultural station for the State of Florida where plants were brought by traveling sea captains. Indeed, on the property are several aged trees that may well date back to this time: sausage trees (Kigelia africana) and cannonball trees (Couroupita guianensis). Throughout the property are, among other plants, large swathes of the current owners' collections of palms, bromeliads and gingers. The hammock area has been left untouched and remains a habitat of ironwood trees and other native plants. Several years ago there was a sighting of a Florida panther. The two long driveways pass through the extensive hammock area to the beachfront, also a part of this property. The current owners have added the water garden, vegetable garden, cutting gardens, landscaping along the driveways, stumpery and palm grove. Persons associated with the property include Joseph Jefferson (former owner, landscape architect, 1890-1900), Thomas A. and Mary B. Snider (former owners, 1900-1911), Charles B. and Edna Carey Jefferson (former owners, 1911-1914), Arthur B. and Ermina Proal (former owners, 1914-1923), Lucius W. and Ruth de Moss Robinson (1923-1955), Florence R. The Jupiter Island Garden Club, Late Bloomers Garden Club and Garden Club of the Halifax County facilitated the 2016 submission of this garden's documentation.

Notes: Avenida, avenue of the palms, was purchased from Joe Jefferson, who was an actor and a noted landscape architect. Mr. Jefferson probably designed Magnolia Gardens in Charleston and redesigned the experimental station, avenues and floral designs with the assistance of his neighbor and architect, Fred Schultz. In 1912, Lucius W. Robinson purchased the property and this once famous fishing camp in the 1890's became a permanent residence for Mr. Robinson. The existing trees and flowers were numerous and in 1914 the house was completed for Mr. Robinson and his family. Avenida became a popular stopover for houseboats. In the mid-1930's the beach house was built by the Ward Wickwires and the main house was no longer needed. The main house was sold to the Pryors whose interest in Jupiter Island influenced and guided the development of Jupiter Island Club into an outstanding resort. In 1936, Fred and Florence Gordon acquired the interest in Avenida and maintained it until 1954 when it was sold again.

FL254: Hobe Sound -- Gretchen W. and James L. Johnson Jupiter Island Estate Landscape Jungles, Raymond
architect:

Innocenti & Webel

Provenance: Jupiter Island Garden Club

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, personal narratives, and photocopies of landscape architect's plans.

The Jupiter Island Estate comprises 14.68 acres, incorporating four property lots and four houses integrated by a designed landscape made to look as though it occurred naturally. This property was put together in 2002 and the gardens have evolved, with trees sometimes brought down by storms and once by an explosion on the property. Although each building has distinct features such as trellised vines for shade on the studio building and a small vegetable and herb garden outside the guest cottage, the gardens are unified by fountains or other water features and the use of indigenous plants and coquina rockwork, with shades of red for most of the flowering plants. The predominate shape for planned garden areas suggests islands, with opened vistas the only obvious straight lines. The decomposing shapes of dead trees are prized and left in place to provide habitat for wildlife. Other casts off plant materials such as husks from palm trees are laid down on paths. The busy Intracoastal Waterway runs along one side of the property so a retaining wall was built for privacy and as protection against storms. Since the coastline of this property is rocky a private beach or sand pit was installed and there is an swimming pool with a modern beach house.

The plant selection for the tropical location includes bromeliads and bougainvillea in shades of red, blue agave, pink caladiums, jasmine, figus and a stand of live oaks near the main residence. The plantings outside the yellow house include yellow roses, canna lilies and yellow orchids in a banyan tree with touches of periwinkle blue in the plantings and blue shutters on the building. Other plants that recur throughout the property include native cactus, wild coffee plant, peanut grass, sea grape and native berries, iron wood trees and stumps and many palm varieties. There are mature banyan trees, pigeon plum, ficus and a gnarly pigeon palm. Poinsettias that were holiday gifts are planted in the ground each year. There is a border of citrus trees for fruit, and dramatic large leaf philodendron, palms and stands of bamboo for privacy around another residence building. Confederate and night blooming jasmine, gardenia and ginger add fragrance outside windows and doors.

Persons associated with the garden include Raymond Jungles, FASLA (landscape architect, beginning in 2002); Innocenti & Webel (landscape architects).

Jupiter Island Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

FL144: Hobe Sound -- Harbor Island

Landscape architect: Innocenti & Webel

Notes: Harbor Island is a barrier island created when Hobe Sound was dredged circa 1911-12 that was left undeveloped until the 1960's although there were plans to build a yacht club for the residents of Jupiter Island on the other side of the foot bridge. Limestone retaining seawalls were the only structural changes made in the early years of ownership. Initially a fragile landscape with native mangroves and palm by the 1960's the island was an eyesore with overgrown exotic invasives including Brazilian pepper and Australian pine. Permelia Reed, the principle owner of the Hobe Sound Company, initiated development by having a Japanese-style bridge built and hiring landscape architect Richard K. Webel. In 1967 the island was given to the Jupiter Island Garden Club who in 1968 stated their goal "To create a garden setting not only horticulturally beautiful but educational as well, preserving the native flora and augmenting this with related and more unusual plant material so that all who come can learn as well as enjoy". The island was cleared of undesirable plants, limestone and shell amalgam rock was brought over for walkways, the limestone sea wall was reinforced with mangrove stands, and 86,000 square feet of sub-tropical gardens were planted. However salt spray and damaging winds destroyed some plants that had been chosen and there was devastating destruction by Hurricane Frances in 2004. The replanted island includes several varieties of palm and mangrove, bromeliads, orchids, black olive, sea grape, asparagus fern, crinum lilies, and oyster plant. Wildlife that can be seen includes manatees, dolphins, sea turtles, pelicans, bald eagles, ospreys, egrets, herons, red shouldered hawks and barred owls.

Webel's contributions included a circle and fountain dedicated to garden club founder Lady Ramsay, a plan for a gazebo that was never built, and a rock pool. Members have donated ornaments and sculptures, memorial bricks, a pet memorial and benches, and use the garden island for all types of milestone celebrations as well as for quiet walks.

Persons associated with the garden include: William Moore Angas, member of the Indian River Association (former owners, 1904-1923); Olympia Improvement Corporation (former owners, 1923-c1927); Mary Duke Biddle (former owner, c1927-1933); Hobe Sound Company and members Joseph V. and Permelia Reed (former owners, 1933-1967); Jupiter Island Garden Club (owners, 1967-); Richard K. Webel (1900-2000), Innocenti & Webel (landscape architect, 1966); S.M.I. Landscape Architecture, Inc. (landscape architects, 2014).

Notes: The folder include worksheets.

Originally developed in 1937, the garden features native plants, particularly bromeliads, which grow profusely on the ground and up in the trees. Other plants include ferns, philodendron, brugmansia (Angel's trumpet) and palm trees. An attempt to grow roses on the Florida property was not successful. Formal elements of the otherwise native setting include wrought iron gates, an armillary sphere, and a fountain.

Persons associated with the garden include Mr. and Mrs. Van Alan Clark (owners beginning in 1948); Rood Landscape, Inc.

The Late Bloomers Garden Club facilitated this 2019 garden submission.

Very hot summers in a semi-tropical region have determined the plant selection for the garden located behind a Cape Cod style house on a ¾-acre city property. A tall privet hedge for privacy is layered with a low wall filled with various plants in pots and another low boxwood hedge. Citrus trees in large terra cotta pots and clipped boxwood in pots sit near the swimming pool. A shaded garden entered from the front through a white picket gate has jasmine covering an arbor and pots of begonias, leopard plant and ferns. In the herb garden there are both herbs and flowers including roses and clipped boxwood balls. Brick walkways and hardscape surround the pool, add a patterned surface to the herb garden, and the covered terrace has a brick floor and comfortable seating. A butterfly garden has been established along the driveway with pots of lantana, milkweed and pentas. A small enclosed space next to the carport is used as a plant hospital for propagation and the recovery of stressed plants.

The owner cites as a major influence the Italian-inspired garden designed by Ellen Biddle Shipman for the local Cummer Museum of Art & Gardens, about which she wrote and published a book. When they bought the property in 1992 there was a larger swimming pool that was partially closed in to make room for the gardens. Native tropical plants and vines grow lavishly within the more controlled privet and boxwood frames.

Persons associated with the garden include: Mr. and Mrs. William H. Clark (former owners, 1949-1977); Mr. and Mrs. John Murphree, Jr. (former owners, 1977-1992); Hartwig Landscaping Design (garden design and construction, 1996); Hartwig Revisions (garden design and construction, 1999); Sunscapes Landscape Design (consulting and garden design, 2004); Sunscapes Revisions (consulting and garden design, 2018).

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, site plans, and additional information.

Two vacant suburban parcels comprising three riverfront acres were assembled by the owners in the 1970s, and construction of the contemporary style residence and initial landscape planting were completed in 1978. Originally, the land was virtually devoid of trees or plants, whereas now lush and comprehensive landscaping reflects 37 years of careful and continuous design and planting. Today the property's landscape is best described as comprehensive and highly informal. Nearly half of the acreage consists of medium density woods at the north and south precincts of the property, comprising live oaks, magnolias and screening shrubbery such as viburnum, elaeagnus, holly, anise and ligustrum. The buildings and grounds are entirely screened from road view (west) by a continuous multi-layered tall hedge whose foreground planting includes azalea, sago palm and holly fern. The east lawn is generally open to the St. John's River. Inside the property, informally curving hedges of varying height define the boundaries of the woods, again using holly, eleagnus, viburnum, azalea and ligustrum, as well as aspidistra, pittosporum and podocarpus. A tennis court pavilion is arbored in jasmine, which also blankets the court fence. Certain walls of the residence are espaliered with jasmine and podocarpus, and ground cover in the oak-shaded areas includes lirioppe, juniper, mondo and jasmine. The more open areas are punctuated by specimen oaks, clusters of ilex, sago palm, Indian hawthorn, philodendron and flowering annuals.

The contemporary art collection extends from within the residence onto the grounds in the form of fourteen large outdoor sculptures. These vary in form and medium, but all are quite abstract and - most importantly - carefully integrated into the landscape. Nearly every sculpture occupies a curved, embracing niche giving its own partially enclosed space and creating a unique relationship between art and landscaping. Indeed, this integration of the sculpture collection with the planting is the most distinctive aspect of the gardens. The sculptors whose work has been installed are Arthur Gibbons, Tom Raye, Beverly Pepper, Charles O. Perry, Alexander Liberman, Amolldo Pomodoro, George Sherwood, Doris Leper, Ed Hallgeuik, and Kenneth Snelson.

Persons associated with the property include Admiral Gilchrist Stockton (former owner, 1935?-1972); Mrs. Margaret Stockton Blount (former owner, 1935?-1972); Wayne O. Manning, Jr. (landscape architect, 1970s).

The Late Bloomers Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Established in 1995, this garden was created when the owner's childhood home was joined with a neighboring property to create a single residence with a guesthouse on the merged 2 acres of land. Located in the historic Ortega District, the property is situated on the banks of the St. Johns River overlooking the cityscape of Jacksonville. The two homes of the integrated properties were joined into a contiguous structure with the addition of a linking loggia forming a breezeway between the two buildings. With the merging of the properties, a new terraced garden was established on the northeast side of the property. The riverside garden is separated from brackish tidal waters by a seawall which helps to protect the property from storm damage.

An armillary sphere sits as the centerpiece of the rose garden on the lower terrace. Perennial cutting beds flank circular bluestone steps which lead to a small lawn forming the upper terrace. A wisteria covered pergola on the porch of the guesthouse overlooks the terraced garden with views of the river and the Jacksonville cityscape beyond.

To the south east of the guesthouse a pair of stone terraces linked by brick paths lead to a garden house and a guitar shaped lawn. Garden seating and a wishing well serve as the focal points of the southern garden area.

Featuring a color pallet dominated by pinks, corals peaches and yellows, prominent plantings include Fortuniana roses, hydrangeas, and delphinium, as well as spring annuals such as snapdragons, cleome, pansies, and stock.

Persons associated with the property include: Mary Palmer Dargan of Dargan Landscape Architects (landscape architect, 1991-1995); and Jerry Crouch and Judy Drake of Sunscapes Landscape Designs (landscape architects, 1995).

The Late Bloomers Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Garden designer: Hansen, Barbara

Architect: Carl A. Vollmer & Earl J. Draeger

Provenance: Founders Garden Club of Sarasota

Notes: The file includes worksheets, copy of article, and other documentation.

Designed and built as a rental property on a barrier island in the mid-1960s, then converted to condominiums in 1976, the three-story horseshoe-shaped buildings had minimalist landscaping, just palm trees and St. Augustine grass. Later, one of the condominium owners with a long association with the Garden Club of America developed landscaping designs that were approved by the board of directors of the condominium association. The property is located between the Gulf of Mexico and a lagoon with differing exposures to wind, sunlight, salt spray and hurricanes within its 7.5 acres. The plant selections are tropical with low maintenance requirements and low water usage.

A deep sea-grape hedge next to the beach helps control flooding from storm surges and is heavily pruned twice each year to keep it from blocking views of the sea. Color was added to the original landscape as gardenias, hibiscus, oleander, geraniums, begonias, croton, birds of paradise and flowering trees including magnolias were planted. Individual owners of ground level condominiums have added patios with foundation plantings and the central carport has been spruced up with plantings between the pods. Beds under the palm trees at the entrance to the condominium, outside the office and recreation building, outside the maintenance building and marina along the lagoon, and along the walkways that lead to the swimming pool and the Gulf have added color with tropical ground covers and shrubs.

Persons associated with the garden include Arvida Corporation (land owners, 1965); Carl A. Vollmer and Earl J. Draeger (architects, 1966); Barbara Hansen (garden designer, 1980-).

The Founders Garden Club of Sarasota facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

The folders include worksheets, copies of correspondence, brochures, photocopies of articles and book chapters about the site, and other information.

Situated along Miami Bay, Vizcaya was the 1916-1925 winter home of industrialist James Deering. With overall supervision by Paul Chalfin, development of the site included a mansion designed by architect Francis Burrall Hoffman, Jr., and extensive gardens created by Colombian-born Diego Suarez. The gardens combined Italian Renaissance and French design elements and took seven years to complete. They were conceived as one vast outdoor room whose individual parts were integrated into a complementary whole. Garden features included many fountains, a central pool surrounding an elevated island, the elevated "Mound" with its small house or "Casino," statuary, and several themed gardens. Over the years hurricanes, humidity, and salt air took a toll on both the mansion and gardens, and much of the original property was sold for development. The site is now owned by Miami-Dade County, is open to the public, and continues to undergo extensive restoration. A recent garden addition is the David A. Klein Orchidarium to the north of the main house.

Persons associated with the property include: James Deering (former owner, 1916-1925); Paul Chalfin (designer); Francis Burrall Hoffman, Jr. (architect); and Diego Suarez (landscape designer).

 Myers, Mary Palmer
 Palmer, Franklin W. IV
 Landscaper: Marlin, Dennis
 Beatt, Grant
 Architect: Merlin, George W.
 Provenance: Founders Garden Club of Sarasota
 Notes: The folder includes a black and white photocopy of a photograph of the property from the 1960s, architectural drawing of the house, revised in 1998, and a surveying map of the property from 1997.

Located on the barrier Casey Key Island off the coast of Florida, the property covers 1.5 acres and stretches from the Little Sarasota Bay or bayou, to the Gulf of Mexico on the western side of Casey Key. The garden on the current property was created in 1997 when the 1940-50s bungalow was replaced with a house conforming to FEMA standards. With the first living floor raised to a height of 14 feet, terraces around the front and two walled levels at the rear were created diminished the height of the house. The new house included a circular driveway and a large border garden in the front planted with many Florida-friendly and native plant material including carissa, hibiscus, pittosporum, Indian Hawthorne and euphorbia. Red cedar trees (juniperus) and palms were planted alongside two old Ficus trees and sea grape lined the front of the property on both sides facing the road.

A Seaside Gulf Garden includes a butterfly garden, a bayou with surrounding red and black mangroves, and many different types of palm trees including Cabbage, Areca, and others. There are a few exotic species of plants on the property, such as the bird of paradise, Japanese Privet, and hibiscus shrub. The garden has a shell ground cover and no lawn.

Persons associated with the garden include: Mr. and Mrs. Herman Myers (former owners, 1955-1983); Mary Palmer Myers (former owner, 1983-1994); Franklin W. Palmer IV (former owner, 1994-1997); George W. Merlin (architect, 1997-2000); Dennis Marlin (landscaper); Grant Beatt (landscaper).

Founders Garden Club of Sarasota facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Located a few hundred yards from the Atlantic Ocean, this half-acre garden features a grid of 23 (once 24) spindle palms (Hyophorbe verschaffeltii) around a kidney-shaped swimming pool. The palms also form an allée along one of the garden walkways. Other garden highlights include Confederate jasmine (Trachelospermum jasminoides) espaliered on the walls and 'Green Island' ficus used as a low hedge around plantings.

Persons and firms associated with the property include William Morton (former owner, 1978-1988); Curtis Blake (former owner, 1988-1990); and Sanchez & Maddux (landscape architects, 1997 and 2007).

FL131: Ormond Beach -- Sea Oats

Landscape architect: Urbaniak, Ron

Provenance: Garden Club of the Halifax Country

Notes: The folder includes a work sheet and a site plan.

Sea Oats materialized out of a large oceanfront lot with natural and undisturbed flora, though much of the beach had been excavated for purposes of building a large condominium, which never occurred. The current owners bought the property in the early 1990s. They restored the native coastal environment, while adding some amenities such as a pool and cabana. The buildings were built in the the dunescape with the natural protection of a dense cover of native foliage. A hidden drive of crushed oyster shells lined by saw palmetto, bay, and oak trees leads to the house. Winding trails with yucca, sea grapes, carissas and other plants surround the house. Water use is meant to be minimal and restricted to occasional hand watering in cases of extreme drought. The University of Florida in Gainesville recognized the property with an environmental award.

Persons and firms associated with the garden include: Resolution Trust Corp. (former owners, ? - 1994); Ron Urbaniak (landscape architect, 1997); and Ken McKee (architect, 1997).

Notes: The folders include worksheets, brochures, booklets, maps, plant lists, copies of correspondence, and additional information about the history of the site, the gardens and the Palmer family.

This 30-acre site is a unique environmental, archaeological, and historic preserve on the shores of Little Sarasota Bay. It was inhabited by Native Americans for 5,000 years, then briefly by the Spanish, and then by pioneers in the mid-19th century. Between 1910 and 1918 it was the home of Mrs. Potter Palmer of Chicago, who developed the gardens between 1912 and 1918 (the property remained in the Palmer family until 1980 when the site was donated to the Gulf Coast Heritage Association, Inc.). The Palmer-era gardens are one focus of the property today, along with historic and environmental preservation. Mrs. Palmer made "Osprey Point" her winter retreat and a self-sufficient plantation, adding and restoring buildings, walkways, an aqueduct, gardens, and more with architectural features typical of her era. In addition, she bought hundreds of additional acres for farming and investment. She preserved the lovely natural setting of native trees and lush greenery, while adding exotic ornamentals, fruits, and vegetables so capably that new plantings have been basically unnecessary since.

Persons associated with the garden include: John and Elizabeth Webb (former owners, 1867-1911); Frank and Lizzie Webb Guptill (former owners, 1901-1911); Mrs. Potter Palmer (former owner, 1910-1918); the Palmer family (former owners, 1918-1980); Achille Duchêne (landscape designer, 1912-1918); William Prentiss (grounds supervisor, 1917); Rudy J. Favretti (landscape designer, 1990); Herschel Shepard (project restoration architect, late 1980s); Janet Snyder Matthews (project historian, late 1980s); Marion Almy (project archaeologist, late 1980s); John Maseman (conservator, late 1980s); and Nancy Lichtenstein (horticulturist and groundskeeper, 1997 to date).

