VMFA-212 and 232

Squadrons swap deployment task

by SSgt. W.S. Saunders

Colorful leis, joyful tears and open arms greeted the pilots of VMFA-212 as they returned after a six month deployment in the Western Pacific.

The "Lancers," under the command of LtCol. J.J. Barta, were assigned to Marine Aircraft Group-15 in Iwakuni, Japan, and participated in several operations.

"In early May, The Lancers participated in 'Operation Balikitan' and 'Cope Thunder' in the Philippines and performed admirably," said Squadron SgtMaj. H.P. Dean. "In June, the squadron participated in 'Operation Battle Week,' also in the Philippines and

'Cope Jade' in Osan, Korea.

"In July they flew missions with the Japanese Self-Defense Force in Iwakuni, Japan, and participated in 'Operation Beach Crest' on Okinawa, Japan, in September."

The Lancers were relieved by VMFA 232 which is scheduled to return in April 1985.

F-4 Phantoms from VMFA-232 begin to take-off as the squadron leaves for a six-month deployment in the Western Pacific.

Home improvements at Booby colony completed

by SSgt. Bob Torres

The sounds of saws, weed eaters and heavy equipment joined the raucous calls of the Red Footed Booby birds on Ulupou Crater.

"We're trying to implement our Wildlife Management Plan on the Air Station," explained Dr. Diane Drigot, environmental specialist.

"Several proposals were submitted and we've selected those we could accomplish without too much delay.

We felt that there was an urgent need to begin the brush clearing project, especially with the extended drought. This area could be a major fire hazard," said Drigot.

"Once a fire starts, it's gone," related WO J.D. Johnson, officer in charge of the Rifle Range. Johnson pointed to areas most likely to burn in a matter of seconds, which covered the current roosting site of the Booby colony.

"These are federally protected birds," continued Drigot. "We're expected to keep the habitat in reasonably good shape. Some recommendations for this project were to cut brush away from the Kiawe trees, preferred by the Boobies as nesting sites. The object is to cut the brush away about 50 feet from the trees," Drigot said. "This should do several things, help the Kiawe's live longer by cutting away their competition; cutting the foliage should discourage predators from crawling up

Cpl. Gary Aleman, Facilities Department, sharpens a machete he'll use to clear underbrush reducing the fire hazard and making it easier to sight the Red Footed Booby Bird colony.

An editorial:

Professional stagnation

by SSgt. W.S. Saunders

"One who is content with what he has done will never become famous for what he will do. He has laid down to die, and the grass is already over him." Christian Nestell Bovee.

One definition of the word content is to limit oneself in requirements, desires or actions. To me, this means reaching a plateau and not having the courage or energy to climb any higher. Life is like a mountain with its peak never in sight. Our goals, dreams and aspirations keep us climbing and forever reaching for the next plateau.

Some believe that dreaming is foolish, but without dreams we have nothing to live for. If we are simply content with what we are, we will never know what we can be.

I am, by no means, a philosopher, but I think I can share my beliefs and be confident that many people identify with them.

Contentment, to me, is stagnation. We can't be content to make it through life, we must make our lives the best possible. It takes hard work, determination and the ability to dream.

Each of us has the potential to be the best at everything. We have the strength to succeed. Likewise, we have the weakness to fail. It is our decision.

In the Marine Corps, the obstacles we face are tough, the restrictions many, and the path we climb is narrow. At times, it may seem the odds are against us and we'll never get anywhere. This is the time to relax, build our strength and courage back up, set our sights, and continue to march.

No one can take our dreams. They are ours to nurture and bring to life. We must keep striving for promotions, better physical condition, sharper appearance, and acquire a higher degree of combat readiness. These things we must want. They can't be given to us.

When people show a desire to better themselves, there will always be someone behind them to give them a boost. If there is no desire to reach the next plateau, there will be no helping hand.

It is for us to decide where we are going in life. How far up the mountain we want to climb. To be content is to set no goal and have no dreams . . . and to let the grass grow over us.

Servicewomen gather to exchange ideas

by Sgt. L.C. Brooks

The Army hosted a Women in the Service Luncheon held at Fort Shafter's Officers Club last week.

A four-piece combo entertained more than 250 guests with mellow jazz during lunch before the guest speakers took to the podium.

"This is a very unique opportunity for us in Hawaii, especially since we have the second largest contingency of United States service members in the world outside of Washington, D.C.," said Army Maj. Vera Kellar, hostess of the luncheon. "The evolution of this particular group of Women in the Service started about 1 1/2 years ago when we formed a panel to speak to the Federally Employed Women's Program during their conference in Honolulu.

"As a result of that panel, and some very exceptional cheerleading from Marine LtCol. Donna Campbell, we've continued to meet as a group. We've begun seeing what the different services on the island are doing, exchanging ideas and supporting each other," Maj. Kellar said.

Kellar then introduced Maj. Gen. Claude M. Kicklighter.

"I'm very proud of what you contribute to the defense of our nation and to our services," said Maj. Gen. Kicklighter. "When the involvement in South Vietnam ended, we had a mission to rebuild our services. In fact, if it had not been for the outstanding leadership, dedication and participation of the females in our services we could not have replenished our forces to the level they are today."

