Happy Anniversary Amtrak!

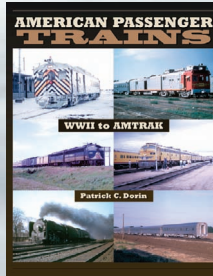

From the ragtag collection of cars dubbed the "rainbow fleet" to today's fast, sleek P-42 locos, Amtrak has provided passenger rail service in America for four decades. The company recently marked 16 consecutive months of growth with a record ridership of 2,099,010 passengers in February 2011. To commemorate the anniversary of "America's Railroad", four P-42 locos in historic paint schemes are operating on Amtrak trains in regular revenue service throughout this year and a special "exhibit" train debuts on National Train Day, May 7, 2011 in Washington, D.C.

Join us as we celebrate 40 years of Amtrak with special features in this month's issue. You can build your own Amtrak fleet with the great selection of locos, cars and more on the following pages and at walthers.com.

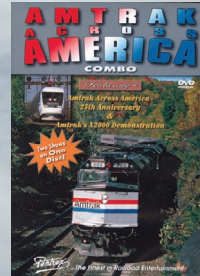

Available In Early May

NEW Amtrak: An American Story
Kalmbach. Chronicles the history of Amtrak's first four decades highlighting employees, trains and technology. Includes archival photos, historical summary, timeline and personal narratives plus a photo essay depicting 24 hours in the life of Amtrak today.

Modeling Amtrak's "Rainbow Era"

American passenger trains got a fresh start May 1, 1971 as Amtrak (short for American Travel by Track) took over long-distance operations.

Getting Ready

Months before the first trains rolled, work began to refurbish the elderly car and loco fleet. Each member railroad had its own preferences for everything from interior lighting to air conditioning, and mechanics often had to try and repair systems they had never worked on.

Getting things moving took priority, but to introduce Amtrak to the press and public, E8 #4616 was repainted with a new logo and safety stripes.

The Rainbow Era Begins

As operations began, travelers were greeted by some of the most colorful trains ever run on rails. Each consist was based on services offered, and if a 10-6 sleeper was needed, the next available 10-6 was used. No effort was made to match cars so every train arrived in a blaze of different colors — which railfans and modelers began referring to as "rainbow" trains.

Starting in 1972, cars were repainted in Amtrak's first official color scheme (now known as Phase I). Within a few years, the colorful "rainbow era" came to a close.

Colorful Memories & Models

The last hurrah for many classic streamlined cars and locos, the rainbow era is increasingly popular with modelers. And it's easy to re-create in HO with Walther's cars decorated for their original owners, along with the new PROTO 2000® Phase I Amtrak E8 from (shown on pg. 5).

Period Consists

To help you model this colorful time, here are three different trains of the era, based on original consists. Add period power or additional cars from other roads, and you're ready to go!

Did You Know?

Only six eligible railroads opted not to join Amtrak in 1971: the Chicago, South Shore & South Bend, Georgia Railroad, Reading, Rock Island, Southern and Denver & Rio Grande Western.

Except for the South Shore, which received funding from the Northern Indiana Commuter Transportation District (NICTD) starting in 1977 to continue operations (NICTD took over operations in 1989), the last privately owned and operated trains were all gone by 1983.

QSI[®] Sound & DCC $259.98 | Standard DC $169.98

PROTO FASTFACTS™

In Service: 1954 – present

Primary Assignments: Yard and industrial switcher.

By 1954, railroads were buying diesels as fast as EMD could build them, and customer demand for more powerful units carried over into the switcher market as well. With the introduction of the new 567C prime mover that year, EMD rolled out new 900- (SW900) and 1200-horsepower (SW1200) models, which shared the same basic body with minor variations. SW1200s were produced through 1966, when earlier GPs began taking over yard chores, but these later SW models have lead long lives, with many still serving shortline and industrial roads long after retirement by the original owners.

Did You Know?

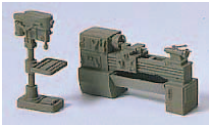

If some of your scale figures are just standing around, put them to work!

Putting small details like hammers, screwdrivers, oils cans and similar tools, lawn and garden equipment, or a paintbrush in their hands invites a closer look to see what's happening in a scene.

You can also suggest other jobs are getting done by folks carrying suitcases, packages, letters from the mailbox, a length of garden hose, a piece of pipe, a piece of firewood - the possibilities are limited only by your imagination.

For a finishing touch add some weathering to suggest old or dirty clothes if appropriate, and stains or spills such as paint or grease to complete the story.