Founders Garden Club of Sarasota facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Casa de Miel was built in Mediterranean Revival style in 1927 by architect John L. Volk, with revisions and new landscaping by the current owners. The two-thirds acre property includes a swimming pool and two pavilions, an orchid house, furnished loggia, guest house, formal patio and putting green which replaced the original tennis court. The design of the plantings and placement of outdoor furnishings and planted containers are mostly symmetrical. Two original wall fountains on the house now are used as containers for flowers. Container plantings are featured throughout the property to soften the predominant hardscape. Tall hedges have been grown for privacy and as shields against sea salt and winds. Sculptures also are featured, including one by Fernando Botero at the entry and another by Barry Flanagan set among palm trees. The plant selection is appropriate for the tropical climate, including palms, bougainvillea, hedges of confederate jasmine, ficus and podocarpus, agave, and tropical annuals.

Persons associated with the property include: Frank Craig (former owner 1927-1933); R. T. Rich (former owner, 1933-1955); Cornelius Walsh (former owner, 1955-1997); John L. Volk (1901-1984) (original architect, 1927); Jeffrey W. Smith (architect, 1998-2001); Mario Nievera (landscape architect, 1998-2001); Fernando Silva (gardener, 2001-present); Barry Flanagan (1941-2009) (sculptor); Fernando Botero (sculptor).

The tropical garden on this one and one-half acre property has a red-painted bridge, pagoda, door, bench swing and decorative pagoda-shaped lanterns, some of the features thought to have come from the Chinese garden of another Palm Beach property. In earlier times there were streams and waterfalls, now replaced with gray river rock. Coquina stone is used for the walkways throughout the garden which is entered through a decorative iron gate under an arch wrapped in confederate jasmine vine. Red bougainvillea covers one wall of the houses, and pink bougainvillea, pink tinged dracaena, and white pentas are color accents that complement the red theme of the garden. A coconut palm allée borders the decorative brickwork driveway; other varieties of palm planted in the garden include king sago, lady palm, fishtail, cataract, and Chinese fan palm. One black olive tree has been clipped into a topiary form and another hosts a staghorn fern. Other trees and shrubs in this structured garden include schefflera and viburnum hedges, bamboos, leea rubra, topiary Eugenia, cassia, and screw pine. Jasmine minima is used as a ground cover plant throughout the garden and giant mondo grass is the ground cover under the driveway palms.

The house was designed in 1938 by Palm Beach architect John L. Volk but no records exist from another designer for the garden, nor have any original plans been found. The property was larger, reduced to its current size circa 1990, and it is presumed that the original garden that was designed by Volk was reconfigured too.

Persons associated with the garden include C.D. Strout (former owner, 1938-1951); Peter A.B. Widener III (former owner, 1951-1952); Horace Dodge and Anna Thompson Dodge (former owners, 1956-1961); Mr. and Mrs. Homer Marshman (former owners, 1961-1977); Arthur D. and Tova Leidesdorf (former owners, 1977-1995); Mr. and Mrs. Howard Long (former owners, 1995-2000); John L. Volk (1901-1984) (architect, 1938).

Notes: This important Mediterranean Revival style house was designed in 1929 by the well know Palm Beach architects John Volk and Gustav Maass. It was built for Charles M. Hall (a successful inventor and businessman from Detroit) and his wife (Gracia Andrews Leath). The house was landmarked in 1988. The new owners were keenly interested in historic architecture and some of the important Palm Beach houses as it affords an opportunity to recreate the ambience of Mediterranean colonial heritage. When they acquired the property in 2011 the house was in disrepair. The architect Clem Schaub and the landscape architect Jorge Sanchez had helped with previous projects and were hired and undertook a two-year renovation. The garden was completely transformed. The entire property was surrounded by an original stucco wall which enhanced the cloistered effect. As is common in Palm Beach, the house was raised almost four feet above the street level. Consequently the garden needed to be terraced and in the process several different venues or "rooms" for entertaining were created within the space. The house features a columned loggia with its open terrace above, and so the first garden "room" one encounters is a large, flat, sunny area divided by a cruciform patterned walkway. Four parterre beds edged by Podocarpus are filled with colorful Pentas. A wall of Podocarpus arches (grown for two years in a nursery before being installed) separate this upper terrace from the pool area to the south and the lower street level to the east. The eye naturally follows the axis of the walkway to an arched gateway original to the house. The back of a stone shell in the middle of the walk is part of a fountain and pond accessed from the lower level. At the center of another "room" is a walled rose garden. The grove of royal palms standing sentinel in this area were moved from other parts of the property during the renovation. To the south, steps lead up to the pool garden and a tropical "room." A terrace at the end of the garden is tented for entertaining. A patio off the dining room is dominated by a large 19th century French fountain where a Gumbo Limbo tree was relocated. All of the iron work including light fixtures were made to the owner's specifications. The design also features antique fountains and various clay pots.

Persons associated with the garden include: Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hall (later Mrs. Alfred Jansik) (former owner, 1929-1942); Edmond Goodman and Robert Shepard family (former owner, 1943-1979); Mr. and Mrs Alex Stamatakis (former owner, 1979-1993); Merrilyn Bardes (former owner, 1993-1998); Mr. and Mrs. Jeffery Prosser (former owner, 1999-2011); John Volk (architect, 1929); Gustav Maass (architect, 1929); Clemens Schaub (architect, 2012-2014); Jorge Sanchez, SMI (landscape architect, 2012-2014); Brian Vertesch, SMI (landscape architect, 2012-2014).

Notes: The Garden Club of of Palm Beach facilitated this garden submission in 2023.

In 1996 the owner bought a rectangular 8/10-acre parcel from a larger estate comprised of sand and two mature banyan trees. The plan was to create a Tuscan-style retreat with a large, central water feature. Instead there are two pools: one a lap pool/reflecting pool with a wall fountain and decorative coping and the other contains a fountain with caryatids as the base. The caryatids were copied from an original piece in the owner's collection of sculptures, antiques and seating that are placed in formal garden rooms that surround the pools. Trimmed potocarpus and ficus form hedges around the rooms; in one spot potocarpus is arched over an entry. An impressively-sized arch was cut out of two pleached buttonwood. Trees include strangler fig, shaving brush, holly and Norfolk pine with date, coconut, Cuban royal and areca palms. Jasmine and bougainvillea vines accent house and garage doorways. Understory plants include hibiscus, petunia, blueberry, gardenia and begonia with zoysia grass. Plans for a main house were scrapped in favor of several smaller buildings since the property is used as a retreat. Outside the main residence there is a pergola with painted bamboo, bougainvillea, hibiscus, viburnum, queen's wreath vine, and tea and date palm trees.

Persons associated with the garden's design: Mario Nievera, landscape architect (1996); Jobe Lopez, garden manager (1996-).

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, articles, and other materials.

The Dayton garden is a series of open air rooms, each with a different theme. The classical English garden theme has a variety of different features such as a palm allée blanketed in zoysia grass, a classical folly, formal rose garden, a secret garden, and an extensive ficus hedge. The allée originally was planted with elaborately pruned ficus trees whose foliage was trained into a spiraling serpentine shape; these were later replaced with palms. A garden house provides a space for entertaining and houses a variety of ferns and orchids. The rose garden at the front of the property features continuously blooming hybrid roses which were grafted to hardier Fortuniana rootstock for longevity and serpentine brick pathways create a large-scale reproduction of a Byzantine mosaic pattern which provides a unique structure to the formal rose garden. The decorative mosaic theme is repeated in the ornately tiled swimming pool, whose floor is designed in the fashion of an Oriental rug.

Persons associated with the garden include: Colefax & Fowler (landscape architect); and Henry Melich (architect, landscape architect).

Architect: Mizner, Addison Creator: Dillman, Hugh Owner: Dillman, Hugh, Mrs.
Notes: Farther north along the Ocean, is an immense house, designed by Addison Mizner, which now belongs to Mrs. Hugh Dillman. For Mrs. Dillman, Mr. Mizner aded the beautiful cloister shown in this picture. Below the great windows on the east, the waves roll in to break on the beach immediatly below the cloister. None of us will forget the cloister's "dedication" when, on a night of full moon, an enchanting Hungarian orchestra played for us here with only the moon an a few medieval candles for light while below us stretched a silver sea.

FL001: Palm Beach -- El Mirasol

Architect: Mizner, Addison

Former owner: Stotesbury, Eva Roberts Cromwell
Stotesbury, Edward Townsend, 1849-1938

Notes: The folder includes correspondence and articles.

"About 1917, Mrs. E. T. Stotesbury of Philadelphia tired of the old-fashioned shingle cottages and yellow frame hotels, and called upon Addison Mizner to build for her a suitable home. Addison Mizner had impeccable taste and a genius for creating beauty, and he built for Mrs. Stotesbury the first of the great villas which now line the shores of Palm Beach island. The patio of this house is more Italian than Spanish feeling. The house was designed primarily for entertaining and has a large loggia in which a hundred or more guests can be seated for lunch or dinner. Inside the house there is a large dining room and reception rooms. Beyond the house a lawn runs to the Ocean."

"Turning to look westward toward Lake Worth, we see the patio from the house. Notice the tall, columnar cypresses used at each corner of the fountain. They create an illusion of far away Italy. there are always many pots of flowering plants adding color to the patio. In the far distance can be seen the guest house on Lake Worth."

"The property runs from ocean to lake. The house is Spanish style and patio is Italianate."

Persons associated with the property include: Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Stotesbury (former owner in 1930's); Addison Mizner (architect in 1920's).

There are some duplicate 35-mm. slides from the Mattie Edwards Hewitt Collection.

The Stotesbury's also owned Whitemarsh Hall in Chestnut Hill, Pennsylvania.

FL168: Palm Beach -- Foster Garden

Former owner: Thorndike, Elizabeth

Foster, Giraud Van Nest

Provenance: Garden Club of Palm Beach

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, site plans, and additional information.

This small garden on less than one-quarter acre has been under development since 1981. Previously the site had been planted primarily in tropicals. The current English/French inspired design divides the space into outdoor rooms, all beautifully manicured with boxwood hedges, flower borders, and a variety of small palm trees. Sculpture, planters, and fountains accent the garden spaces, which include a rose garden, a cutting garden, a "jungle path," and a half-moon-shaped garden at the front of the property. Despite its comparatively small dimensions, this garden provides a wealth of personality, charm, and diverse plant material.

Persons associated with the property include Elizabeth Thorndike (former owner, 1966-1970) and Giraud Van Nest Foster (former owner, 1970-1980).

The Garden Club of Palm Beach facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

The Garden Club of Palm Beach facilitated the submission of this 2022 garden documentation.

The Heidi M. Green and Michael Kluger Garden is located in Poinciana Park, a historic housing development in Palm Beach, Florida. Established in 2013, the 54 acre property offers a monochromatic garden in the Mediterranean style reminiscent of Heidi M. Green's childhood summers spent in the south of France. Green chose landscape architect Fernando Wong, and his associate Tim Johnson, for the project. In 2018, the garden was awarded the Leslie Smith Award for Garden Design by the Preservation Foundation of Palm Beach.

The garden plan is linear and the sight-lines are carefully directed by two parallel corridors running east west which border the pool house. These are connected by a long allée defined by the slender trunks of Hurricane Palms and punctuated at each end by an obelisk framed by Foxtail Palms. Large terracotta jars at the ends of the corridors and a primitive stone trough add to the rustic ambiance. It is a garden of simple forms and the many shades of green are occasionally interrupted by the gray foliage of Silver Buttonwoods and Cardoons. The exceptions to this monochromatic motif are the lavender (Lavandula angustifolia) and several walls of Confederate Jasmine which are allowed to bloom in the spring filling the air with their fragrance.

The Mediterranean Revival Style house, featuring a red tiled roof and stucco exterior, was constructed in 1928 by a local contractor, E.B. Walton. The property doubled in size in the 1990's when a previous owner purchased an adjacent house which, when modified, became the pool house (its driveway becoming part of the current allée). The main house was also reconfigured at that time by architect Jacqueline Albarran.

Persons associated with the garden design include: Jacqueline Albarran (architect, 2013), Fernando Wong (landscape designer, 2013), Tim Johnson (associate of Fernando Wong, 2013) and Mario Nievera (landscape architect, 2000-2012).

Notes: The folder includes worksheets.

The property is just less than one acre, with a landmarked Mediterranean Revival house designed by Palm Beach architect John Volk (b.1901- d.1984) and built on a man-made hill following a devastating hurricane in the area in 1928. Due to the siting of the house on that hill there is a 15-foot drop between the house and garden. The current owner had the gardens redesigned in 1998, which included significant changes to the hardscape: the main patio and loggia were extended with new retaining walls built, the tennis court was demolished, the swimming pool was relocated and a new lower patio was installed. A fountain that was in the original plans for the site was built on the upper patio, with tiles copied after originals in the house. New plantings also suffered from hurricane damage in 2004 and 2005, with seven coconut palms uprooted and dropped into the swimming pool. Since then the garden has been replanted and features many tropical plants including abundant bougainvillea glabra, bromeliads, jasmine, palms, hibiscus, crotons, and staghorn ferns mounted in gumbo and rain trees.

Garden has been the site of numerous charitable events and has been featured on the 2007 and 2014 Garden Club of Palm Beach's Annual Garden Tour.

Persons associated with the garden include: Mr. and Mrs. Harry Thomas (former owners, 1929-1965); Mr. and Mrs. Harry Loy Anderson, Jr. (former owners, 1965-1985); Mr. and Mrs. R. Miller (former owners, 1985-1993); Mr. and Mrs. Michael Fawcetts (former owners, 1995-1997); John Volk (1901-1984) (architect, 1929); Nievera Williams Design (landscape architects, 1998); Joel Crippen (horticulturalist, 2000); Patrick Bilton (horticulturalist, 2001).

Also known as Reynolds Garden.

The gardens of La Salona surround a Mediterranean Revival House built in 1926 as a vacation home for the Reynolds family by architect Marion Sims Wyeth. Several years after the house was constructed, Maurice Fatio designed the enclosed patio and pool for privacy.

The current owners purchased the property in 1989, with the last major reconstruction in 2015 by Rafael Saladrigas. Jorge Sanchez and his firm maintain the landscaping needs at La Salona, such as reinstalling the sheltered garden and fountains with exotic plants and potted annuals. The east lawn faces the ocean and consequently the plant selection includes salt hardy varieties and coconut palms. The property became a historic landmark in 1990.

Persons associated with the garden include: Mr. and Mrs. Wiley R. Reynolds (former owners, 1926 – 1963); Palm Beach County Crippled Children's Society (former owners, 1963 - 1964); William M. Allison (former owners, 1964 – 1967); Live Oak Realty Corporation (former owner, 1978 – 1986); Marion Sims Wyeth (architect, 1926); Maurice Fatio (architect, 1929); Jorge Sanchez (landscape designer, 2016); Raphael Saladrigas (architect, 2015).

This property is featured in Southern Accents, January 1995, "Spanish House Reminiscent of Old Sevilla," in Arts & Decoration by Mary Fanton Roberts, and the 4th edition of Landmark Architecture of Palm Beach by Barbara Hoffstot.

Situated on five acres, one of the largest lots in Palm Beach, this garden was designed by landscape architect Richard K. Webel in 1965-1966. The property has been under the same ownership since that time. From the house looking east is a lovely peaceful setting. Two Banyan trees lead the eye to the pool area and the lawn beyond. There is a hidden koi pond and shade house on the north side and a hidden caretaker's house on the south side. The terrace on the west side of the house is shaded by Banyan trees and overlooks Lake Worth. Behind a hedge on the south side is a lovely rose garden.

Persons associated with the property include Richard K. Webel (landscape architect, 1965-1966).

Notes: The folder includes worksheets.

The 3.65 acre property includes a substantial mangrove area that has been protected from development under the Palm Beach Comprehensive Plan adopted in 1979 when a much larger property was subdivided. The contemporary house is styled after an Italian country villa and was sited to maximize open areas for landscaping. Mature specimen trees were relocated around the property, other mature trees were brought in, and the driveway was placed to accommodate existing banyan and ficus trees; the driveway winds through an allée of bamboo under planted with philodendron. Diamond zoysia grass used throughout the landscaped areas looks like a carpet between island beds of individual specimen trees and beds planted with tropical perennials, shrubs, and palms. There is a classically styled dining pavilion, an infinity swimming pool and dock facing Lake Worth, and a bridge and walkway into the mangroves.

Trees on the property include citrus, banana, bottlebrush, gum palm (a cycad), kapok, Buddhist pine, slash pines and Southern Live oak.

Persons associated with the garden include George Wells Potter (former owner, circa 1875-1890); Charles W. Bingham and heirs (former owners, circa 1890-1979); Michael Burrows (former owner, 1979-1986); Blossom family (former owners, 1987-2004); Reed Krakoff (former owner, 2004-2009); Clifford Shaw (surveyor of mangrove area, 1973); Daniel Kahan (architect, 2011-2013); Jorge A. Sánchez (landscape architect, 2011-); Brian S. Vertesch (landscape architect, 2011-)

FL088: Palm Beach -- Pan's Garden

Former owner: Corwin family
Masson family

Architect: Divoll, Leslie

Horticulturist: Stormer, Eric

Gardens coordinator: Duling, Darrin

Landscape architect: Sanchez & Maddux

Provenance: Garden Club of Palm Beach

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet with a landscape plan sketch and a brochure about the garden. The garden is noted for its focus on Florida's native plants and for its siting in the midst of an urban environment.

This six-tenth of an acre site in Palm Beach is devoted to Florida native plants and includes both upland and wetland habitats. The garden takes its name from a statue of Pan of Rohallion, designed by Frederick William MacMonnies, 1863-1937 in 1890, which graces the entrance pool. Another feature is the Casa Apava tile wall, rescued from an estate on South Ocean Boulevard. The garden's plantings of more than one-half acre include more than 300 species of native plants, many of which are endangered. Cultivars of native species are planted in seasonal displays as a means of highlighting choices for home gardening. Featured plants include a 100-year-old live oak, orchids, bromeliads, and a host of ever-blooming species.

Persons and firms associated with the property include: the Corwin family (former owners, ca. 1920s-1930s); the Masson family (former owners, ca. 1940s-1992); Sanchez & Maddux (landscape architects, 1992 to date); Leslie Divoll (architect, 1992 to date); Eric Stormer (horticulturist, 1994-1997); and Darrin Duling (garden coordinator, 1998 to date).

The Garden Club of Palm Beach facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Woodhouse, Lorenzo E. Mrs.
Mason, Paul A., Mrs.
Hammer, Cathleen
Clark, James H.

Landscape architect: Wheelock, Morgan

Architect: Nievera, Mario
Wyeth, Marion Sims
Marton, Harold H.

Provenance: Garden Club of Palm Beach

Notes: The folders includes worksheets.

The gardens at Quinta Marina have been edited by the current owners, so fewer bright colors and dense clusters of plants compete with the landmarked architecture of the house, in the Spanish Baroque style with Moorish influence. There are stately palms and a mature banyan tree, a sea grape and a dracaena marginata at precarious angles blown over by storms, smaller palm varieties and bromeliads planted in containers and lush green lawns within the five-foot tall stucco walls that surround the approximately three-quarter acre property. The understory is comprised of many varieties of tropical plants, including crotons, begonias, white birds-of-paradise, and ginger. Varieties of ficus cover walls and are used to edge beds. Several orchids and bromeliads have been mounted on the trunks of mature trees, some of which are draped with Spanish moss. A tiled wall fountain feeds into a lily pond and long reflecting pool inspired by a rill in an Alhambra garden in Granada, Spain. A pair of large bright blue pots frames the view of this fountain but the owner changed other pots to terra cotta so they would not compete with the architecture. There is another tiled fountain in the coquina stone courtyard and a terra cotta wall fountain near the swimming pool.