Maj. Gen. Kicklighter presented the special guest speaker, Brig. Gen. Connie L. Slewitzke, Chief of the Army Nurse Corps since September 1983, and an Army veteran of 26 years as an outstanding female role model, according to Kicklighter.

"I'm very proud to have the opportunity to be here to speak with you today. Even though I come from a medical organization, our (different services) problems are unique across the board including people, communications and the nation's problems. I think we all need to support each other no matter what service we're in," emphasized Brig. Gen. Slewitzke.

"You know, from the time we were little boys and girls we were socialized differently. Men have always been socialized to be group members and support each other. Women don't always do that, but we need to. No matter how far we advance, it is imperative to exchange and discuss ideas with each other," said Slewitzke.

According to the general, it was great to see so many women from the different services at the luncheon. "There is a commonality of issues such as uniforms and appearance regardless of the service," she said.

She encourages women stationed in isolated areas to become more involved with the Federal Women's Program. By teaming up with that organization, women have a small group being supported by another group with mutual interests, according to Slewitzke. "I recently visited five facilities in Germany of behalf of the FWP and I'm very proud to say there was great representation by military women," said the general.

The Chief of the Army Nurse Corps is responsible for 22,000 personnel including 4,000 nurses, active duty enlisted medical personnel, medical reservist and National Guard. In this position she has studied several reports on what helps women succeed.

"Women must get more education to assume high level position; they must have interest and motivation; and they have to be more persistent," said Slewitzke.

"When you are ready to assume a position of responsibility, you must make a decision because certain positions may take time away from your family. A service couple with children must decide whose career is going to take precedence," the general said. "When an officer doesn't take a particular assignment, that officer may not be able to assume a higher level position. We must be willing to accept these facts when pursuing high level jobs."

Slewitzke emphasized that senior NCOs and officers should be role models and mentors for those they supervise. "It's very important to provide guidance and support for these individuals," she said.

"I feel senior women in the military have the responsibility to develop leaders and to see that they have career opportunities and the best chance possible to be all they can be whether they're in the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps or Coast Guard."

There aren't many part-time jobs that give you a chance to get interesting training, learn new skills and jobs and even give you benefits like retirement and discount shopping. Those are good reasons in themselves to join the Marine Reserve. But perhaps the strongest reason is the opportunity to get back with fellow Marines. Men you have something in common with. People you can count on. And part of one of the world's most elite fighting forces.

Guidelines explained for guests in housing

by Sgt. J.L. Muhlenkamp

All personnel residing in government quarters on the Air Station who are expecting to have a civilian house guest for more than 72 hours are required to register them with the Family Housing Office.

Visits which are expected to be more than 30 days require advanced approval in writing. Visitors who are expected to remain for over 12 months are not considered guests, and requests in these cases must be fully justified in writing to the Family Housing Office.

In order to be considered a civilian house guest, according to Air Station Order P11101.8F, the person must be invited by a military sponsor, and is one who does not contribute directly, or indirectly, to any of the household expenses generated by such a visit.

A service member or dependent, or a member who is eligible for assignment to family or bachelor military housing in Hawaii, is limited to a one-time visit of a maximum of 30 days as a guest. Military guests must be registered with the Family Housing Office if they remain, or are expected to remain, in quarters for longer than 72 hours.

Joint occupancy of a single set of quarters by the families of two service members for more than 30 days is considered to be assignment to quarters for both sponsors and will cause them both to forfeit their BAQ. Joint occupancy is not authorized without advanced written approval.

Subletting or receiving rent, payment or other considerations for use of accommodations is prohibited. A violation will cause eviction and prosecution, as appropriate. Continued violations of these regulations may cause eviction.

Anyone with questions concerning guests in government quarters should contact Mr. Simon at 257-2705.

Amazon expe

by SSgt Bob Torres

Nighttime sounds are like no others heard in the civilized world.

The brash cackle of cicadas, the screech of monkeys, the cacophony of birds, and occasionally, the cough of a hunting jaguar, is a sound-picture of the Amazon, the largest river in the world. At its mouth, one shore cannot be seen from the other.

From the port of Iquitos, Peru, a research team boarded a boat that would take them 50 miles up the Amazon. Murray Visser, Station Librarian, was on this expedition.

There were 23 people on the expedition, and their mission was to assist Dr. Paul Gerber, from Illinois University, study the moustached tamarin, a monkey about 10 inches tall.

"I heard about Earth Watch through a magazine advertisement," said Visser. "Earth Watch has an office that acts as a clearing house for expeditions. They're kind of like the SATO office we have here. I flew from Honolulu to L.A., then to Mexico City. From there, I went to Lima, Peru, and met the other members of the expedition. We took a local airline flight to Iquitos where we began our tour which lasted from Aug. 1-15," he said.

"Physically it was a big shock to go primitive," Visser said. "Mentally it was relaxing, getting away from the pressures of the job — daily commuting, traffic lights and the sounds of trucks and buses. There was no sound out there except nature's."