Quinta Marina was designed in 1924 by Harold H. Martin (1879-1952) and was the only house in Palm Beach designed by the California architect. A decade later Palm Beach architect Marion Sims Wyeth (1889-1982) changed windows. The house was given landmark status in 1991.

Persons associated with the garden include: Mr. and Mrs. Lorenzo Woodhouse (former owners, 1924-circa 1960); Mrs. Paul A. Mason (former owner, 1963-1991); G.A. Seelbinder and Cathleen Hammer (former owners, 1992-1997); James H. Clark (former owner, 1998-2003); Harold H. Martin (1879-1952) (architect, 1924); Marion Sims Wyeth (1889-1982) (architect, 1934); Mario Nievera (landscape architect, 1997-2000, 2004); Morgan Wheelock (landscape architect, 2012-2013).

The Garden Club of Palm Beach facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Notes: Just to prove that all of the architecture is not Spanish or Italian, it is made of logs. We show you this picture of Mr. Hugh Dillman's Sandy Loam Farm where he raises prize amaryllis, tuberose and other flowers by the acre. Some years Mr. and Mrs. Dillman lived here at Sandy Loam Farm instead of opening their ocean front house. For more information on the ocean front property, see FL 002.

Horticulturist: Mullan, Janna

Provenance: Garden Club of Palm Beach
 Notes: The folder includes worksheets.
 The garden at Villa Filipponi is a tapestry of tropical trees, shrubs, ground cover plants, cacti and succulents with orchids mounted on tree trunks and planted in containers. The main garden has a large center lawn surrounded by borders containing fruit and ornamental trees, many varieties of palm trees, succulents and cacti grown in containers, and tropical perennials as the understory. A shaded brick path leads around the garden and to the house and outbuildings which include an orchid house. The garden is located several blocks from the ocean which protects it from winds and salt spray but hurricanes, especially Wilma in 2005, have been destructive and the garden has had to be reconstructed. The variety of shrubs, tropical perennials, trees, bromeliads and cacti and succulents planted by the owner and her horticulturalist is extensive.
 The Mediterranean Revival style house was designed by Palm Beach architect Marion Syms Wyeth in 1925 and designated a Palm Beach landmark in 2001. The original lots were one-quarter acre but a previous owner bought the adjacent property and demolished that house, providing the site for the main garden.
 Persons associated with the garden include: Count and Countess Carlo Filipponi (former owners, 1925-); Mrs. Granville Morse (former owner); Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McKnight (former owners, 1988-1997); Marion Sims Wyeth (architect, 1925); Smith Architectural Group, Inc. (architects, 1990); Mario Niveria (ASLA) (landscape architect, 1998); Janna Mullan (horticulturist, 2013-).
 The Garden Club of Palm Beach facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

FL094: Palm Beach -- Villa Leoncini

Architect: Major, Howard

Former owner: Odman, Nelson Mr. Mrs.

Wright, Richard Dr.

Notes: The folder includes a garden plan, description, and worksheet, as well as information about the house's architect. The garden is noted for its rare tropical plants and unusual and beautiful palms.

The "Villa Leoncini" (formerly "Torre Bianca") garden surrounds a classic example of Tuscan Italian Renaissance domestic architecture, built in 1926-27. The present garden, which dates from the 1990s, is noted for its tropical plants, some of which are quite rare, and a number of unusual and beautiful palms. Tropical plants featured include heliconias, anthuriums, costus, bromeliads, and orchids. Specific garden areas include a fern and rock garden, the entrance garden, the upper tropical garden, and gardens surrounding a swimming pool and a fish pond.

Persons associated with the property include: Howard Major (architect); Mr. and Mrs. Nelson S. Odman (former owners); and Dr. Richard Wright (former owner).

When the current owners purchased this one-acre ocean front property in 1967 there was a 1950s beach style house that stretched horizontally from lot line to lot line, and very little sand dune between the property and the beach. After significant damage in the 1980s that house was torn down and replaced with a Spanish revival style house influenced by the early 20th century Florida architect Addison Mizner. Plantings were installed around a pool and pergola built in the 1990s but the owners wanted a more cohesive design for their property. They chose the meadow inspired, naturalized garden style of Wolfgang Oehme. An island bed between the street and house and encircled by the driveway was planted with swathes of agapanthus, canna, and anise and buckeye shrubs under Live oak trees. Another garden with perennials, shrubs and trees was installed between the driveway and the side of the property, with lawn surrounding the pool terrace and patio behind the house, up to the sea wall at the edge of the dunes which had increased over the years. However many of the first plantings proved to be unsuccessful due to poor drainage, soil conditions and a micro-climate that included harsh ocean-side winds. After further analysis of the soil and improved drainage for their location new plantings were required.

Tropical plants including sago and lady palms, shrimp plant, ginger, ferns, weeping yaupon hollies, and azaleas and camellias in shadier areas are thriving now. The native vegetation in the dune, sea oats and prostrate beach sunflowers, is spreading. Some of the cultivated garden has reverted to scrub. Five citrus trees were planted in full sun near the sea wall: two oranges, a grapefruit and two limes.

Persons associated with the garden include Mr. and Mrs. Bob Maytag (former owners); Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Hicks (former owners, - 1967); Stanley Gordon (architect, 1988); Gary R. Provenance: Founders Garden Club of Sarasota

Notes: 1 folder and 36 digital images. The folder includes worksheets and historic information about land development in the Florida Keys.

The Italianate Revival house built in 1937 has been expanded by the current owners who are descended from the original owners, on a property of approximately one acre. Many specimen plants that were collected between 1950 and 1990 have been retained and rearranged to accommodate expansions to the house. With new plantings added the gardens emphasize the colors, specimen variety and textures in subtropical trees, shrubs, vines and flowering plants. There are eleven different varieties of palms, including the mature royal palms that tower over the street front of the property, and shorter pygmy date palms used as foundation plants under balconies. Bromeliads grow in enormous urns on either side of the original front door. Flowering vines that add color year round include Mexican flame vine, bougainvillea, stephanotis, Confederate jasmine and angel's trumpet.

Dense growth for a jungle-like effect is encouraged and minimizes water usage.

The property was purchased from the John Ringling Estates, and references to the involvement of family members in the circus and carnivals is found in garden features. A mobile sculpture "Circus" by Frederick Prescott is sited outside the dining room window. A mosaic on the wall of one of the additions depicts Ringling Brothers clown Emmet Kelly and family member, plant collector, puppeteer and previous owner Marion McKennon. Her husband Joseph McKennon initiated the grassroots campaign Save Our Bays to prevent dredging to create more building sites in the Florida Keys. A park and bird sanctuary was established on some of the new ground rather than housing. In 1991 this property was designated a historic landmark by the City of Sarasota.

Persons associated with the garden include John Ringling and Owen Burns of John Ringling Estates (former owners 1917-1927); Mr. and Mrs. Charles Leigh (former owners, 1927-1969); Mr. and Mrs. Joseph McKennon (former owners, 1969-2002); Dwayne Henderson (former owner, 2002-2003); Paul Bergman (builder, 1936-1937); Wm. Provenance: Founders Garden Club of Sarasota

Notes: The folder includes worksheets and historical information.

The subtropical gardens were designed to provide splashes of color with low maintenance and minimal water usage. The Mediterranean revival style house was built circa 1925-27 on 16 acres. It was a private home that sold in 1957 at a below market price provided that the purchasers formed a private club and did not tear down the David Adler mansion or subdivide the grounds. The original main entrance was a long straight driveway under an allée of calamondin orange trees intended to perfume the air in winter when the owners were in residence. Another private entrance at the end of a winding drive, shaded by royal palms and West Indies mahogany trees, was turned into the club's main entrance. Historic Live Oak trees, Hong Kong orchid, jacaranda, royal Poinciana, mango, slash pine and various palms are found around the mansion and throughout the property. Four flower beds around the central fountain in the courtyard contain foxtail palms, bromeliads and various succulents. Wax begonias are featured in containers and combined with juniper in a large bed that surrounds an antique urn. Two enormous staghorn ferns hang on a bottlebrush tree. Black mangrove hedges, pruned with permission, line the banks of the lagoon with an island of unclipped mangroves and flowering trees.

Although there have been additions to the mansion, including dining rooms and a commercial kitchen, and the interior has been completely redesigned, The Field Club was listed on the National Register of Historic Places on June 5, 1986.

Persons associated with the garden include: Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Field (former owners, 1924-1957); David Adler (architect, circa 1925); and Irene Page (landscape designer, 2003-).

 Completed in 2020, this Eastern-inspired garden in St. Armands Key includes various elements indicative of an ancient Persian garden, including a pavilion, water features, and mosaics depicting Islamic Mughal motifs. The design of this 8,731 square foot property is formal and symmetrical. Its name derives from a 1258 poem written by Persian poet, Sa'di. The garden took more than three years to complete, with most of the work being preparatory; the soil had to be replaced, the engineering, plumbing, and electrical work for the garden and central fountain all had to be implemented before they could add the plants, pathways, benches, and medallions. All materials used to create the garden, pavilion, and tile mosaics were sourced in Florida.

The owner has been a docent at the Freer Gallery of the Smithsonian Institution for 30 years, and has remained a scholar of eastern art, architecture, and literature, especially that of the Persian Mughal Empire. In 2009, she purchased a historically designated Mediterranean revival winter home on St. Armands Key and in 2012 purchased the lot next door. Though she had not originally envisioned putting a garden in the space, the idea grew when she met the landscape architect Mario Nievera at a Founders Garden Club of Sarasota Flower Talk in 2016. Her ideal garden was one tailored to the size of the lot, climate and soil conditions of the area of Florida. The owner and Nierva assembled a team including Matt Jackson, the Perez Brothers who created the pavilion, Joyce Hart, an interior designer, Dan Droney, the designer and fabricator of hand-made tiles, and Pat Hebda of Treasure Cove in Sarasota who provided custom architectural elements for the pavilion. The garden owner's daughter contributed by researching details about ancient Persian Gardens.

Surrounding the property is a high, cream-colored, concrete wall with an ornate iron gate marking the entrance. The main focal point of the garden is a 1,000 sq. foot cream-colored limestone pavilion of Persian Mughal-style architecture with a ceiling-high mosaic patterned with Islamic Mughal motifs. This building features three triangular archways facing the front and two archways on either side, with eight columns supporting the structure. The pavilion also operates as a one-bedroom apartment that faces the rear of the property, which was mandated by the city to meet their building code. In front of the pavilion is a central courtyard with a fountain in the center. The design of the fountain is a star lined with blue, yellow, and white tiles, within a quatrefoil of various solid green and patterned tiles. Marble pathways with narrow strips of confederate jasmine in their center lead from the fountain to two elaborate tile medallions on either side of the fountain. The east medallion features a five-clawed Chinese Imperial Dragon on a yellow background, while the west medallion depicts on a blue background, a Simurgh, or mythical bird from Persian mythology. Each medallion is surrounded by a ring of confederate jasmine and a long marble bench on one side. A short marble pathway directly in front of the central fountain leads to a tile Persian rug crafted from handmade red, blue, orange, green, and white, tiles with star and floral patterns.

All plants were carefully considered in terms of their size, color, their perfume, appropriateness to the location, balance and symmetry in the space. The property features three varieties of palm trees, as well as Geiger trees, cypress, citrus, bamboo, and pomegranate. Two vivid colors of Granada roses were used, along with apricot drift, coral drift, and new dawn.

Persons associated with the garden include: John Ringling and Owen Burns t/a John Ringling Estates (former owners, 1917 – 1948); Arthur Vining Davis t/a Arvida Corp. (former owner, 1948 – 1976); Kathryn N. Mason (former owner, 1976 – 1992); Joergen Notes: Harkavy House, designed and built in the 1950's as a vacation home, opened the interiors to the subtropical climate of Florida in the days before air-conditioning. Modernist architect Paul Rudolph designed movable walls: floor-to-ceiling sliding wooden and glass panels that opened to catch breezes; and wood lattice screens around the exterior for privacy and shade. The two-bedroom, one-bath house was expanded between 2006 and 2011, adding a two-story addition containing a master bedroom and more bathrooms, and converting a carport to a garage. Original minimalist landscaping of the small property included raked shell groundcover and indigenous plants that would not require extra water or fertilizer and have little environmental impact. Current landscaping includes orange bougainvillea vine, birds of paradise, several bromeliad cultivars, and a wall painted orange, the accent color for the all-white house. A row of tall royal palms, a bridal veil tree, bromeliads, dwarf podocarpus, and cardboard plants fill beds in front of the house set in the raked shell groundcover. Pandora vine grows on a pergola over the front door. Traveler's, Chinese and areca palms and yellow bamboo screen the rear and side property lines and the swimming pool, and there is a sea grape hedge in back.

Notes:	Umbrella House is known for its architecture, melding the International Style and Frank Lloyd Wright's Usonian principles to produce a midcentury modern icon for a subtropical location. Architect Paul M. Rudolph was commissioned circa 1950 to build an affordable yet cutting edge residence that would promote a new housing development in Sarasota, Florida, on a small property lot. The style of this house and others came to be known as the Sarasota School of Architecture. The house was geometric and compact with a higher, secondary slatted roof that shaded the property and boosted air circulation. Landscaping was sparse, a single monkeypod tree and crushed native shell instead of grass that could withstand the climate, but the tomato crate wooden slats used for the iconic secondary "umbrella" roof were destroyed in 1966 by Hurricane Alma. Several successive owners worked with preservation architect Greg Hall to restore the "umbrella" using aluminum and treated wood that conforms to current building codes and can withstand winds of 150 mph. Landscaping was refreshed by removing overgrowth, replacing paved walkways and the swimming pool deck, and adding a new cement and stucco privacy wall along a busy parkway, low enough so the distinctive roof can be seen by passing traffic. Areca palms form privacy screens on each side of the swimming pool, and facing benches are nearly encased in dwarf conifers. Royal Poinciana, Walter's viburnum, bromeliads, shrubby cardboard palms, ornamental grasses, dwarf podocarpus and a staghorn fern can be found in the minimalist landscape. In addition to the swimming pool there is a water feature pond with water jets and a gazebo comprised of a solid roof attached to the aluminum poles that hold up the umbrella roof. Philip Hiss (former owner, 1950-); Sommers family (former owners, 1955-); Ross and Rachel Von Tilborg (former owners, 1969-); Gary and Carol Stoller (former owners, 1997-); Vince and Julie Ciulla (former owners, 2005-); Paul Marvin Rudolph (1918-1997) (architect, 1953-1954); Greg Hall (preservation architect, 1997-2018); Richard Anderson (landscape designer, 2014-). 1 folder and 16 digital images. Notes: The Founders Garden Club of Sarasota facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation in 2023.

Ventana related holdings consist of 1 folder and 35 digital images.

The current owners purchased the 1.7 acres property in 1985, spent three years installing their desired hardscape, and then tackled the overgrown landscape. Ventana is at the southern end of a tract subdivided in 1891 after the indigenous Seminoles were relocated by the government in 1858. Archeological work has determined the elevated ridge of the tract was a Seminole midden or refuse pile. This property borders Sarasota Bay with a partial 18-foot elevation and has Live oak and various palms screening their gardens and buildings from passing boat traffic on one side and the public road on the other. In addition to the main house, swimming pool and pool house, guest cottage, garage with a guest suite on the second floor, and orchid house, there is a landscaper's cottage. The subtropical climate dictates the planting scheme that includes thirteen palm varieties with red geraniums or white impatiens used as wide border edgings. Edging annuals are replanted once a year while other annuals are mixed with perennials, palms and shrubs in the beds. Other plants include gingers, orchids, bromeliads, African iris, Australian tree fern, philodendron, and several varieties of dracaena. A centuries-old Live oak grows near the house and a gnarled cedar serves as a perch for eagles and ospreys hunting prey in the bay. The garage doors are outlined by jasmine, and metal sculptures and chairs are placed throughout the garden.

Landscape architect: Angell, Thomas

Gardener: Ransom, Kim

Sculptor: Smith, Dennis

Provenance: Junior Ladies Garden Club

Notes: The folder includes worksheets and photocopies of an article and a garden tour description.

Originally an older home and clay tennis court, the half-acre Frierson Garden was established in 2006 when the owners added the adjoining lot to their property and installed a formal Italian-style garden with the assistance of landscape architect Thomas Angell (ASLA). The Italian Renaissance-style of this garden is evident from the street, with clipped holly hedges lining the crushed gravel and brick walkways to a centrally placed planted urn in the area known as the espy, or viewing area looking out to the garden. Next the water feature is comprised of a circular fountain with a runnel edged in flower beds, ending in a diamond shaped reservoir. The symmetry of this garden is evident in two rows of raised planting boxes on either side of the water feature that are used for seasonal flowers and vegetables. Rockwork steps lead to a lawn of zoysia grass with more steps down to a veranda for outdoor entertaining. Italian cypress trees evoke the Mediterranean influence of this garden's design.

Next to the house on the original property there is a formal herb garden entered through white picket fences with a grass walkway between two beds planted with boxwood, pansies, violets and pittosporum as well as herbs. Twelve varieties of roses are planted along another picket fence along the edge of a zoysia grass lawn known as the 'green beach' and used the grandchildren to play football. Sculptures are placed around the entire garden, including one of a child playing tennis by Dennis Smith. Container-planted ferns, roses, a grapefruit tree and a pine tree and espaliered apple and pear trees are other features of this garden.

The Frierson Garden has been open for the Piedmont Gardeners Annual Garden Tour and has been featured in a garden tour benefitting the Athens Children's Choir.

Persons associated with the garden include Thomas Angell, ASLA (landscape architect, 2005-2007); Kim Ransom (gardener, 2007-present); Dennis Smith (sculptor).

The Junior Ladies Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

 Notes: Materials relating to the private gardens located in Athens, Georgia. The folder includes a slide list, articles featuring the gardens and an information sheet.
 "Arched openings through cedar hedges lead to tree planted lawns on each side of the house. These and the formal garden were hedged by euonymous. Practically all plantings in the lawn sections and in the garden are original or are careful replacements. The remaining acreage used by the Grants for orchards, vegetable garden and pasturage, and where stood the usual barn, carriage house, and stable buildings, have been developed by the present owner into a beautiful stretch of lawn and garden.

GA170: Atlanta -- Glen Arden Garden
Former owner: Dickey, James Landscape architect: Monroe, William L.
Daugherty, Edward L.
Landscape designer: Gainey, Ryan Landscape contractor: Habersham Gardens, Inc.
Provenance: Cherokee Garden Club (Atlanta, Ga.)
Notes: The folder includes a worksheet and a garden plan.

This .7-acre garden site was established in 1973. A small, in-town garden, it reveals its owners' love for gardening with flowers, vegetables and unusual plants. There is always something of interest in different areas of the garden, enhancing the beautiful garden urns and objects inherited from two generations of the owners' family. Paths and walkways present a pleasing design for strolling among the camellias, rhododendrons, perennials, and vegetable gardens at various levels. The cottage garden at the rear entrance is particularly charming.

Persons and firms associated with the garden include: James Dickey (former owner); William L. Monroe (landscape architect, 1973-1983); Edward L. Daugherty (landscape architect, 1993); Ryan Gainey (landscape designer, 1985); and Habersham Gardens, Inc. (landscape contractors, 1994).

The Cherokee Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Former owner: Case, Charles C. Mrs.
Scales, Carlisle

Landscape architect: Dargan, Hugh

Smith, Frank
Byers, William
Provenance: Peachtree Garden Club

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet, garden plan with list of major plants, and a narrative history of the garden.