"You're immediately aware of the noise the first night in the jungle. In the beginning, it was real 'freaky' being out there because it was dark and I didn't have a flashlight," said Visser. "Vines that hang from trees look like snakes in the dark, but you can't tell. A lot of snakes, and sometimes jaguar, are out at night."

Before the trip into the jungle, the team spent a day in Iquitos, where the first stages of culture shock took place.

"Iquitos was a major city at the turn of the century because of the rubber boom," Visser explained. "Vultures are the living garbage disposals because there's no pickup. Motorcycles are the major means of transportation and they even have motorcycle taxis. I was surprised at the amount of people outdoors, especially at night, due to the humidity. But the people are very friendly and gregarious."

With a smile, Visser relates an observation about the hotel accommodations. "The walls are paper thin, so the owner decided to take the toilet covers off because they say Americans are toilet seat slammers. They use the seats for planters. The place was $3 a day, but what's ironic is that you're on the largest river in the world and they can't guarantee running water. There are times when you'd turn on the water faucet and nothing would happen."

When the expedition started up river, they saw a floating city. Indians living in huts placed on logs. The huts move up and down when the Amazon rises, sometimes as much as 12 feet.

Islands in the middle of the river, dugout canoes and Indian women washing clothes along the river banks all became common sights. There was even mention of pink dolphins found in the river.

"People travel up and down the Amazon in boats and dugout canoes," Visser said. "Indians sometimes have entire families and their possessions on the boats, with the keel a mere inches above water; but I never saw one capsized. We stopped at the last post which had electricity. It was the last chance we would have for two weeks to get a cold drink."

"We had some Indians with us on the expedition," said Visser. "We couldn't have survived without them. As we were going upriver, a lot of fish jumped in our wake. When one jumped into the boat, the Indians showed us how to prepare it for eating."

"Indians live right off the river bank," he continued. "They live in thatched huts raised so that water won't get in. During the rainy season, snakes get in the huts too. In our hut, the head researcher reached into the food pantry and grabbed a snake, but luckily it was non-poisonous."

When the expedition turned into one of the smaller tributaries, they got stuck on the underwater logs and brush of the river. "We all had to get out of the boat to pull it over the logs, just like in the movie, 'African Queen,'" Visser said.

When the expedition reached the outpost, they found several thatched huts with cages holding "tame" monkeys. "There were mosquitos everywhere," said Visser, "and there also were a lot of army ants. They're pretty good scavengers."

"The professor had never been in the military so he didn't know anything about digging latrines away from the hut. Sometimes when people went out and it was dark, they didn't go very far in the jungle. The army ants took care of a lot of the waste."

Along with the trials of going "primitive," and learning about the tamarin and jungle lore, Visser found out how much he takes for granted.

"Everyone was sick with diarrhea and the flu," continued Visser. "The conditions were primitive. For instance, there was no way to wash the dishes sanitarily. I caught the flu when we first got there and because of the close proximity, everyone got sick. We also learned to do without. The photographer's luggage was lost in Miami and he arrived with nothing but the clothes on his back and his camera gear. But he survived quite well out there. You really didn't need a lot of equipment to survive."

"It was even more primitive in the Indian huts. They didn't even have wire screens," remarked Visser. "They make a camp fire that throws off a lot of smoke to keep the mosquitos away. Many Indians lose their eyesight because of the smoke, but that's the only way they know to keep the mosquitos away."

The Indians set up the camp and kept it running with their knowledge of the jungle, and the wives did the washing and cooking.

"The Indians knew exactly where the monkeys were," said Visser. "The tamarins travel over a large part of the jungle daily. The Indians knew where they would be approximately two hours before we got there."

"There are two types of tamarins, the swayback and the moustached. We studied the moustached which are about 10 inches tall and are used for hepatitis research. We also caught pygmy marmosets."

Although they share the same forests, the marmosets don't compete with the tamarins. "They don't mix," said Visser. "They're entirely separate from the tamarins. They're smaller, about six inches, and hard to see in the jungle. They don't move in large areas, they stay in about a half acre, and eat the sap from some trees. The tamarins live in taller tree levels and travel long distances."

"We caught the monkeys by putting bananas in traps and then hiding in the foliage with a string to the door. When a monkey went in the cage, we pulled the door shut. We made sure that we only caught one monkey per cage. If you caught two in one cage, they

Morning mist on the Blanco River, a tributary of the Amazon, highlights an Indian dugout canoe. Logs and underwater brush in the river made it necessary for the expedition to occasionally get out and pull the boats over the obstacles.

A moustached tamarin nibbles on a leaf at the doorstep of one of the thatched huts. The "tame" tamarins roamed freely around the base camp, 50 miles up the Amazon from the port city of Iquitos.

Dr. Paul Gerber, from Illinois University, holds a simple torch for expedition members to see. The torch was formed by wrapping leaves together and with the sap of a tree, took about a minute to make, and burned for almost an hour.

would fight because they blamed the other for being trapped."

A plaster set of the teeth was made, and then the monkeys were weighed and measured, including sizes of arms and legs. Then they were tagged with beaded collars.