This half-acre casual woodland garden is located in the midst of the city of Atlanta. The garden is structured for color and form in all seasons. The property is on the back portion of the former grounds of a house built in 1919 for Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Case (this house was a copy of the front of Tintinhull House, Somerset County, England, and still maintains a formal boxwood parterre). Although the garden was first established in 1940, it has undergone many changes over the years. For example, a portion of the garden previously planted formally in boxwood has been converted to a small elliptically shaped lawn surrounded by a perennial plant border. Footpaths are found throughout the garden and are planted with herbs and scented flowering plants. The entire garden is surrounded by a rock wall built in 1936 at the time the house was constructed for Mrs. Case following the death of her husband. Major plantings include azaleas, camellias, maples, spirea, rhododendron, hosta, and daylilies. One area of the garden that features spring color from peonies and Japanese iris hosts ornamental grasses and rudbeckia in the late summer and early fall.

Persons associated with the property include: Mrs. Charles C. Case (former owner, 1936-1968); Carlisle Scales (former owner, 1968-1978); Frank Smith (landscape architect, 1980); William Byers (landscape architect, 1980); and Hugh Dargan (landscape architect, 1997).

The Peachtree Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

GA155: Atlanta -- Post Brookhaven

Landscape architect: Meister, Larry

Rutzen, Don

Officer, post landscape: Hooks, John D.

Horticulturist: Hooks, Carol

Tibbitts, Todd T.

Owner, post properties: Williams, John A.

Contractor: Post Landscape

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet, a description of Post Properties/ Post Landscape's overall approach to landscape and gardens, and a photocopy of an article about Post Brookhaven.

"Post Landscape, a division of Post Properties, designs, installs, and maintains with an in-house staff of over 100 people. Each apartment community site is unique and only conceptual designs are formally drawn on paper. All designs are generated in the field using the existing topography as a blank canvas. Each landscape architect paints bedlines on the ground and indicates which plants are used. The plants are determined from an ever-changing Preferred Plant List (PPL) that is updated annually. The Preferred Plant List is determined through a five-year testing process and availability of plants." Post Landscape uses the principles of xeriscaping (matching the right plant to the right place) and integrated pest management.

Post Brookhaven is an upscale, garden-style apartment community spread over 50 acres. Post Brookhaven features three amenity areas with tennis courts, resort-style swimming pools and community facilities. A nature preserve borders the property on one side and interested residents can plant a vegetable garden.

Persons and firms associated with the property include: Larry Meister (landscape architect, 1978 to date); Don Rutzen (landscape architect, 1977 to date); Todd T. Tibbitts (horticulturist, 1983 to date); Carol Hooks (horticulturist, 1984 to date); John D. Hooks (officer, Post Landscape, 1979 to date); John A. Williams (owner, Post Properties); and Post Landscape (landscape contractors).

GA159: Atlanta -- Post Chastain
 Landscape architect: Meister, Larry
 Rutzen, Don
 Officer, post landscape: Hooks, John D.
 Horticulturist: Hooks, Carol
 Tibbitts, Todd T.
 Owner, post properties: Williams, John A.
 Contractor: Post Landscape
 Notes: The folder includes a worksheet, a description of Post Properties/ Post Landscape's overall approach to landscape and gardens, and a copy of a fact sheet entitled "Nancy Creek Nature Preserve at Post Chastain."
 "Post Landscape, a division of Post Properties, designs, installs, and maintains with an in-house staff of over 100 people. Each apartment community site is unique and only conceptual designs are formally drawn on paper. All designs are generated in the field using the existing topography as a blank canvas. Each landscape architect paints bedlines on the ground and indicates which plants are used.

The plants are determined from an ever-changing Preferred Plant List (PPL) that is updated annually. The Preferred Plant List is determined through a five-year testing process and availability of plants." Post Landscape uses the principles of xeriscaping (matching the right plant to the right place) and integrated pest management.

Of the 20 acres comprising the Post Chastain community, 12 acres are the Nancy Creek flood plain nature preserve, and the remaining eight acres contain 558 mid-rise apartment units. Because Nancy Creek rises above its banks during heavy rains, the floodplain is occasionally covered by up to four feet of water. Post chose plants for the area which can withstand periods of both inundation and drying, while providing a diverse natural habitat for animal and bird life.

Persons and firms associated with the property include: Larry Meister (landscape architect, 1978 to date); Don Rutzen (landscape architect, 1977 to date); Todd T. Tibbitts (horticulturist, 1983 to date); Carol Hooks (horticulturist, 1984 to date); John D. Hooks (officer, Post Landscape); John A. Officer, post landscape: Hooks, John D.

Horticulturist: Hooks, Carol
Tibbitts, Todd T.

Owner, post properties: Williams, John A.

Contractor: Post Landscape

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet and a description of Post Properties/ Post Landscape's overall approach to landscape and gardens.

"Post Properties, designs, installs, and maintains with an in-house staff of over 100 people. Each apartment community site is unique and only conceptual designs are formally drawn on paper. All designs are generated in the field using the existing topography as a blank canvas. Each landscape architect paints bedlines on the ground and indicates which plants are used. The plants are determined from an ever-changing Preferred Plant List (PPL) that is updated annually. The Preferred Plant List is determined through a five-year testing process and availability of plants." Post Landscape uses the principles of xeriscaping (matching the right plant to the right place) and integrated pest management.

Post Collier Hills is a 316-unit, seven-acre, in-town site with a central courtyard surrounded by three buildings. Over one-third of the total units look down on this one central courtyard. It was landscaped for heavy pedestrian use. There are several gardens within the area and it has extensive night lighting.

Persons and firms associated with the property include: Larry Meister (landscape architect, 1978 to date); Don Rutzen (landscape architect, 1977 to date); Todd T. Tibbitts (horticulturist, 1983 to date); Carol Hooks (horticulturist, 1984 to date); John D. Hooks (officer, Post Landscape, 1979 to date); John A. Post Park Apartment Homes is on a 60-acre site and features three amenity areas with tennis courts, resort-style swimming pools and community facilities. Picnic areas and mulched paths encourage residents to enjoy the grounds. Flowering plants such as Buddleia and Rudbeckia are used to attract butterflies to to a gazebo seating area. There are 5,000 square feet of annual beds, which are changed twice a year. In addition, herbaceous perennial borders feature such plants as Hibiscus moscheutos, Eupatorium, Gaura, and roses. An urban vegetable garden with raised beds, complemented by fruit-bearing plants, and a nature preserve bordering one side of the property are other features.

Persons and firms associated with the property include: Larry Meister (landscape architect, 1978 to date); Don Rutzen (landscape architect, 1977 to date); Todd T. Architect: Smith, W. Caldwell

Provenance: Cherokee Garden Club (Atlanta, Ga.)

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet and abbreviated garden plan.

This half-acre garden site was established in 1976. Reflecting a formal design, its plantings focus on American boxwoods, espaliered camellias, a variety of hosta and ferns, and perennials. Elements of the house, including a balcony, brick-paved entryways, and walls are incorporated into the design and support specific garden elements, such as boxwood in containers and foundation plantings. A formal, walled garden features a boxwood parterre.

Persons and firms associated with the garden include: Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Bazzle (former owners, 1974-1979); Emmet Barnes (former owner, 1980-?); Jeremy Smearman (landscape designer, 1996); W. Caldwell Smith (architect, 1976); and Planters Nursery and Garden Services (landscape designers, 1996).

Notes: "The Tullie Smith House is located on the same grounds. See also the Tullie Smith House, Atlanta, Georgia."

Materials relating to the public gardens located in Atlanta, Georgia. The folder includes slide list, brochures, excerpts from publications featuring the gardens, and a description and worksheet completed by a GCA researcher. The gardens are noted for its walled boxwood garden that terminates in twin pairs of fantastic Ionic columns supporting broken pediments. The gardens are owned by the Atlanta Historical Society.

"The boxwood garden is located to the south of the house, acting as a cross axis and transition between the facades at the front and rear of the house. There is a dual stylistic nature of Italian themes and filtered through English experience."

"There is a fountain at the center of the cross axis of paths. Urns flank the garden's side entrances, and were decorated with pieces of lava to give it the look of Italian ruins. There are parterres, defined by clay roof tiles, and planted with perennials. The garden paths were made of a buff colored gravel, and the stucco was tinted to make the house appear aged. The gardens were restored to the 1928 design in 1997."

Persons associated with the property include: Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Inman (former owner, 1928 to 1965); Philip T. Shutze (architect, designer, 1928); Eleanor Weller (photographer); Spencer Tunnell, II (landscape architect, 1997).

Notes: Shutze, Philip Trammell
 17 35mm slides (photographs) and 1 file folder. Image date from 1922, 1925, 1926 and 1940.
 Georgia's climate and flora were similar enough to Tuscany to inspire this Italian Baroque style house and gardens on a 40-acre property, designed by J. Neel Reid in 1923. There was a boundary screen of cedars and cherry laurel along the road with a winding drive to the entrance court through pine underplanted with native azaleas. Additional plantings of oleaster, yucca and gardenias led to wisteria on a loggia, espaliered magnolias, and pots and tubs of pomegranates, orange trees, oleanders and geraniums. North of the house there were steps to a formal boxwood and clipped ivy parterre with a small pool in the center and a tiny frog pool to one side in a wild garden of azaleas, kalmias and native ferns growing above mixed violets. Beyond the parterre an oval stretch of lawn had another pool with a tall water jet, enclosed by a hedge of sheared arbor vitae bordered by a double allée of magnolias. On the other side of the house the courtyard overlooked the tennis court, orchard, terraced cutting garden, and the road to a farm and vineyard partly screened by pine, mimosa and bamboo. Additional Italian-style features included large terra cotta jars and stone pots of aloes and azaleas, climbing vines on the buff-colored high walls of the terrace, and two Baroque statues at the sides of the shallow steps.

Persons associated with the garden include: Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Calhoun (former owners, 1923-1948); Mr. and Mrs. Roby Robinson (former owners, 1948-1961); Mr. and Mrs. Allison Thornwell (former owners, 1961-); J. "Vegetable and herb gardens and a neatly swept flower yard have been carefully researched to provide an authentic setting for the house. The surrounding woodlands, with many varieties of native plants, give the restoration a feeling of rural isolation. Roadside plantings, a scuppernong arbor, an orchard and field crops lend a plantation atmosphere."

GA194: Atlanta -- Turner Lynch Garden

Architect: Smith, Francis Palmer, 1886-1971
Pringle, Robert Smith, d. 1937

Provenance: Peachtree Garden Club
Cherokee Garden Club (Atlanta, Ga.)

Notes: The folder includes worksheets.

The Turner Lynch Garden is located on a 3.08 acre property in the historic district of Peachtree Heights Park. The architecture firm Carrère & Hastings planned the district's street layout, a curvilinear design that incorporates the natural terrain of the region. In keeping with this plan, a long winding driving driveway leads to the Mediterranean style house which is sited at the crest of a gently sloping hill. While preserving the bones of the original landscape, the Turner Lynch Garden features a series of garden rooms that have been developed by the present owner. These include a formal rose garden, a Japanese woodland garden, a conifer garden, and a children's playhouse garden. Original to the property, a perennial garden dates back to the early 1920's when it was termed a "round garden." The four quadrants of the garden, which mirror each other, have been enlarged to accommodate a larger planting area, and annual plants are added to provide color in late summer.

The front of the house features a large fescue lawn framed with border plantings offering the architectural features of the house as the focal point of that view. A terrace at the back of the house features a knot garden that overlooks a reflecting pool below, with a view of the perennial garden beyond. From the terrace and the perennial garden the sloping property continues down to a wooded area featuring rock walls and tile paths that wind through the trees and a recirculating stream and three ponds accented with small wooden bridges and stone benches.

Persons associated with the garden include: Harold O. Rogers (former owner, 1923-1927); J.W. (Wick) Goldsmith (former owner, 1927-1928); Clarence Haverty (former owner, 1928-1986); A. Emmett Barnes IV (former owner, 1986-1989); Pringle and Smith (architects, 1921); and T.C. Wesley (contractor/builder, 1922/1923).

The Peachtree Garden Club and Cherokee Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

GA087: Atlanta -- Woodhaven

Former owner: Maddox, Robert Foster
Maddox, Laura Baxter

Landscape designer: Maddox, Laura Baxter

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, photocopies (with photo illustrations) of book sections and articles about the gardens, and other information.

Woodhaven was the estate of Robert Foster and Laura Baxter Maddox and at the time it was first developed, in the early 1900s, lay about six miles north of downtown Atlanta in what is now the Buckhead section of the city. Beginning with a 75-acre property where woods ended in a deep ravine, the owners (with Laura Maddox doing the design work) adapted the site to more favorable landscape conditions. The ravine was terraced to prevent erosion and became an expansive, terraced sunken garden, the first formal garden of any significance in Atlanta. Native trees were augmented with ornamental trees and shrubs, while the bowl of the ravine became a pool to hold the water that naturally drained there. The circular surrounding area was frequently used as a natural theater. In addition to this sunken garden there was also a "Pergola Garden." Roses, perennials, hedges, lawns, walkways, sculpture, and other features made this a garden of interest in all seasons. After World War II the property was subdivided, with the Maddox family retaining 25 acres. In the 1960s the State of Georgia purchased about 20 acres as the site for a new governor's mansion. The Maddox house was demolished, although the gardens and carriage house were retained (noted landscape architect Edward L. Daugherty designed the site immediately around the new governor's mansion). Significant enhancements to the gardens were made in the 1980s.

Images of the garden as it existed during the ownership of the Maddox family were used to create the slide copies in the Archives of American Gardens' collection, which apparently date to 1987.

Persons associated with the garden include Robert Foster and Laura Baxter Maddox (former owners and landscape designer, 1906-1965). Woodhaven related holdings consist of 1 folder (23 35 mm. slides)

Berckmans, P. J.
Fruitland Nurseries (Augusta, Ga.)

Creator: Jones, Bobby, 1902-1971

Architect: Mackenzie, Alister

Provenance: Bush, William G., Mrs.

Notes: Fruitlands

This property was originally owned by D. Redmond and called "Fruitlands." In 1857, he sold it to the Louis Mathieu Berckman family. The land consisted of 365 acres that were once an indigo plantation. Along with his son Julius Alphonse, an agronomist and horticulturist by profession, they formed a business in 1858 to import trees and plants from various countries. With the Berckman's, the site would later become one of the first commercial nurseries in the South--Fruitlands Nursery. One of the most notable features of the property is the entry avenue that Berckman planted with magnolias. Prosper Berckman was the one that popularized a plant called the azalea. (Sport's Illustrated 9 April 2003) The Berckman's also propagated Ligustrum Amurense, commonly known as privet hedge. Upon Prosper's death in 1910, the business stopped operations. Upon Bobby Jones' retirement after the 1930 U.S. Amateur, Jones set out to create a golf course. In 1932, the Augusta National Golf Club was formed on the site. Dr. Alister MacKenzie designed the golf course and is now home to the Masters.

GA025: Augusta -- Chafee House

Former owner: Carnes, Peter
 Howard, Hannah
 Howard, Louisa
 Thomas, Emeline Howard
 Thomas, Maisie
 Chafee, Harry

Provenance: Bush, William G., Mrs.

Notes: The Sand Hills

The house was built in 1780 by Peter Carnes, however, the garden was not begun until after 1784. Mrs. John Howard designed an elaborate Dutch bulb parterre garden with 17 separate sections. Brick edging outlined the garden. The garden also included a rose garden. The house was rebuilt in 1854.

Persons and organizations associated with the garden include: Peter Carnes (former owner, 1780); Mrs. John Howard (former owner, 1784); Emeline and Maisie Thomas (former owners); and Harry Chafee (former owner).

Hastings, E. Val
Olsen, Ralph J.
Landscape architect: Owens, Hubert Bond
Franklin, Dan
Notes: The folder includes: information sheet, slide list and garden description.
"The Cheatham House was built by Owen Cheatham in 1940 and lived in by three other families. The original garden plan drawn by Hubert Owens is located at the University of Georgia, Landscape Architecture Department. The garden is being restored with the help of Dan Franklin, landscape architect and builder."
"It is a southern traditional garden, featuring camellias, azaleas and large pines. The pool in the back has been filled in and the brick wall behind it is being rebuilt with its fine iron gates."
Persons associated with the property include: Owen R. Cheatham (former owner from 1940 to 1956); Henry C. Cullum (former owner from 1956 to 1969); E. GA183: Augusta -- Clark House

Architect: Cheatham, Albert
 Former owner: Clark, J. Williams Mrs.
 Kennedy, Frederick Judge Mrs.
 Landscape architect: Smith, William
 Provenance: Sand Hills Garden Club
 Notes: The folder includes a work sheet, garden plans, and a postcard.
 The home was constructed in 1929 by Mrs. Clark (of the Coats and Clark Co.) as her vacation home with extensive formal gardens. Purchased in 1944 by its current owners, the house was completely renovated under the direction of Albert Cheatham, AIA. At that time, the grounds were redesigned by William Smith. The iron gates and fencing along Milledge Road were brought from the original Augusta courthouse by Judge Fred Kennedy. The aggregate driveway is bordered by cobblestones that were obtained from an old railroad. A huge, old magnolia tree is enhanced by fern and jasmine under plantings. The grounds to the rear of the home are a formal English garden. From the flagstone patio, a long, smooth expanse of green lawn leads to the English folly. Along the back wall of the folly is a lovely bronze fountain, "Girl with Bird and Bowl." A gardener's cottage and a chauffeur's cottage, built while Mrs. Clark occupied the house, are at the rear of the property.
 Persons and firms associated with the garden include: Mrs. J. William Clark (former owner, 1929-?); Judge and Mrs. Frederick Kennedy (former owner, ?-1944); William Smith (landscape architect, 1994); and Albert Cheatham (architect, 1994).

GA029: Augusta -- Cloister Garth

Former owner: Thomas, L. A.

Clay, Harris

Sculptor: Olivati

Nurseryman: Berckman, P.J

Landscape architect: Pray, Hubbard and White

Notes: The garden was spread over three acres and was arranged in a series of smaller formal garden rooms in an Italian villa theme. The estate contained several Italianate sculptures and the central section of the garden contained a sunken pool, which was surrounded by an oval wall. From the central pool, five different walkways radiated outward. The first long walk extended southward down through a geometric grove and ended in a small rectangular lily pool. Another walkways extended westward towards a formal garden which terminated in a loggia that featured elaborate mosaics. The third and fourth walkways led to the main house. The last walkway headed east through four square planting beds and ended in a small circular goldfish pool. The garden also featured a Chinese tea house and tennis courts. The garden once contained at least 30 Italian cypress, but as of the mid-1980s, very few remained. The garden design was a collaboration between P.J. Berckman of Fruitland Nursery, Mrs. Thomas (a former owner), and the landscape firm of Pray, Hubbard & White of Boston.

Persons and organizations associated with the garden include: Landon Thomas (former owner); Harris Clay (former owner); PJ Berckman of Fruitlands Nursery (nurseryman); and Pray, Hubbard, and White (landscape architects).

GA182: Augusta -- Edison Marshall Home
 Former owner: Stearns, George Marshall, Edison, 1894-1967
 Hughs, John L. Dr.
 Architect: Wendell, Harry Eych Tea
 Cheatham, Albert
 Provenance: Sand Hills Garden Club
 Landscape designer: Berckman Brothers Nursery

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet, plan, and photocopies of photographs.

The home was originally built by George Stearns in 1908. In 1945, the author Edison Marshall purchased the property. The garden was re-done by the current owners in 1987. The front yard, added by architect Albert Cheatham, has a large courtyard flanked by white azaleas and boxwood. The focal point of the back garden is an old cast iron fountain surrounded by a lower bed and walkways. The property includes magnolias, black gum, needle palms, tea shrubs, yews, camellias, pistachio, dogwood and huge old oaks. The property on which the carriage house is located was divided and sold at an earlier date. The service area is in the back left hand corner of the property and has a garage and a small greenhouse.

Persons and firms associated with the garden include: George Stearns (former owner, 1908-1945); Edison Marshall (former owner, 1945-1972); Dr. John F. Hughes (former owner, 1972-1987); Berckmans Brothers Nursery (landscape designers, 1908); Harry Eyck Tea Wendell (architect, 1908); and Albert Cheatham (architect, 1987).

The Sand Hills Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

GA024: Augusta -- Goshen Plantation

Former owner: Speer, Joseph McKnight
Goshen Development Co.

Provenance: Bush, William G., Mrs.

Notes: The garden surrounding the house is situated on two levels. The upper level, which is closest to the house, included a boxwood and rose garden. Two oblong pools bordered by azaleas and tea olive were placed in the lower terrace. In the 1960's, the owners sold part of the land, which is now the Goshen Plantation Golf Club.

Persons and organizations associated with the garden include: Mr. and Mrs. Joseph McKnight Speer (former owners, 1912-1960s); Goshen Development Co. (former owners, 1960s-ca. 1973); and Col. and Mrs. Joe Knox (former owners, 1973).

GA164: Augusta -- Heard House
 Former owner: Miller, Cazenove Heard, Isaac Thomas
 Robinson, Jim Caffey, Hugh Architect: Tilden, Jeff
 Designer: Tilden, Jeff
 Notes: This folder includes plans, correspondence, description of the 1997 Preservation Award from Historic Augusta, Inc., slide list, garden description and worksheet from Katharine P. Mackie.
 "The house was built by Isaac Thomas Heard in the late 1890's and the land behind the house was a vegetable garden. Heard kept a diary of what and when he planted each plot. His daughter, Katherine, married Dr. Righton Robertson and they built a brick house next door. After Mr. Heard died in 1928, the main house and other lots were sold."
 "In 1958, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Caffey (née Cazenove Miller) bought the Heard house from Mr. and Mrs. Jim Robinson. Subsequently, Cazenove bought back part of the original land behind the neighbors. She later married Commander Leslie Helm and they remained in the house until she died at age 101."
 "It since has been beautifully restored and the garden is being developed to be enjoyed by the young family. A local architect, Jeff Tilden, has drawn up a plan and is in the process of completing the garden, which is quite an asset to the neighborhood."

"Historic Augusta, Inc. has awarded the 1997 Preservation Award for the renovation of Heard House without compromising its architectural integrity, making it into a residence that suits the needs of a family. The lush vegetation that embraces the house was left intact and enhanced to give it both an intimate appearance and the setting that seems most appropriate for a late 19th century dwelling."

Persons associated with the property include: Issac Thomas Heard (former owner); Jim Robinson (former owner); Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Caffey (née Cazenove Miller, former owners); Jeff Tilden (architect and garden designer, 1994).

Former owner: Course, John

Starnes, Ebenezer Justice

Cohen, C. Henry Mrs

Provenance: Bush, William G., Mrs.

Notes: Justice Starnes developed the gardens after adding onto the ca. 1810 structure. The property was surrounded by a brick and iron fence with high gates, hence the name of the garden. In the early 1900's, new owners added shrub gardens with a combination of native and exotic flowering and evergreen shrubs.

Persons and organizations associated with the garden include: John Course (former owner, early 1800s); Justice Ebenezer Starnes (former owner, late 1800s); and Mrs. Henry C. Cohen (former owner, ca. 1930s).

 Provenance: Bush, William G., Mrs.
 Sand Hills Garden Club
 Notes: The grounds of the estate were arranged in a series of connecting rooms with hedge-lined walkways. The majority of the garden "rooms" featured a central pool and formal plantings. The entire design is based around a central axis on which a pergola and summer house were placed. The estate was edged with informal woodland areas, planted with azaleas and dogwood. The estate was subdivided after World War II.
 Persons and organizations associated with the garden include: F. H. Denny (former owner); Alfred S. Bourne (former owner, ca. 1920) Garrett (former owner); Stevenson (former owner); and Rose Standish Nichols (landscape architect).
 The Sand Hills Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

GA014: Augusta -- Old Government House

Former owner: Murphy, Eugene E. Dr

Provenance: Bush, William G., Mrs.

Notes: Built in 1801 to house local government, the building became a private residence in 1821 and housed several prominent Augusta families. Now restored, the house is owned by the city and is used for receptions and group functions. (Georgia Department of Economic Development) The gardens have been restored and the front yard contains a very large ginkgo tree.

Former owner: Phinizy, Mary Lou
Provenance: Bush, William G., Mrs.
Notes: Marion Hatcher Center
"The three story Georgian style home was built for his family residence in 1835 by John Phinizy, a wealthy Augusta merchant and businessman. The original home consisted of three floors with an oval two story porch and observatory on the west side of the building. The original home had an outside kitchen which was connected to the main house by a covered walkway, stables, and four smaller homes where the parking lot now sits. John Phinizy passed the home to his son Charles H. Phinizy, whose wife, Mary Lou remodeled the home in 1885, adding the Victorian interior features such as the parlor mantles, parquet floors, leather walls in the second floor entry hallway and beautiful leaded and stained glass windows. Mrs. Phinizy also had the fourth floor added, and during her declining years had a pulley-type elevator installed between the first and second floors, which was one of, if not, the first elevator, installed in a private residence in Augusta. In 1933, Miss Mary Lou Phinizy, the Phinizy's daughter sold the home to Henry W. Poteet and Edward Platt Grealish who used the home as a funeral home. In 1938, they sold the home to Augusta Lodge No. 205, B.P.O. of Elks. In 1949, the Elks added the two story wing on the west side of the building adding two large ballrooms. The home was used until the early 1990's by the Elks as their Club and Conference Center. In January 1996, William G. Hatcher, Sr., owner of MAU, Inc., began renovating the main floor of the building...During 1997, the Greene Street side of the original structure underwent a major facade renovation. Renovations will continue in and outside the building. " (Marion Hatcher Center, <http://www.mhatchercenter.com/history.html>, 2003)

GA163: Augusta -- Porter Fleming House

Former owner: Fleming, Porter
Saunders, Albert
Medical College of Georgia
Elms, Jay
Elms, Christine M.

Architect: Irvin, Willis
Cheatham, Fletcher, Scott & Sears

Photographer: Mackie, Katharine

Notes: The folder includes garden description, plan view, and worksheet done by GCA researcher Katharine Mackie.

"Part of the large half block was bought at a Sheriff's sale in 1908 by Joseph R. Lamar, the only Chief Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court from Georgia. Porter Fleming bought part of this tract to build his home in 1911 and the community, Summerville, became part of Augusta in 1919. The Berry Flemings, the builder's son, lived here in the 1940's. Dr. Albert Saunders bought it in 1952 and the Medical College of Georgia owned it from 1970 to 1978."

"The brick wall in front has been extended to include three hand forged iron gates, which enhance the beauty and security of the property. A raised terrace has been added in front of the main entrance. It is planted with a mass of small boxwoods with weeping crabapples as accents. The spacious driveway has been paved with concrete tinted the same color of the house, kept authentic by maintaining the original house paint."

"The pool area in the side yard is screened by a row of Mary Nell Hollies along the drive. Privacy from the next door neighbors is achieved by a man-made berm covered with Cryptomeria which will eventually block the view of (and from) the next house."

"The patio/courtyard area behind the house is raised to the level of the rooms opening onto it. It has been restored according to original drawings with the addition of pediments and stone features from the old Georgia Railroad Bank, which was demolished. A stone balustrade was imported from England. The columns support climbing hydrangeas."

Persons associated with the property include: Porter Fleming (former owner from 1911 to 1952); Albert Saunders (former owner from 1952 to 1970); Medical College of Georgia (former owner from 1970 to 1978); Jay and Christine M. Elms (former owner from 1978 to 1995); Willis Irvin (architect in 1911); Cheatham, Fletcher, Scott & Sears (architects); Katharine Mackie (researcher and photographer).

Former owner: Herbert, John W. Mrs
Lewis, Guy S. Mrs

Provenance: Bush, William G., Mrs.

Notes: Mont Salubrity.

Lord Sandwich bought the property in 1799. The name is derived from Mont Salubrity, a girls school that was once on the site. When Mr. and Mrs. John Herbert of New Jersey purchased the property in 1928, it evolved into Salubrity Hall. Parts of the original structure were incorporated into the 11,000-square-foot mansion built for the Herberts in the style of an English Tudor country house. The extensive gardens were planned by Mrs. Herbert. Both the house and gardens became a local attraction in Augusta, and were featured on postcards in the 1930s. Salubrity Hall is located within walking distance of the Augusta Country Club, where Mr. Herbert was one of the founding members. The back areas have been subdivided - Montrose Court. Gift of Mrs. William G. Bush.

Persons and organizations associated with the garden include: Lord Sandwich (original landowner, ca. 1799); Mont Salubrity Girls School (former owner); Mr. and Mrs. John S. Herbert (former owners); Mr. and Mrs. Guy S. Lewis (former owners, ca. 1984); and Scroggs and Ewing (architects, ca. 1928).

GA006: Augusta -- Twin Gables

Creator: Albright, Harry Mrs.

Landscape architect: Dillon, Julia Lester

Landscape designer: Herbert, Pray And White

Notes: Harry Albright employed Herbert, Pray and White of Boston to design his gardens in ca. 1911. They features a formal rose garden bordered with boxwood, an informal azalea garden, a tulip garden, a teahouse and English gardens, and a lawn with large shade trees and pond. In 1914, Julia Lester Dillon was contracted by the Hardy family of Chicago to landscape their new winter home. Twin Gables is currently the official residence of the President of the Medical College of Georgia.

Persons and organizations associated with the property include: Hardy family (former owner, 1914-?); Medical College of Georgia

GA166: Augusta -- Underwood Garden

Former owner: Underwood, W. Orison
Weiss, Virginia
Underwood, Bessie
Zimmerman, Winifred Savage, Joseph
Savage, Elizabeth

Provenance: Sand Hills Garden Club

Notes: The garden file includes (1) glass lantern slide, (10) 35mm slides, plans, drawings, a garden description, and worksheet done by GCA researcher Katherine Mackie.

"This property, situated across the street from the old Bon Aire Hotel, consists of 1 1/2 acres of grounds and a Mediterranean house built by W. Orison Underwood in 1929. Mr. Underwood was Secretary of State. He and his wife were regular winter visitors to Augusta. The garden, neglected after the Great Depression, was restored. The main feature of the garden is a double row of concrete pillars connected by chains, which border a reflecting pool and flower beds (originally these were probably roses, now they are filled with daylilies) with an arched stucco wall at the far end. The best view of the garden is from the main level of the house, a full story above the garden and designed with the view from above in mind. The area behind the house is heavily wooded. There are interesting 'bones' from the past including a cistern, well, and decaying fences. From the house, one can see an impressive view of downtown Augusta and the immediate view of neighbors is screened with a row of Little Gem Magnolias. "

Persons associated with the property include: W. Orison and Bessie Underwood (former owners from 1929 to 1947); Virginia B. Weiss (former owner from 1947 to 1951); Winifred Zimmerman (former owner from 1951 to 1971); Joseph and Elizabeth Savage (former owners from 1971 to 1979).

The Sand Hills Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Slide manufacturer: Van Altena, Edward
Provenance: Bush, William G., Mrs.

Notes: The building, a fine example of Revival Greek architecture, was erected in 1834. It served as Georgia's first school of medicine. In 1911, the medical college became part of the University of Georgia. The building was deeded to Richmond Academy then leased to the Young Men's Library Association. The grounds are maintained by the Sand Hills Garden Club.

United States Arsenal

Notes: Augusta College

Augusta State University campus house present name.

The Augusta Arsenal was the only U.S. arsenal built in the southeast. The United States Arsenal at Augusta was built in 1819 at a site located on the Savannah River. Upon the outbreak of the Civil War the arsenal was turned over to the Confederacy and remained in the possession of the Confederate States until the end of the war when it was returned to the federal government. The 1930's HABS survey notes that a rose garden with a stone sundial in the center existed next to the men's library building. The Augusta Arsenal remained in operation until it was closed in 1955. The arsenal is now part of Augusta University.

GA026: Augusta -- White Garden

Former owner: White, William B. Mr. Mrs.

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet and photocopies of printed information about the garden.

At its peak in the early to mid-20th century, this garden, also known as "The Hill," comprised seven individual gardens covering several acres. Over 35 varieties of camellias could be found there, in addition to numerous azaleas. The Italian Renaissance style house served as a focal point for the gardens, which ranged from a formal box garden to a "wild" garden featuring a century-old cedar covered with Spanish moss and a rocky pool. A wisteria-covered rustic tea house was covered with Marie Henriette roses, while a separate rose garden featured a sundial of old English lead guarded by four tall standard roses. Still extant in 1953, the garden is now mostly extinct and the property is owned by the Augusta Women's Club.

Persons associated with the garden include: Mr. and Mrs. William B. White (former owners, 20th century).

White Garden related holdings consist of 1 folder (4 glass slides, 35 mm. slides)

Garden has been featured in Loraine Meeks Cooney, comp., Garden History of Georgia, 1733-1933 (Atlanta: The Peachtree Garden Club, 1933), pp. 308-310.

 Owner, post properties: Williams, John A.
 Contractor: Post Landscape
 Notes: The folder includes a worksheet and a description of Post Properties/
 Post Landscape's overall approach to landscape and gardens.
 "Post Landscape, a division of Post Properties, designs, installs, and maintains with an in-house staff of over 100 people. Each apartment community site is unique and only conceptual designs are formally drawn on paper. All designs are generated in the field using the existing topography as a blank canvas. Each landscape architect paints bedlines on the ground and indicates which plants are used.
 The plants are determined from an ever-changing Preferred Plant List
 (PPL) that is updated annually. The Preferred Plant List is determined through a five-year testing process and availability of plants." Post Landscape uses the principles of xeriscaping (matching the right plant to the right place) and integrated pest management.

Persons and firms associated with the property include: Larry Meister (landscape architect, 1978 to date); Don Rutzen (landscape architect, 1977 to date); Todd T. Tibbitts (horticulturist, 1983 to date); Carol Hooks (horticulturist, 1984 to date); John D. Hooks (officer, Post Landscape, 1979 to date); John A. Callaway, Fuller E., Mrs.
Ferrell, Sarah Coleman
Callaway, Ida

Landscape designer: Ferrell, Sarah Coleman

Architect: Reid, J. Neel (Joseph Neel), 1885-1926

Landscape architect: Loudon, Rosemary

Notes: Ferrell Gardens

The folder includes a worksheet, postcards, and copies of articles.

One of the earliest Italianate style gardens in the southeastern United States, this garden was started by Sarah Coleman Ferrell in 1841. Ferrell designed the garden closest to the house in a series of six descending terraces, covering approximately five and one half acres. A boxwood collection featured designs in a butterfly, a cross, "God," a clover leaf, and a bunch of grapes among others. The lower terraces, which are further away from the house, are informal and curvilinear. The gardens closer to the house are more formal and geometric. In the early 1900s, the Callaway family purchased the property and restored the terrace gardens. A rock garden, sunken garden, and cutting garden were added. In 1997, the Garden Conservancy advised the Callaway family on garden preservation. The family established a foundation to preserve it. The house and thirty-four acres of the Ferrell Gardens at Hills and Dales opened to the public. In 2004, the Ferrell Callaway estate and gardens are once again under restoration.

Persons and firms associated with the garden include: Mr. and Mrs. Mickleberry Ferrell (former owners); Sarah Coleman Ferrell (former owner, 1841-1907); Fuller E. Callaway, Sr. (former owner, 1912-1928); Ida Carson Callaway (1928-1936); Fuller E. and Alice Hand Callaway, Jr. (former owners, 1936-1998); Neel Reed (architect, 1914); and Rosemary Loudon (landscape architect); .

Notes: The folders include worksheets, a brief narrative history of the cemetery, and a photocopy of an article about the cemetery's history.

Georgia's 59th county was named for Stephen Upson, a noted Georgia lawyer. Born in 1784 or 1785 in Waterbury, Conn., Upson graduated from Yale University in 1804. Because of health reasons, he moved southerward -- first to Virginia, and then in 1807 to Lexington, Ga. Upson died in Aug. 1824 at age 40 and was buried in the Presbyterian Cemetery in Lexington.

Persons associated with the garden include: Stephen Upson (former owner) and William King Howard (former owner, ca. 1903).

Notes: The Upson-Howard place was laid out in the 1820's and has a decidedly New England atmosphere, for Stephen Upson came from Connecticut. The five and a half acres are enclosed by a four foot stone wall of semi-dressed stone blocks, laid without mortar. A stone wall of this type is very unusual in Georgia.

GA187: Lookout Mountain -- Steven & Susan Bradley Garden

Former owner: Bradley, Susan Bradley, Steven

Landscape designer: Lea, Patricia

Provenance: Garden Club of Lookout Mountain

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, photocopies of articles, and garden tour guides.

Steven and Susan Bradley worked for nearly thirty years to transform six of their thirty-three acre property into a coherent garden that accommodates a steep terrain, displays unusual and colorful plants, and is seamless with the natural surroundings including distant views of the Smoky Mountains. During the early years of their ownership the woodlands needed to be cleared of fallen limbs and dead trees, including many dogwood trees that had succumbed to anthracnose blight. The forest floor was opened up to more light, allowing wild flowers and native pinxter to thrive, and the Bradleys added naturalized beds of spring bulbs. Their sustainable practices of using cow dung and leaf mold as fertilizers and severely limiting the use of herbicides and pesticides has encouraged birds, salamanders and beneficial insects onto the property. Walkways wide enough for two people were installed to make the terrain passable, with plantings of shrubs alongside blocking steep drops that might be dangerous. A severely eroded slope next to the house was improved by channeling and containing the overflow of water from a neighbor's property and installing water-loving plants nearby. There are mature oak, hemlock, buckeye and pine trees as well as native mountain laurel, azaleas and rhododendron, oak leaf hydrangea and viburnum planted throughout the property, the dogwood have reappeared, and a stand of Japanese maples the Bradleys planted reminded them of a previous residence in Japan.

An underground water system of nearly two miles was installed and electric and telephone wires were run underground. Boulders were dug out of planting beds. Perennials including black-eyed Susan and phlox were allowed to self-sow and spread to ground that had been improved with composts, and Siberian iris have been divided and replanted to fill a steep bank next to the house that was dangerous to mow when planted in grass. The combination of native, common and unusual plants provides bloom for nine months of the year. One bed holds Exbury azaleas, species Rhododendron bought in Steven Bradley's native Washington state, and an Alabama snow wreath that in 2009 was awarded the Catherine Beattle medal for excellence in horticulture by the Garden Club of Lookout Mountain.

All the land in the area was inhabited by the Cherokee Nation prior to their displacement in 1838. The vacant land was then auctioned to the surviving widows and orphans of soldiers who fought in the War of 1812, and the property the Bradley's owned and gardened was passed down through one family before they purchased it.

This garden has been featured in many garden tours. Proceeds from tours have supported the work of The Garden Conservancy and the Chattanooga Area Food Bank.

Persons associated with the garden include Ashley and Ruth Purse (former owners, 1948-1960); Robert and Helen Davenport (former owners, 1960-1980); Steven and Susan Bradley (former owners, 1980-2009); Patricia Lea (garden designer, 1985-2009)

The Garden Club of Lookout Mountain facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

GA129: Newnan -- Dunaway Gardens

Designer: Dunaway, Hetty Jane

Notes: Dunaway Gardens Restoration, Inc. copied one photograph and 15 original glass lantern slides for the Garden Club of America in 1984. Dunaway Gardens, 3218 Roscoe Road, Newnan, Georgia, 30263.