"The collars had different colored beads so when we spotted them through our binoculars, we would be able to tell the sex of the monkey, where he had first been tagged, and other information," explained Visser.

"Probably the most tedious part was weighing and measuring seeds. We gathered seeds and other things they eat. Then every evening the head researcher would compile all the information."

When the expedition went into the jungle, one of the Indians showed them how to make a torch. He took leaves and bundled them around tree sap. It took about a minute to make and burned for about an hour. "The torch gave off a good smell too," said Visser. "There are all kinds of vines in the jungle. One particular kind you can cut and drink, just like out of a faucet. All those vines looked the same to me, but the Indian guide knew which ones to cut.

"By the end of the day, you didn't care if there were piranhas in the water, when you get dirty you just want to jump in," said Visser. "The water may be muddy but it feels good. It's the only way to keep clean."

"We caught a piranha while fishing close to our bathing hole. This type had small teeth, so they just nibble at you. You can feel them nibbling; it's kind of a creepy feeling because you can't see into the water. There were also supposed to be some caiman (small alligator) down there, but we didn't see any."

This is not the first time that Visser has traveled, he got the bug as a child. Born in Indonesia, Visser has lived there, in Japan, Holland, California, Iran, and was stationed in Germany as a soldier.

"I worked in Iran before the revolution," said Visser. "The Air Force had a contract with the Iranian air force for English teachers. They needed to learn English so they would be able to use our manuals. I left about a year before the revolution in April '77."

Visser graduated from the University of Hawaii prior to his trip to Iran. When he returned, he received his master's degree in library science.

"I've rafted the Colorado River and herded horses from the desert to the Superstition Mountains in Arizona, but this trip was rugged," he said.

"What probably struck me the most was how friendly everyone was. I don't understand how they can be so poor, and yet, so friendly. I'm glad I took the trip," said Visser. "It was exciting but I wouldn't do it a gain for four or five years."

Murray Visser, Station Librarian, took three weeks off to go to the Amazon on expedition to capture moustached tamarins. The monkeys are used for hepatitis research.

Researchers travelled 50 miles up the Amazon to reach their base camp.

Station firemen host preschoolers

Station No. 8 firefighters visited the Menehune Rainbow Preschool as just one of the highlights when Fire Prevention Week was observed here.

In addition to climbing around a fire truck and modeling various items of the firefighter's wardrobe, the children watched several demonstrations and asked many, many questions; all in the interest of obtaining an early fire prevention education.

Taxiways closed

Airfield taxiways will be closed beginning Monday due to construction scheduled to be completed in February. Fixed-wing aircraft are being rerouted to West Field to refuel creating a traffic hazard at the road and runway intersection.

Personnel traveling to NOSC of the Hale Koa Beach Park should exercise caution while in the vicinity of West Field during operations.

Aircraft have the right-of-way while on the runway, and motorists are cautioned to stop and look carefully for aircraft. They are also advised not to cut across the corner of the West Field runway since anchor chains are stretched along the edges of both the road and the runway.

Baby food item recalled

The Army and Air Force Exchange Service is recalling a Gerber Baby food product.

The item identified as hazardous is one Gerber baby food item — a 3½ oz., strained, chicken with chicken broth. The product codes are 1002F1, 1002F2 or 1002F3 with a "use by" code of Oct. 5, 1986.

The United States Department of Agriculture verified a customer complaint that the product contained microscopic and visible glass particles, measuring .25 millimeters to 2 centimeters in length.

Gerber's shipping records reflect that two cases were shipped to the AAFES Dayton Distribution Center (DDC), Dayton, Ohio. According to Hawaii Area Exchange officials, no shipment of the item with the affected product codes are in AAFES stores in Hawaii.

However, as a precautionary measure, all stocks of this item were inspected at every AAFES-Hawaii store selling the item. Customers who have the hazardous Gerber item or the product in question, may return the item to any AAFES-Hawaii store.

WATER QUALITY EXCEPTIONS

On 2 October 1984, officials at Marine Corps Air Station, Kaneohe Bay learned that five of fifteen water quality samples of potable water taken on 1 October 1984, had positive coliform bacteria readings. The five locations and their respective coliform counts were as follows: Rifle Range - 3, Building 1387 at the Naval Ocean Systems Center - 87, Officers' Club pool - 6, Staff Noncommissioned Officers' Club kitchen - 21 and 2464 Cochran - 1. Although by law only those counts above 1 required subsequent samples, additional samples were taken at all five locations on 2 and 3 October 1984 as a precautionary measure. All locations except the Rifle Range, had 0 coliform readings from the samples taken on 2 and 3 October. The Rifle Range had a count too numerous to count from its 2 October sample and a count of 12 from its 3 October sample. As a result of the second consecutive positive reading at the Rifle Range officials secured the drinking water system at the Rifle Range about 1100 on 3 October 1984. The drinking water system at the Rifle Range has since been returned to use.

The positive readings from the 1 October samples exceeded standards of the Safe Drinking Water Act in two ways: (1) the monthly average of samples resulted in a count of more than one colony of coliform per sample and (2) more than 5% of the samples had more than four colonies. Despite the aforementioned exceptions, officials at Marine Corps Air Station, Kaneohe Bay stressed the following:

1. There were negative check samples from four of the five positive sites during follow-up testing on 3 and 4 October. Hence, there is no concern over the quality of the drinking water at building 1387, the Officers' Club pool, the Staff Noncommissioned Officers' Club kitchen and at 2464 Cochran Street.

2. The potable water system at the Rifle Range was secured from 1100 on 3 October until 1100 on 11 October. Signs were posted warning personnel not to drink from the potable water system and water tanks were placed at three sites as a source of potable water during the period when the potable water system was secured.

3. Before the potable water system at the Rifle Range was returned to use, the system was superchlorinated, flushed thoroughly, and had two consecutive days with negative readings on 10 and 11 October.

4. From discussions with medical officers at Marine Corps Air Station, Kaneohe Bay there has been no higher incidence of gastrointestinal disorders, something which might occur if personnel were to be adversely affected.

Although there is no reason for alarm, this notice is being issued as a precautionary measure and because it is required by the Safe Drinking Water Act.

the Koa Houle to the birds; and reduce a fire hazard." The project had some problems, however, part of the area that was to be cut had been used over the years as an impact area. Explosive Ordnance Disposal teams were called to the scene before any work started. "We swept the area for ordnance and then put engineer tape to show where the brush was to be cleared," said Capt. David Davis, EOD. "There was always someone from EOD in the area, so if someone working saw anything metal, all they would have to do was shout and an EOD person would go and check it out."

The final action will be done by bulldozer, which will push down the limbs that had not been carried away.

"We hope that the shrub will provide the Boobies with nesting material for the next year," said Drigot. "It may be a genetic thing that boobies build such flimsy nests, but we're providing them with this material and will watch to see if they use it."

Counts are made of the bird population several times a year. Through the brush clearing project, it's now easier to spot the birds.

"In order to manage something, you have to know what you have," Drigot said. "So the long term (bird) counts really make a difference. You get a gross picture of what's going on."

"We have about 500 pairs. That's from 1,000 to 2,000 birds, counting young Boobies," continued Drigot. "What we'll do is track the project looking for increased nesting — and just being able to see the birds will give us a more accurate count."

Because of the location and sensitivity of the project, only Marines and Facilities personnel were used in the project.

"There were about 20 Marines from different units and the Station Inspector's office who worked on the project," said Drigot. "We had a lot of people who helped out, and EOD personnel were there all the time. There was excellent cooperation from them, attitude and everything. The end result is improvement and the place looks good. There's still a lot of work to do, but you can see a definite change."

As Marines and Facilities personnel worked, Boobies flew in to check out what was happening to their area. Soon after the Marines and their equipment left, they landed in the Kiawe trees and once again made themselves at home.

They may be disturbed again in the future, but when the Boobies return from foraging at sea, their habitat will again change as Air Station personnel continue working to make the Boobies home more suitable.

Booby birds perched in a Kaiwe tree stand watch over their nesting area as Marines cut away underbrush. The birds often stayed in the trees as Marines worked to improve the area.

MCAA luncheon

A special luncheon for the Marine Corps Aviation Association is scheduled for

Nov. 8 at the Kaneohe Bay Officer's Club.

Guest speaker will be Capt. Gerald L. Coffee, a former POW who is stationed at the CinCPacFLT Public Affairs Office.

All active duty personnel, retirees, wives and friends are welcome to attend. The menu will be Chef's Salad, hot rolls, fruit cup, coffee and iced tea. The cost is $5.50 per person.

The MCAA is open to military personnel of all ranks and civilians who have an interest in Marine Aviation, not just to personnel who are directly involved with aviation or who have an aviation MOS. Cost of membership is $12 per year and is tax deductible. As a member of MCAA, individuals become members of the Hawaii Squadron.

The second Saturday of the second month of each quarter has been selected for a 6:30 p.m. "no host" Happy Hour at the Alii Room of the Air Station's Officers' Club. It is not necessary to be a member of the Officers' Club as officers to attend MCAA functions.

Questions concerning the outages should be directed to Mr. Fujita, 257-2171, utilities general foreman.

The American Red Cross is offering a course in standard first aid on Nov. 3 from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Red Cross office located next to the 7-Day Store.

THE ANSWERS, to Page A-10 quiz

...may surprise you. Here they are:

1 (e) Though only 21% of the energy that we use comes from coal — compared with a total of about 70% from oil and natural gas — coal is by far the most abundant fossil fuel in the country. The government estimates that we have more than 20 times as much coal as oil or natural gas. (Source: Securing America's Energy Future: The National Energy Policy Plan U.S. Department of Energy, July 1981)

2 (b) In 1980 industrial activities accounted for about 39% of all U.S. energy use. Energy used in households, stores and offices represented 36%. And Americans used 25% of their total energy consumption for transportation. (Source: DOE Monthly Energy Review, November 1981)

3 (b) Since the early 1970s consumers have been shifting away from oil for home-heating and instead have been using more natural gas — which is now more than 50% of all household use — and more electric heat, which has been installed in more than half of all new homes built in the past few years. (Source: The National Energy Policy Plan, DOE)

4 (e) According to the Alliance to Save Energy, tires should always be inflated to the prescribed pressures. Using radial tires on all four wheels, however, can allow up to 3% more mileage. (Source: The 25th Solution: The Alliance to Save Energy, Washington D.C.)