Founded by Hetty Jane Dunaway as a setting for a theatrical learning center, the property had it's "golden years" from the 1930s-1950s. In Dunaway's efforts to create a storybook setting for theatrical learning, she hired landscape architects and plantation farmhands to carry out her plans. The garden was known for its panorama of trees, old-fashioned flowers, rare exotic plants, streams, and miles of laid rockwork. The converted barn, Patchwork Barn Theater, was demolished for highway 70. Newnan citizens comprised a non-profit corporation to save and restore the gardens. Dunaway Gardens Foundation, Inc. supports the preservation of the history and natural beauty of Dunaway Gardens through educational programs, historical exhibitions, cultural events, research and environmental activities. The gardens are currently open to the public.

GA120: Pine Mountain -- Callaway Gardens

Former owner: Callaway, Cason J.
Callaway, Ida

Landscape architect: Robert E. Marvin & Associates

Notes: Materials relating to the public gardens of the Ida Cason Callaway Foundation, located in Pine Mountain, Georgia. The folder includes a slide list, brochures, articles from publications featuring the gardens, and a description and worksheet completed by a GCA researcher at James R. Buckler and Associates. The gardens are noted for their emphasis on aesthetics.

"The Gardens were conceived and founded by Mr. and Mrs. Cason J. Callaway, Sr. for the benefit of mankind. The purpose is to maintain a place where all may find beauty, peace, inspiration, knowledge, and wholesome recreation."

The gardens have been open to the public since 1952. The garden features rhododendron and holly trails, wildflower trail, woodlands, greenhouses, lakes, the John A. Sibley Conservatory and the Day Butterfly Center.

"The greenhouse complex, including both indoor and outdoor plant displays to provide information about horticulture and the garden design, from traditional gardens through contemporary designs which have evolved to fit the new life styles of contemporary man. Included will be a variety of horticultural displays, and design ideas for the home gardener."

"In addition, examples of natural habitats will be offered, in the gradual transition from strongly structured gardens in and around the greenhouses, to the naturalistic meadow areas, to the completely natural flood plain swamp area beyond. In this way the gardens demonstrate the transition from man's desire to dominate nature to the present trend of man respecting and remaining subservient to natural forces."

Persons associated with the property include: Cason J. and Ida Callaway (former owners); Robert E. Marvin and Associates (landscape architect, 1974 to 1984).

manufacturer:

Former owner: Reid, J. Neel (Joseph Neel), 1885-1926

Creator: Van Altena, Edward

Notes: Built in 1842, was formerly known as Dunwody Hall--from the previous owner--and Phoenix Hall--named for being rebuilt after a fire in the late 1840s. The area in front of the house was a combination of lawn and large deciduous shade trees, such as oaks and hickories. The front of the house is approached by either a central path which runs from the front gate to the front door or on the heart-shaped drive. The center path was lined with mimosa trees and is where the house got its name. A formal garden existed on the west side of the house; and shrub planted terraces were located on the east. In 1916, Georgia architect Neel Reid purchased the property and restored it to its original form. The house and grounds are currently a private residence.

GA009: Savannah -- Bonaventure Cemetery

Former owner: Mulryne, John Colonel Tatnall, Joseph, Jr.
Wiltberger, Peter Captain
Wiltberger, Witt Major
Bowen, Samuel

Provenance: Trustees' Garden Club

Notes: The folders include worksheets, a brief narrative history of the cemetery, and a photocopy of an article about the cemetery's history.
Bonaventure Cemetery is situated on a high bluff overlooking the Wilmington River and is separated into two distinct sections. The older section of the cemetery was once Bonaventure Plantation and is filled with beautiful monuments and statuary from the past. Of note is the statue of "Little Gracie" designed by local sculptor John Wolz from her portrait. Bonaventure was originally developed as a plantation in 1760, but became a cemetery in the mid-19th century. In 1907 the graveyard was conveyed to the city of Savannah and came under the jurisdiction of the Park and Tree Commission. The Commission has worked through the years planting rare camellias, many colored azaleas, wisteria, magnolias, and live oaks. The Greenwich section is located at the end of a paved road running alongside Bonaventure and has the remains of a magnificent estate. The Greenwich section has been acquired more recently by the city to provide additional space for burials. It is also planted and managed by the Park and Tree Commission.

Persons associated with the garden include: Colonel John Mulryne (former owner, ca. 1760); Joseph Tatnall, Jr. (former owner, ca. 1790); Captain Peter Wiltberger (former owner, 1847-1869); Major Witt Wiltberger (former owner, after 1869); and Samuel Bowen (former owner).

Trustees Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

GA173: Savannah -- Bonnie Doon

Former owner: Mercer, George A., III Mr. Mrs.

Landscape architect: Sasser, Elwin J.

Gardener: Wagoner, Shannon

Horticulturist: Upson, Robert

Provenance: Trustees' Garden Club

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet and a copy of a detailed site plan.

This 165 by 300 foot garden site was established in 1975. Facing the Vernon River, the grounds and gardens have gradually developed through the years. The perennial border is at its colorful peak during April through June. A more recent addition is a "garden room" bounded by two arbor arches. It is bordered by Buxus microphylla var. koreana. There is also a hedge of Rhamnus indica (Indian hawthorn). Other featured plants include Agapanthus, Hemerocallis (daylilies), white Lagerstroemia indica (crape myrtle), Cydonia oblonga (common quince), members of the Punicaceae family, and bulbs. The garden's owner is constantly trying to achieve better design in the garden.

Persons associated with the property include: Mr. and Mrs. George A. Mercer, III (former owners, 1972-1982); Elwin J. Sasser (landscape architect); Shannon Wagoner (gardener); and Robert Upson (horticulturist).

The Trustees Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

GA165: Savannah -- Fulton Garden

Former owner: Ball, Fredrick
 Lane, Anne
 Provenance: Trustees' Garden Club
 Notes: The folder includes a worksheet with an abbreviated garden design.
 Established in 1991, this 900 square-foot garden is noted for its collections of pots and unusual plants, including an Asian Arisaema collection. The garden's focal point is a terrace surrounded by beds edged in boxwood and filled with roses, farfugium, fatsia, camellias, ferns, and seasonal plantings. Adjacent porches are covered in passion vines and grape.
 Persons associated with the garden include: Fredrick Ball (former owner, ca. 1805) and Anne Lane (former owner, 1989-1997).
 The Trustees Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Architect: Jay, William
Former owner: Scarbrough, William Landscape designer: McEllen, John

Provenance: Trustees' Garden Club

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet and copies of the 1984-85 garden plan and the current garden plan, elevations of the memorial pavilion, and plant lists.

This 13,000 square-foot garden is the largest enclosed garden in Savannah. It is located adjacent to the William Scarbrough House, a classical Regency mansion built in 1819 that houses the Ships of the Sea Maritime Museum. When the property was acquired in 1972 by the Historic Savannah Foundation the garden was a mass of rubble and tangled vegetation bordered by crumbling brick walls. With major fund-raising by the Trustees' Garden Club, restoration work was begun by grading, hauling in topsoil, installing sprinkler and drainage systems, and repairing and reinforcing the brick walls. Garden club members organized into teams then competed to prepare the best design to complement the period and style of the mansion. The plan chosen featured a large flagstone terrace; a memorial pavilion; side beds with live oaks, magnolias, and smaller shrubs and urns; and benches and walks. By 1997 the foundation had moved its headquarters and the Scarbrough House became the Ships of the Sea Maritime Museum. Closure by the city of a side street enabled extension of the garden by an additional 35 feet. Subsequent alterations to the 1984-85 Trustees' Garden Club plan have included replacing lawn with a brick terrace, modifying the memorial pavilion, increasing the size of the terrace, and planting pre-1860 era antique roses.

Persons associated with the garden include: William Jay (architect, ca. 1819); William Scarbrough (former owner, ca. 1819); and John McEllen (landscape designer, 1996 to date).

The Trustees Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

 1 Photograph (lantern slide, hand-colored; 3.25 x 4 in.)
 Slide manufacturer: Van Altena, Edward
 Former owner: Bolton, Robert Mr
 Notes: The dazzling white bluffs which overhand the Vernon River eight miles from Savannah gave this estate its name. Here the colonist came as early as 1759. The original house and gardens are said to have been built in 1799 by Robert Bolton. There is an evergreen garden with a variety of typical southern flowers, but the great oaks are the glory of the place. One with a trunk twenty-four feet in circumference, with spreading branches draped in moss, flings its shade across the wide, smooth lawn, its branches extending one hundred forty-five feet.

Mount reads: "Edward Van Altena."

Historic plate number: "65."

Historic plate caption: "Georgia [illeg], White Bluff."

Garden has been featured in Alice G. B. Lockwood, ed. and comp., Gardens of Colony and State, Vol. 2 (New York: C. Scribner's Sons for the Garden Club of America, 1931-1934), pp. 295-297. Image on page 296.

GA007: Savannah -- Wormsloe
 Former owner: Jones, Noble
 Creator: De Renne, Wymberley Jones
 Notes: Founded in 1735, Wormsloe is the oldest known estate in Georgia, located ten miles from Savannah on the Isle of Hope. Like in Savannah, the first known plantings in Wormsloe were Mulberry trees, which were planted to support silk worm production. Many additions were made to the garden like an entry archway, iron fences, garden pools, hedges, sculpture and paved paths. The property is currently owned by descendants of the original owners, but is open to the public for research and other educational purposes.
 Persons and organizations associated with the property include: Noble Jones (original owner, 1735)
 Wormsloe related holdings consist of 1 folders (6 35 mm. slides and 4 glass lantern slides)

Officer, post landscape: Hooks, John D.

Horticulturist: Hooks, Carol
Tibbitts, Todd T.

Owner, post properties:	Williams, John A.
Contractor:	Post Landscape
Notes:	The folder includes a worksheet, a description of Post Properties/ Post Landscape's overall approach to landscape and gardens, and photocopies of two articles about Post Village. "Post Landscape, a division of Post Properties, designs, installs, and maintains with an in-house staff of over 100 people. Each apartment community site is unique and only conceptual designs are formally drawn on paper. All designs are generated in the field using the existing topography as a blank canvas. Each landscape architect paints bedlines on the ground and indicates which plants are used. The plants are determined from an ever-changing Preferred Plant List (PPL) that is updated annually. The Preferred Plant List is determined through a five-year testing process and availability of plants." Post Landscape uses the principles of xeriscaping (matching the right plant to the right place) and integrated pest management. Post Village is a 300-acre site, containing five separate apartment home communities, totaling more than 1,700 units. In addition to amenities such as tennis courts and swimming pools, Post Village's landscape features a marsh area, more than 300,000 bulbs, a lake, and extensive use of screening plants. Persons and firms associated with the property include: Larry Meister (landscape architect, 1978 to date); Don Rutzen (landscape architect, 1977 to date); Todd T. St. Simons Island Retreat Plantation

Thomas Spalding, the only son of Margery and James Spalding, was born on St. Simons Island on March 25 or 26, 1774.

Thomas Spalding, who inherited his father's estate in 1794, built Orange Grove on St. Simons Island, a replica of Oglethorpe's residence of Orange Hall in Fort Frederica. In 1802, Spalding sold the plantation for $10,000 to Major William Page, and relocated to Sapelo Island. The Pages established a productive cotton plantation and became one of the richest families in the South. Page's only daughter, Anna Matilda, married Thomas Butler King, a young lawyer from Massachusetts. Like many other wealthy planters, he spent much of his time on politics, while Anna Matilda continued managing the successful cotton plantation, along with beautiful gardens of roses, specimen trees, rare shrubs, and shell walkways. Many famous guests and statesmen experienced the Page's Southern hospitality, including wildlife artist John James Audubon. (Susan Peterson, http://petersnn.org/petersnn/plantation_history_of_glynn_coun.htm)

Major William Page and the earliest gardens which we still have any record was laid out. A hothouse was built and the remains may still be seen. This was seemingly the only one on the island. A rose bordered path and a cedar walk and a great many bulbs mark the old garden site. (The Garden History of Georgia, pp. 34-43).

Notes:	Along the coast of Georgia lies a line of islands, lush in an almost tropical verdure. Frederica, on St. Simon's Island, long enjoyed a reputation for its climate. Near this town many great estates were laid out as summer homes, and among them was "Retreat". This estate was first known as "Orange Grove". In 1802 it was acquired by Major William Page and the earliest garden of which we have any record was laid out by Mrs. Page, who built also a hothouse, the remains of which may still be seen. Former owner: Jones, Thomas

Van Duzer
Whitney, Payne
Payne, Oliver Hazard

Architect: Wind, John

White, Stanford, 1853-1906

Notes: The folder includes an information sheet and copies of articles.

Greenwood Plantation, a cotton plantation and estate near Thomasville, Georgia was built for Thomas Jones in the nineteenth century. John Wind, an English architect, built a Greek Revival mansion on the property in 1935. At the time the home was built, the property included a grove of live oaks, palmettos and magnolias. Greenwood plantation has been owned by the VanDuzers, Paynes and Whitneys of New York. In the 1930s there were Cherokee roses, woodlands framed by azaleas, a palm garden and an Italian styled garden. The Italian garden, added when Mr. and Mrs. Payne Whitney came into possession of the property, is a sunken lawn with a stone balustrade closing one short side. In the center is a bowl and pedestal fountain topped by a statue and set in a circular basin. The basin is enclosed by a stone balustrade topped by four statues supposedly imported from Pompeii by Stanford White.

Persons associated with the garden include: Thomas Jones (former owner, 1827-1889); VanDuzer family (former owner); Oliver Hazard Payne (former owner); William Payne Whitney (former owner); John Wind (architect, 1935) and Stanford White (architect).

A history about Greenwood Plantation is included in, "Garden History of Georgia, 1733-1933" compiled by Loraine M. Cooney, published by the Peachtree Garden Club in 1933 and in the Journal of Garden History, Vol. 10, number 1, January-March 1990, p. 26-27.

"Ahuimanu" is the name of this home and means "gathering of birds" in Hawaiian. Designed in 1921 by noted designer Hart Wood, the home maintains Hawaiian plant material, which attracts an assortment of tropical birds. The garden blooms with lei materials, including palapalai fern. An ancient 'auwai, or irrigation stream, flows through the front of the garden and is surrounded by mondo grass, strawberry guava trees, and specimens of Bromiliaeceae which are grown in abundance throughout the garden. The stream is shaded by monkey pod trees and is lined with pink impatiens and various ferns. Soft shades of pink are found throughout the garden in different material ranging from Cordyline fruticosa to over 40 varieties of Begoniaceae. Leading from the 'auwai are Indonesian lava pavers which border he owners' favorite area of walking iris. On the opposite side of the property from the 'auwai is the Nu'u'anuu stream that has cascading waterfalls and large natural swimming ponds. The old stone path leading to the stream is surrounded by many varieties of the Begoniaceae. The stream flows through a tropical forest of Monstera and bamboo. Garden lighting highlights the waterfalls and bamboo at night.

Persons and organizations associated with the garden include: Dr. and Mrs. G. M. Poole (former owner, 1924); Mrs. Eva Rose Trexler (former owner, ?); Hart Wood (Architect, 1924); Phillip K. White (Architect for renovation, 1995); Mary Philpotts McGrath (Interior Design, 1995); and Stephen Haus (Landscape Architect, 1995).

Provenance: The Garden Club of Honolulu

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, photocopies of articles, and other information.

Located on less than one acre, Butler Garden was begun in 1979 and is unique for its exceptional variety of tropical plants. It was transformed from a dirt dog run into a tropical Eden embellished with exotic palms, tropical trees, vines, heliconia, bromeliad, hedges, plants, ferns and herbs inspired by gardens the owner visited in Indonesia, Costa Rica, Singapore and Rio de Janeiro. Also on the property is a shade house which shelters begonias, calathea, vanilla orchids and seasonal vegetables.

Accentuating the lush tropical flora are unique garden ornaments and containers, such as Chinese ceramic food storage jars in front of a cottage, a brass platter purchased in Amsterdam on the door of the shade house, a giant Tridacna clam shell placed along a pathway. A propeller blade from a Japanese Zero airplane shot down during Pearl Harbor and Hawaiian war canoe stone anchor adds interest to the water feature area and a large glass ball used to float fishing nets in the early 1900s is transformed as an entrance lantern.

The owner's home, built in 1928, is in the process of being registered with the National Register of Historic Places. Plans are to continue to enhance the garden's visual affect and to lower its maintenance by incorporating ground cover, lava rocks and large groupings of bromeliads, ferns, heliconia and potted plants.

Prior to 1927, the land was part of the Bishop Estate.

Persons associated with the garden include Robert and Beryl St. Sure and George and Kathryn St. Sure (former owners, 1927-1951) and Robert Conley (former owners, 1951-1978).

The Garden Club of Honolulu facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

HI035: Honolulu -- Carol's Garden

Garden Lin, Carol

designer:

Provenance: The Garden Club of Honolulu

Notes: The folder includes worksheets and photographs of the property undergoing renovation.

Carol's Garden is an urban tropical garden created on a wedge-shaped property of less than two acres, in Honolulu. The garden's design was influenced by the owner's Chinese heritage, including the use of rocks, a water feature, meandering walkways, surprises such as birdhouses and overturned oil storage jars, and garden views from each room of the house. Prior to the development of this garden the 1949 house was surrounded on three sides by cement slabs. Started circa 2002 the garden is shaded by palm, allspice, carrot, tiara, papaya, Meyer lemon and a pomegranate tree that was pre-existing on the property. Creeping fig vine covers the walls that surround the property and the curving stairway installed by the current owner. A waterfall into the pool helps muffle the noise of the city.

Other plants used in the lush tropical garden include several varieties of ti, ginger, bird of paradise, sandpaper vine, clerodendron, gardenia and hibiscus. The palm tree varieties include MacArthur, Erica, phoenix, foxtail and travelers. Rather than the original teak furniture the outdoor entertaining areas are furnished in lightweight, weather resistant plastic wicker. To simplify the garden scheme the owner would not plant MacArthur palm as it suffers too much from wind damage, nor would she use creeping fig again because it requires frequent trimming. She finds the clerodendron, or shooting star, shrub attracts white fly and the lawn requires too much water and fertilizer.

Persons associated with the garden include Daisy House, Inc. (former owner 1987); Gousho USA, Inc. (former owner 1988-1994); Kabushiki Gaisha (Kaiisha) Sprk (former owner 1994-1996); Robin and Crystal Lo (former owners 1996-2002).

The Garden Club of Honolulu facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

histories/descriptions of the garden and the Kuliwai Lagoon area.

Situated on the western side of Kuliwai Lagoon in the Kuliouou area of Honolulu, this garden was designed and built in the late 1940s. The architecture and gardens of Japan were the inspiration for both the garden and the adjacent house. The lava boulders and stepping stones were all imported to the site and were carefully placed, with the exception of the largest boulder, which fell off the truck and landed in the middle of the lawn area where it remains today. Plants were carefully chosen to suite the location, which is close to the ocean and demands salt-tolerant material. In the Japanese tradition, trees and bushes were selected for their sculptural quality and pruned to maintain a pleasing line. Japanese-style gardens of this type were very popular in the late 1940s through the 1970s, but the high cost of maintaining sculptured gardens led to the demise of many of them, although there has been a resurgence of interest in recent years. During her lifetime the original owner, Mrs. R. G. A. Crowe, was responsible for the design and maintenance of her garden. A perfectionist, she spent many hours each day pruning, picking up leaves, and grooming plants. Although the house was rented for 10 years after Mrs. Crowe's death, the garden was maintained by a landscape crew under the direction of a close friend of Mrs. Crowe. The current owners, who acquired the property in 2000, are updating, restoring, and revitalizing both the house and the garden.

HI039: Honolulu -- Dowsett Garden

Landscape designer: Nottage, Lois

Thomas, Jean

Provenance: The Garden Club of Honolulu

Notes: The folder includes worksheets.

Although it is less than one-quarter acre the Dowsett Garden combines aspects of a 19th century plantation garden and Asian influences and artifacts, particularly from Bali. Behind eight-foot tall hau hedges there is a small plantation-style house and cottage, tropical trees and plants that were used for food, medicine, and building materials by early Hawaiians, and ornamental beds with traditional lava rock edging. The garden is designed for outdoor entertaining and relaxation with features including an outdoor shower, a small Hindu temple, heads of Bodhisattvas on a fence, ceramic food storage jars containing plants, ornamental spheres, carved screens partially enclosing the back porch, gongs, and unusual rocks.

Some of the native plants in the Dowsett Garden had spiritual significance for the early Hawaiians, including the kukui tree, whose polished nuts were worn only by chiefs and the red tiplant whose leaves could be worn only by chiefs and high priests. Every plant had a practical use as well: the silk from hapu'u tree fern was used to embalm royalty and to stuff mattresses; kukui nut oil was used for lamps, waterproofing and to treat skin conditions including baldness; and leaves from the red tiplant are still used for skirts and leis, to bring good luck and to mark property lines. Breadfruit, brought originally from the Marquesas, exudes latex that was used to catch birds. Hau brought from Polynesia provided wood for canoes, fishing implements and tools, and bast fibers for netting, ropes and sewing. The buds and flowers had medicinal uses. Laua'e ferns were used for leis, while the hala tree provided food, wood and weaving material for hats, mats and roofs.

Notes: The folder includes worksheets and extensive plant lists for each garden.

Located on approximately .75 acres in Honolulu, Hale 'Opua located ten minutes from downtown Honolulu on the volcanic slopes of the Ko'olau mountains at an elevation of 600 feet. Hale 'Opua means "house in the clouds" in Hawaiian.

There are five garden rooms that surround a one story home built in 1917. The current owners have lived in the home for over forty year and the creation, appreciation and care for the gardens by the owners demonstrate the importance of the Hawaiian concept of 'aloha aina' which means love and respect for the land. The entry garden is called Maka hū a'e. The maidenfair fern wall provides transition to the next garden, the Mili pa'a. Mili pa'a includes fruit trees on the upper path and a pond. The backyard is called Kilo Manu has views of the ocean and the valley of Pauoa. The circular path leads down to the next garden, called Kea la pili, and it includes rock pathways intended for climbing. The last garden is called Ulu hai lei a.

Hale 'Opua was originally a banana plantation. The ironwoods on the west side of the property were a windbreak for the bananas and the front cottage was used as a stable. The Pacific Heights railroad turnaround was in front of the house.

Garden features include benches, ferns, fruit trees, garden walks, orchids, lawns, planting walls, retaining walls, ponds, rock gardens, rockwork, stepping stones, tropical plants, vistas, stone walkways, and water gardens.

Persons associated with the garden include: Samuel Northrup Castle Sr. and Anna Castle (former owners, 1917); Alice Hastings Cooke (former owner, 1953); Peter Hwei-Yang His and Priscilla Lai Fong His (former owners, 1969); Tom Way Wong and Linda Yap Wong (1972); Cole Slater (landscape architect).

HI061: Honolulu -- Hee Family Garden

Photographer: George, Jan M.

Landscape architect: Hubbard, James C.

Mechler, Stephen F.

Notes: This property had a house built in 1940 and an overgrown garden of tropical plants, especially invasive strawberry guava trees when the current owners acquired it in 1970. In 1990 landscape architect James C. Hubbard created a half-acre back garden, removing the invasives and planting a fresh tropical garden. His design used swathes of grass to open up views of Ko' olau Mountains and the neighboring protected forest's bamboo and tropical trees including kukui or candlenut, employing the Japanese concept shakkei, or the art of borrowed scenery. In 2015 the owners built a contemporary style house for their multigenerational family that is sprawling and tiered and hugs the mountainside. They needed a new garden for the new house that would reflect their Asian heritage and Hawaiian location, designed by landscape architect Stephen F. Mechler.

The garden's gathering place is a large, covered patio with a lava rock wall. The plant colors are mainly green, white and blue from swathes of agapanthus and hydrangea from the earlier garden, and green and white in the front garden. There is a 70-year-old avocado tree from the original garden, an inherited lychee, Meyer lemon, vegetable and herb gardens in raised boxes to protect them from snails and slugs, and two varieties of taro that are protected from wild boar. Vegetables include green onion and beets; herbs include rosemary and basil. As the area receives 107 inches of rain each year the family does not irrigate nor do they use any synthetic chemicals in their gardens.

Generations of family are respected throughout the garden, exemplified by the lychee and inherited gray bricks that border a small Zen garden. Accessories include antique Chinese ceramic pots once used for wine and thousand- year Chinese eggs, now planted with orchid and lotus. A teardrop shaped patch of mondo grass represents and modernizes the Zen garden, usually comprised of stone. Hawaiian plants include native gingers, stumps from other gardens, and so-called canoe plants – species brought to the islands by early settlers. Seeds and cuttings from family, friends and other native island plants replace the invasives that once dominated the property.

Landscape designer: Mechler, Stephen F.

Provenance: The Garden Club of Honolulu

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, photocopies of articles, and other information.

Located on one acre on the island of O'ahu, Johnson Nuuanu garden is rich with the history of Hawaii. Originally designed by Albert Ives in 1941 for the then Attorney General for the Territory of Hawaii, Charles Hite, this garden offers sweeping views of the Ko'olau Mountains where King Kamehameha's final battle was fought in 1795 to establish his kingdom and where the Hawaiian alii (aristocracy) had their homes. This exceptional Hawaiian rain forest garden includes towering native kukui and kamani trees, tree ferns, bananas, gingers, orchids and anthuriums. Mr. Ives was inspired by the articulated horizontal limbs of the kamani trees and designed the house and gardens around them. Coral slabs that were constructed from surplus coral rock which definition to the paths and plantings. They are also used as a low wall on the orth side of the property and edge the brick terrace and form a bench where topped with cement.

The property fell into disrepair after standing vacant for several years before the new owners completely renovated the garden and home in 1987. Hawaii architect David Stringer remodeled the home and landscape designer Steve Mechler renovated and replanted the gardens. Additional plantings that were introduced included tree ferns, orchids, ginger, anthuriums, bromeliads, agapanthus, palms and numerous varieties of ti plants. He added numerous water features along the terraces and lanai as well as eucalyptus, lychee, avocado, palms, plumeria and cedar trees. These changes added tranquility, shade and fragrance to the terraces and lanai.

The architecture of the home is traditional island style with large windows, sloping roof lines and sliding doors that take advantage of the cool valley trade winds, merging indoor and outdoor living. Rainfall in Nu'uuanu Valley averages 80-100 inches annually keeping the tropical plantings and spacious lawns lush. The living and dining rooms open up to a large red brick spacious lanai and open terrace above a sweeping lawn surrounded with tropical ferns, palms, banana trees and an unobstructed view of the towering Ko'olau Mountains. This unique and tranquil setting is enjoyed by family and friends for celebrations plus generously shared by the owners for various functions and garden tours.

Persons associated with the garden include A.E. Ives (landscape architect) 1941, David Stringer (architect, ca. 1987), Stephen F. Mechler (landscape designer, ca. 1987) and Charles Hite (former owner, 1941).

Notes: The folder includes worksheets.

Located on the flank of the Diamond Head Crater, Leahi Garden dates back to the 1930's when the property's original owner designed and supervised the construction of one of the first homes in that area. The large two story home with floor to ceiling sliding glass paned doors surrounded by sweeping lawns is emblematic of the 1930's homes of affluent families in Honolulu. A fishing heiau (early Hawaiian place of worship) is near the base of the property, and caves above the property were used by early Hawaiians. The early Hawaiian history of the property and the deep aloha 'aina (Hawaiian concept of respect and love of the land) the current owners have for their garden make this a particularly unique garden.

Employing organic gardening techniques, the current owners have enhanced the original Hawaiian plantings with fruit trees and vegetable and herb gardens, as well as using a vermicomposting system and raising chickens. The vermicast is used as a fertilizer and the waste liquid is used as a natural insecticide. To limit water consumption the current owners called on the assistance of a landscape designer and a landscape architect resulting in the addition of drought resistant tiplant, fruit trees, and laua'e fern, and reduction of the lawn area by 50 percent.

Persons associated with the garden include: Mr. and Mrs. P.K. McLean (former owners, 1937-ca. 1948); Catholic Diocese of Honolulu (former owner, 1948-ca. 1988); Noram Inc. (former owner, 1988-ca. 1999); Ms. Oona Twigg Smith and Ramon Perez de Ayala (former owners, 1999-ca. 2006); Loriann Gordon (landscape architect, ca. 1999); Geoff Lewis (architect, ca. 1999); John T. Koga (sculptor); Lois Nottage (landscape designer, 2006); and Steve Mechler (landscape architect, 2008).

The Garden Club of Honolulu facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

 Lewis, Dudley
 Provenance: The Garden Club of Honolulu
 Notes: The folder includes worksheets and a features plan.
 Located on less than one acre, this garden is in the rainforest of the Ko'olau Range on the Island of Oahu at an elevation of 1000 feet. The property was established in the 1800s and has been in the Lewis Family for over a century. The garden is designed right around the house with several small grass areas in the front and on the sides of the house. Plantings include kamani and koa trees, golden bamboo, ginger, tree ferns, and gardenia bushes. The garden includes two natural ponds with giant koi and waterfalls. Furniture designed by Walter Lamb provides outdoor seating. Floor to ceiling windows in the living room overlook the main pond and provide a view into the rain forest.
 Persons associated with the garden include: Peter Christian Jones (former owner, 1800s), Abe Lewis, Jr. (former owner, 1890s-1906), Alice Lewis (former owner, 1906-), Dudley Lewis (-1962).
 The Garden Club of Honolulu facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

HI029: Honolulu -- LipolaniFormer owner: Moir, Goodale
Moir, May

Architect: Davis, Louis

Provenance: The Garden Club of Honolulu

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, garden plans, a narrative history of the house and gardens, and a typescript copy of a newspaper article about the garden.

Lipolani has been owned by the same family since 1924 (the house was completed in 1930), but its gardens date to the late 1940s, after Goodale and May Moir were married. Their design reflects a conscious decision to eliminate the traditional trees, shrubs, and grass that had characterized the site's landscaping during its initial years. An open-air, walled patio was given planting beds, a roof, and screening, as well as wire to accommodate a large collection of phalaenopsis orchids. The entrance courtyard was walled and planting areas filled with rocks for soil retention and plant support. Plants such as tree ferns, ti, dracaena, medinella, and plumeria were introduced. In the late 1950s the front garden was expanded to include a mountain view area enclosed by a wall, creating another private garden. A large courtyard on the lower side of the house was surrounded by deep, raised planting beds and eventually came to resemble a Japanese Zen-style moss garden. In addition the site includes an open-sided greenhouse, a rock garden, and a strip of land where a variety of plants used for cutting, cooking, and eating are grown.

Persons associated with the garden include: Goodale Moir (former owner, 1930-1985); May Moir (former owner, 1985-2001); and Louis Davis (architect, 1930).

The Garden Club of Honolulu facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Bush, Leroy

Architect: Ossipoff, Vladimir, 1907-1998

Provenance: The Garden Club of Honolulu

Notes: Hill of the Wind.

The folder includes worksheets, features plan, and a copy of a poem written about the property.

Established in 1944, this 1.45 acre property in Oahu's rainforest is located on Round Top Drive at an elevation of 1350 feet on the flank of the extinct volcano, Mount Konahuanui. Round Top Drive was added to the State Register of Historic Places in 2007 and the National Register of Historic Places in 2009. The property was built on a cinder cone named by the early Hawaiians Pu'u Makani, "Hill of the Wind." The architect, Valdamir Ossipoff, levelled off the top of the cinder cone creating two levels for the garden and house. The lower entrance level from Round Top Drive is lined with Case avocado, Australian red cedar, hao and melaleuca trees. A 15 foot traveler's palm is in the center of the lower lawn and a 30 foot magnolia stands beside the garage.

A toon tree (Australian red cedar) stands at the foot of the curved stairway leading to the upper lawn. Native hao creates a dense thicket to the right of the upper lawn which gives a view of the city and ocean with Diamond Head in the distance. Begonias, tree fern, ferns, citrus, native gardenia, and native hibiscus are also present. The lawn is edged with libularia. There are more than 15 native koa trees. The sickle shaped leaves of the koa were the inspiration for Ossipoff's use of curves in the entry steps, the terrace and walkways and in the curve of the small lawn. The grass path from the front lawn to the lower area behind the home leads to a vegetable garden, flower beds, and planting shed.

Persons associated with the garden include: W. A. Ramsay (former owner, -1944), Leroy and Octavia Bush (former owners, 1944-1965), and Vladimir Ossipoff (architect, 1944-1951).

The Garden Club of Honolulu facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Landscape architect: Hubbard, James C.

Mechler, Stephen F.
Former owner: MacNaughton, Boyd

Provenance: The Garden Club of Honolulu
Notes: The folder includes worksheets, site plans, narrative histories of the site and Walter Lamb furniture, and other information.
Pu'u Panini means "hill of cactus," an apt description of the arid landscape (less than 10 inches of rainfall annually) of coral outcroppings, cactus, and kiawe trees that is the natural environment of this three-acre garden. Despite its lack of water, the property has a dramatic view of the ocean and Koko Head. A house was first built on the site in the early 1930s and was renovated and modernized many times in the 1950s and 1960s under the direction of architect Vladimir Ossipoff. Landscape architects James C. Hubbard and Paul Weissich were retained to help plan the gardens. Maintenance was a concern and planting was limited to lawns and large trees to control winds and yet maintain the views. The current owner acquired the property in 1983 and at that time the grounds began to evolve into what they are today. A pavilion, tennis court, and new swimming pool (to replace an old one) were built. In the 1990s landscape architect Stephen F. Mechler was retained to direct the landscaping of the grounds and he continues to refine and maintain the property under the supervision of the owners. In addition to the views and sculpture that provide the garden's visual elements, large trees are another highlight. Specimens include Chilean mesquite (Prosopis chilensis), Banyan fig (Ficus retusa), monkey pod or rain tree (Samanea saman), and autograph tree (Clusia rosea). Of additional interest is the collection of Walter Lamb outdoor furniture.

Persons associated with the garden include James C. Hubbard (landscape architect, 1960-1970), Paul Weissich (landscape architect, 1960-1970), Stephen F. Mechler (landscape architect, 1975 to date), Boyd MacNaughton (former owner, 1945-1975), and Roberta MacNaughton (former owner, 1975-1983).

Provenance: The Garden Club of Honolulu

Notes: The folder includes worksheets and photographs of the property undergoing renovation.

Located on less than an acre, Spalding Garden in Honolulu was transformed in 1999 from a barren, dreary plot into a colorful explosion of perennials and an organic garden of fruits and vegetables. The owner has been interested in gardens from childhood in the 1920s on the island of Kauai where her father was the manager of the Makaweli Sugar Plantation. The owner gained extensive experience raising vegetables Diamond Head community garden for over seven years and visiting with Master Gardeners and volunteers at the Oahu Urban Garden Center. The owner has made refinements to the soil based on the soil analysis by the College of Tropical Agriculture at the University of Hawaii. some of the techniques she has employed in the garden include adding alkaline to the soil, mounding the soil in the vegetable beds, using lights to deter Japanese Beetles and using rain water only for her vegetables to avoid chemicals in city water.

The front porch dining area is embraced by fragrant lavender, hibiscus, lantana, gardenas, mandevilia, vinca, penta, plumbago and pakalana vine. The terrace in the back has views of the orchard of fig, avocado, mango, banana, papaya and citrus as well as raised beds of asparagus, beans, beets, carrots, peas, collards, shard, spinach, parsley and okra.

The owner enjoys all the work that the garden requires including toting bags of compost, peat moss, pails of rain water, pruning, weeding, harvesting as well as arranging flowers and dining on her organic fruits and vegetables.

Persons associated with the garden include Steve Sawyer (former owner, n.d.).

Landscape architect: Mechler, Stephen F.

Provenance: The Garden Club of Honolulu

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, site plans, a narrative description of the garden, a copy of an article about the house (with a photo of the garden) and other information.

The subdivision of a larger site (Wahiolu olu, Archives of American Gardens HI018), resulted in the creation of a new home and surrounding garden on land totaling 11,000 square feet. Located in a lush bamboo rainforest 1,500 feet above Honolulu, with outstanding views and over 100 inches of rainfall per year, the garden incorporates a terraced hillside with a variety of colorful plantings and floral borders. Moss rock retaining walls, antique wrought iron arches, a large water lily pond, and a waterfall are all featured elements of the garden. The home's entry is introduced by a small, fragrant white garden, framed by restored wrought-iron fencing once used at Iolani Palace. The garden's plant life includes mixtures of bromeliads, tropical vireya, roses, undulating hedges of plumbago, begonias, lantana, gardenias, anthuriums, dahlias, amaryllis, and clivia. In addition, there is a blue garden featuring blue agapanthus, hydrangeas, abelia, and brunfelsia. The planting beds surround a thick green lawn of St. Augustine grass. Lawn furniture and a forge converted to a grill provide opportunities for outdoor living. Many trees--guava, orange, jacaranda, pink datura, plumeria, banana, gold, avocado, and banyan--make the garden their home, while bamboo hedges tower above the vegetation and separate the site from adjoining properties. Because of the many restrictions that protect the environment, watershed, and conservation of this area it will remain a pure, green, rare, and beautiful place on the island of Oahu.

Persons associated with the garden include Stephen F. Mechler (landscape architect, 2004).

HI033: Kaneohe -- Nottage Garden

Garden Nottage, Lois

designer:

Provenance: The Garden Club of Honolulu

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, photocopies of articles, and other information.

Native Hawaiians built fish ponds from lava rocks in the 1400s that developers filled in the 1940s to produce ocean front housing sites. The Nottage Garden is located on 17,500 square feet of this fill, mostly heavy clay harvested from nearby reefs in Kaneohe Bay. Starting in 1955, the owners have created an informal tropical garden stocked with native Polynesian and Asian trees and perennials that surrounds their self-designed house and continues to the bay. An open Dutch door provides an ocean view from the house, and the front deck and ocean side terrace are furnished for outdoor living. Several varieties of palm trees grow on the perimeter of the property along with lychee, lime, lemon, papaya and banana trees that provide fruit and privacy. Colorful bromeliads, hibiscus, ti and bougainvillea grow alongside abundant ferns, blue sandpaper, stephanotis, and golden dewdrop vines and bonsai.

The garden incorporates artifacts and plants of the Hawaiian culture. Lava rock is used for retaining walls and large basins once used for crushing rocks are now planting containers. Garden ornaments include green glass fishing floats from Japan. The owners planted Hala trees that served many purposes historically, including fiber for weaving and wood for implements.

Persons associated with the garden include Lois Nottage (garden designer, 1955 to present).

The Garden Club of Honolulu facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Nottage Garden related holdings consist of 1 folder (24 digital images)

HI013: Kawaihae -- Waiulaula

HI037: Kula -- Pualani

Landscape designer: Walker, Blanche

Former owner: Cornwall, William

Notes: The folder includes worksheets and photographs of the property undergoing renovation.

Located on the slopes of Haleakala Volcano, this cattle ranch and farm was originally purchased from the Hawaiian Kingdom by Yung Hee in the mid 1800s. In 1893 the current owner's great grandfather, William Henry Cornwell, sailed to Shanghai to purchase the 10,000 acres. The ranch remained a working cattle ranch after Cornwell purchased it. In 1916, all but 250 acres of the ranch land was sold. Subsequent generations have transformed the ranch headquarters and office into a home. The large area surrounding the home is comprised of open lawns and a rich tapestry of gardens, stately trees, seating areas, trellises and terraces. The empty concrete cistern fronting the house is a reminder of ranch days and frequent droughts.