5 (b) The 20% that most cars save by driving 55 mph instead of 70 amounts to a daily savings of 200,000 barrels of oil. (Source: Tax for Energy Savers, DOE)

6 (c) The first nuclear power plant in the United States, the Shippingport station in Pennsylvania, went into operation in 1957, shortly after the Calder Hall plant in England became the world's first nuclear power plant. The United States now has 72 operating nuclear plants; 23 other countries have more than 180 nuclear plants in operation. (Source: Nuclear Power from Edison Reactors, DOE)

7 (e) From 1945 to 1980, U.S. energy consumption went up 2.5 times. In Western Europe, it went up by a factor of 3.2. By comparison, Latin America energy use increased by a factor of 8, Southern and Southeast Asia increased by a factor of 11, and China increased by a factor of 14. (Source: World's Desirable Energy Future, Oak Ridge National Laboratory, 1981)

8 (e) Western Europe has essentially no oil fields of its own, except for England's North Sea, and must import some 90% of the oil it needs. (Source: Power for the 80s, IEEE Spectrum October 1980)

9 (b) The actual percentage of U.S. energy use that comes from oil is 43%. The remainder comes from natural gas (26.5%), coal (21%), hydropower and geothermal energy (4%), nuclear power (3.5%), biomass and other renewables (2%). (Source: The National Energy Policy Plan)

10 (e) Despite all our conservation efforts, we rely on OPEC's Arab nations for twice as much oil as we did in 1973 — from 915,000 barrels a day to 1.9 million barrels a day. This amounts to some 40% of all the oil that we import. (Source: DOE Monthly Energy Review, October, 1981)

Lora Lee Judd (3rd from right), sponsored by McDonalds, was chosen as Miss Civilian-Military Fun Day of 1984 in the bikini contest.

The challenging wheelbarrow race was made even more difficult by blind-folding the drivers.

Music, team events and old-fashioned fun

by SSgt. Theresa Anthony
Fun and games kept everyone busy last Sunday during the first Civilian-Military Fun Day held at Kailua Recreation Center.

Organized to bring about a stronger fellowship between the civilian and military communities, the day's festivities began at 10 a.m. and continued through 4 p.m. "We are gathered here to play together and enjoy each other's company," said Vera Roede, Kailua's Honorary Mayor, when opening the ceremony.

The Fleet Marine Force Pacific Band performed for the occasion, followed by a presentation of colors by the Air Station's Color Guard.

BGen. O.K. Steele, commanding general, 1st Marine Brigade; Col. C.D. Robinson, commanding officer, Marine Corps Air Station, Kaneohe Bay; and Capt. R.L. Winkle, installation commander, Bellows Air Force Station, expressed their appreciation to the communities of Kailua and Kaneohe for sponsoring the day. Following the opening remarks, the Kailua High School Air Force JROTC demonstrated various drill movements.

"In the best Olympic tradition, let the games begin," said Roede. And so the day's event began with the obstacle course relay races, with 11, six-person teams; three civilian and three military members on each.

Some of the events — familiar to most picnic goers — were the three-legged race, the 50-yard dash, tug-of-war, and the garbage can drag. The only noticeable difference might have been a few of the game rules. The 50-yard dash was done in swim fins, while the three-legged race was run with one team member facing forward and the other facing backwards.

"There was even a little rivalry in the competition," said Michael Anderson, a carpenter by trade, and a member of the team sponsored by a local health spa. "but that added to the fun," he said.

The team sponsored by McDonald's of Kailua placed first, Pacific Contractors Licensing Incorporated's team came in second, and the 23rd Step's team placed third.

A variety of music was played throughout the day including folk, Hawaiian, rock 'n' roll, and country. Highlighting the festivities was the bikini contest where girls 18 years old and older participated.

"We hope to get more people involved next year," said Gloria Boatright, Chairperson of the Civilian-Military Council. "I saw people laughing and hugging after the games," said Boatright. "they were having a lot of fun." Boatright said the council planned to make the Fun Day an annual event.

The JL Country Western Dancers do the two-step while inviting all to join in the fun.

Any position, and an all-out effort helps to pull for a win during the tug-of-war at Sunday's Fun Day.

Preventive measures for a safe Halloween

With Halloween almost here Air Station residents should take extra care in preparing for a night of goblins, ghouls and witches.

While it can be fun and exciting, Halloween can also be a time of danger. Here are some tips to make Halloween as safe and happy as possible.

Use make-up instead of a mask which can impair vision. If a mask is used, make sure holes are large enough to ensure clear vision.

Avoid dressing children in long, loose clothing to reduce the possibility of tripping.

Costumes should be flame-resistant and brightly colored to make trick-or-treaters visible to motorists. Adding reflective tape on costumes and candy bags may be all that's needed.