Persons associated with the garden include Young Hee (former owner, mid-1800s); William Cornwell (former owner, 1893); Blanche Walker (landscape designer, early 1900s to 1950s).

Weekes, John, Mrs.

Notes: The folder includes worksheets and a summary garden plan.

This 14-acre site features a half-acre perennial garden, which also includes some self-seeding annuals, shrubs, and trees. The pool house is surrounded with shrubs, lilies, hostas, ferns, and red twig dogwood, while the main house has foundation plantings of red twig dogwood, sand cherry, and juniper. The guest house has lawn on one side and a wildflower meadow. From the pool the lawn slants down to a stream with water plants and a meadow opposite. The site then runs to another stream and the Big Wood River.

Persons associated with the garden include: Elizabeth T. Taylor (landscape designer, 1986); Richard Emik (landscape architect, 1987-1988); Dates Fryberger (architect, 1972); Paul Matthes (gardener, 1993-1996); and Mr. and Mrs. John Weekes (former owners, before 1972).

ID020: Pocatello -- The Wilkes/Valentine Gardens

Former owner: Miller, David and Phyllis Ann

Provenance: Garden Club of Hartford

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, planting list, and planting plan.

Located on a city lot that is not quite half an acre, this garden is on a gradient of more than twenty-five feet, sloping up from the street to the wall at the back of the property as well as sloping from side to side. The owners have created a colorful array in the front, back and side yards, with terraces, paths and steps that unify the property, decorative statuary and a fountain. In the front yard overgrown evergreens that blocked the windows were removed, new terraces were built of terracotta blocks to replace crumbling shale, a white picket fence was added to coordinate with the white trim on the 1950s ranch style house, and the sprinkler system was improved. The backyard had rock-walled terraces with only remnants of earlier flower beds and rows of evergreen trees, many of which were dead, and an improperly aligned cement patio. Weeds and invasive vines had to be removed, rock circles were dismantled with the rocks added to existing rock walls that needed to be rebuilt, and new walls, steps and walkways were built using terracotta blocks. A redwood deck was built over the roofed patio with new wooden fencing stained to match, replacing chain link fencing and an old chicken wire kennel. The terraces, paved walkways and steps also alleviated problems with run-off.

The front yard terraces and retaining wall bed are filled with red, yellow and orange annuals and spring bulbs balanced with yews, golden privet, a climbing rose against the house, a dwarf spruce and creeping junipers. In the back yard there are colorful flower beds with annuals planted in masses, mature evergreens, dwarf fruit trees, vegetables, herbs, and shrubs. The lawn is punctuated by fruit and crab apple trees. The highest level terrace at the rear has dwarf spruce and lilacs; the middle terrace has shrubs, daylilies, and hostas; and the lowest terrace has red, yellow and orange annuals. In addition to a large birdbath there are statues in the lower two terraces. A white painted arbor in the side terraces has a stone bench beneath which the newly-designed patio nearby can seat 60 people.

Persons associated with the garden include: David and Phyllis Ann Miller (former owners, 1954-2003) and Cedric Allen of Myers-Anderson Architects (architect, 1954).

The Hartford Garden Club facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

ID006: Sagle -- Hal and Ruth Hargreaves Garden
Provenance: Broadmoor Garden Club
Notes: The folder includes worksheets, garden plans, and other information.
Located on ten acres in northern Idaho, this garden was begun in 1995 and is still a work in progress. In harmony with nature, the house and garden designs incorporate glacial moraine river rock plus natural slate. Surrounded by 100-foot-tall pine and fir trees, the site features forest and mountain views. A raised-bed vegetable garden, a lavender and potentilla border, and the extensive use of colorful planters of annuals are but a few highlights of this garden that is shared with moose, mountain lions, black bear, and deer.
The Broadmoor Garden Club of Colorado Springs, Colorado, facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

ID005: Sagle -- The Lady of the Lake

Provenance: Broadmoor Garden Club

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, garden plans, and additional information about the garden and its site.

This two-acre garden lies on the shore of Lake Pend Oreille in northern Idaho. Stone and brick form an integral part of the home and garden design, including a long flight of stairs leading from the main residence to the beach and dock area. The gardens, designed by the property owner, include a variety of perennials, annuals, and grasses. Among the featured plants are roses, columbine, lupine, and poppies, as well as fir and pine trees. Anchoring it all is the lake itself, a peaceful refuge of sight, sound, and wildlife.

The Broadmoor Garden Club facilitated the donation and documentation of this garden.

Landscape designer: Schmechtig Landscape Company

Landscape contractor: Schmechtig Landscape Company

Provenance: Garden Club of Barrington

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, detailed site plans with a plant list, and other information.

Located on a 1,600 square foot lot, this garden has been under development only since 2005. Reflecting the Craftsman style architecture of the house, the design includes features ranging from an outdoor fireplace and "dining room" to a safe play area for the family dog. A rear garden includes terraced planting areas surrounding a pergola-covered patio with a wood-burning fireplace. A daybed is built into the terrace wall with one view down the side garden featuring ferns, hydrangeas, a mature tree, and other bushy plants. Terraced against the garage side wall is an herb garden with two espaliered fruit trees. The curving lines of the front garden border continue the lines of two contiguous properties, while there are small bulb and perennial planting areas at the junction of the front walk and the sidewalk. A diversity of plant material makes this a rich garden that belies its relatively small size.

The Garden Club of Barrington facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

Notes: Construction of the Prairie style house built on multiple levels over an abandoned gravel pit began in 1941. William Deknatel, a student of Frank Lloyd Wright, designed the house and may have consulted with the garden. According to a primary source, no other professional designer was involved. The previous owners, from 1941 to the late 1960s maintained the garden themselves. As of 2002, the garden appeared abandoned.

Notes: Materials relating to the private garden located in Barrington Hills, Illinois. The folder includes slides, descriptions of slides, plans, Real Estate advertisement, list of plants, with a description and worksheet done by GCA researcher Patricia Mead. This garden includes sculptures by Charles Eugene Gagnon and Victor Salmones.

"The gardens include a perennial garden (English style) and a rock garden leading up to the pool area. The driveway is lined with hosta, impatiens, and perennials. The waterfall pond area is planted with impatiens, tuberous begonias and perennials. The lake area is home to native grasses, wildflowers and water plants."

"The 50 acres are part of what once was a dairy farm. The main house is made up of 3 houses built in Massachusetts in 1699, 1720, and 1805, and moved to this location in the early 1920's by flatbed railroad car."

Persons associated with the property include: Russell A. Pettengill (former owner 1922 to 1932); Orville Ceasar (former owner 1932 to ?); Lyman Smith (former owner ? to 1964); Pat Patten (former owner 1964-1967); Charles Eugen Gagnon (sculptor); Victor Salmones (sculptor); Luke Burros (gardener and landscaper 1975 to 1987); John Suchy (water and prairie landscaper 1991 to 1995); Raul Guijarro (gardener 1987); Bob Kelly (arborist 1996); Mary S.  The red brick Georgian style house was built in 1922 as a country place, gifted along with 60 acres of farmland; in 1991 the house had been restored but the 15-acre property was overgrown with buckthorn and invasive vines. While clearing the land the owners discovered the remains of a 1930's formal garden next to the house and a one-acre spring-fed pond at the perimeter. The first garden they designed and planted, Woods Walk, has meandering paths under a towering canopy of red, bur and white oak, quantities of spring bulbs, part shade flowering shrubs and perennials, fountains, garden art, hidden seating and a tool shed. Long rows of arborvitae and boxwood hedges were planted to create a formal structure for garden rooms that would surround and spread out from the house on ten acres, eventually fenced to keep out deer. There are nine main garden rooms with formal patio gardens outside the house, expansive lawns punctuated with trees, and more casual plantings leading to the woods and the pond. Two massive lion planters anchor the Leo Lion garden that has a flagstone walkway, dwarf evergreens, two weeping birch positioned to form a natural arch, perennials, grasses and ferns. The English Pool garden has a 14-column classical Greek pergola supporting a climbing hydrangea and perennials and annuals chosen for their colorful blossoms. A formal parterre garden terraced beneath one of the patios has red and white roses under a weeping cherry. The garden rooms are entered under arches covered with clematis and other climbing vines; the Gala Garden designed and planted for a hospice benefit is bordered by blue tuteurs with climbing roses and clematis. Other garden structures include an eight-sided gazebo and an ironwork folly with climbing vines.

A Mirror Walk garden is shaded by mature oak with three beds of deciduous azaleas and color coordinated tulips on one side facing beds of shade perennials that include bleeding heart, lobelia, and petasites with banks of hosta around each bed. The Wedding Walk garden has four arches bordered by more casual flower beds chosen to attract butterflies and transition to the natural pond with cattails, Adirondack chairs and a fire pit. A vegetable garden and orchard are located outside the gate cottage or coach house as they were under the original owners. Many of the garden rooms and patio gardens feature planted urns and other containers; even tall columns are topped with flower-filled pots. The voluminous plantings were aided in part by Ball Horticultural Company: from 2004 to 2011 Olsen's Woods Walk was a test garden for as many as 500 flats of perennials and annuals each year that would be evaluated and photographed, with some images appearing in Ball catalogs and other advertisements. Also, the owners hosted many charitable benefits and open days for the Garden Conservancy and other organizations.

Persons associated with the garden include: Evan A. and Pauline Hart Evans (former owners, circa 1922-1950); Bruce Alexander and Joan Ferris Pope (former owners, circa 1959-1971); Guy H. and Bette A. Seno (former owners, circa 1971-1976); G. Willard and Bonita Theissen (former owners, circa 1976-1991); Eric E. and Margaret G. Olsen (former owners, 1991-2018); Robert G. Work (1874-1960) (architect for house and coach house, 1922); Charlie Keppel (tree maintenance, 1991-2018); Eric Bode (arborist, 2007-2018); Liz Olsen and Andrew Wolfgram (garden design and maintenance, 2007-2018).

Notes: The folder includes a slide list and excerpts from publications featuring the gardens.

"Garfield Park holds Chicago's famous conservatory. Built in 1893, the 4 1/2 acre Garfield Park Conservatory (300 N. Central Park Blvd.) represents one of the largest and finest publicly owned conservatories in the world. Its enormous collection contains over five thousand varieties and species, and its propagating houses grow nearly three hundred thousand plants each year. Displays include the Palm House, the Fernery (over a hundred kinds of ferns), the Aroid House (tropicals), the Cactus House and and Economic Plant Houses (tropicals, citrus, spices), and the Main Horticultural Hall and the Show House, where massive floral exhibitions are held four times yearly. Near the conservatory is the large Garfield Park garden, 4 acres containing over twenty-four formal flower beds (fifteen thousand annuals), and a pool containing the best waterlily collection (fifty varieties) in the Midwest."

"Lincoln Park, the largest park in Chicago, stretches almost the entire length of the north end of the city along the lake. Contains statues of Lincoln, Hans Christian Anderson, Shakespeare and others, a 9-hole golf course, driving range, miniature golf, bike and jogging paths, obstacle course, and protected beaches."

"The oldest garden is the Lincoln Park Grandmother's Garden, begun in 1893. This 3-acre garden with its broad lawns and shade trees contains a charming collection of old-fashioned plants with over forty thousand annuals and perennials providing color, spring to fall. [Lincoln Park also possesses an excellent conservatory (2400 N. Stockton Dr.). Erected in 1891, it now consists of four huge glass buildings and eighteen propagating houses - 3 acres in all. Displays include the Palm house, the Fernery, the Tropical House, and the Show House, where four major shows are held each year. The conservatory also has a permanent orchid collection. Just south of the conservatory is the Lincoln Park Main Garden, more than 7 acres of formal gardens (some twenty-five thousand bedding plants), lawns, fountains, and statuary)."

Although the house on this 1.5-acre site, designed by English-born architect Ernest Mayo, was built in 1909, the current garden has been under development only since 1977. Removal and extensive renovation of existing exterior features preceded a new design highlighted by brick and stone paths, rose and herb gardens, new trees, and extensive plantings of azaleas and rhododendrons. The Ernest Mayo-designed gazebo, which had formerly been a cupola atop the Evanston City Hall, was acquired in 1979. Over the years additional improvements and plantings have been undertaken, with major work occurring in 1992-93 in conjunction with construction of an addition to the house. Additional redesign took place in 1995 and 1999. The garden was featured in the Open Days Program for the Garden Conservancy of America in 1999. From spruce trees to flowering perennials, from oak leaf hydrangea to miniature roses, this garden is characterized by its variety of plantings and its continuous evolution over the years.

Persons and firms associated with the garden include: Edward K. Hardy, Jr., (former owner, 1909-1924); Dr. D. B. Peck (former owner, 1924-1955); Mr. and Mrs. E. I. Architect: Clark, Edwin

Notes: 6 digital images (2017) and 1 file folder.

The Garden Club of Evanston facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

The eclectic Tudor influenced house was built in 1922 and the gardens on the nearly half-acre property were redesigned in 1999. They have been maintained since then by the owners, who've replaced trees lost in storms and augmented other plantings when necessary. The style of the gardens, like the house, derives from English gardens with massed plantings in curvilinear beds surrounding lawns. In front of the house there are large trees and shrubs – hornbeam, river birch, kerria, crabapple, viburnum and hydrangea - under planted with shade perennials that include hosta, astilbe, Japanese painted fern, and purple leaf wintercreeper ground cover. Two shaded curving blue stone walkways lead behind the house where a large flagstone terrace is bordered with boxwood hedges, roses, and large containers planted with annuals. A massive climbing hydrangea is a feature. The borders are studded with pine as well as hydrangea, dogwood, lilac, viburnum, yew, holly, daylily, foamflower, coral bells, geranium and many other shrubs and perennial varieties that thrive in the Midwest. A wooden bench is situated near the back of the property opposite the terrace that spans the entire back of the house.

Persons associated with the garden include: Mr. and Mrs. Roy Ozanne (former owners, 1922-); Mr. and Mrs. Harry Mosser (former owners, dates unknown); Mr. and Mrs. William McCurdy (former owners, 1963-); Mr. and Mrs. Norman Gross (former owners, -1979); Edwin Hill Clark (1878-1967) Clark & Walcott (architects, 1922); Rosbrough Partners (landscape architects, 1999).

Landscape Jensen, Jens, 1860-1951

architect:

Provenance: Garden Club of Evanston (Evanston, Ill.)

Notes: The folder includes a worksheet, site map, narrative history, and a plant list.

In 1937, the Park Board gave permission for the planning of a wildflower trail to the Garden Club of Evanston, who hired the well-known landscape architect, Jens Jensen, to draw the plans for the quarter acre space. Native herbs and trees such as black oaks, honey locusts, basswood, sugar and silver maples, black cherries, and American elms were preserved. Jensen added pin oaks, cut-leaf maples, weeping birches, wild crabapples, and wild cherries. The first planting included eight varieties of violets native to Evanston, a fern collection, and wild plants which were taken from highway and residential development areas. Plantings were designed to give the appearance of a natural woodland, except that each species was grouped in a mass to make a better show. A fountain was installed west of the picnic shelter at the south side. Later, a garden seat was added. Dr. Margery Carlson helped to restore the trail in 1960 with new plants. The Garden Club of Evanston continues to maintain the garden to the present day.

Persons and organizations associated with the garden include: United States Government (former owner, 1871-1935); Evanston Lighthouse Park District (owners, 1937 to present); Garden Club of Evanston (caretaker, 1937-present); and Jens Jenson (landscape architect, 1937).

Provenance: Garden Club of Evanston (Evanston, Ill.)

Notes: The folder includes worksheets, site plans, historical information about the site, a plant list and planting plans, and other information.

Established in 1997, the Grosse Pointe Lighthouse Butterfly Garden is a project of the Garden Club of Evanston. Located on the grounds of Lighthouse Park adjacent to the club's Wildflower Trail Garden, the garden was designed to attract a variety of butterflies and to support both adult butterflies and caterpillars. The correct plant material assures that the butterflies have the high-energy food sources they require. It also assures that the butterflies will have the kinds of plants upon which to both lay their eggs and provide nourishment for the larvae. Water, a stone for sunning, and a butterfly house for protection are also included in the garden. Similarly, garden maintenance is scheduled to support the butterfly's life cycle: no fall clean up and a dormant winter to leave the larvae undisturbed, and a gentle, late spring clean up to allow the butterflies to emerge. Commonly spotted in the garden are species such as monarch, cabbage, black swallowtail, and painted lady. The garden continues to educate the community about butterflies, their life cycle, and the need to protect them as their natural habitats are lost to construction and contaminated with pesticides. See also the Archives of American Gardens' entry for the Grosse Pointe Lighthouse Wildflower Trail Park, IL113.

Persons and organizations associated with the garden include: the United States Government (former owner, 1871-1935); the Evanston Lighthouse Park District (owner, 1937 to date); and the Garden Club of Evanston (caretaker, 1997 to date).

Notes: The folder includes worksheets articles and lists of notable plants and shrubs.

After enlarging the garage the owners of this one-sixth acre property added a roof garden comprised of low growing hardy perennials arranged in a pattern in a soil less mix, increasing their green space. All that remained of the original garden planted in 1978 when the contemporary box style house was built were hedges of yew, serviceberry and pine in the front garden that needed to be pruned. Azaleas and daffodils were planted in the front garden and a seating area for outdoor dining was rejuvenated. Bamboo was planted next to the house along a narrow walkway but has struggled to survive in the area's climate. In the back garden a row of flowering pear trees was planted in front of a surviving yew hedge, and concrete edging and slabs were added. In summer the slabs are softened by the plants growing in the beds between them, including heucheras, ornamental grasses and peonies.

The white house known as the "sugar cube" is complemented by oversize ornaments, including two metal chair sculptures on the terrace and large containers. The containers are replanted four times a year with annuals and tender perennials that are in season. The garage is the backdrop for the garden, and cedar siding adds a decorative element. Proportion and scale as well as hardiness are important considerations in choosing the plant materials for this garden.

Persons and groups associated with the garden include: George and Susan Larson (former owners, 1978-2004); Kettlekamp & Kettlekamp (landscape architects, 2005-); Gary Bregman (landscape maintenance, 2005-); Sheridan Architecture (architect of garage, 2005).

The Garden Guild of Winnetka facilitated the submission of this garden's documentation.

IL122: Kenilworth -- Coolridge Garden

Landscape architect: Hoerr, Douglas Provenance: Kenilworth Garden Club
 Notes: The folder includes worksheets, site plans, historical information about the house and garden, photocopies of articles about the property and garden, reference images, and other information.

A private residence on one acre has a 1929 house of asymmetrical design, with a rectangular sunken lawn behind the house surrounded by low retaining walls that are symmetrically punctuated by four stone stairways. The walls serve as raised beds for perennials and shrubs. Two concrete jardinières at each stairway are planted in topiary boxwood. A large patio behind the house is paved in bluestone set in a random pattern. Beyond the patio a stairway leads to the lower elevation lawn. The garden was designed for entertaining, with seating on the patio and under a pergola.

The house has Art Deco ironwork at the front and back doors, which is complemented by an ironwork scrim that supports the pergola. An antique fountain surrounded by boxwood at one end of the lawn balances the pergola at the other end. A shaded woodland garden features an antique limestone bench. The walkway along one side of the house is bordered by perennial flower beds, ground cover beds, and a rose garden.

The Coolidge Garden has been documented by the Garden Conservancy.

Persons associated with the garden include Douglas Hoerr of Hoerr Schaudt Landscape Architects (landscape architect, 2001 to present).