Supervise children as they trick-or-treat. It's best to go to neighbors' homes with whom you are familiar. As an alternative to going door-to-door, parents can get together and sponsor a Halloween party.

Instruct children never to eat anything until they are home and the treats have been examined. Cut and wash fruit before eating. Throw away anything unwrapped.

Check wrappers of commercial treats for signs of tampering.

If children will be out after dark, make sure they carry a flashlight.

Use sidewalks. If there are no sidewalks, walk on the left side of the street facing traffic at all times.

Know which friends your children will be with and which route they'll be taking.

Leave your porch light on so children will know it's OK to visit your home.

Be especially observant for children entering streets from sidewalks and between homes.

Restrict speeds throughout all housing areas.

Report any unusual activity to the Air Station PMO at 257-2123 and to Camp H.M. Smith PMO at 477-6353.

Education

USC here

The University of Southern California offers a system management graduate degree program in Hawaii.

The master of science in systems management has two core areas. The human factors core emphasizes the human role within a system to insure that systems are designed and managed to be compatible with the characteristics, capabilities and needs of people.

The systems management core is designed to help military personnel become knowledgeable in engineering sciences. Topics covered are project management, systems integration, systems design and management of research, development, test and evaluation.

Students learn to apply what they've learned to their jobs, which can result in career advancement for many even before receiving the degree.

The program is offered at 66 locations throughout the world. A student can continue studies elsewhere, even if the program is started here.

It consists of 36 credit hours. In addition to the seven core courses, student choose one of four speciality options, consisting of three courses each. The remaining credits are gained by choosing two elective courses.

There are no prerequisites to any course. The program is nonsequential and may be taken in any order. The program can be completed in two years, and can be started at the beginning of any of the six terms during the year. Classes are held Monday and Wednesday or Tuesday and Thursday evenings from 6 to 9 p.m. at either Wheeler or Hickam Air Force Bases.

Admission standards, courses and instruction at any of the centers are the same as on campus. An acceptable undergraduate grade point average and successful completion of the graduate record exam are admission requirements.

For more information call Dot Ferjo at 624-2440, Wheeler AFB, or Beverly Marubio, at 449-9702, Hickam.

College degrees

ogy are some of the fields available.

For students beginning their college studies, the university offers courses to enable them to complete their general education requirements. Three associate degree programs in business management, computer science and criminal justice are offered in addition to a bachelors degree program.

Counseling building services are available at the Chaminade office in the Joint Education Center, building 291, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Thursday.

For an appointment call 257-2263.

How to guard documents

Each family has certain important papers that need to be protected in a time of emergency. The time to decide what records are vital to the family is before a disaster strikes.

When these papers are assembled, place them in one location where they can be retrieved in a hurry in case evacuation is necessary. Keep them in a plastic bag or other waterproof container.

Some items may be stored in a bank safety deposit box. These would likely remain safe in a disaster. The papers you need to get together are the ones that you regularly keep in your home.

Examples of vital records are insurance records; vehicle ownership records; medical records; credit card numbers; deeds; tax records; birth certificates; passports; marriage licenses; bank books; Social Security numbers and records; stock and bond certificates and certificates of deposit.

Also, you should keep phone numbers of relatives and friends; irreplaceable photographs; wills; naturalization certificates; immunization and school records.

Make sure holiday mail leaves on time

For those with relatives in the armed services stationed overseas, and those who wish to mail holiday greetings and packages to foreign countries, now is the time to plan for holiday mailings.

Parcels sent to military personnel in Australia, the Far East and Southeast Asia should have been already mailed if shipped by surface mail, the least expensive form of shipment.

November is the month when most parcels shipped via Parcel Airlift Mail should be sent. PAL packages are airlifted domestically to a gateway facility, then airlifted on a space available basis from the gateway to the Army of Air Force Post Office.

Packages up to 30 pounds, and 60 inches in combined length and girth, may be sent by PAL. Mailers pay the regular Parcel Post rate to the U.S. exit port or from the port of entry and a fee for air service of 30 cents for parcels weighing two pounds or less, 60 cents for 2-3 pounds, 90 cents for 3-4 pounds, and $1.20 for 4-30 pounds.

Parcels can also be shipped by Space Available Mail. Items shipped by SAM are transported by surface means in the contiguous 48 states and flown on a space available basis from the U.S. to the overseas destination, or from the overseas destination to the U.S. Packages up to 15 pounds, and 60 inches in combined length and girth, may be sent by SAM for regular Parcel Post rates to the U.S. exit port or from the U.S. port of entry.

When mailed from a military post office outside the 48 contiguous states, the weight and size of any piece cannot be more than 70 pounds in weight and not more than 100 inches in length and girth combined.

Suggested mailing dates to assure parcels and greetings will arrive on time, are listed. The international mail calendar is the one to follow for civilian mail.

opportunities. This is the idea behind The Reference Room; and information is what makes the room work. The materials there are broken down into numerous categories, each serving as an essential element in answering the questions of those using it.

The college bulletin section has more than 400 catalogs on colleges and universities in all states, along with information on St. Louis High School's Adult Education Program. Specially prepared manuals are also provided where you can find binders relating to opportunities at educational centers of the Army, Navy and Air Force on Oahu. A series of binders pertaining to high school and off-duty educational opportunities available at Marine Corps facilities around the world is also available.

The Reference Room provides a place where Marines, sailors, and their dependents can sit down and take time browsing through educational information. In addition JEC staff members are available to answer questions. "The Reference Room is not meant to do our work for us," said Capt. W.L. Clyde. "It's set up to be used as an additional tool to help us complete our mission. When used properly, it is an excellent supplement, capable of serving many people."

There's a series of study guides for the College Level Examination Program, GED, Scholastic Aptitude Test, and others. Marine Corps Orders and Bulletins pertaining to education are also available for ready reference.

Rag Bag romps through tournament

by SSgt. Greg Berry

Rag Bag and Maintenance Company squared off in the final game of the October Softball Tournament Sunday. Both had 6-0 records, and Rag Bag trumped them 13-3.

The lopsided victory ended a weekend-long tournament after 42 regular and seven playoff games between 21 teams. But to Rag Bag and MaintCo, the championship game was the one that counted.

MaintCo threatened to shut out the Rag Bag team at the outset, but after watching the first two batters head for the dugout, Jay Jensen singled. Vackary Bucit followed with a double and one RBI. Three other teammates singled. Rag Bag scored twice before retiring.

The men from MaintCo looked strong as they singled their first three batters for one RBI. But then the bats went sour, and the score stood 2-1 as Rag Bag went to the plate.

Both teams went scoreless through the second inning, and each scored once in the third. Rag Bag added another run in the top of the fourth, then shut the door on MaintCo.

The fifth inning belonged to Rag Bag as they pumped six singles in a row, followed by a homer on an error to give them an 11-3 lead. They sent MaintCo three up, three down in the bottom to keep the lead.

Rag Bag scored twice more in the sixth, and kept MaintCo scoreless to claim the title with a 13-3 final score.

Rag Bag had led the regular play stats with a 4-0 record and 66 runs, followed by two other teams with perfect records. MaintCo scored 41 runs and Lancers tallied 36.

One foul did it

Mazda 'hums' out on top

by Cpl. Pat Lewandowski

A tie-breaking free throw in the final seconds avoided an overtime period and put Shelly Mazda on top of the men's Hawaii Marine Varsity, 59-57, in Armed Forces/Civilian Invitational Basketball action last week at the Station Gym.

The Hawaii Marines took the first tip of the game and drove to the basket for a score. A stiff defense prevented Shelly Mazda from making any points during the first minutes of play, but they bounced back after a much needed time out.

Both teams battled outside, driving most of the plays underneath and inside where Marine forward Willie Mitchell found the bucket, leading the Marines to a 16-14 first quarter lead.

The second period was much of the same until the Hawaii Marines scored several quick points on defensive rebounds and steals. The half ended with the Marines on top 38-28.

Center Bobby Green led the Marine advance at the start of the second half as he "struck" several Shelly Mazda shots to the board, creating offensive turnovers. Shelly Mazda came back playing man-to-man defense and shut down the Marine offensive drive long enough to tie the game at 47 at the end of the third quarter.

Shelly Mazda's Bob Tappy and Paul Potts teamed up to provide an inside scoring combination that beat the Marines for several points. The game seemed as both teams tightened their defense, allowing only two goals in the last three minutes of play.

The Hawaii Marines went into a 3-2 zone, trying to deny the inside shot to Shelly Mazda, forcing them to make a bad percentage shot from the outside.

Shelly Mazda ate up the final minute of the clock by passing the ball, forcing the Marines to play tighter and more aggressive.

The aggressive Marine play resulted in Mark Wells drawing a foul. He sank two one-pointers to break a 57-57 tie with less than 15 seconds remaining. The Marines attempted a quick play, but were stopped short by the final buzzer.

The Hawaii Marine record stands at 3-2 along with Shelly Mazda's.

"We passed the ball and hit the open man," said Shelly Mazda coach Paul Potts. "We came out in the second half playing man to man trying to get the Marines out of their zone, which almost shut us down. We were patient and it paid off."

Hawaii Marine coach, Skip Best, confided that that loss was his fault due to a mistake he made in the last few minutes of the game.

"We had them beat with a 3-2 zone, but our plays are only as good as our players," said Best. "I told them to hold position and deny Mark Wells the ball and they did just that until we fouled. Since we were missing our starters, the defense was a little confused at times and they made a few mistakes."

According to Best, it was a tough break, but with the great attitude the Marine players have, he's sure they'll bounce back to meet their next opponent later this week.

High scorers for the game were Shelly Mazda's Dan Mausolf with 26 points and Mark Wells with 16. Rudy Butler led the Hawaii Marine attack with 12.

In women's varsity basketball action, the Hawaii Marines fell victim to the Air Force 57-54, lowering their record to 1-3 for the season.

Mark Wells makes a free throw to put Shelly Mazda in the lead. Wells broke a 57-57 tie with two free throws in the last 15 seconds of the game.
